"Nothing to it" stated the proprietor of Twelve O'clock Point to the Intelligencer this afternoon when asked over long distance telephone if there were anything in the rumor that a Toronto Syndicate had purchased the Point and intended making extensive improvements to same.

This point is one of the most popular summer places around this district, due chiefly to its central location and naturally any rumors considerable comment in this city.

CANON'S FUNERAL IS IMPRESSIVE

Bishop Seager Officiated At Burial Of Trenton's Beloved Rector

The funeral of the late Canon F. W. Armstrong, Rector of St. George's Church, Trenton, whose death occurred on Saturday morning last was held this afternoon from his late home, where the Lord Bishop of Ontario conducted a private service for the family after which the body was removed to St. George's Church over which the deceased acted as minister for more than forty years and there the impressive funeral of the Anglican Church was conducted by Bishop Seager, assisted by between fifteen and twenty clergymen of the diocese.

The sorrow caused by the death of Canon Armstrong was mutely evidenced by the wealth of floral effectiaor banked about the casket, the long funeral cortege and the overflowing church attendance at the public service. By order of the Mayor all business was suspended at four o'clock and the Mayor and Council attended the funeral in a body as well as the Oddfellows, Rebekahs and the different church societies. All flags in the town were flying at half-mast also.

The committal took place in the family plot, St. George Cemetery. There were six honorary bearers composed of clergymen of the diocese and the active bearers were Messrs. E. James, Dr. Parnoomb, C. Lott, I. Calnin, J. Hodgson and Geo. White.

Montreal Gives Wonderful Welcome To The Distinguished Visitors

NOW AT OTTAWA

Baldwin's Address To Canadian Club Inspiring Message

Ottawa, Aug. 2.—The Capitol received the Prince and Premier today with all the color and dignity of military and official life. His Excellency the governor General, Lady Willingdon and Premier King were on the station platform to greet the visitors and a few minutes later the official party moved across the plaza escorted by mounted lancers to Parliament Hill where those lords of land fluttered in the cool breeze and thousands of persons cheered the procession.

Under the canopy where the loyal Canadian species of welcome and replies were made and amplified by loud speakers for the benefit of the thousands present, Premier King in welcoming the Prince of Wales spoke of the special significance of the visit in the year of Canada's Jubilee. Prince George too was welcomed, the Prime Minister declared in the hope that "the remembrance of the present tour will be such as to cause Canada sooner to visit Canada again in the near future. He made reference to the Chimes of Carillon. Notes of the hours and quarters, similar to those of Big Ben and the West Minister chimes, served to remind Canadian "of the heritage of freedom which has come to us through the establishment of British parliamentary institutions."

Made Privy Councillors

Ottawa, Aug. 2.—The Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, has become a member of the Privy Council of Canada. The Prince was presented with the minute of the last meeting appointing him to the Council and signed by His Excellency Lord Willingdon, Governor-General of Canada.

Stanley Baldwin, Premier of Great Britain, has also accepted a membership in the Privy Counel Mr. Baldwin was presented with the minutes of the appointment following the reading of the address in which Premier King had welcomed him to Canada on behalf of the Government.

Montreal, Aug. 2.—Their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales and Prince George, Rt. Hon Stanley Baldwin and their suite, left Montreal at 9.10 this morning for Ottawa, where they will be welcomed by Lord Willingdon, Premier King and Federal and Civic officials. The Royal party completed a busy day here by driving through the flag-bedecked streets to Windsor Station, where they boarded the special train which will take them westward.

Great Public Welcome

Montreal, Aug. 1.—Montreal finished today what was begun last night and Monday and it is safe to say the happiest of endings that her people wrote to another chapter in the new book of Canada's history and the Baldwin

PASSED THE BUMP ALONG BUT THE FIRST MAN PAID

One,two-three-four! Just like that! Yesterday afternoon four automobiles all going in the same direction figured in an accident. It all happened when F. Howard, Belleville, stopped his car to pick up a woman, just by the Belleville Cemetery. Mr. Howard was in the van of a procession with three other cars trailing him. The second car behind him was able to stop. The third car likewise was able to pull up. But the fourth, unable to stop, crashed into the third car, and pushed the third automobile into the second. The second car was driven by Ralph Huffman, Trenton, and suffered a smashed bumper, bent fender and damaged tire carrier. The fourth car, driven by T. R. Hogle, of Williamsport, Penn., sustained a broken front bumper, damaged fenders and bent spare tire carrier. Howard's car was not damaged, but he climbed out and interviewed the three other drivers, thus making a

Evangelist Takes Complete Control But Old Lady Gets Her Share

Los Angeles, Aug. 2.—Aimee Semple McPherson took full control of her Angelus Temple today as a result of the agreement announced last night in which Mrs. Minnie Kennedy relinquished all the active business management of the church and the two women publicly kissed and made up.

The settlement announced by attorneys for both after a two hour conference apparently ended the ten day row between mother and daughter in which the latter had been backed by a group of female members who defended against Mrs. Kennedy's control of the finances. During its bitter course, Mrs. Kennedy had said she was resigning immediately when her daughter announced in an ultimatum that Mrs. Kennedy was ousted.

The management announced merely that "Mrs. Minnie Kennedy will give active management at Angelus Temple and Mrs. McPherson will assume complete control." Neither of the two men would disclose the details of the settlement but it was learned that it virtually hinged upon a fifty-fifty plan insisted upon by Mrs. Kennedy.

Young Belleville Ball Player Risks Life In Vain Attempt At Rescue

In behalf of the citizens of Belleville, Mr. Lorne Green, a member of the jury empanelled to inquire into the death of George Scott who was drowned off Victoria Park yesterday afternoon moved a vote of thanks to Alexander Scott for his heroic efforts in attempting to rescue the drowning man. Scott plunged in and after five unsuccessful attempts succeeded in locating the body from the bottom of the Bay. Numerous comments were made on the young man's brave deed and it is felt that it should be recognized in some material way.

Tired Male Has Wife To Crank His Balky Bus

Shortly after the evening meal yesterday a comparatively young, able, bodied looking man with a frail delicate appearing woman, who was apparently his wife, drove driving on North Front street with the car stopped and the woman, evidently obeying her "lord and master's" commands got out and worked until she was exhausted endeavoring to crank the car while he sat inside adjusting the gas flow. After tiring herself in unsuccessful attempts, the woman gave up and then the strong driver moved himself and gave the crank a couple of turns and away the bus went.

JAPAN STRIVES TO AVERT TOTAL FAILURE OF PLAN

12 TO 8

Suggests That Anglo-Saxon Nations Keep That Ratio Of Cruisers

Geneva, Aug. 2 (C.P.)—Japan has made a last supreme effort to save the tri-partiate naval Conference. According to their first attempt to find any formula which held the possibility of giving satisfaction, Admiral Saito and Viscount Ishii this morning visited Hugh S. Gibson, chief United States delegate, and handed him the nest of a compromise on the subject concerning cruisers. The project is quite provisional in nature but designed to prevent the wrecking of the conference on this outstanding difficulty.

The plan also calls for a secondary class of cruisers with a maximum of eight thousand tons each, but nothing is said about eight inch guns in connection with this type of cruiser.

The plan proceeds by suggesting that if any building programme becomes a measure to other signatories they could be empowered to denounce the arrangement. United States would undertake not to exceed British cruiser strength before 1931.

Stop Laying Down Cruisers

Geneva, Aug. 2.—The Associated Press learns that the Japanese compromise proposal made in effort to save the tri-partite naval conference from failure, provides that Great Britain and Japan shall stop building cruisers when they reach the end of their present authorized programmes, and that up to 1931 the number of then those and ton cruisers shall be limited to twelve for Great Britain and United States and eight for Japan.

FATHER RECOVERS BODY OF HIS DROWNED SON

To Mr. Everett Nicholson fell the sad task of recovering the drowned body of his son from the waters of the Moira River on Saturday evening about 8.30 o'clock. The father had been grappling almost steadily since he learned of the drowning on Friday and finally after twenty-four hours the grappling iron caught in one of the braces of his boy's overalls. The young man had apparently been using his overalls as a bathing suit at the time of the accident.

There will be no inquest. The body was taken to the father's residence on the third line of Sidney from where the funeral was held.

YOUNG SCOTCHMAN MEETS DEATH WHILE BATHING OFF VICTORIA PARK

BODY RECOVERED

Second Fatality In Almost The Same Spot This Season

Jury Censures

George Scott, 21 years of age, a Scotch-immigrant boy, who came to Canada under the auspices of the Marchmont Home in 1913, met his death at the public baths, Victoria Park, at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Heroic efforts were made to save his life and artificial respiration was applied when the body was located, but despite these life was extinct and revival methods were useless.

This is the second drowning fatality in almost this same spot, that occurred Carl Eisenring, of Stirling, having met death there some two months ago. The spot is a particularly dangerous one and measures should be taken to prevent another such an occurrence. The jury empanelled stressed this point in rendering their verdict this morning.

Rescue Attempt Fails For Swim

Scott, who was an employee of the Springer Lock Factory, resided at the home of Mrs. Corr, 241 Coleman street, left home early in the afternoon leaving word that he intended to go for the public baths for a swim. The victim, who was not a good swimmer and generally went in the pool on the pier, but finding this empty on the holiday went out to the floating raft. This young man sat a mile edge of the diving wharf watching Roy Whitmore and several other chums swimming about the place.

According to the eye-witnesses Scott slipped over the edge of the raft into the water several times, going to the bottom and on each occasion he failed to regain the raft. He repeated this movements a number of times and apparently the third time he was there or four feet from the floating dock and too far away to grasp it, and finding himself in difficulty he threshed about in the water but made no outcry. Those on the shore, noticed his predicament and shouted a warning to the other swimgers. Alex. Scott, a professional lifesaver was not a member of the Belleville baseball team but no relation to the victim of the drowning. Scott just emerged from the water a few minutes previous, plunged in and after half a dozen attempts, he brought the body to the surface.

Life Existed When Found

At that time the body could be seen in the water fifteen minutes. Drs. Connors and Blakelee were immediately called and officials of the Hydro were notified and arrived with the pulmotor. Harry Harman of the city police force, was informed and rushed to the scene. After working over the body for a time no signs of life was shown and efforts were given up.

Later until last Autumn was employed on the farm of Stephen Fluke and Stirling Sterling resided near Foxboro but after leaving there he came to Canton where he worked in the grist mill for a short time then in Belleville and secured a job with the Springer Lock Company. He had been employed on Saturday from the Petawawa Camp with the 34th Battery of which he is a member.

It is believed that he has two brothers residing in the province of Quebec but their address is unknown. These are the only relatives in Canada and efforts are being made to get in touch with them in order to complete the funeral arrangements.

Mrs. Gaven Gibson, 72, died in Toronto from injuries received from a cow on the rampage.

LIFE GUARD IS NEEDED AT PARK

Coroner's Jury Stresses Need Of Life-Saving Equipment

The immediate need of a Life Guard and life preservers and a life boat together with telephone communication at the Public Swimming Baths in Victoria Park, was stressed by the jury at the inquest this morning into the death of George Scott, who was drowned yesterday afternoon. The inquiry lasted for a very few minutes and on upon the verdict was rendered the following Jurymen: W. H. Panter, Foreman; J. Tyrrel, T. J. Wells, S. J. Weddan, C. Vallance, L. Green, T. E. George and Hope McGinnis.

Sergeant Arthur Harman was the first witness called. He told of being called to the scene and making a sort of investigation, afterwards supoenaing the jury.

Stephen Fluke, upon whose farm Scott was employed, identified the body and said that so far as he knew Scott was not a good swimmer. Mr. Fluke also believed there were two brothers residing in the province of Quebec.

W. R. Merry, the next witness, said he would endeavor to get the lad's record through the Marchmont Home at Toronto

Alexander Scott, 219 George street, stated that he knew the deceased and had noticed him previously to the accident sitting on the shore in the bathing suit. A few minutes later he heard a warning cry and went to the floating raft and dived five times, finally reaching the body.

No Life Saving Equipment

The body appeared to be fairly warm when placed on the shore," the witness said. He stated that there was no life saving equipment of any kind at this spot and he believed it was necessary.

Roy Whitmore said he undressed with Scott in the bath house and the latter was about six feet out of the pier. Witness observed that Scott went down and in coming to the surface he swam three or four yards from the pier and not being a good swimmer, could not swim the distance to regain the raft. When Whitmore heard the cry from the shore he was swimming for the pier and was three distance from the platform.

Dr. Blakelee said he was called to attend the victim but could do nothing to help him as life was extinct.

TODAY'S THOUGHT

Men is no way approach so nearly to the gods as in doing good to men.

CICERO.

AMERICAN ENGLISH

The society for the preservation of pure English has international ramifications in the islands and on this side of the water. Its object is a serious one as everyone knows who appreciates the values of a classic or exact expression and pronunciation.

But how are the purist advocates to protect the society against the facile dealers in expressive slang who find in its efforts all incentive to go to more extreme lengths or depths?

The American Bookman, of which better things might be expected, has just given space to an outburst, occasioned by the publication of a glossary in England for the information of non-American readers of the Babbitt and Menchen productions. The insular puzzled ones are told what the inner meanings are of "apple sauce," "bawl out," "beat it," "bean," "bellhop," "bootlegger," "booster," "bull-dose," "chump," "cinch," "butinsky," "dandy," "fan," "dub," "rope," "jeans" "he togs," "hobo," "give the razz," "gospel pusher," "hit," "hike," "kid," "pull a raw one," "rough-neck," "shindig," "tightwad," "uplift" and "yelp."

But the Bookman adds to the puzzlement by exclaiming of this array of easy ones: "There can be little doubt, by gosh, that such a gang of stuff will give the savvy to the chinchy hill-billies across the pond. Anyhow, I'll be whizzed if I know why these guys can't get our drift and nab our lingo without a lot of high-falutin' stuff about our rapping different from the way they yelp. Where do they get that?"

The English seeker after knowledge will regard the illuminating list and the not so clear comment something like the Chinaman after his first toboggan ride—"Whizzed while—et!" and then walk back a mile."

EFFICIENT INSPECTION

Time was when all medical inspection of immigrants was done after their arrival in Canada. Under this plan grave and innumerable injustices were suffered by unfortunate immigrants who could not pass inspection and had to be sent back where they came from. In this way families were disrupted and much resentment and bitterness engendered. In recent years a better plan has been in force. All intending immigrants have been examined at the ports of embarkation. Thus the unfit are, supposedly, weeded out before the voyage, and many of the unfit have been saved the agony of deportation immediately upon their arrival.

But even this improvement has been found defective in operation. The examining officials are physicians practicing in the ports of embarkation, engaged by the Canadian immigration department for special duty. They are paid by fees, and the more immigrants they pass the greater is their remuneration. Naturally, they are inclined, in doubtful cases, to give the immigrants the benefit of the doubt. Thus many immigrants who ought not to have been allowed to sail have passed the medical inspection, only to be deported as unfit after their arrival.

This defect is now to be remedied. Beginning in October, a new system will be installed. The medical inspections will be in the hands of qualified Canadian physicians maintained at embarkation ports by the immigration department. They will be officials of the department, under salary and directly responsible to the department. Thus a more thorough and reliable system of medical inspection will be ensured. No doubt the change will entail some additional expense, but the improvement in the efficiency of the service will probably be worth what it costs.

"ONE A MINUTE"

Within the last few weeks how many pulses have throbbed at the mir acles of science, and how many have responded to the dazzling succession of vast fortunes that have been, or almost been, inherited by Belgian peasant girls, German servant maids and penniless Americans? It is a safe guess that more people have thrilled to the unexpected showers of gold than to the triumphs of science.

The old romance of Dame Fortune is still more interesting and soul-stirring than the new romance of science. Along with the dream legacies in the news appear authentic tales of wealth found and inherited. But the real bonanzas are never half so exciting as the other kind. A half million of Captain Kidd's buried gold is more enfrancing than ten million real dollars made in business. The public gets more thrill out of the finding of a few dollars in an old shoe than from the story of Henry Ford's rise to fortune.

Front page space in the newspapers always will be at the command of tales about Wee-ish gold nuggets, fortune - winning lottery tickets, clerks who break the bank at Monte Carlo, fortunes inherited by poor relatives and faithful servants, and discoveries of buried treasure.

It seems to require less high-pressure salesmanship to talk people into investing their savings in "Spanish prisoner" and "heart of Manhattan" claims than in the most promising enterprises. For decades people have been duped by swindles of the "Baker Estate" sort, and will be for many decades to come.

Despite science and economics, humanity remains primitively romantic and gullible.

TODAYS MARKETS

New York, Aug. 2.—Resumption of the upward price movement in today's stock market carried both the rail and industrial averages to record high levels, more than 50 individual issues eclipsing their previous peak prices of the year. Advances ranged in many proportions, to a few issues which are believed to harbor large short interest Timken Roller Bearing soaring nearly 17 points to 141 and Manhattan Supply nearly 10 points to 115.

Practically all of the high-grade railroad and industrial stocks reached new high ground, the list including United States Steel Common, General Motors, General Electric, American Tobacco, American Smelting, Baldwin Locomotive, Consolidated Gas, Chrysler Motors, Hudson Motors, Woolworth Stores, New York Central, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Southern Railway, Canadian Pacific and Chesapeake and Ohio.

Chicago grain operators were report ed to be buyers of Timken which held as low as 78 earlier in the year, Baldwin Locomotive, Manhattan Electrical Supply, which has more than doubled in price this year, felt back sharply on profit taking. The rapidity of the advance in these and other issues led to cautionary advices by some of the larger commission houses, who urged profit taking in the theory that the technical position of market had been weakened.

Chicago, Aug. 2.—Black rust reports from the Canadian and American spring wheat belts put forward today after a wavering start. Initial weakness was associated with lower cables and a general bearish impression expected. Opening unchanged to 3-8 cents off, September and December generally got set back and then rained.

PRINCE

evening. It was tremendous. It was significant

The Princes motored to the civic reception this morning, still flushed from an hour and a half at squash rackets, to capture the populace with all the neatness and despatch of their game on the courts Thousands on either side of their avenue of approach paid loud-voiced tribute to their passing. Every one has a wealth of color, and through it to an even great er store of it. The Royal Canadian Dragoons, eighteen glittering figures, preceded them; all about them the flags of two nations dipped in homage and facing them—two "thin red lines" of scarlet and buttery Canadian Corn Stalk—stood at which the Prince of Wales is an honorary Colonel-in-Chief and the "present" as great an honor in a fashion that bespoke manafter-man pride in the compliment there were paying.

Spoke in Shirt Sleeves

Sweltering in the midsummer heat and the oppressive atmosphere of the Windsor Hotel ballroom, Right Hon. Stanley Baldwin divested himself of the winds, and, amid an outburst of laughter and applause, delivered his talk in a striped black and white shirt, a canary-colored vest, this coat and collar, he spoke "as man to man." There is nothing stuck up or snobbish about Stanley Baldwin You cannot help but like him. He arrived for the meal he chatted gaily with Archbishop Gauthier, and before the majority of those present were half-way through their lunch the Premier produced his famous cherrywood pipe and puffed away to his heart's content "Is that Canadian tobacco?" was the query first at him from the press table, and the guest of the day replied: "Not yet sir; that is coming along later." The Premier smilingly declined a cigar

Price for Intra-Empire Trade

Before an unparalleled attendance, the Prime Minister of Great Britain put forward a strong plea for intra-Empire commerce, which he followed up with a more colloquial talk on the claims of public life In an obligation upon men and women In sketching the main activities of the Empire Marketing Board, the Premier showed that no only in opening up and stimulating markets does that board render service, but by new research methods and investigation of a scientific character it is promoting a more constructive system of utilizing the resources of the Empire for all the countries within it

KILLING THE SPIRIT IN NAME OF LOVE

By ELSIE MARLOWE

"Murder" — that's a fearful word. The most terrible word in all the world we think as we shudder away from it.

But murder isn't the most terrible thing in the world. There are slow living — deaths which are more hideous than any swift, vicious annihilation. The deliberate, deadly killing of the spirit — that horror takes place in many a home and we pass it by with never a thought of its wickedness. Yet it is as truly Murder as any act which ends in hanging.

Here is Susan's picture of her plight Susan doesn't think she is being murdered by this father who has kept her shut away from life for twenty-one years. Probably the neighbors do not feel she is being murdered, either. Doubtless they often say—"What splendid man Mr. Jones is. How different from most careless modern parents. What a relief it is to see a father doing his duty by his child in these lax days."

Yes, the neighbors say that, and poor little Susan thinks she is an ingrate because she cannot feel that they are right. "Spineless" she calls herself. Who wouldn't be spineless, with the breath of life being slowly crushed out of their souls?

DEAR ELSIE:

My case is hopeless, I know. It is partly my fault, 'Im more spine less and brainless than a jelly-fish.

I have never become socially educated, never mixed with people. At twenty-one I have never had a date, and partically no friends. The trouble is I have been too much cared for and cherished by my father. My brothers had freedom and friends. I was kept jealously guarded at home. Nobody was quite good enough for me. When my few friends I made at school come to see me father treats them indifferently. If they come when I am not here he is rude to them.

It's hard to be twenty-one and see the girls of your age going about, engaged, married, and to live to be old without ever having been young is the worst tragedy of all.

But what can I do ? I can't argue with father. Father and mother don't bet on very happily themselves. If I complain father groans—"My life has been all disappointments. It would break my heart to see you go, but go, if you must. I suppose I can stand another disappointment." He says that I'm young. That I'm not missing anything. But I am 'Tis be twenty-one and to have known nothing of youth is to miss everything.

I work. I get $15 a week. I could get a better job in another city, but father begged me not to go with tears in his eyes. So year after year I sit home.

Is there anything I can do?

Then, I know a man. I have never met him. He knows I know he wants to meet me. And I would like to know him. How can I meet him without doing something cheap?

SUSAN.

You think he is doing this because he loves you so, don't you, Susan? and I am sure that he feels that, also But this dreadful possessiveness isn't love. It's the cruellest form of selfishness. He isn't trying to save your life. He is trying to dominate it for his own selfish gratification.

Real love does not cry out against a more abundant life for the loved one. A truly devoted father would not think of his disappointment now. He would think of your urgent need for happiness and growth and liberty Get that fired in your head and stop your sentimental misgivings and twinges of remorse.

Realize that you have not only a right to live but that it is your most sacred duty to live and develop yourself.

That duty comes before all other duties, even before your duty to your father. You should be kind to your father and grateful for all he has done for you, but you should not sacrifice your life for him.

Having fixed these two ideas in your head — ACT. Tell your father that you are going to go and GO. Take that job in another city. Take it not with shame and misgivings, but with honest pride in the fact that you are, at last, doing the right thing.

After that you need have no fears about your lack of social technique.

It will come to you when you once assert yourself. New interests, new friends will come to you. And he will come too, as the crowning reward for your courage.

Advice to Girls
By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a bachelor of thirty-six years of age, and I am considered very good-looking and also very popular. The girls do not have much to do with me, but still I would love to have some for friends about twenty four years old.

How could I get acquainted with one? OLD BACHELOR.

OLD BACHELOR: What's wrong with you, Mr. Bachelor? If, as you say, you are thirty-six, good-looking and very popular, I shouldn't think you'd have much trouble finding the right girl. What about joining a church in your neighborhood, or better still, looking about among the friends you already have? You know, the very best and nicest things are usually right under one's nose, if one only has sufficient clearness of vision to see them.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl in my early teens, and I know I'm too young to know the same meaning of love, but I am not too young to go around with a crowd of boys and girls. There is one boy whom I go with, but when he passes me on the street, he won't even look at me. Won't you please tell me what to do? If I'd talk to him first, he would talk, but I think it is the boy's place to talk first.

LINDY LOU.

LINDY LOU: Maybe he's bashful, Lindy. And besides, it's really your place to speak to him first when you meet on the street. Goodness, I should think you'd know that from reading all the etiquette that's published nowadays.

SINCLAIR'S

CURSE OF LOVE

By Mildred Barbour

"I love you, Norma." It was a most amical statement, as should of remitment as a remark about the weather. Kendall hated himself for it, but, with the memory of that dreadful bargain in his mind, how could he tell her what was in his heart? Did she know or didn't she, about that bargain? Was she a party to it? One part of him hoped she was; then he wouldn't feel such a rotter. The other part prayed that she wasn't; he much have his share of her to think about, and Norma who made such a bargain was not the woman with whom he had fallen in love.

Norma made no reply to his statement that she loved him. She had tried her face in her hands. So he repeated his question:

"Will you marry me?"

"When?" she whispered.

Something stopped in Kendall. His last illusion went. He loathed himself to carry through the bargain.

"Now—this minute," he said.

Might as well have it over, he thought grimly.

A moment later, Norma was in his arms. He kissed her, acutely conscious of her fresh prettiness, of her curves, of her scented, dusky hair, of the soft red lips lifted so trustingly to his. But his heart seemed to have gone dead within him.

"If she doesn't already know, she'll never learn the truth from me," he promised himself. "I owe her that much."

When Norma sped upstairs to get her hat—they had decided to be married that same afternoon—he paused a moment to take the black opal from the pocket of her frock and raise it to her lips.

"My talisman!" she whispered thankfully.

King Carson swung off the train in the station and looked about him expectantly.

"There was no old friend, no Philip Kendall to meet him. And yet he had sent Kendall a wire, that very morning, explaining the reason for his delayed arrival.

His genial glow of good spirits subsided somewhat, but, with a shrug, he accepted his disappointment in his usual fashion. Undoubtedly, he assured himself, Phil was merely detained somewhere along the line. He put his luggage into a cab and gave the address of his friend's apartment.

But a fresh disappointment awaited him there. There was no answer to his rejected rings. He descended to the street and looked up at the windows. Still he judged to be Kendall's apartment. They were closed and the curtains were drawn. So, he returned to the vestibule and rang the bell marked "Janitor."

The janitor eventually emerged from subterranean depths. He was a very black janitor, with a wide, toothsome grin and a good-natured chuckle. He had the air of a person on whom the cares of life rest very lightly.

"Mistah Kendall?" he responded, in answer to Carson's query. "He done gone away on his honeymoon, Yassuh," he chuckled, "Mistah Kendall he done mahhied himself veby sudden."

Carson whistled.

"Another victim!" he thought. "Heavens, don't they do anything else in this country any more?"

"But, see here!" he said aloud. "I'm a friend of his. He was expecting me. I've had all my luggage sent here. Didn't he leave any message for me—for King Carson?"

The negro's face cleared.

"Oh, is yo—ah Mistah Cahson? Yas suh, yas s'h. Ah believe he done sed yo-all was comin', but Ah disremembah what he tole me Ah was to do."

"Telegram?"

"Lawsy!" he began to laugh and slap his thigh, doubling up with mirth. Ain't Ah the forgetfulest jasbeen? Mistah Kendall, he done give me a couple of telegrahs to take to de telegraf office—lemme see, what day was it? Ah forgets now. Day was fo' yo, all, Mistah Cahson. And lawsy, I done plumb forgot to send them!"

He dived, without warning, into his cellar, reappeared with several yellow telegraph forms, and handed them to Carson, who scanned them rapidly. They were Philip Kendall's frantic appeals, to his friend to come to him at once. He had waited until the last minute for an answer, before going to Collins for the money his business required, and—the telegrams had never been despatched.

King Carson, puzzled, read the messages. But there was nothing in them to explain why Kendall had wanted to see him in such a hurry.

"Probably wanted me to be best man," he thought. "Well," he turned to the janitor, "I guess I'll be on my way. When my luggage arrives, have it sent to the Palace Hotel, will you?"

"Aw, now, Mistah Cahson, yo-all sin't got no call to go to no hotel." The janitor beamed his relief at escaping a scolding for his laxity. "Mistah Kendall, he don't expect yo-all, yo-all jes' go up to his apahtment. Ah got de key."

So, half an hour later King Carson was singing lustily in Philip Kendall's bath; his luggage was stacked in Phil's sitroom.

"Now, who the deuce did Phil marry—and why—and when? Carson ruminated later, as, clad in a dashing dressing gown, he took his ease in the sitting-room. "And why didn't he mention it in his letters? Kicking my kid I'm very much afraid you should have stayed in Mexico, where it's quiet and peaceful."

For several days Carson wandered forlornly around the town, seeking without much hope, a familiar face. He was deadly lonely. He began to long for Mexico, and, feeling rather piqued at Kendall's silence and absence—Kendall whom he expressly had come to see—was on the point of packing up and returning, when, by chance he made the acquaintance of J. P. Collins.

He had sought one of those street alcoves where arrangeds is dispensed to the accompaniment of a shine and tunes from a tin can mechanical piano. In the next chair was a rugged old Irishman. Wistfully Carson addressed him, and the acquaintance was speedily made.

PROMINENT DELEGATES ARRIVING IN TORONTO FOR TEACHERS' MEET

Toronto, Aug 2—Teachers and educationists are converging upon Toronto for the second biennial conference of the world Federation of Education Associations which will meet in this city August 7-12. Approximately 200 delegates from Great Britain have arrived and a still larger number are heading for the city. Several Japanese delegates have reached the United States, as has also a small party from China which will be greatly augmented by Chinese teachers resident in America.

Committees of local teachers are busy arranging for the accommodation of the 600 delegates who are expected to attend. Half a dozen of the leading Toronto hotels have set aside blocks of rooms for the visitors, while the remainder will be looked after in the comfortable college residences. Meals will be served in Hart House, which is conveniently adjacent to University College where the sessions of the conference will be conducted.

The majority of the British and foreign educationists visiting the city are leaders in public life in their native countries. Many of them have distinguished themselves as politicians and writers.

F. W. Goldstone, M.A., general secretary of the National Union of Teachers, was elected to the British House of Commons in 1910. He was leader of the teachers' panel of the Standing Joint Committee during the arbitration proceedings conducted by Vis. count Durham, in which capacity he presented the teachers' case for improved remunerations with convincing mastery. His association is the strong est teachers' body in the world, with a membership of 120,000.

Another interesting politician-teacher is T. J. O'Connell, T.D., general secretary of the Irish National Teachers' Organization, who was recently elected to the Lower House of the Irish Free State. The Irish National Teachers hold the distinction of being the only organization covering Ireland which has survived the past 20 years of strife. Mr. Cummins, another Irishman who will be present, is a member of the Free State Senate.

Prominent among the women delegates is Miss E. R. Conway, J.P., for the city of Liverpool, England. For more than a quarter of a century she has served as headmistress of various Liverpool schools. In 1918 she succeeded president of the National Union of Teachers, being second woman to hold that distinguished position.

China is represented at the conference by Dr. F. W. Pan, who has been honored with degrees by British and American universities in recognition of his scholarship. In addition to being a brilliant lecturer, Dr. Kuo is an author and editor. He edited the large est Anglo-Chinese dictionary in existence. He was organizer and first president of the National Southeastern University, at Nanking, China. In 1924 he was appointed by the Chinese Government as a member of the China Foundation for the Promotion of Education, established with the Boxer indemnity Fund recently returned by the United States. Dr. Kuo is a keen worker in the World Federation of Education Associations.

HALIBUT WILL BE RARE FISH SOON

Victoria B.C., Aug 2.—While the International Fisheries Commission has not yet decided on methods of preserving the halibut resources of British Columbia and Alaska, it has established beyond doubt the alarming depletion of the great northern food fish, according to J. P. Babcock, deputy commissioner of fisheries for British Columbia and noted authority on halibut and salmon. "The present supply of halibut," says Mr. Babcock "is being maintained by resorting to new and far distant fishing banks by more intensive fishing on depleted banks and the use of smaller boats. The outstanding feature of the work, like that previously conducted by the provincial government, is establishment of the fact that depletion is progressive." The gathering of knowledge on which to base regulations to preserve the halibut besides, is an urgent

Felt Sick And Weak In General

C. W. Payne, 627 Second Ave. East, Calgary, Alta., whose picture appears above, says: "I felt tired and tired in general, my liver was inactive and I often had headaches and dizzy spells. Then I began using Husky and this medicine has not only relieved me, but has built me." Husky, the wonderful herb preparation can be obtained at good drug stores everywhere.

BIGGER GRANTS TO AIR FORCES

Washington, Aug. 2.—Congress sprint from Washington during the past day that airmen from the United States have added bright pages to aerial history, gradually will return to the Capitol this fall with an ear more sympathetically inclined than ever before toward requests for funds for aviation purposes.

While the legislators last session provided more liberally than usual in authorizing five year building programs for the army and navy air services, and also in creating assistant secretaries in the war, navy and commerce departments to look after aviation activities, it is expected that the needs of aviation will be studied more carefully than ever this winter.

It is reasoned here as certain that there will be no disposition to curtail either of the two buildings programs of which commanding officers and maintenance of 1,000 first class fighting planes for the navy as the end of three years, and the other look for provision for 1500 planes for the army at the end of the same period.

In view of the recent achievements of United States flyers, it is believed here that the air officers of the government will be placed in a position to say should they present any request for supplementary aircraft appropriations to the House appropriations committee.

COW AND LARGE FAMILY SHOWN

Arnaud, B.C., Aug. 2.—When the party of prairie tourists motored to Arnaud recently the government Dominion Experimental Farm here proved to be, somethine out of the ordinary in the way of dairy herds was shown them lined up for the inspection was the famous old foundation cow, Pietje Pricella Mechthilde and no less than twenty four of her offspring.

Superintendent W. H. Hicks, by means of this cow, employed the principle of good foundation stock and mentioned that the best way to breed poor herds was to go at it gradually. Old Pietje had cost $500 in 1915 and now her female offspring at the farm was worth thousands of dollars and had been and been sold, in addition to the bulls.

Many of Pietje's offspring, according to Hicks, are 20-lb. pound cows and prize winners at leading fairs. Pietje Rahab, the greatest three-bull in the herd, though now eleven years old was in good form and was much admired when noticed with the herd.

SICK ABED EIGHT MONTHS

After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Could Do All Her Work and Gained in Weight

Melfort, Saskatchewan. — "I had low and troubles, headaches and severe pains in my back and sides. I was sick generally that I could not get up and I was in bed most of the time for eight months. An aunt came to visit and help me as I was unable to attend to my baby and could not do my work. She told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and after taking two bottles I could get up and dress myself. I also took Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine. When I first took the medicine I only weighed seventy-six pounds. Now I weigh 'One Hundred and Six' pounds. If I get out of sorts or weary and can't sleep I always take another bottle of the Vegetable Compound. I find it wonderfully good for female troubles, and have recommended it to my neighbors. I will be only too glad to answer any letters regarding what it has done for me." — Mrs. WILLIAM RITCHIE, Box 408, Melfort, Saskatchewan.

WOMEN INTERESTED IN HOME-MADE GOODS

Calgary, Alta., Aug. 2.—(Canadian Press)—That Western women are really interested in Made-in-Canada goods and only need to know about them to demand them is proven by the record which rushed to see the exhibit of fine clothing and knitted goods put on by the woollen and knitting industry of Canada at the Calgary Industrial Exhibition immediately after the doors were open here, to that it had to be shut down to prevent the crowd from becoming unmanageable.

This is the month of Opportunity—at Canadian Department Stores' August Sale of Housefurnishings.

NEW ANGLE TO LONG RIVALRY

Vancouver And New Westminster Now Fall Out Over Exhibition

New Westminster, B.C., Aug. 2.—Nowhere in Canada have rivalries between municipalities been more accentuated as in British Columbia. New Westminster which to the present day clings to the title of the "Royal City" has waged a continuous battle for the honors due its seniority for almost a hundred years. In the early days of jealously between the mainland and Vancouver Island, New Westminster and Victoria faced each other belligerently, while today the Royal City and Vancouver are locked in a contest every as to which of their two annual exhibitions shall survive "Royal City."

According to the provincial government, British Columbia suffers from a super abundance of exhibitions and the municipalities should collaborate in one big show a year. Each city ask nowhedee the soundness of this argument, but each maintains that it offers the logical location for the "one big show." In an effort to arbitrate the government has proposed Central Park, a point half way between the two, as the location for the combined exhibition, but this alternative has been coldly received by both sides.

The latest antagonism between the inland and the mainland began at the back in 1925, Justice Denis Murphy, of Vancouver, handed out an award which called for the early history of the province. At that time, although the Island and the mainland were separate colonies, the government officials of both lived most of the time at Victoria on business were much annoyed by the fact that they had to pay a head tax of $1 on each other time they crossed the Gulf of Georgia to the mainland.

Further friction was caused by the free trade policy of the Island as opposed to the protection which prevailed in British Columbia. According to Justice Murphy, the high tariff of the mainland practically put the people of the Island and residents of the Westminster were irritated because they had to pay tariff prices on their purchases. They agitated vigorously for representative government and a separate province.

As the result of frequent petitions, the home Government agreed separate provinces in 1863. Two years later the Island government went bankrupt and the two colonies were united. This was led by the same authority despite the protest of British Columbia, which feared it would be overlooked with especially officials.

Fresh fuel was added to New Westminster's resentment when in 1871 Victoria was made the capital of the united colonies.

Mr. Massey went to his rescue, but was unable to get him to shore. His body was recovered two hours later by George Beattie, of Warkworth, who found it by divine.

Mr. Callaghan is survived by one brother in Ottawa and his mother, who lives in Ireland.

THE PRINCE AS ENGINEER

Kingston, Aug. 2.—There was an interesting rumor going the rounds of Kingston to the effect that his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales would enter the city of one of the guests of honorcitizen of the Canadian National Railways, in the occasion of his trip from Kingston to Toronto, and that the Prince would run the Royal train into the Union Station at Toronto, marking the official opening of the station. The rumor could not be verified but, as the Prince of Wales do operate an engine on his recent visit to Ontario, it would not be at all surprising if he undertook a similar task on the occasion of his approaching visit.

B. C. SUPPLIES MILK TO TOTS IN CHINA TOWN

Vancouver, B.C., Aug. 2.—Despite its political troubles and the menace of invading armies, the babies of Shanghai must have milk and British Columbia cows will supply it, as in the past.

For several years the Shanghai Dairy Company has been buying its stock in British Columbia and shipping it across the Pacific to join the big herds quartered in the pastures south of the foreign quarter. It is this company which supplies most of the dairy produce for the use of European families quartered in Shanghai.

G. T. Gerhardson and Captain Grant, representatives of the Shanghai Dairy Company, are in British Columbia on another of their buying trips. They are at present in the Comox Valley purchasing dairy stock. They will buy several hundred head the year.

"Wars and revolutions are a nuisance, but there is nothing more insistent than a baby's demand for milk," said Gerhardson. "We have got to meet the demand, regardless of whatever else may happen."

Pile Sufferers

Can You Answer These Questions?
Do you know why ointments do not give you quick and lasting relief?
Why cutting often fails?
Do you know the cause of piles is internal?

That there is a stagnation of blood circulation in the lower bowel?

Do you know that there is a harmless internal remedy discovered by Dr. Leonhardt and known as HEM-ROID, now sold by J. S. McKeown, and druggists everywhere, that is guaranteed.

HEM-ROID banishes piles by removing the cause, by freeing blood circulation in the lower bowel. This simple home treatment has an almost unbelievable record for sure, quick and lasting relief to thousands of pile sick sufferers, and saves the needless pain and expense of an operation. There is no reason why it should not do the same for you.

MAKING MUCK LAND PROFITABLE

The profitable production of farm crops on muck land depends, in most instances, upon such factors as drainage, proper cultural methods, the use of potash and phosphorus-carrying fertilizers, and the selection of suitable crops.

Drainage of muck land is almost always necessary for maximum crop yields. Open drains are generally used first, followed in two or three years by clay tile-drains. If the land, on account of its location, is low in value, the last of an extensive drainage system may not be warranted.

Fall ploughing of muck land is desirable. A furrow 16 or more inches in width and about 6 inches in depth turns it flat, is best for muck soils. A long mould-board and a rolling-coulter should be used. Muck land may be ploughed only when it is dry, as an more compact the soil can be kept the more it will produce. For farming mucky land and for use after ploughing and before seeding, a heavy roller is an ordinary one heavily weighted is recommended.

Muck soils which are acid require lime, except where only acid-tolerant meadow plants are grown. There are many sorts of muck, however, that are not acid. Light dressings of well rotted manure applied to the land and mixed in give very beneficial results, but when only sufficient manure is used to cover the ground, commercial fertilizers should be applied to the muck areas. Almost all soils of a peaty or mucky character are deficient in potash and usually lacking in phosphorus.

A mixture of 75 to 150 pounds of muriate of potash and 200 to 300 pounds of acid phosphate (superphosphate) per acre will, in almost every case, give excellent returns in crop yields. The best soils to these may be applied to intertilled, cereal and hay crops.

Hay mixtures composed of white clover, timothy and red top, and other crops, such as rye, wheat, corn, mangels, flax, potatoes and sweet clover have all been grown with success on muck soil. Meadows and pastures, however, cover a larger area of these soils in Eastern Canada than any other farm crop. Further information on the management of muck soils, and soils of other types, may be obtained by writing to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, for a copy of Bulletin 72 new series on "Crop Rotations and Soil Management for Eastern Canada."

BELLE THEATRE

With an all-star cast, directed by one of the outstanding men in the profession Harry Beaumont, and with the outdoor sequences filmed in England, A. S. M. Hutchinson's justly-famed novel, "One Increasing Purpose," had its first presentation at the Belle Theatre yesterday.

Fox Films have again shown the artistic possibilities of the silent drama in this finely wrought and highly entertaining picture.

Unlike that masterpiece of the screen, "What Price Glory," also a Fox production, "One Increasing Purpose" deals not with the great war but with the effect of the war on a group of characters after the signings of the peace treaty.

The story is that of Sim Paris, played by Edmund Lowe, who has been hailed as the greatest actor of the screen. Once his interpretation of Sergeant Quirt in "What Price Glory." Sim had a hundred miraculous escapes during the battle until he has come to believe that his life has been spared for some "purpose". This is the vital theme of the story, logically developed by a cast of actors who include such screen favorites as Lila Lee, Holmes Herbert, May Allison, Huntley Gordon, Emily Fitzroy, Jane Novak, Josef Swikard, Lawford Davidson and others equally well known for their splendid work.

As mentioned above, before practically all cut-door sequences were filmed in Eng land and scenes of English village life as well as many histories spots, such as Trafalgar Square, Piccadilly Circus, House of Parliament and other notable buildings and places, play a prominent part in the production.

All in all, "One Increasing Purpose"

SMELTERS ADD ANOTHER GAIN

Point Anne And Deloro Here For Double Bill Wednesday

Deloro maintained their winning record at the expense of the Belleville Canadian Nationals on Saturday in the mining town when they disposed of them by a score of 6-3. It was a nice ball game all the way through with four double plays sewing up things considerably.

The real feature of the tilt was the pitching of "Hoot" Gibson, youthful Belleville alabaman. The boy went in after "Punch" Derry got himself into deep water and his display of hurling was the best ever turned in this year. The strong Deloro batters wilted before Gibson's masterful exhibition. Had he taken the mound at the opening there is little doubt that the Railroaders would have emerged on the long end of the count. As it was he went in with a big handicap facing him and try as he they might the local batters could do little to help his cause.

Manager Elliott started Frank Lee on the slab but the veteran took suddenly ill and was relieved by Ralph who finished the pastime. Both Deloro moundsmen were in rare form and the Railroaders were baffled at times. Vern Weir stuck out his gloved hand to snare a sizzling line driven off the bat of "Hec" Boudreau which was by long odds the sweetest play of the afternoon. Lionel Harper who covered first base in the absence of Harry Mills turned in a bang-up game and his playing caught the eye of the north country fans. Harper is a natural-born first-baseman and made the ball thrown look easy.

The locals will be out for sweet revenge on Wednesday afternoon here when they stack up against Deloro and Point Anne in a double-header. The Belleville bunch need these two games badly and it would be a feather in their caps. Despite the fact that they lost on Saturday they played fairly good ball but a couple of errors spelled defeat for them.

TRENTON HORSE BEST IN FIVE EXCITING HEATS

Deacon Shirt Strengthened By Ontarios Win From Beavers

A small crowd of race goers were on hand for the excellent racing provided at the Exhibition Grounds by the Quinte Amusement Company yesterday, but those who attended in no way well satisfied that they had had their moneys worth.

Besides the horse races a six inning game of softball was played between the Deacon Shirts and Alan Mercher's Beavers, the former team proved to be the winners when the umpires called the game in the sixth on account of rain.

Two races were run on in good time. The first being a pacing race consisting of three heats and a second, the feature of the day. The matched race for a purse of $100.00 between Dick Sunday owned and driven by Trenton and owned by W. Smith of this City and Minnie Hal of Picton owned and driven by Ross Larsen.

It took five heats to decide this race Dick Sunday proved to be the sailbird that he is just about the best race horse in these parts and should have won in four heats, if his driver had not driven him too close to the rail of Minnie Hal in the third heat and had to pull up. This mistake cost him the heat and the race right here but the Trenton horse had plenty in reserve and came out of the last heat almost as fresh as when he entered while Minnie Hal looked somewhat blown in condition and tired badly in the last heat and was beaten by 10 lengths.

The winner proved all over a better horse than the Picton mare and much credit is due Willie Smith his trainer and driver. Smith is showing rare horsemanship this season and his services are likely to be much sought of from now on.

Mr. Kingsley of the Crystal Hotel acted as starter and handled the bell in a most capable manner.

In the named race W. Smith driving his old war-horse Starlight Dan, who is somewhere around 16 years old show his heels in three straight heats to George Fife's Greta Silk with Butcher Shirt owned by Mr. Strong of Wooler bringing up the rear. Incidently Smith had a field day as he had the leg-up on both winners.

Starlight Dan was raced off the pace in each heat until the turn for home was made, then Smith shook him up and he responded each time to win handily in 2.29 1-4, 2.28 1-4 and 2.24 1-4.

The winner has been racing in and around this district since most other race horses were colts and appears to be in real good condition for another successful season.

The results

Name	Race
1. Starlight Dan, W. Smith, Belleville	1 1 1
2. Greta Silk, George Fife, Belleville	2 2 2
3. Butcher Girl, Mr. Strong Wooler	3 3 3

The Softball Game

In the softball game between the Deacon Shirt and the Beavers the former team came out on the long end of a 13-10 score after, six innings had been played and at that time the umpires deemed it necessary to call the game on account of the rain that stopped proceedings.

Some very smart plays were pulled off, but it remained for E. Wilkins to claim owner to the feature one, afe racing at top speed nailed a hard high fly back of second base running with her back to the play for a lovely putout. This same lassie also in the back lest clot of the piece when she smashed out a healthy home-run with one on base at the time.

The Deacon Shirt presented a different line-up, being greatly strengthened by the presence of several of the Ontario players.

M. Holloway had to retire near the end with a badly wrenched knee.

The Beavers also had a somewhat different line-up, being without the services of their hard-hitting centre fielder, Twila Warham.

Miss Thrasher who started on the mound for the Beavers weakened in the 5th and gave way to Molly Gray who finished the piece in fine style.

Ken Colling and Vernon Weir looked after the umpiring.

INDIANS DOWN MANHATTANITES

Yankees Lose To Cleveland As Downpour Halts Game

New York, August 2.—Bullet rain over Bath could save the Yanks yesterday. They both had their chance, but both failed.

The rain was reluctant to fall while the Yanks were out in front, and then after the Indians had taken the lead turned loose with such pent-up fury that that the game had to be called before somebody got drowned.

The Babe, barcheaded and belligerent, shouldered his bat just before the storm broke, well aware that only a home run could tie the score, but he bounced to the box.

So it was that the Indians were credited with a victory over Miller Huggins' heavy hitters and Herbie Pennock suffered a defeat that was of but six and a half innings that weren't washed away on the high tide was 2 to 1 and the Indians left here highly elated at having gained an even break with the pace-setting Yanks, which is something to shout about in these days and times.

The mighty maulers of Manhattan didn't accept the decision in any such state of satisfaction, however. They might not have pulled it out even if it had been a clear day, with the sun shining and the birds singing, as Walter Miller, the young Cleveland collegian, was doing a right fair piece of pitching. But you couldn't convince the Yanks of that.

CHICAGO MOVED INTO 1ST PLACE

Pirates Went Into Second Place By Defeating Braves

New York, August 2.—The Cubs, moving into first place bunched their hits opportunely to defeat Philadelphia yesterday at Chicago 6 to 5. After leading the visitors unless for several innings, Brillheart weakened and was driven off the hill in the eighth, with the tieing run on base. Bush replaced him and walked the first man to fill the bases. Jumped the first man to face Percy Jones, the next Cub pitcher, smashed out a double clearing the bases and putting the Phillies in the lead. Webb tied the count with a home-run in the Cubs' half of the eighth and Jones started the winning rally in the ninth for Chicago with a single.

Defeated by the Boston Braves 4 to 1, in 11 innings at Pittsburgh, the Pirates went into second place. Aldrich weakened in the 11th, after hurling fine ball. Hornsby opened the final frame by beating out a bunt. Banerott singled and High tripled to score both runners. High then scored on a sacrifice fly.

Brooklyn gained the edge yesterday in the battle with Cincinnati for fifth place, taking the third game of the series from the Reds. Dazzy Vance belted Eppa Rixey in a pitching duel and banged in a run himself with a sacrifice fly in the fifth inning.

We are not exactly sure where the Giants are going but we believe they are going there fast. Out-playing the Cardinals both ways from the jack yesterday the McGrawmen waded through the champions for their third straight victory here and their fifth out of six tries since the season front. The verge and splomb and fighting spirit of the Giants was something to be has carried them only two games worth going to see, and tonight their behind third place and five and a half games out of first place, with August just beginning.

The Giant attack yesterday was Yankee-like in its ferocity and fury. Hal Terry the Memphis boy, hit two homers and George Harper one, and he natives sobbed thereat. There was hardly a dry eye in the stand after the fifth inning, and even your correspondent is forced to confess that he shed one or two tears as the pitiable extent of distress rang into his ears.

Oh, the score was 6 to 3. Five of our six runs came out of homers. Terry slammed one in the third inning with a runner aboard and a minute later Harper, whose four-bagger won yesterday's game, clouted a mammoth shot of Ruthian distance.

Follow this easy rule for easier Ford parking
OVER a million Ford owners have learned the secret of easier parking. Most of them long ago discovered that a Ford car which has been allowed to develop chatter is the hardest car in the world to park. But now every one of these million owners has learned that one oil eliminates chatter, and gives the Ford that certain, smooth control which eases it to the curb as it should go—without a tremor.
You too can assure yourself of velvety smoothness of control by always using the right oil—Veedol Forzol, an oil made for Fords exclusively.
Veedol Forzol is a different kind of oil, expressly compounded to lubricate both the Ford motor and the Ford transmission. Unlike ordinary motor oils it keeps the transmission bands soft, pliable, smooth-acting.
If your Ford stops with a jerk and reverses with a shudder when you try to park in crowded traffic the chances are ten to one that you need to adopt this easy rule:—
Ask for Veedol Forzol by name where you see the orange and black Veedol Forzol sign.

PRINCE ASSISTS AT DEDICATION OF MEMORIALS

Altar In Peace Tower In Honor Of Canada's War Dead

SPECTACULAR SCENE

Monument To Late Sir Wilfred Laurier Is Unveiled Today

Ottawa, Aug. 3.—Canada's capital city, yesterday the scene of a joyful reception to the Prince of Wales, Prince George and Premier Baldwin of Great Britain, today was the setting for two solemn memorial services.

With fitting ceremony the official life of Ottawa joined with the distinguished visitors in paying tribute to the Dominion's war dead and to a great statesman. The Prince of Wales dedicated an altar in the Memorial chamber of Peace Tower, a national monument to those killed in the Great War, and later of Sir Wilfred Laurier.

Parliament Hill was thronged when the ceremonies began with the arrival of the Prince Minister of Great Britain and Mrs. Baldwin who were conducted to the Memorial chamber by Premier King. Shortly after the two princes arrived, with their staffs escorted by troops of the Royal Canadian Dragoons with gleaming helmets and fluttering pennon on their lances.

Promptly at three o'clock the Prince of Wales took his place before the altar while at the four corners stood an able seaman, a private, an airman and a nursing sister. With the final words of the dedication speech spoken, the altar was veil a book containing the names of sixty thousand Canadians who gave their lives in the great war.

Laurier Memorial

Unveiling of the Laurier Memorial was made the occasion of tribute to a man whose life was linked with the development of the nation. Among those attending the ceremony were Prince Geoerge, Premier Baldwin and Viscount Willingdon. The speakers were Sir Robert Borden, Premier King and Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, speaker of the House of Commons.

The ceremony commenced at 3.30 when the Royal party arrived at the south-east corner of Parliament Hill where the status stands. His Excellency called upon Premier King to deliver the address and Mr. King invited his Royal Highness to perform the unveiling. Hon. J. C. Elliott, minister of public works, handed the cords of the to the Prince of Wales. The Centenary Choir accompanied by a military band, led in the singing of "O Canada."

TWO WOMEN IN PACIFIC FLIGHT

San Francisco, Aug. 3.—The die was cast, today for the first trans-oceanic aeroplane race in history with fourteen official and four unofficial entries for the James D. Dole thirty-three thousand dollar prizes for first and second aviators to fly across the North Pacific continent to Honolulu, starting on the afternoon of August 12. The official list of entries was left incomplete when the hour for its closing at midnight last night arrived. The committee in charge of arrangements announced that all entries postmarked before that hour would be accepted when received.

A wide assortment of aviators and enthusiasts make up the list which will enter the twenty-four-hundred mile dash across half of the Pacific ocean. Two women were among the official entries—Mrs. William Erwin wife of a Dallas, Texas, engineer, and Miss Mildred Doran, Flint, Mich. a school teacher, who will make the trip with John Augie Pedlar, the Flint entry. Several army and navy aviators will participate.

NO WARNING AS ROARING, TEARING EARTHQUAKE WRECKS A PROVINCE

Details Of China's Horrible Disaster Leaking Out Months Later

Shanghai, Aug. 3.—Further graphic details of the earthquake in Kansu Province when it was estimated that a hundred thousand people lost their lives, have been received from Mons B. Budderscheit of Langehow, who sent the first detailed account of the disaster several days ago.

"Monday preceding Ascension Day was unforgettable in its terrors," he writes. "We rose early, as is our custom. A beautiful May sun was shining in its glory over mountains and valleys and there was nothing presaging disaster. My morning meditation was rudely interrupted by a violent shock, windows rattling and the house quivering. Such shocks are usual here and soon all was quiet again. I proceeded to the orphanage chapel and began mass, when without the slightest warning there was indescribable noise, terrible thundering and terrifying echoes.

"As if carried by a hurricane I was pushed from the altar through the sacristy and into the open. Sisters and children rushed to the door as the walls crashed. Children scrambled out over fallen masses. I still hear their lamentations. We were tossed about and it was impossible to stand. Instinctively we fell to our knees, imploring God's mercy amidst the roaring and thundering of collapsing buildings and rolling earth.

"It is impossible to give any adequate idea of the misery of the survivors living in mud and straw huts, fearing to return to the few houses standing. Quakes continued for some time. For miles in all directions everything is in ruins."

Only fragmentary reports, lacking details, continue to be received by the China Inland Mission.

MOTHER AND HER FIVE CHILDREN HURT IN CRASH

Drunken Driving Charge Pending Against Toronto Motorist

ON WRONG SIDE

Smashed Into Car Of Adams Family Near Bayside

J. G. McCutcheon, employed by the Robert Simpson Company, Toronto, whose home address is 53 Oriole Parkway, Toronto, and H. S. Warner, accountant in the Bank of Commerce, Port Perry, who gave his home address as 546 Huron street, Toronto, appeared in Police Court this morning charged with driving a car while intoxicated and a charge of intoxication, respectively. McCutcheon also was charged with criminal negligence, all this arising from a bad automobile accident last night, when McCutcheon smashed into a small car driven by James C. Adams, of Bayside, injuring all of the occupants of the Adams' car and making a total wreck of the automobile. McCutcheon was remanded until Monday, under bail. His counsel, Colonel E. D. O'Flynn, stated that in all probabilities the accused would plead guilty to the charge, and intimated that the client visited to Toronto to get a vacation from his business duties.

Colonel O'Flynn, counsel for Warner also, pleaded for a lenient sentence for this client, and Warner received a fine of $10 and $8.50 costs.

Driving on Wrong Side

At about 9 o'clock last evening McCutcheon was driving east on the Trenton Highway, just this side of Bayside, accompanied by H. S. Warner. J. C. Adams, accompanied by his wife and five children, was proceeding west on the road, and he noticed McCutcheon coming down the wrong side of the pavement. Adams thought by swinging across to his wrong side of, the road he could avoid an accident, but as he did so, McCutcheon's automobile also swung back to the right hand side and he crashed into the left front wheel of Adam's car, sending both automobiles hurtling into the ditch. The McCutcheon car only suffered a broken bumper and two smashed head lights but the other was badly wrecked.

Mother and Children Hurt

Six occupants of Adams' car received injuries more or less serious in their nature. J. Adams, 13, suffered a deep cut on the head which required two stitches to close. L. Adams, aged 7, also had his head cut, requiring five stitches. Marcella Adams received a stitches Marcella Adams, aged 9, had his right leg and shoulder bruised, and Evaline Adams, age 15, was cut about the head and suffered a bruised right side. J. C. Adams, the head of the car, was cut in the right leg. The most serious injury was done to the mother, Mrs. Claire Adams, who was sitting in the front seat with her husband. She received concussion and bruises all over the right eye and was badly shaken and shocked. Curiously enough, neither Warner nor McCutcheon received any hurts whatsoever. Dr. Jack Farley, Trenton, was called, and had the patient's removed to their home in Bayside. Provincial Police Inspector Lougheed and a Provincial Police Constable Wetherall investigated the accident and promptly laid charges against Warner under arrest they spending the night under the hospitable roof of the Belleville Police Station. Four bottles of beer were found in the car.

STOCKS SLUMPED

President's Announcement Broke Prices But Good Rally Followed

New York, N.Y., Aug. 3.—The stock market broke three to nearly sixteen points on the first onslaught of selling which followed President Coolidge's statement that he did not choose to be candidate in 1928, but immediately staged a remarkable recovery which substantially reduced, or wiped out, most of the early losses and carried a few issues to record high levels.

MASSASSAGA TO BE BIG RESORT

United States Capitalists Have Practically Completed Plans

Arrangements are almost complete for the sale of Massassaga Park to a large American syndicate who are planning extensive improvements to the popular resort. For many years Dr. Anderson, present owner, has been endeavoring to have a road placed through to the south end and it is understood that only recently permission was granted by the Ontario Government to lay the road, and operations have already been started. This was the one obstacle that had up the sale that people who desired to visit the Park were obliged to go by boat.

Massassaga Park is a popular centre for a summer resort within half an hour motor drive of Belleville and besides a large hotel, there is a first-class dancing pavilion and refreshment hall at the Park.

Many years ago Massassaga was the mecca for picnicers and campers but of late years it has fallen into a state of decay and there has been little activity about the place Now that the American concern have gained possession, it is confidently expected that the Park will regain its heights of popularity.

Mr. Anderson is residing in Toronto at the present time and through his attorney here, Mr. E. J. Butler, he has been carrying on the negotiations. It is said that the new concern will erect the latest forms of entertainment on the property and that the location of the park near the city and the fine accommodation for water craft of all kinds, Massassaga will regain its lost status.

SERVED ALL ONTARIO PREMIERS

Toronto, Aug. 3.—Charles Chase, who has served as a messenger in the Ontario Prime Minister's office under all provincial premiers since the first, John Sandfield MacDonald, suffered a paralytic stroke over the week-end and is now in the General Hospital. He was reported today to be resting easily. Mr. Chase is more than 80 years of age.

NO ONE INJURED IN C.P.R. WRECK

Toronto, Aug. 3.—General Superintendent's office of the Canadian Pacific Railway today issued a statement in connection with the derailment of the Montreal-Toronto passenger train near Colborne early today when it was said that nine cars were derailed but remained up-right. No person was injured. The special train brought the passengers into this city shortly after. Runners were current here that many were killed and injured in the wreck.

ST. ANDREW'S PICNIC STORY OUT A DAY TOO PREVIOUS

A fleet of automobiles gathered at St. Andrew's Church at ten o'clock this morning to convey the members of the congregation of that church with their families and friends to where the annual picnic of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church was held today.

St. Andrew's picnic is one of the outings of this city which eagerly looked forward to from year to year as the event of the season and this year as usual an efficient committee had charge of the varied program of sports which included races, softball matches, scrambles and in fact something in which everyone could take part in from the youngest to the oldest person in attendance.

Each family brought their own basket and enjoyed their mid-day and evening meal, gathered in groups about the park.

An amusing incident in connection with St. Andrew's Picnic of this year is that an advance story appeared in a local paper last night telling how the picnickers reached Massassaga Park, of how tea and coffee were provided and that the crowds returned home at five and seven o'clock.

The Intelligencer believes in having news, if humanly possible, on the days it happens, but has not yet been convinced that it could take part in front the day before it occurs.

Hope Stirring That Geneva Conference Will Yet Make Treaty

Geneva, Aug. 3.—Word was waited today from London and Washington to indicate the reaction of the respective governments to the new formula proposed by Japan in the hope of saving the Tri-Partite Naval Conference. Although the plan kindled a spark, there was no great flame of enthusiasm among the various delegations. Even the Japanese in presenting it said it was "just an idea," that they realized it was entirely imperfect, and that Hugh S. Gibson, chief United States delegate should feel at liberty to modify it or comment on it in anyway he desired.

British Cabinet Meeting

Geneva, Aug. 3.—The announcement that plenipotentiaries at the Tri-Partite Naval Conference, supplemented by three or four other delegates would meet some time today to discuss the new situation created by the Japanese compromise plan stirred the hopes of those conference circles in which the belief is still held that a treaty can eventually be drawn up at Geneva.

Whatever decision, if any, the "big six" and others can come to, is felt to depend upon the verdict of the British cabinet meeting being held in London today.

SURVEYING NOW

S. D. Lazier, President, And H. F. Ketcheson, Secretary

There is a strong possibility that within a few months a huge cement concern equally as large as the Canada Cement may start operations for the erection of a mammoth plant in the County of Hastings. Not only is it possible, but it is probable that a plant equal in proportions to the Point Anne branch of the Canada Cement Company will be built.

For some months past, negotiations between the National Cement Company of Montreal and the old Ontario Limestone and Clay Company have been going on with the result that at the present time an engineer and two assistants are surveying the property which is situated in Tyendinaga Township near Shannonville. The tract consists of six hundred and fifty acres abutting on the Salmon river. It is almost a solid section of rock and considered by the local centre for the manufacture of cement. It has been reported that the engineers has stated that there is enough rock to carry on the manufacture for the next thousand years.

The big problem lies in the quantity of clay and there is believed to be a fair amount of this product. The Intelligencer learned that drills have been sunk in the land to a distance of one hundred and fifty feet and solid rock was discovered at that distance. The National Cement Company have an option on the property at the present time and whether they exercise it or not will be based on the report of the engineers who are carrying on the surveying operations.

If the officials are pleased with the plans it will undoubtedly be a big asset to Belleville as the proximity of the plant to this city will bring a great amount of business here.

W. S. Dies has been leasing a portion of the property from year to year for the Ontario Limestone and Clay Company. S. D. Lazier who is absent from the city at the present time is President of the Company and H. F. Ketcheson Secretary.

Arrangements can be made by dredging the river to allow boats to come up the river with coal and other products and also for the shipping of the cement.

WORLD POULTRY CONGRESS OVER

Ottawa, Aug. 3.—With speeches expressing international good will, and carrying a tribute to the late Governor-General Byng of Vimy, and with a touching tribute to the late president, Edward Brown, of England, the third world's poultry congress concluded its business session here today.

Interesting announcements which featured the closing were: Edward Brown, who was performing as all of the world's poultry congresses, will have an honorary degree conferred on him by McGill University, Montreal; a special convocation at MacDonald College, Ste. Anne de Bellevue, Que., Friday, their Excellencies, Viscount and Viscountess Willingdon will shortly build up a flock of poultry of breed which His Excellency particularly fancies as the outcome of this convention.

Present at Closing

The Centenary Choir may be taken to England in 1930, where it will take part in the fourth world's poultry congress to be held in London. TODAY'S THOUGHT

Cheerfulness is not merely a matter of choice it is an obligation we owe to those about us

ENGLAND'S ALRIGHT

Idealist patriotism found stirring expression in the speech which Mr. Baldwin delivered in his first speech of his Canadian tour at the Montreal Canadian Club luncheon. The audience, which was at once worthy of the guest and the occasion, could not fail to be convinced by the British Premier's utterances that he is as sound as he seems to be, for sincerity was manifest in every sentence of his shrewd, straightforward, human address, which though professedly that of a business man speaking to business men, expressed the desires of a statesman, proud of and jealous for his country's great traditions, to see ever a striving of the nation at its best.

Obviously, Mr. Baldwin's great desire is for national and Empire unity, and he finds encouragement for hope in this direction in the success that has marked, and continues to mark, the work of the Empire Marketing Board in Great Britain. It is one of this Board's main functions to create a consciousness of Empire among the public in Great Britain which shall carry with it a realization of the obligations of Empire and of the obligation of each individual to his fellow-subjects across the seas. In this way there is being stimulated a public demand, and even an insistence, for Empire produce. It all makes for mutual economic good, and helps to bring the different parts of the Empire into closer relationship.

This was the prepared part of Mr Baldwin's address. Another part that he had prepared, he declared he deliberately set aside in order that, moved by the cordiality of the receptions that he had received since his arrival in the city on Sunday, he might speak under the inspiration of the public welcome And it was in this part of his address that England's Premier was the most stirring. In it spoke the "plain Englishman" Mr. Baldwin describes himself to be, but, speaking as he did on the occasion, he is not as "plain" as he apparently would have us believe him, unless "plain" may be understood to mean clarity and directness. Through all his extemporary remarks the audience heard Baldwin the patriot and seer, the Englishman who has an abiding faith and a supreme confidence in the solid and lasting qualities of England and the English They still have the gifts of a great race. England is not what some people are pleased to call "dished," or "decadent," according to Mr. Baldwin's more elegant diction The heart of the country has never been sounder. There has never been a time, Mr. Baldwin is confident, when the Old Country has been more "quivering with life," when there has been greater keenness for progress, keenness for education, keenness for science, keenness for discovery. And not the least promising feature of the bright situation pictured is that England's high traditions for public service are being well maintained, and men are bringing to bar "the best brains and the highest courage—and the "coldest courage" — to solve the problems of the day. They are determined to make good.

As that spirit prevails, there can be no doubt that Englishmen, who have given the world institutions of government and laws unparalleled in any age will hold high the torch and will not be submerged in the lower and inferior qualities of civilization.

MORE SPEED

Some weeks ago an English army officer, in a speed test on a Florida beach, drove his car at a speed of 207 miles an hour. This is the greatest rate of travel ever made in any sort of machine driven on land or sea. But it is reported that an airplane has been made in England for a forthcoming race which can develop a speed of 300 miles an hour.

It is not easy to realize what it would mean to travel at such a rate of speed. The fastest express trains rarely go faster than sixty or seventy miles an hour. Three hundred miles an hour is a speed greater than the average velocity developed by a human being falling from a great height. One day this week the French airman Jean van Laere, flying over Beaumont-sur-Oise, got into difficulties at an altitude of more than four miles, and jumped with his parachute from the machine. The parachute did not open until he was 300 feet from the ground, but in time to save his life From the moment he jumped until the moment the parachute opened, he fell four miles in about seventy seconds. That is at the average rate of 200 miles an hour. And the super plane will, it is said, be capable of a speed 10 per cent. greater than that!

LIFE'S PURPOSE

Not what we have but what we use,
Not what we see but what we choose;
These are the things that mar or bless
The sum of human happiness.

The things nearby, not things afar,
Not what we seem, but what we are;
These are the things that make or break,
That give the heart its joy or ache.

Not what seems fair but what is true
Not what we dream but the good we do;
These are the things that shine like gems
Like stars in heaven's diadems

Not as we take but as we give,
Not merely as we pray but as we live;
These are the things which make for peace,
Both now and after time shall cease.

HAVE YOU HEARD THESE?

A newly appointed policeman, whilst on his beat, was hailed by the conductor of a tramcar.

"Officer," said the conductor, "this man,"—pointing to a surly-looking individual, over six feet high, with exceptionally broad shoulders—"has already travelled some distance, but refuses to pay his fare."

"Oh, won't he?" remarked the policeman, after a glance at the man. Then, putting his hand in his pocket, he said "Well, I'll have to pay it for him I suppose."

He was a good natured Irishman and was one of a number of men employed in erecting a new building. The owner of the building, who knew him, said to him one day:

"Pat, didn't you tell me once that a brother of yours is a bishop?"

"Yes, sor," replied Pat.

"And you a hodcarrier! The good things of this life are not equally divided are they?"

"No, sor," said Pat, as he shouldered his hod. "Poor fellow! My brother couldn't do this to save his life!"

"Five dollars or five days," said the magistrate curtly.

"Thank you, sir," replied the defendant, "I'll take the money."

BUDDHIST HERE TO TEACH TRUTH

Returning Compliment Of Western World For Sending Missionaries

Vancouver, July 28. With the newness of the country fascinating him and the ancient lore of the Orient still clinging to him, Rev. Kenryo Kawaki, director of Buddhist missions abroad, and noted Japanese educator, has arrived here from Japan to spread the teachings of Buddhism and peace. He will go from here in the United States for an extended tour and may visit eastern Canada later in the summer.

The theme which runs through Kawaki's talk is, "Such is the teaching of Buddha peace and happiness for all." Whether he is speaking of the educational exercises which now possess Japan, whether of the Chinese catastrophe or of international relations, always he is guided by the ghost he but all-powerful hand of Buddha.

"You have sent us many Christian missionaries to teach us the love of Christ," said Kawaki. "We are appreciative of their various efforts to enlighten us. To reciprocate this our duty I am visiting America to tell of the teachings of Buddha.

What could bring us nearer to international peace than the admonition of Buddha who said, "Shun all evils; do all good you can, and so attain the purity of your mind? The life of a Buddhist is a life of peace."

On his way east, Kawaski will stop at Salt Lake City to exchange his ideas on Buddhism for those of Mormonism

BEAR THROWS SCARE INTO RAILWAY MEN

Revelstoke, B. C., Aug. 2.—A lonely black bear, evidently seeking company as well as food crawled into the caboose of a freight train at Field the other night and terrified the train crew.

A long "drag" from Revelstoke had just been put away and the train crew had retired for the night in their bunks. Suddenly, Trainman Westaway and Macdonnell were awakened by a yell from conductor McPherson, Bill-ting up in their bunks, they saw a fair sized black bear inside the door of the caboose, leisurely taking stock of the car's interior.

The movements of the awakened men disturbed the bear. He turned toward the door, swung down the steps and sauntered off in the dark. In future the doors of the caboose will be locked.

DOWAGER QUEEN TO SELL JEWELS

Marie Of Rumania a Poor Woman—Little Return From Writings

Bucharest, July 30.—King Ferdinand's death has left Queen Marie relatively a poor woman. Unless the state comes forward with help for the now dowager queen, she may be obliged to convert some of her jewels and other possessions into cash.

As already announced, Ferdinand's 70,000,000 lei fortune (about $100,000) will be apportioned equally among the king's five children, including Prince Carol, who will receive about $100,000. The queen however, receives nothing but the use for life of certain of the king's properties and palaces.

Split Civil List

The government now proposes to split up the 20,000,000 lei civil list which Ferdinand received (about $100,000) among Queen Marie, King Michael, the princess mother, Helen, Prince Nicholas and members of the regency. This would allow the queen only about $35,000 annually for the upkeep of her palaces, the salaries of her staff, entertainment purposes and other expenditures. This sum is very small compared with the salaries and allowances of other royal figures. King Alexander of Jugo-Slavia, Marie's son-in-law, for instance, receiving more than a million dollars annually, and King George of England, commanding in the neighborhood of $10,000,000.

Queen Marie is said to feel keen distress over the financial situation and efforts were started today by friends to induce the cabinet to recommend to parliament a liberal allowance in order to enable her, as dowager queen, to maintain the former dignity and liberality of her court.

It is true, friends said, that the queen will receive a fraction of the income from Ferdinand's property, but as the total annual revenue from the king's holdings are less than $200,000, Marie's share is almost negligible.

The queen's remuneration for her North American writings was insignificant as compared with the cost of her trip to Canada and the United States.

"Confederation," mused the cub reporter, "to be turned in his celebration copy, "is a 13-letter word stretching from ocean to ocean." — Toronto Globe.

GENERAL SPINKS PASHA A GREAT MILITARY MAN

Victoria, B.C., Aug. 2.—In a little city-covered cottage on one of the British Empire's most illustrious sons—Major General Charleston Watson Spinks Pasha, D.S.O., C.B.E., Inspector General of the Egyptian Army, K.B.E., and Acting Sirdar.

Major General Spinks has had honors heaped upon him lately, Proud as they are of their son, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Spinks find that rejoicing congratulations is just a little wearisome. When General Spinks was gazetted K.B.E., recently, Mr. Spinks remarked, "Oh, yes, it is very nice, but it is not surprising. Charlie is likely to win anything now."

The name of Spinks has been before the British public a good deal lately, for his position has been the local point in the Egyptian political controversy.

Spinks Pasha was born in 1877, and was commissioned in the Royal Field Artillery. He has seen active service in northern Nigeria, (1903) being mentioned in despatches; and in 1903-4 against the Okpotos; being again mentioned in the Report for 1912-, against theKelir and Annak tribes; in Gallipoli and Egypt, during the Great War; and also in the Sudan for campaign of 1916, whe he was once more mentioned in despatches.

Until the murder of Sir Lee Stack, in 1924, the Egyptian army was under the command and-ship recognized control of a British sirdar. Who one was appointed to succeed Sir Lee Stack. The execution of his functions fell and was later delegated to Spinks Pasha, Inspector General, who became acting Sirdar.

POLITICIANS ARE SHOCKED BY THE ANNOUNCEMENT

President Coolidge's Terse Statement a Bombshell To His Party

FROM CLEAR SKY

Friends Claim Door To His Nomination Is Not Yet Closed

Washington, D.C., Aug. 3.—The effect and significance of President Coolidges brief announcement on the nation's political future were being analyzed carefully today by politicians, business men and ordinary citizens who were gradually recovering from the unexpected news from the Black Hills of South Dakota.

The unadorned ten word statement "I do not choose to run for president in 1928," apparently was due to produce thousands of words of comment by political leaders and newspapermen and had fanned to a sudden heat the presidential campaign which seemingly had been lulled in tranquility during the summer months.

In general political leaders, shocked apparently by the bombshell-like character of the announcement, found no clear sky either remain silent or only expressed terse guarded opinions.

Foreign newspapers today surmise that the Geneva failure is a prime factor in the President's announcement decision.

It was pointed out later, by those closest to the president in his official family, that the door to the nomination had not been closed by the statement in the event of his selection by the convention.

HENDERSON LAKE WETTEST PLACE

Situated At Foot Of Mountain Rain Clouds Dissembled Here

Vancouver, B. C., Aug. 2.—Death Valley, in the great California desert, is famous as the driest place in North America. There probably is just as much distinction in being the wettest, and yet few people probably know that the rainfall last year at Henderson Lake, near the west coast on Vancouver Island, totalled more than seventy- three feet!

According to J. F. Napier Denison, superintendant of the provincial weather service, Henderson Lake is the wettest spot in North America, and probably holds the record by a comfort able — or uncomfortable as case may be. Henderson Lake is also the attractively wet because it lies at the foot of a mountain which rakes in rain clouds as they go scudding in from the Pacific laden with moisture.

British Columbia has several other wet spots boasting a phenomenal rainfall. Lockport, on the Queen Charlotte Islands, had a rainfall of 89 inches last year. Ocean Falls had 176 inches. Prince Rupert and Port Simpson usually regarded as having a heavy rain-fall, are mere "pikers" when compared to these places. Prince Rupert's annual rain last year totalled 84 inches, and Vancouver 53 inches.

The snow record for British Columbia is held by Premier Mine in the Bonanzad Canal district. It had 39 feet of snow last winter.

EX-WARDEN WIGGINS HOST TO BIG PARTY

A splendid social entertainment was enjoyed in Bancroft on Monday evening when Mr. Walter Wiggins, ex-Warden of Hastings County, was host to several hundred friends in the Community Hall, Bancroft, in honor of the marriage of his son, Ernest Wiggins to Miss Bessie G. McMillan, Glenanlen, Field. The hall was beautifully decorated under the direction of Miss Ethel Wiggins.

The entertainment started at nine o'clock in the evening and did not break up until the small hours of the morning. At 12 midnight a sumptuous supper was served to the guests. Two of the guests, weighing over 200 citizens, were Dr. Embury and Dr. Lumb.

NORTHERN LIGHTS FLASHED LAST NIGHT

The skies last evening were gorgeously illuminated by northern lights which were almost crimson in color.

There is a diversity of opinion as to what these lights indicate; some old weather sayers state that when they come in summer, it is a sign that more warm weather is to follow and if seen during the winter months, cold weather. Others state when seen in the summer it is a sign of cold weather and in winter, warm weather.

Fred C. Elford, of Ottawa, was elected president of the new Poultry Congress to be held in London, Eng., land.

TODAYS MARKETS

Chicago, Ills. Aug. 3.—In the face of price breakers in stock sand cotton, grain markets displayed unusual steadiness early today. President Coolidge's announcement had no apparent effect on prices or provisions, all the pits pre senting a humdrum appearance with price changes only fractional. Opening unch anged to 5-8 cents off, wheat later showed a slight rally. Corn was firm, starting half cent off to 1-4 cent up and later showing a small general advance.

New York, Aug. 3.—An avalanche of selling orders, inspired by president Coolidge's unexpected announcement that he did not choose to be a candidate in 1928, gave the stock market a terrific jolt at the opening today when prices crashed 3 to nearly 18 points, but a subsequent recovery wiped out many of the early losses and sent about a dozen issues to record high levels. Trading was on an enormous scale with indications that the days sales would run close to 5,000,000 shares. Wall Street, undoubtedly was stunned by the presidential decision. It caught the market in a vulnerable position, with railroad and industrial stock averages at a new peak after 10 consecutive days of rising prices and with brokers loaning around 800,000,000 on call money. There were carrying opinions as to its ultimate market effect but a rather unanimous agreement that it had injected pellicles into the market months earlier than had been expected.

Toronto, Aug. 3.—Opening—Wheat, Sept. 137 1-8; Dec. 141. Corn, Sept. 102; Dec. 107 3-4. Oats, Sept. 43 3-4; Dec. 46 3-4.

Toronto, Ont., Aug. 3.—Livestock—Receipts 412. Trade slow. Heavy beef steers 6 to 8.75. Butcher steers good to choice 7.50 to 8.25. Butcher cows, medium, 4.50 to 5.25. Calves good to choice 10 to 12. Hogs, select 11.40. Good ewe lambs 14.50 to 15.

Winnipeg, Aug. 3.—Opening prices—Wheat, Aug. 1-4 cent to 1-8 cent higher at 1.43 3-4 to 5-8; Dec. 1-8 higher to 1-8 cent lower at 1.40 1-4 to 140. Oats, Oct. unchanged at 1-8 cent higher at 54 3-4 to 7-8. Dec. 1-8 cent higher at 51 1-8.

Opening out burst of selling orders appeared to be largely from profession, al traders who have been sponsoring the recent upward trend, were evidently content at least part of their profits "bear" selling also played a big part in the opening decline and short covering in the rally which followed. Dupont was made up all of its opening loss of 15-24 points and climbed to a new peak at 231 before profit taking converted into a loss of more than 5 points to a gain of almost equal proportions by attaining a new peak at 1.42. Losses of 2 to 6 points in recent favorites as U.S. Steel common, General Motors, Baldwin, General Electric, Westinghouse Electric, Baltimore and Ohio and Union Pacific were largely made up.

WIVES WHO YEARN FOR LOST ADORERS

By ELSIE MARLOWE

Gladys is sure she married the wrong man. Now she's all for changing him; just as she'd change a jar of pickles or a remnant of toweling.

DEAR ELSIE:

When I was in college I met a boy I grew to love. He loved me too, and though we were not engaged we had an understanding. Then he went to South America to work at his profession of mining. His letters finally ceased.

Just about this time I met a young man who came to work in the same bank where I was employed. Inside of seven weeks we were married, just a year ago. Eight months ago my former sweetheart returned to this city and looked me up. He had been ill, he said. When he found I had married he left town. I have heard that he is in Seattle.

Now here is my problem. I'm desperately unhappy. My husband is a good man and I know he loves me dearly. He is good to me and I have a nice home. But life has become a drag. I keep thinking of the other man all the time. Sometimes I think I'll just give up everything and try to locate my old sweetheart. What do you think I should do?

GLADYS.

I'm not going to blame you because you want romance and happiness, Gladys. Every normal human being wants them and follows almost any plan to get them. But you're following the wrong plan, my dear, and you'll never find happiness on the trail you're going.

Your life has become a drag not because you have picked the wrong husband, but because you have picked the wrong scheme for your life. You are letting yourself live like a greedy, aimless child, drifting along, grabbing at anything that promises a new thrill, throwing it aside when the thrill palls. You're not really unhappy. You're just peevish and restless and dissatisfied until you anchor your life and begin to build it to some purpose.

There is no definite indication that your old sweetheart still wants you if you go to him. Most men with a spark of decency wouldn't consider a faithless wife a very good bargain. But suppose you do go and he does take you in, drift into the new union as you drifted into the old, without a thought of loyalty or responsibility, without any consideration for the rights of others.

Boredom will once more set in and you'll feel terribly cheated. But you won't be cheated. You'll be getting exactly what you have earned. WE CAN'T RETRIEVE GREATLY UNLESS WE GIVE GREATLY, GLADYS.

So stop chasing rainbows. Your romance isn't in Seattle. It is here in your own home, with that good man of yours, and you had better grab it while the grabbing is good.

DEAR ELSIE:

I have an urge constantly to write. Sometimes it simply gets hold of me badly. Of course, I think my thoughts of stories are good naturally, but I can go on for and then can't go one step further I'm lost, but nevertheless, I feel that there's a little talent in me that could be brought out. What I would like to know is this — would you advise a course in short story writing, either University Extension, or a correspondence course?

My education has been neglected. Unfortunately I had to leave school before I had gone very far, but I've made somewhat of a success in the business world regard, less of that handicap. Please tell me what you think. I haven't a great deal of money to spend this way.

M. E'C.

That's a fine ambition. Go ahead and take your writing course. There's nothing that will enrich your life more than an enthusiastic interest in something.

Enquire in the Extension work as soon as you can. You will find the work immensely interesting. Write to the University Extension Division and ask for a catalogue. You will find a description of story courses and can then pick any one that seems to fit.

But don't think you'll just loose and grab off a front seat in the first row of the Author Hall of Fame when you've finished your course. It takes much talent, terrific energy, and a lot of time to do that. And even then there are many who can't make the grade. But even if you don't, you'll never regret the joy you had trying.

WHAT'S NEW
(From a Woman's Standpoint)

Paris reports that she is experimenting with the transformation dress which is usually a dinner frock with a bolero blouse or a long sleeved slipover jacket for afternoon use while there are many versions of the idea but the usual one is another piece which is easily put on or taken off like a chiffon or lace blouse, a sleeveless velvet bolero or a velvet smoking jacket.

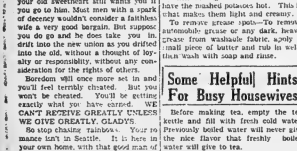

When making fish cakes be sure and have the mashed potatoes hot. This is what makes them light and creamy.

To remove grease spots—To remove automobile grease or any dark, heavy grease from washable fabric, apply a small piece of butter and rub in well; then wash with soap and rinse.

Some Helpful Hints For Busy Housewives

Before making tea, empty the tea kettle and fill with fresh cold water. Previously boiled water will never give the nice flavor that freshly boiled water will give to tea.

To remove obstinate fruit stains, use oxalic acid in the proportion of three ounces to one pint of water; wet the stains with this solution and hold over the steam from a teakettle or place in the sun. When stain disappears, rinse well instantly and set with ammonia to counteract the acid, rinsing well again in clear water.

After a two-year tour of the dark continent Hon. Diana Strickland returned to England to discover that in many ways the belles of the British metropolis and the American jungle were united under the skin. The latest popular dance steps were performed ages and ages ago by the savages, she said, while the bobbed coiffure affected by the smart set of Mayfair is almost identical with the prevailing jungle mode. In addition to startling native customs, the intrepid woman explorer also did much big game hunting.

CURSE OF LOVE
By Mildred Barbour

J. P. took him home to dinner. It was he who broke the news that Phil Kendall was honeymooning with his sweetheart in his bungalow by the sea.

CHAPTER 14.

The Flaw

Norma was not entirely happy. She had been married three days to the man she had loved for two years. During that time, she had despaired of his asking her to be his wife. She had told herself that she would be in the seventh heaven of ecstacy should he confess that he loved her. And she was, in a way. But there was something—a shadow—something she couldn't define or fathom which dimmed the radiance of her spirit.

Phil one could have been a more splendid bridegroom, a more tender lover, a better companion and playmate than Phil. They spent long, luxurious days on the beach, putting on their bathing suits directly after breakfast and plunging into the cool green surf. For hours, they lay on the sandy beach under Norma's gay parasol and talked or rather, Kendall talked and Norma listened raptly, adoring, though the poor lashes of her fresh blue eyes were lowered that he might not see too much.

In the late afternoon, when the heat of the day had passed, they took long walks on the cliffs and watched the sea that washed languidly below. At night there was moonlight, the scent of flowers, the voice of the ocean, the star-studded sky.

They were alone, except for an old Chinese cook, and he vanished as soon as the meals were served.

Norma loved the bungalow by the sea. It had been of her own choosing and was modern, simple and cool. Her father thought that it was scarcely suitable for a person of his wealth; he would rather have built a marble palace, with a dining salon that was a reproduction of a certain famous submarine grille in an Atlantic City hotel, where the glass ceiling is filled with water, and fishes of exotic coloring swim languidly about. But Norma had had her way, and now the blessed fact widens. The bungalow was a veritable paradise for honeymooners.

And yet, there was a flaw in her happiness.

Her bridegroom had moments so distrait that she felt forgotten, forlorn, shut out of the heart he professed for her. She was intuitively aware that something troubled him, and she dared not ask what it was. Even now she could not overcome her shyness with him. She was tenderness itself, but she held herself—there was no other word for it. And he wanted to give himself to the girl he loved. His manhood demanded the right to win her, and to have her thrust upon him, in a manner of speaking, much as he wanted her. He had loved his wife in a clean, orderly, precise way, according to his strict code of honor, and he felt that his arrangement with Collins was not honorable.

Had she known, she was a party to the shameful bargain he had made with her father? That was the question that haunted him night and day, even when she was in his arms.

Her shyness, her reserve, made him believe that she did know. Not in the least understanding her awe of him, he attributed her reserve to the fact that she didn't love him in the least; that she had married him solely to satisfy an ambition that was the passion of a man who is a man, could not comprehend.

So, with each thinking and action at cross-purposes, the honeymoon continued. And always the shadow on their kisses was the shadow forgotten.

One afternoon Norma, plucking up courage, asked suddenly:

"Phil, why did you come that after you—so suddenly and ask me to marry you? You you never hinted at such a thing before."

He averted his gaze from hers, as she regarded him gravely, and let the white sand trickle through his fingers. They were sitting on the beach under her crimson sunshade that cast a rosy glow over her clear pallor and straw-pungent bright in her dusky hair, still moist and curling from their swim.

"I guess," he said, measuring his words carefully, "because I was afraid of losing you." And he hated himself with the whole soul for the lie.

She flushed.

"Oh, then you'd heard?"

"Heard?"

"About Sydney J. Sydney Stokes? It wasn't my fault, really. I never encouraged him. It wasn't my fault, if he stopped to me and I told him I couldn't marry him, and he was foolish enough to get drunk and tell every one that he was going to commit suicide."

Kendall was silent. He had not heard about Sydney Stokes, though he knew him well. He was a rather young man, employed in the bank that handled Collins's investments, and had been for several years, a suitor for the hand of Norma Collins! He was just the type that would get drunk and make a ridiculous threat of suicide.

After a moment, he asked, that he must say something. Kendall asked:

"You didn't love him, Norma?"

She shook her head, shyly, stretched out her hand to him, and drew it shyly quickly.

"No, I — I loved only you"

He turned to her quickly, but already her gaze was averted, and he sighed and began to dig in the sand with his long, sensitive fingers. Inwardly he prayed for a diversion—anything to keep her from returning to her question as to why he had proposed to her so abruptly and married her—all in one afternoon.

His prayer was answered when a small boy appeared on the beach and came toward them. He handed Ken dall a telegram. It was from King Carson.

Hope sprang into Kendall's heart, as he read a message that was typical of his friend.

CHAPTER 15

A Rift in the Darkness

King Carson, having made his pile in Mexico, had wired:

"Congratulations, you secretive old cuss. Stop. But why couldn't you have wasted a day or two longer and let me in on the wedding time-register? Am taking your apartment and your shaving-soap which you left behind in your hurry. Stop. It's a pip. Stop. The apartment not the shaving-soap. Stop. What do you want for a wedding present? Stop. Answer. Stop. Congratulations. Stop. Secretive old cuss. Stop."

Phil Kendall read the message and chuckled. The hope that sprang up suddenly within him made him fairly dizzy.

"What do you want for a wedding present?"

Was it too late even yet to straighten out the bad situation? Would King Carson help him repay that debt to Norma's father? If he would . . .

Phillip seized the reply blank that the boy extended, and wrote:

"Make yourself at home. As for the wedding present, I want half your fortune."

Late that same evening the answer came:

Phillip raised his head and looked at Norma, who was watching him. His eyes shone with a light she had never seen before.

"Good news?" she asked, smiling.

"Rather!" he replied, with boyish joy. "I say, Norma, let's run Rose City over the chap who wired us congratulations today. Would you mind very much, if I asked him down for a visit? It's been ten years since I've seen him and he's come all the way from Mexico."

"Oh, do, by all means, she urged quickly. "He is the man you were expecting, the one who was delayed by arriving, isn't he?"

Phillip nodded.

"You're sure you will not mind—this being our honey-moon, and all that?"

"Don't be silly!" she told him.

But she did mind—a little. She tried desperately hard not to, but it seemed to her that Phillip's eagerness to have his friend come signified that already he was tired of being alone with her. He couldn't possibly love her as she loved him, she told herself, else he'd want nobody and nothing else in all the world.

But she pretended to be just as eager as he to see King Carson, and she watched him write the message to his friend and give it to the waiting boy. And she was very gay all the evening, just to show her young husband that she didn't resent the intrusion of their paradise.

As for Kendall, he didn't need to feign happiness. He saw a chance to pay back his debt, to square himself with Norma's father, with Norma, with himself. He would feel like an honorable man again. King Carson would never question his business or his security for the loan. Carson had no further need to work, but it would give him something to do. He was too young and active a man to retire.

He didn't guess that Norma went into her pillow that night and rose to repair the damage to her eyes and complexion before any one was stirring. She could interpret her young husband's high spirits at meeting his old chum. She was bored with her and happy at the coming of an outsider.

"King will likely motor out, instead of taking the train," Kendall told her at breakfast. "Let's walk down the beach, till we strike the road. We'll watch for him there. I told him to make it as early as possible."

"You go alone," she begged airily prettily. "I'll just be in the way at the first meeting of old friends. Besides, I've a time bit of a tootsie-a-I think I stayed in the sun too long yesterday."

SINCLAIR'S

Advice to Girls
By Annie Laurie

"I am a young girl of sixteen. I have finished school I have a good education and I want to go out and work for myself. My parents however, do not approve. They think I am too young to start to work. They want me to stay at home.

What is your advice? SKINNY, SKINNY: What is it that motivates your desire to go to work? It is a desire for independence? Or is it a craving for the distraction and excitement that you imagine you would find in the business world? I rather think it is the latter.

After all, unless you have a sincere wish to acquire independence there is no reason why you should not be able to find many distracting interests at home. There are many worth-while books to read There is music. There are sports and social activities.

It is quite ridiculous to imagine that your education is finished. Even if you were to finish college you would find that your education had just begun. There is so much to be learned. And as one acquires new knowledge the horizon widens and one quite despairs that life is so short to learn just a fraction of all there is to know.

Have you any desire to go to college? If your parents do not approve of your going to work, they might approve of your continuing your education I certainly would suggest it.

However if you are quite sincerely in search of independence I would suggest that you discuss the matter again with your parents. Point out to them that they should encourage you in your wish for independence that the day is gone when young girls were cherished at home and guarded from life and the world. Suggest to them that they permit you to train yourself for some specific type of work. Tell them that you cannot always depend upon them and that they would feel more assured of your future if you were trained to support yourself.

RUSSIA INFESTED WITH DISEASE

Leningrad, Aug. 3.—Malaria infections and diseases are ravishing Soviet Russia, it is stated by Dr. W. Hyde Grant, a former physician from the United States, who has just completed an inspection trip where work is to health and sanitary conditions in Russia.

Dr. Grant says there are more than a million cases of malaria at present in the Soviet Union which is four times the number before the war. The number of persons affected with tuberculosis runs into the millions, and the disease is daily increasing. Moreover half a million Russians are suffering from trachoma, Dr. Grant finds.

On the other hand, certain other diseases which were very prevalent before the revolution now show a distinct decrease, says the doctor, due to improved methods of prevention and hygiene. These include smallpox, typhus, cholera and bubonic plague. Infant mortality has decreased to a point where there are only 172 deaths in every thousand births.

WASH POISON FROM KIDNEYS

Kidney and bladder irritations often result from neglected colds, says a noted authority. The kidneys help filter the acid from the blood and are inflamed by the bladder. Backache may result, irritate and irritation causing a burning, scalding sensation, or nothing up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread; the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in voiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is often one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Begin drinking lots of soft water, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist. Jad Salts is made up in the proportion that they no longer are a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normal again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by acid irritation. Jad Salts cannot do but effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia water drink which quickly relieve your bladder irritation.

PEACHY SUGGESTIONS

By Barbara H. Brooks, Home Economics Dept., Kellogg Co. of Canada, Ltd.

Among the fruits at that time of the year which give most satisfaction and real results in canning is the peach. Both the free-stone and the cling-stone varieties can be used, but the cling is preferable for canning because of its more even color and finer and firmer texture.

Perfect for canning should be ripe but not soft. Those which are over- ripe may be used for jam or peach butter.

Canned Peaches (Cold-Pack Method)

Scald the peaches until the skins loosen and plunge into cold water to place under cold running water for a moment or two so that they can be handled more easily. Remove skins and peel thalves or wholes without cutting into clean but from jars. Fill the jar to within a half inch of the top with a hot sweetener making the syrup unsu- with three parts of sweet- to two parts of water, partly seal the jar and process shells in a water bath canner, with water completely cover- ing the jars, for sixteen minutes. If a pressure cooker is used, process for 20 minutes. If canning in an open, process at a temperature of 5.0 degree F. for forty minutes. Remove the jar from the canner and fully tighten.

Those who do not want to can many pals of peaches go peculiar on the shelf for winter use, shall neglect to serve fresh peaches in season. Do them justice by breakfast with cream flakes or other cereal. Serve them chilled and shred- ded cream for dessert.

There are several delicious ways in which to cook peaches. They may be dotted with butter, stuck with whole cloves and baked in syrup. Have you ever fried them? Cut the peaches in halves and remove the stones. Fry in butter sprinkle with brown sugar and cook until the sugar and butter form a caramel syrup.

Peaches au gratin may be made from either fresh or canned peaches. If the fresh ones are used, make sure cup of water to take the place of the syrup from the can.

Peaches Au Gratin

6 peaches skins and stones, removed, and cut in halves

1 cup thick cream, room flakes or fine crumbs

1 tablespoon butter.

Roll peaches in crumbs, place on a baking sheet and dot with bits of butter. Bake in hot oven until the crumbs are browned. Serve with the following sauce:

1 tablespoon butter

1 tablespoon flour

1 tablespoon chopped preserved ginger

2 tablespoons syrup from preserved ginger.

Syrup from can of peaches or 1 cup water.

Melt the butter, add flour and syrup from peaches and bring to a boiling point. Add preserved ginger and syrup.

LIFE OF CRIME ENDS IN DEATH OF BILL MINER

Penticton, B.C., Aug. 2.—The exploits of Bill Miner, one of the most picturesque highwaymen of the old West, were recalled recently when W. J. Gill has succeed in Coast Lake, north of here.

Gill was better known as "Shorty" Dean, for it was under that name that he acted as a guide for Bill Miner on the holdup at Hatch, B.C., in 1906, when Miner and confederated and subsequently spent life sentence in the penitentiary. Miner died in prison, but Dean was handed after serving several years.

Bill Miner served more than twenty years of his life in various penitentiaries. He started his criminal career in 1879 in Oshkosh, was arrested and fled to Canada, where he escaped from a log cabin prison. He escaped to the United States, continued his career of robbery, was again captured and sent to San Quentin prison, where he served 19 years.

Released in British Columbia he set himself up as a farmer in the Okanagan valley and married an Indian. He was wide popular and ran a saltlick near with the Indians. When he found of a big holdup shipment on the C.P.R., himself, the old call returned to him and he joined with Dean in the holdup.

Miner maintained his innocence and the only mistake he ever left unadmitted had it not been for the confession which caused Dean to run, himself, pile up he went. All these years he remained un- tried, found guilty and given their final sentence.

Banff Springs Hotel is the heart of the Rockies where the best of travelled society from all over the world and it would appear that this member of the Younger Set is also anxious to break into the style of society. Anyway, whatever the reason, she turned up one fine morning last spring on the lawn just outside the famous hostelry and at once had a great success. Every body seemed anxious to admire her and her reception was most flattering for the whole of the forenoon. Although quite uninvited, she was at once given the freedom of the hotel, while guests vied with one another in welcoming her. Here you see her posing for her photograph as though she were the most recently arrived of debutantes. While no date has been set for her stay at the hotel, it is probable she will be leaving for "up to the woods in the Fall.

BELLE THEATRE

There hangs in the private studio of one of the really great painters of the country now living in New York, a group of sketches in black and white of different dogs. In the centre frame is pictured a small, hairy, untempting little fellow looking much in need of a bath. The only way to describe him fittingly is to say he seemed to be just an ordinary yellow mongrel.

And such, in truth, he was some forty years ago when the man who sketched him from memory first saw him as he trudged from school of an autumn afternoon.

The man never could recall whether he saw the dog first or the dog was first to see him. At any rate they became immediate friends. The dog jumped up and licked his fire hand and the result was that the youngster took him in his arms and ran home with him.

"Long before he reached the house his shouts of "Mother, Mother," could be heard all over the place and when his mother did come to the door she saw the dog in his arms. "Mother," he shouted, "see my grand dog!" The mother gave it one look and shook her head. She didn't mean to let that dirty little thing in her home. "Take him away from here," she said. At this the youngster burst into tears. "Mother, Mother!" he screamed, "just look he's a genuine yellow cur. Genuine!"

In a day or so after the little dog had been thoroughly fed he disappeared. Father blamed his disappearance on the gypsies, though there were none seen in that neighborhood at the time The little boy grew up to become a great artist and to own many fine dogs, but the one that possessed his greatest love was the little like of his boyhood.

Principal among the other pictures shown in the artist's studio is a fine portrait of Rin-Tin-Tin bearing the artist's signature. On a little card under glass at the side of the picture is this inscription: "The World's Most Intelligent Dog. If reason was ever Given To Any Dog, Rin-Tin-Tin Surely Has It."

Rin-Tin-Tin comes to the Belle Theatre tomorrow for a 3 days run, in "Tracked by the Police," a Warner Bros. production.

NAPANEE LEAFS TRIM BEAVERS

Ontarios Swamp Opticals In Exhibition Affair—Postponed Games

Only one game remains the Napanee Leafs from the Bay of Quinte League championship following their victory over the Belleville Beavers at the Eastern town. It was the most exciting game of the year with both teams going into the ninth on even terms but a lapse on the part of Allan Meacher's girls coupled with hitting rally by the Leafs saw-ed the old game up and stowed it away in the bat-bag. The final score was 13-12.

Molly Gray was on the mound for the visitors and Dot Johnston for the home-team and both went the full route.

Ontarios Win Easily

The Ontarios defeated the Optical Company in an exhibition game on the armouries lawn last evening in a score of 34-4. The issue was never in doubt and it merely served as a practice session for the Ontarios. Walter Greene used Hilda Adams and Audrey Keelcher on the hillock and Mrs. Page did the flinging for the Opticals. Weiland Woodlin umpired.

There are still several games to be played in the city league which were postponed and this will run off next week.

CAPE BRETON IS ASSOCIATED WITH WORLD WONDERS

Washington, July 27.—It is singular that Cape Breton Island, which is seeing all the trans-Atlantic flyers go by already should be associated with the work of three men who have done most to make neighbors of the nation—Morse, Bell and Marconi. It also was the scene of early experiments in mechanical flight.

"It was on Cape Breton's shores, at Cape North, that the first successful Atlantic cable landed in 1867," says a bulletin of the National Geographic Society. "For years through the long north country of the island ran the land line of the cable company—like slender links between continent, which united two civilizations. The laboratories of Alexander Graham Bell at his estate, Beinn Bhreagh (Beautiful Mountain), near Baddeck were for thirty-five years the centre of the great scientist's work or research and experiments ranging all the way from aerial locomotion to the breeding of a multi-nipped, twin-bearing stock.

"Dr. Bell's work is of special interest to the members of the National Geographic Society, of which he was for many years president and a member of its board of trustees from its founding in his day. From his boyhood Bell believed in mechanical flight and he was working on his structural ideas when Professor Langley visited him at Cape Breton in 1891. It was Bell who encouraged Langley's work in aerodromics and gave him financial assistance at a time when even the ablest minds in the scientific world looked askance at the man who would fly. And he was the sole witness other than Langley's workmen, of that historic flight at Quantico, Va., in May, 1896, of which Dr. Bell said:

"The sight of Langley's steam aerodrome circling in the sky convinced me that the age of the flying machine was at hand."

For the next ten years Bell devoted himself to the perfection of his tetrahedral kites. On December 6, 1907, the giant Cygnet No. 1 made an ascent of 168 feet above the waters of he Bras d'Or Lake, carrying Lieutenant Thomas E. Selfridge, U.S.A. This was the first machine of the aerial Experiment Association, formed by Dr. Bell in 1907, with summer headquarters in Cape Breton, the object being "to get into the air." Associated with him were Lieut. Selfridge who was detailed to assist the experiments; two young Canadian engineers F. W. Baldwin and J. A. D. McCurdy and Glenn H. Curtiss, who was the motor expert of the association.

They got into the air. It was with A. E. A. machine, the Red Wing that Baldwin made the first public flight in America over the ice at Lake Keuka, New York, in 1908—a flight of 318 feet 11 inches, 20-feet in the air.

OLD BARNEY IS CREDITED A WIN

Walter Johnson Marks 20th Milestone In Major Leagues

New York, Aug. 3.—The Chicago White Sox and the Athletics divided a double-header at Philadelphia yesterday, the Sox winning the first game by a score of 7 runs to 4 and the Athletics the second by a 6 to 5 margin in the ninth inning.

Bib Falk had a perfect day at bat in the opener, figuring in the scoring of all the visitors' runs, and getting four hits in as many times up. In the second game, Alex. Metzler hit a homer with two out and one in the ninth that sent the White Sox ahead, but the Athletics tied the score on a triple by Fox and Collins' single. Metzler Cochrane broke the game up in the twelfth by hitting a homerun over the right-field wall.

Washington and St. Louis broke even in a double-header at Boston. The Browns won the opener 3 to 2, when Pennock was the victim of Mac Fuglers two-run single in the first. In the second contest Walter Hall, Yankee castoff, was driven by the Browns down with two singles, a triple by Fox and Collins' single. Metzler Cochrane broke the game up in the twelfth by hitting a homerun over the right-field wall.

Washington and St. Louis broke even in a double-header at Boston. The Browns won the opener 3 to 2, when Pennock was the victim of MacFayden in a ninth inning rally. In the second contest Walter Hall, Yankee castoff, was driven by the Browns down with two singles, a triple by Fox and Collins' single. Metzler, who has been batting at a terrific pace, hit a home run in the fifth inning with Detroit found him for six hits and four runs, and appeared to be on the road to victory when a ninth-inning rally unseated him. While in the box, Johnson held the Tigers to eight hits and had struck out six.

Second tremendous explosion in two months occurred yesterday in the fireworks plant at North Bergen, N. J. Two buildings were destroyed. The heat of the sun is blamed.

LATE SUMMER IN NORTHERN OUTPOSTS

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 2.—Heavy ice conditions and a general tardy summer all through the Canadian Arctic Archipelago are reported by wireless to the North West Territories and the Yukon Branch of Department of the Interior from S. B. Benthie, carrying the annual expedition to Canada's northern posts. The latest wireless, despatch received, states that the expedition reached Pasbe Peninsula on Ellesmere Island. The most northerly police post, customs house and post office in the world, on Sunday, July 31st. At this point difficulty was being experienced in unloading supplies on account of the ice.

KINGSTON C. N.R. EMPLOYEE DIES

Kingston August 3.—George E. Bolton, an employee of the Canadian National Railways, died at the Hotel Dieu Hospital yesterday, as a result of blood-poisoning. He was sharpening a rivette at the shops at the outer station a few days ago, and cut his hand. In a short time, blood-poisoning developed.

Fete Canada in London

The illuminations on the C.P.R. Office building on Trafalgar Square, London celebrating the Diamond Jubilee of Canadian Confederation, excited very great interest and praise in the capital of the Empire. The facade was picked out in long parallel white strips of electric lights, one especially fine feature being that at night the words "Canadian Pacific" spans the width of the building horizontally and not the less startling effect was the addition of the small with the Canadian ship and rail routes illuminated by electrically lighted dotted lines which surmounted the building. Since there is no particular other celebrations going on in London on July 1, the building attracted the attention of crowds of thousands of people who strayed by foot, motor bus, passed that hub of the Empire in which the C.P.R. offices are located. Incidentally it drew general attention to Canada and Canadian affairs generally.

CUBS INCREASE NATIONAL LEAD

Giants After Winning Three Consecutive Lose To Cardinals

St. Louis, Aug. 3.—Having nailed firmly and angered themselves for three straight days, the Giants tossed the Cardinals a crumb yesterday in the hope of a victory in the final joust of the series. The Cardinals scored six runs in the eighth won by a score of 6 to 2.

Frankly, your correspondent makes his report with a mental feeling of relief. For three days now he has witnessed harrowing and heart-breaking scenes, with the critics of the victims using into his very soul. Another day of it and St. Louis would have been in sack clothes and ashes and this observer would have cracked under the strain.

Chicago's Cubs yesterday increased their lead over the Pittsburgh Pirates to a game and a half by winning a home game from Philadelphia 4 to 3, while Boston won from Pittsburgh.

Alex. Ferguson blew up in the seventh when the Cubs staged a four-run rally in which Earl Webb cracked out a three-bagger and Adams and English across the pan. Webb also scored in the final run for the Cubs in the sixth. Bush settled down after the third inning, the visitors being able to gather only three hits. Two double-plays by the Cubs aided Bush.

Boston made a clean-sweep of the three-game series at Pittsburgh by winning 5 to 3. Ed. Kent Green held kept the Pirates' nine hits well scattered. Hill, leading National League batter, was given faulty support. He was forced from the game in the seventh inning when he was injured after dropping Harris' assist at first base, the error permitting two Braves to score.

Cincinnati recovered fifth place in the National from Brooklyn with a double victory over the Robins at Cincinnati 3 to 1, and 5 to 4. McWeeney and Mac both allowed only seven hits in the first fray but the former was handicapped by Brooklyn errors. League went to Kolp's rescue with the tying run on base in the seventh of the second game, stopping Brooklyn and was officially credited with the victory.

The game will mark the 20th contest of his career. He will also be presented with the first distinguished service medal of major league baseball, a decoration created for the occasion. TORONTO LEAFS BREAK THEIR LOSING STREAK

Toronto, Aug. 3.—After losing five straight games Toronto Leafs did a right-about-turn here today and defeated Rochester 8-1 in the first game of the series.

Jess Doyle pitched another good game, holding the Tribe to eight scattered hits. Unitel he was scored on in the sixth he had twirled 23 scoreless innings.

Alexander drove in three runs with a triple and a single. Manager McGraw of the New York Giants was a visitor here today and made an offer for Catcher Hargrave of the Leafs.

BUSY HOLIDAY AT BELLEVILLE CLUB

The members and their friends took advantage of the holiday turning up in goodly numbers to participate in the varieties arranged. In the morning the course was particularly well patronized by our American visitors. The mens match was closely contested, a very pleasing feature being the low scores made by the second and third flight players. The best score being made by L. G. McIntosh, the Superintendent of the Stephens Adamson Co. The two ball mixed foursome resulted in a win for Mr. and Mrs. Wallace H. Reeves. During the week end the sporty fourth hole again came in for attention. Mrs. W. H. Reeves getting a two here and therefore qualifying for the prize offered by the Mercury Mills.

TRIBESMEN SLEEP ON WOODEN BLOCKS

Chicago, Ills., July 23.—Strange Madagascar tribesmen, some of whom never bathe or wash their clothing; who sleep on carved wooden pillows and who live largely on a diet of sour milk have been found by Dr. Ralph Linton, leader of the Captain Marshall Field expedition to Madagascar for the Field Museum.

These Antandroy and Mahafaly tribesmen, Dr. Linton found during a sojourn among them, follow a curious custom of soaking their clothing in grease. He discussed their strange characteristics in a report made public by the Museum.

Dr. Linton who was born living on the island since January, 1926, is the confidante of the tribal chiefs, has obtained a collection of wooden pillows and has made photographs of some of the most sacred ceremonies of the tribes. He believes himself to be the only white man ever to have witnessed the sacred ceremony of cleaning the teeth of kings, which is an annual event by the tribesmen in the mountains of Ibalakara.

His report spoke of the apparent wealth of the tribes. "Many of the women taking part in the ceremonies were ladies with hundreds of dollars worth of gold jewelry," he wrote.

Head hunting is practiced, the heads of enemies being taken as trophies and smoked from a rack outside the villages.

Dr. Linton expressed amazement at the number and viciousness of crocodiles in the region.

ONTARIO

$10,000 worth of weeds on ten farms in one neighborhood

That is what an inspector valuing farm lands for loaning purposes reported. His report read:

"It is badly infested with sow thistle, as are all the farms in the neighborhood. I have valued $1,000 less than I would if clean of this weed."

United action will exterminate the weed scourge. Destroy weeds wherever found. Under the provisions of the Weed Control Act, 1927, now in force, the destruction of weeds is no longer optional. It is compulsory. Your co-operation is needed to end the weed nuisance.

Colorful Calgary Stampede

Calgary's annual stampede held July 11 to 16 proved again beyond doubt that it is the outstanding event of its kind staged in America. It has been described as "a living page from the history of the brave boys of the frontier" and by this year's performances the description was justified in the opinion of those who witnessed it. Among those this year were a large party of tourists from the east who toured the west on the Canadian Pacific University of Montreal tour special. Their schedule was arranged to make this possible.

THREE GREATEST NAVAL POWERS AGREE TO DISAGREE

ARREST DROVER AT INQUEST FOR RECEIVING GOODS

One Of The Men Who Paid Hodge Lodged In Barrie Jail

IDENTIFY ROBBER

Jury Declares Farmer Was Justified In Killing The Intruder

Beeton, Aug. 4.—After hearing more than a score of witnesses at the inquest conducted by Dr. James Campbell, Coroner, into the death of "the unknown man" who was killed in the house of Alexander Hodge, farmer, of Tecumseh Township, on the night of July 22, the jury returned a verdict stating that they had arrived at the conclusion that deceased was "none other than Dan Forsythe and that he came to his death at the hands of Alexander Hodge while acting in defense of his own life."

Action Justifiable

The jury declared that Hodge's action was justifiable.

The court was even more crowded than at the opening of the inquest last week.

Excitement reached fever heat when the Coroner formally adjourned the hearing at 10.30 a.m., until 1 p.m. without calling witnesses, and it was spread abroad that Inspectors Stringer and Rae were following up developments in Barrie.

Drover Arrested in Hall

A sensation, which caused a stampede in the hall, was sprung by the arrest of Joseph MacDermott by Provincial police shortly before the jury returned their verdict in the late afternoon.

MacDermott who is one of the cattle drovers who paid $650 to Hodge on the fateful night, was seated near the front of the court when Sergeant Cressy advanced and requested him to follow him outside. The incident was the signal for a rush of spectators to the street.

Charge of Receiving

MacDermott's arrest was on the charge of receiving stolen goods. He was locked up temporarily in Beeton Jail and taken before Magistrate Arell at Barrie last night, where he was remanded for two weeks and released on $2,000 personal bail and two securities of $1,000 each.

Edward Hicklind, also accused of receiving goods alleged to have been stolen by Dan Forsythe, is out on the same bail.

No Dealings With Forsythe

MacDermott swore that he had never seen the deceased, Dan Forsythe—also known as Johnston and MacKenzie—and that he had never had any dealings with him. This testimony was controverted by several witnesses, one of whom declared that he had driven MacDermott and Forsythe to Hicklind's place.

GODERICH 100 YEARS OLD NOW

One of Ontario's Picturesque Town

One of Canada's quaintest towns is picturesque Goderich, Ont., which celebrates the centenary of its founding this year. Its layout suggests a cartwheel with the court-house in the centre as a hub and eight streets running out like spokes. Here also is seen one of the two remaining salt works. The production of salt was Goderich's first important industry, but it waned.

THIRTEEN YEARS AGO TODAY THE BRITISH EMPIRE SPRANG TO ARMS

Imposing Ceremony In Toronto Next Sunday To Honor Dead

Thirteen years ago today the British Empire was precipitated into the Great War. The cubs leaped with the lion. In Canada, as in all parts of the Empire, feverish military activities were launched. So today is a day of recollections.

Many of those who sailed with the "Armada of Canada" down the St. Lawrence thirteen years ago joined in the welcome at Quebec on Friday last to the Empire's heir-apparent, Edward Prince of Wales, who shared their common fortunes on the Western Front in the dark days of the Armageddon.

As an aftermath of war the "Ambassador of Britain" yesterday afternoon in the Capital City dedicated the Altar in the Memorial Chamber of the Peace Tower in the Federal Parliament Buildings. A similar impressive ceremonial in remembrance of Toronto's dead will take place in that city on Sunday, when World War veterans will assemble in the Exhibition Grounds with the Prince of Wales to do further honor to the fallen.

The "fragrance" in Christie Street Hospital, Toronto, are preparing to welcome again into their midst a member of the mighty brotherhood of arms, to feel the clasp of his hand in theirs—a sincere tribute to Prince and soldier alike.

Thirteen years ago and the years have sped quickly. Lest we forget!

INSURED AT TWELVE COLLECTED AT THREE

Probably no one in Belleville realizes more than Miss Pearl Bowerman, of this city that "a stitch in time saves nine".

At twelve o'clock yesterday noon she went to the office of the H. F. Ketchison Insurance Company and placed accident insurance on her automobile and at three o'clock while driving on Campbell Street collided with another car, damaging its fender. To-day the claim was promptly paid by Mr. Ketchison.

Three armed men held up W. O. Prescott of Meaford in broad day light on the Guelph-Hamilton road. He lost $30 and his gold watch.

FARMER DIES IN HOSPITAL FROM HORSE ACCIDENT

George Vance Of Roslin Badly Mangled While Working In Fields

WAS ALL ALONE

Kicked In Face, Skull Fractured And Had Internal Injuries

George Vance, aged 50 years, died in the Belleville General Hospital today as the result of serious injuries sustained yesterday morning when the horses ran away in the field while raking hay at his farm near Roslin. There were no eye witnesses to the accident and only conjectures can account for the injuries which resulted in the death of Vance.

The inquest will be held in this city shortly after the accident and Dr. G. H. Stobie was called and from the beginning it was realized that a lengthy less counsel was being made to save the life of Vance who was badly kicked about the face, had a fractured skull and was suffering from internal injuries. Death ensued at an early hour this morning.

Vance was working in the hay field alone at the time of the accident and it is surmised that the horses which were attached to the hay mower ran away and the severe lacerations on the face may have been the result of a kick from the horses hoof. The injured man was found in the field by a member of his family.

The body was taken to Tweed this afternoon by the Blakeley Undertaking Establishment of that place and prepared for burial after which it was conveyed to the family home at Roslin from where the funeral will be held.

It is understood, however that Mr. Baldwin is of the belief that it has been in close enough touch with the situation during the past few days to issue a statement, and that comment, if any, on the art of the British premier would have to come from London.

Golfing Star Says They Will Soon Be a Thing of the Past

Toronto, Aug. 4.—Plus fours have had their day as golfing attire and they will soon disappear from the links, Walter Hagen, United States golfing star, who is competing in the Canadian Open Golf championship here, stated today. Mr. Hagen noted that the Prince of Wales and Prince George, now visiting Canada, have sported knesis baggey while playing the "Royal ancient game" on Quebec, Montreal and Ottawa courses, and he looks to see golfing styles getting down to "a more workmanlike basis."

COLOR LINE WAS DRAWN IN CAMP

Tourists Refused To Stay When Negroes Were Admitted

The lack of a color line or the bene fit of not having one was the cause of a exciting scene at the "Quinte Park" Tour ist Camp, Dundas Street, last evening.

The camping grounds were well filled with tents sheltering tired tourists who had travelled long distances yesterday and all was peace and quietness when a shiny came four large automobiles carrying real "stove polish" complexioned negroes. As soon as the Southern occupied, some of the other campers who were from Uncle Sam's Domain immediately complained to the caretaker, stating that in the South they would not ride on the same street car or train with a "Nigger" and in Canada they would not sleep in the same camping grounds with their dark complexioned brothers.

As there is nothing in the regulations at the "Quinte Park" tourists camp against Negroes or Negro's parking there for a night as long as they comply with camp rules, there was nothing for the caretaker to do but allow them to remain. This decision so enraged some of the other campers that they immediately left the park, seeking shelter elsewhere.

The newspaper states that the men hope to complete the flight in about fifteen days, thereby beating the record now by thirteen days.

PLACED WREATH ON GRAVE

Ottawa, Aug. 4.—A departure from the official programme for the visit of Premier Stanley Baldwin of Great Britain occurred early this afternoon when the Premier motored to Notre Dame cemetery and placed a wreath on the grave of Sir Wilfred Laurier.

PULL A 26 POUND LUNGE FROM BAY OF QUINTE

Mr. P. O. Pitney has located a fisherman's paradise judging from his numerous catches in Bay of Quinte waters in the last week. On Tuesday Mr. Pitney and Lou Pringle of this city added to their laurels when they captured a 26 pound lunge off Grape Island. The lunge is a giant specimen, and turned up a gallant fight for his life before he was finally landed in the boat. The two anglers are in Trenton camp early Tuesday afternoon in a motor boat equipped with a trolling line and found lunges of eclipsing their previous record. Opposite the island a terrific tug from the other end of the line was noted and sawdust and sunlight by the disciples of Izaac Walton reeled in the line. For twenty minutes the big fellow struggled and fought but he was brought close enough to the boat to insert the gaff hook and he was lifted over the gunwale of the boat when a couple of sharp strokes with an axe finished his career.

This is the fourth lunge maskinonge Mr. Pitney has landed within the last week.

NAVAL CONFERENCE ENDS WITHOUT REACHING GROUND OF AGREEMENT

NO MENACE TO PEACE OF ENGLAND EXISTS

London, Aug. 4.—The Daily Mail in commenting on the recent speech by the Prince of Wales in Ottawa, wherein the heir apparent to the throne referred briefly to his position as soon of King George says today: "In an age where the monarchial principle has been overthrown in so many countries it is well for the people of the British Empire, where the change comes in the occupation of the throne here, (and that it may not soon take place is the sincere wish of all) to realize that it will bring with it no shocks, no dangers. Even in our own English history this has not always been so."

The Prince's Comment

The Prince of Wales' reference to himself in connection with "the conception and attainment of autonomous communities within the empire, equal in status and marked by a common allegiance to the crown," and was as follows: "To me in particular, as the King's eldest son, this conception has a special importance which in whatever part of the Empire I may be, I try always to keep in mind. The Crown stands above all distinctions of country, race and party, and serves to mark a unity in which all such differences are transcended. If, some day, it should fall to my lot to assume that high responsibility, I trust I may be found worthy of it."

ROYAL BROTHERS HAVE REST DAY

Spent Today Golfing And In Quiet Visits To Friends

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 4.—The princes and other member of the official visiting party faced a day of freedom from public functions. It will be their first day of real relaxation. No programmes since their arrival at Quebec on Saturday.

The royal brothers are expected to take advantage of the good weather to play a round of golf and some have expressed a desire to do so. In the evening they will be guests of Premier King at Laurier House. They will afterwards proceed to the country club where a reception and dance is being given in their honor by members and according to tentative plans will go direct to their special train at Brockville for Brockville and Toronto.

Premier Baldwin and Mrs. Baldwin have two engagements today. They will lunch with Premier King and dine with Governor-General Lord Willingdon. The possibility exists that the royal train may leave the capital at seven o'clock this evening, in order that the princes may keep engagements to play golf with some friends there. In the event of this arrangement being finally decided upon, Premier and Mrs. Baldwin and party will leave on a special train later in the morning in time to arrive in Brockville for a civic reception at noon tomorrow.

THE WEATHER

Moderate southwest winds, fair and moderately warm today.

Great Britain Makes Last Minute Attempt To Achieve Something

CRUISERS THE SNAG

United States Insists On All Or Nothing At Final Session

London, Eng., Aug. 4.—General Naval Conference adjourned without agreement.

Geneva, Aug. 4.—A last moment attempt was made by Great Britain today to rescue something from the wreckage of the Tri-Partite Naval Conference, when Rt. Hon. W. C. Bridgeman, chief British delegate, proposed an agreement restricted to destroyers and submarines. Hugh S. Gibson, head of the U.S. delegation, declined to entertain this suggestion, which was presented at a short session of plenipotentiaries held at midday, on the ground that United States considers the limitation of cruisers, destroyers and submarines as one indivisible whole.

The end came when Hugh S. Gibson, chief of American delegation, had made the final address of the meeting. Conference adopted a joint declaration, adjourning conference sine die. Immediate adjournment came after a vote of thanks had been adopted for Mr. Gibson, the motion being made by the British delegation and seconded by Rt. Hon. W. C. Bridgeman, chief of Admiral Viscount Ishii of Japan.

Hope For Future Results

The last act of the Conference was the adoption of a joint motion of adjournment with the declaration that the governments of the three powers represented were invited to give new consideration to three problems involved in the hope that they

MILITARY HONOR PAID TO SCOTT

34th Battery Provided An Escort For Their Dead Comrade

After having been accorded full military honors the body of Gerge Scott was brought to Belleville where it was conveyed to an end on Monday afternoon off Victoria Park by mourning was laid to rest in the Argyll Plot, Belleville Cemetery this morning.

At ten o'clock in the mortuary parlors of Messrs. Tickell and Sons, the 34th Battery of which the deceased was a member in full military uniform, the last ceremonies were held, many friends gathered for the impressive funeral service which was conducted by Rev. A. J. Geen, who stressed the lesson which was t obe gained from the 34th Battery and Legion in the last mournful tribute of their dead comrade. "This" said he "is a lesson which can be taken by all and I hope when I am taken home for each of you here present to be laid away that your body will receive the same kindly treatment which is now being accorded to George Scott". Mr. Geen also officiated at the committal at the graveside.

After the remains had been conveyed to the awaiting hearse by six non-commissioned officers of the Battery, three fell in line on each side and the other members followed in double file. Major R. Bowerman was in charge following, then came the Canadian Legion.

At the Cemetery, the Battery and Canadian Legion formed a passage through which the casket was carried to the grave. Many beautiful floral tributes, including those from the 34th Battery, Canadian Legion and sorrowing friends banked the casket.

TODAY'S THOUGHT

There isn't much to life but this;
A baby's smile, a woman's kiss,
A book, a pipe, a fire, a friend;
And just a little cash to spend.

STUPIDITY

It is time we ceased being casual about automobile accidents, classing them more or less with inevitable natural occurrences like earthquakes and electrical storms. The plain fact of the matter is that the great majority of such accidents are caused by stupidity and recklessness and nothing else. The modern motor car is a splendid and powerful machine, but the manufacturer cannot protect the public against a fool at the wheel, nor protect the fool against his own criminal folly.

"Car-Hits Pole," reads a heading. "Car Turns Over," "Hit and Run Driver Kills Two," and so on through the ghastly record which confronts the public after every week-end, every holiday and with less frequency on business days. What are we going to do about it? Shall our expensive streets and highways, built by the people for all the people, be surrendered tamely to those ill balanced and inconsiderate persons who drive without regard to the common safety? If the fool ridden life and his own machine we should bear with considerable equanimity, the story of his misfortunes, but unfortunately he imperils as well other lives and other machines and so he becomes a subject of general concern.

What we have said applies to but a small proportion of drivers, but a stupid person, male or female, behind the controls of an automobile becomes a menace to every other car within the radius of the person's activities. The careful driver does not hit telegraph poles or turn over in loose gravel or run into the ditch or run down pedestrians. He uses his intelligence so to guide his machine that his own and the public safety are not endangered, but at any moment he may be confronted with a three-ton truck tearing around a blind curve at forty miles an hour, a youth "stepping on it," in his fifty-dollar Ford and quite regardless of traffic rules or rights, or a pompous limousine bullying its way over the road, cutting in abruptly and speeding recklessly.

The highway menace is more serious this year than ever before, and is becoming increasingly a problem of the first importance. Cars are cheaper and more plentiful as each year passes, and all sorts of people buy them. Ability to secure a driver's permit does not imply the qualities of character and temperament inherent in the good driver. Even the most stupid person has sense enough not to demonstrate his innate stupidity while an examining official sits by his side. Later he "does his stuff" in streets where children play or on roads crowded with week end traffic.

The Ontario Government is cognisant of the serious situation which has developed, and Premier Ferguson discussed it in a speech on Saturday last. "We must put out of business the reckless drivers, those selfish fellows who care little for you or me," he told his audience, and he pointed out that the Government has a greatly enlarged control than in the past by reason of the new permit system. Its authority to cancel permits for violations of traffic rules should be enforced rigidly and peremptorily. At present the permits have been on sale for one month, and nobody knows who has one or who has ignored the law. The police should co-operate in securing a remedy to an intolerable situation by stopping cars indiscriminately and demanding of the driver production of his or her license to drive. The driver without a permit after this length of time should be prosecuted.

The circumstances of every automobile accident, however trivial, should be investigated by a competent official, and circumstantial evidence of reckless ness ought to be enough to warrant suspension or cancellation of a driver's permit. If this is done carefully and consistently throughout the province the fools eventually should be weeded out of the traffic and we might escape the present grim tragedy of our Monday newspapers.

CHAMPIONSHIPS

Our cousins to the south are undoubtedly the queerest folk on this hemisphere They are always looking for some new freak "stunt". Pie-eating and melon-devouring and oyster swallowing contests having palled upon the imagination, new ground was broken by a competition as to who could eat the most "flap-jacks" at one sitting. No sooner had the winner recovered from his indigestion than the world was told that a certain man had won the world's record for staying at the top of a high flagpole for the longest number of hours on record. He was followed by the "champion golfer" who travelled over the links for a greater number of hours than any "pill-driver" had ever done.

The latest "champion" is, however in a class by himself. He won the world's record for holding tennis balls in one hand, managing to retain no less than 14 of them at one time. When he grows up he ought to make a good politician, for a man with such a hand ought to be a valuable asset in an election campaign where handshaking is often a vote-getter.

Without in any way disparaging these "marvellous feats," of which our United States contemporaries boast so loudly, may we venture to suggest a few competitions, the championship of which would be worth while?

Who not make a champion of th lad who takes out the garbage can fo Father the most often in the year?

Why not "commentator" the name o th youngster who uses the lawn mower without "kicking" because he wants to go to a ball game?

This competition could be successfully altered as the weather conditions changed, as for instance the "collegiate lonship" in looking after the furnace. In shovelling the snow off the steps and the front walk, or any number of things which would be worth while and be of some use to the world, while the freak "championships" across the border can never be.

HAVE YOU HEARD THESE?

PIGS

Mary had a little pig;
Its grunt was brief and snuffy;
Its skin, if used in golf bags,
Would have classified as sporty

Mary's father had a pig,
But of a different kind;
For Mary's was a Berkshire,
Yer father's was a "blind."

Wife—"Can't you give him something to make him talk more distinctly?"

She—"Does your wife get her own way?"

He—"Rather, so much so that she even writes up her diary a week ahead."

"I've brought back that second-hand car I bought."

"What's the matter, parson, can't you run it?"

"Not and stay in the ministry."

OTHER MEN'S THOUGHTS

Doctors are finding evidences of modern diseases in Egyptian mummies. And no doubt they sounded just as alarming under their Egyptian names as they do under their modern Latin and Greek ones.—Hamilton Herald.

We do not if in proportion to our population there is any more wickedness than in days of old, and while the boys and girls of today have more freedom than formerly and are more outspoken in consequence, they are probably no worse than we were in our day and possibly their general average is higher.—Ridgetown Dominion

An American professor has drawn a very beguiling picture of the warfare of the future. A tear-gas bombardment, he says, holds no terrors for the civil population. The real danger, it appears, is that under the pressure of such a gas attack we shall all laugh ourselves to death.—Winnipeg Evening Tribune.

IF I HAD TIME—
(From the Kiwanis Magazine).

If I had the time to find a place
And sit me down full face to face.
With my better self, that cannot show
In my daily life that rushes so
It might be then I would see my soul
Was stumbling still toward the shining goal,
I might be nerved by the thought sublime—
If I had the time!
If I had the time to let my heart
Speak out and take in my life a part.
To look about and to stretch a hand
To a comrade quartered in no-luck land;
Ah, me! If I might but just sit still
And hear the note of the whippoorwill
I think that my wish with God's would rhyme—
If I had the time!
If I had the time to learn from you
How much for comfort my word could do;
And I told you then of my sunday will
To kiss your feet when I did you ill
If the tears aback of the coldness feigned
Could flow, and the wrong be quite explained—
Kinanians, the souls of us all would chime,
If we'd take the time!

Naval Conference

would be able to reach an early solution. In this joint declaration, the conference also recognized its countries' mutual obligations encountered at Geneva should not be accepted as terminating efforts to bring about future limitation of naval armaments. The declaration says: "On the contrary, the delegates trust that the measure of agreement which has been reached here will make it possible for consultations between Governments to be on a basis reconciling divergent views and lead to an early conclusion of an agreement for limitation of naval armaments which will permit of substantial economy and, while safeguarding national security, promote a feeling of mutual confidence and good understanding."

Paried As Friends

London, Aug. 4.—A Geneva despatch to Reuters, the British News Agency, says that the Tri-Partite Conference plenary session today elected in the friendliest manner after a few complimentary words by the heads of the British and Japanese delegations in favor of Hugh S. Gibson, chief of U. S. delegation who returned his thanks.

Agree To Disagree

Geneva, Aug. 4.—The Tri-Partite Naval Conference succeeded to effect a treaty for the further limitation of naval armaments today fared disaster as a failure. Unless an eleventh hour reprieve comes from London or Washington, capitals of powers which have been principal protagonists in the Geneva drama, the final act will take place at a plenary session called for three o'clock this afternoon.

Realizing that an conference is ended until the last session is held, some quarters were wondering this morning whether any miraculous theatrical stroke might again give it life just before the moment officially foreordained for expiration. This hope however, was regarded as very faint, indeed and it seemed certain that the session would see the heads of the three delegations, British, Japanese and American solemnly announce that an agreement to disagree had been arrived at.

BARLOWS HOLD FIFTH FAMILY RE-UNION

The fifth annual Barlow reunion was held on Monday, August 1st, at Trenton Island, Deseronto. Due to illness and many other causes, several were prevented from being present, but those who did attend thoroughly enjoyed themselves. Many members of the family and visitors were present from Belleville, Kingston, Shannonville, Maine, Rochester, Toronto Minaten, Oshawa and Buffalo. During the afternoon a program of sports was held. A very interesting soft ball game was played with Fred Naylor and Ken McCabe as captains. Umpire Lew Trent, either through his inability to count or through fear of his life said the score was a tie. It was decided to play the tie off next year.

Great excitement was caused among the bathers when a black snake appeared on the scene and it was the cause of a merry half hour chase. After supper prizes were read from some of those absent expressing their regret at not being able to be present. About 8.30 the guests departed to their several homes, all fervently hoping that they would be spared for many future reunions.

Miss Horire formerly was a geisha girl but she became so fat she could not get through the doors of the tea house. Then a movie director saw her and the geisha ranks lost their heavyweight champion. IRRESISTABLE GIRLS AND OFFENSIVE MEN

By ELSIE MARLOWE

"Gosh things are sure getting bad! Why, a girl can't take two steps without getting insulted at least half a dozen times. Last night when I was walking home from the street car at least eight guys in machines asked me to hop in. I tell you it's fierce! I'm fraid. He called me 'Cutie' today—right in front of the whole office force. Aw, I'm disgusted — etc. — etc. —etc."

Here she is again the Fatally Beautiful Beatrice —the Irresistable Irene —for whom kings sacrifice their thrones and cops forfeit their stars—

DEAR ELSIE:

I'll a girl, not bad-looking, and I do dress well. I work downtown in an office and I like my job, but believe me, I'm ready to beat it to the tall timber.

Why, Elsie, it's gotten so that a half way attractive girl can't walk two blocks without having some shelk try to get fresh. They try to catch your eye as you walk alone or if they are in a car, they'll draw up to the sidewalk and ask you to step in. It's the same way in a street cars — a decent girl just doesn't know which way to look. If you just happen to glance at a fellow he thinks you're flirting with him.

Where I work there are several men and it must say it's just as bad there. They never miss a chance to be fresh. Even the boss, who should know better, doesn't stay far behind in this particular. I'm getting disgusted I'd like to go off and do housework for a change. What do you think?

KATHERINE.

And so you think that I'm going to burst out in flames at all these Rudolen Males who are pursuing you, don't you, my dear? Well, I'm not. Instead I am going to address a few snappy remarks to a foolish young female named Katherine—

STAP OUT OF IT, GIRLIE!

Stop telling yourself this romantic fairy tale or expecting us to believe it. It is true that everyone likes to look at a pretty girl. There's no offence in that. But it is NOT true that admiring glances lead to insults. NO GIRL NEEDS BE INSULTED UNLESS SHE WISHES TO BE.

No, you needn't go armed with a club nor do you need to wear an icy coat of dignity. Nor encase yourself in chicken wire or carry tear-bombs.

No matter how fatal your beauty is you can protect yourself against affront if you'll just be your simple, modest, friendly, normal self. Remember that prettiness is a fairly common commodity hereabouts and that the average male isn't going to rush from his lair at the sight of the first dimpled chin. He don't take your good looks too seriously.

Nine times out of ten, the girl who is "insulted" works overtime to get that insult. She is so obsessed with the idea that she has an overpowering allure for men that her every act has a suggestive significance. Her own secret attitude is so vulgar that it arouses vulgarity in the men she meets.

DON'T EXPECT GROSSNESS AND YOU WON'T MEET IT, KATIE.

Does your wife poise Cain because she has to stay home and mind the kid dies while you step out to the flights, the show, or what have you?

Well it seems, brother, according to a San Francisco judge, that she has every right to object.

The judge recently declared that if domestic duties keep the wife at home hubby should stick around and keep her company.

And just a cases one man refused to do this, the judge handed his wife a shiny new interlocutory decree of divorce. It seems that the husband stayed out every night — and mamma sat home and rocked the cradle.

So next time you plan to fare forth while wifey has to stay put — watch your step, brother. Maybe it won't be so easy as it has been. For wife has the law to back her protest against not home now.

The cowboy bandanna is responsible for the handkerchief-square neckwear of to-day, and many of the season's most attractive sports dresses owe their smartness to the large square neckerchiefs which are worn carelessly about the neck and tied in a double knot either in front or upon the shoulder, while sheer linens in these bandannas were of colorful design, recent models match the fabric of the dress having a narrow border of contrasting color

Advice to Girls
By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

My sister, fifteen, and I, nineteen met a young man of twenty-three. He has been coming to our home continuously for six months. He lives quite a distance from us, but rain or shine he comes to see us every evening.

He apparently is very fond of us both and also has quite a liking for mother. Do you believe this young man comes to see us for friendship alone? Sister and I both love him but we don't know which one of us he really cares for. As yet he hasn't said any thing about love to either one of us. And it is my opinion that it would be very improper for a girl to make advances of any kind. If there is anything to be said I feel that he ought to say it.

He never goes around with any other girls. Also he does everything within his power to please us both.

I feel that sister is too young to be thinking of such things. And as he is quite a sensible young man I don't think he can be interested in one so young. Still I can't say that he loves me for he hasn't ever said so.

CURSE OF LOVE
By Mildred Barbour

He was all solicitude and refused to leave her, but she persisted, and he finally went away some hours relieved again to let Bronson and wife for a while hour. After that, she grew terminedly put on her bathing-suit and had a brisk plunge. She felt better but, as she sat on the sand, staring at the sea, she told herself that her life was ruined, her romance over, and she stirred she could die.

Meanwhile, Kitty Carson and Philip Kendall were greeting each other after the abrupt fashion of men.

"Well, old-timer, how goes it?"

When the first greetings were over, Philip demanded:

"Say, where the devil were you while I was wiring every one in creation?"

Kitty Carson grinned.

"Getting married."

"What! Who is she?"

"I don't know!"

"Were you crazy? Or drunk?

"Not drunk. It must have been crazy. Maybe it was the spring, or something. Anyway I stayed on to find out, if possible, something about her. Shall I tell you about it?"

CHAPTER II
CONFESSION

"So you see, Phil," concluded Kitty Carson, when he had told Kendall about his amazing marriage to Cynthia Grever "of course I was careful not to mention her names since I'd promised the lady I'd go my way and never bother her, I had to keep my word. But I hadn't said I wouldn't try to see her from a distance, and, with my interest and curiosity considerably piqued, it occurred to me that, if I hung around there for a while, I might run across her. I'm a great believer in chance," he grinned. "Of course, I never dreamed I'd encounter her, because she was veiled when I saw her. But I'd have known her car anywhere. There are not many people fortunate enough to possess that kind of a car."

"And you didn't see her—or it, rather" asked Kendall, when his astonishment permitted him to speak?"

The two men were lying on the sand in the shade of the cliff, fanned by the sea-breeze. Above them, on the road, a handsome car that Carson had purchased the day before glistened in the sunshine.

"Not a sight!" confessed Carson ruefully. "Of course, I might have traced her by the answers she gave the clerk when we got the license. But I didn't, you my word, I didn't make use of my knowledge. I just hung around to see what Fate had in store for me—and she didn't have a darn thing."

"I have a hunch," said Kendall, "that the girl made more of an impression on you than you've admitted. It was it all the adventure of it, old man?"

Carson lit a cigarette with deliberation.

"I've been thinking about that myself—and blamed if I don't think she did! I liked her voice and the crisp, cocky way she had of speaking. I liked the way she held her head, sure of herself, proud — er — defiant. Oh, I'm no good at describing that sort of thing — but — well, if I were a marrying man, which I'm not (you can't exactly call that a marriage, can you?) I'd pick a girl like her — a girl who knows what she wants and goes after it, without crying about it. Something pretty bad must have happened to her that night to make her do what she did and, if a man was responsible, I'd like to get my hands on him for about five minutes!"

"Have you ever stopped to consider," suggested his friend thoughtfully, "that though you are not the one you call a marrying man, you're likely to want to get married some day — and here you are, tied hand and foot to a girl you know nothing about? What'll you do then?"

Carson shrugged his broad shoulders "We'll cross that bridge when we come to it."

"But think of the girl When she's finished with the marriage certificate you were in such a hurry to get, she'll want to marry, too, probably. What then?"

"Oh, she knows where to find me," said Carson comfortably. "I wrote my hand address on the edge of the marriage certificate."

Kendall began to laugh.

"King, you need a guardian, or a nurse! Suffering cats, man, hasn't life taught you the danger of running around loose at night, marrying any girl who asks you to marry her—and then giving her your bank address. You —with a young fortune that any girl would like to get her hands on?"

Carson grinned confidently.

"What are a few dollars against an adventure like that? I'll take my chance — and, moreover I'll bet that that girl was all she seemed to be. And believe me, she seemed pretty nice—and that's putting it mildly!"

"Ha! boy, you're in love with a girl you don't know," accused Kendall, with mock seriousness.

"Here, here!" laughed his friend. "You're a fine one, when it comes to talking about love." A look of comic dismay crossed his face. "I've never asked you about yourself. I came down here expressly to find out, and I've done nothing but babble about my own affairs. Out with it, Phil. Tell your uncle all about it!"

He sobered instantly and, under Carson's thoughtful and friendly gaze, made a clean breast of the whole situation. When he had finished, his friend clapped him on the back.

"You darned old idiot! Don't you know that what I have is yours? I'll pull you out in a jiffy."

"Can you — will you?" There was a new light in Kendall's troubled eyes.

"Just watch me! When we get back to town, I'll fix it so you can pay off old Collins. Then you can take your Norma and be happy ever afterward, eh, Phil?"

"Forget it!" advised Carson. "And see here, what about taking me to see her, now that everything's settled."

"You bet I will!" Kendall rose to his feet with alacrity. "I'm only too proud to. You'll love her at first sight!"

"I hope not!" laughed Carson, as he settled behind the wheel of his car. "Women rake the deuce with friendship."

He was starting the car, when he said, with a grin:

"Phil, promise me not to spill the story of my crazy marriage to your wife You don't want her to think me a fool. And you know women see things in a queer way."

ANNUAL PICNIC A FINE SUCCESS

St. Andrew's Sunday School Scholars Enjoy Selves At Park

"The most successful ever held" was the way in which one man described St. Andrews annual picnic to Massassega Park yesterday. From the time the first bus load pushed off in the morning until the last load arrived home in the evening it was one continual round of excitement and pleasure. Races, peanut scrambles, ball games galore. The spacious grounds were swarming with adults and kiddies during the morning and the afternoon half-dolldey brought an additional crowd. A softball game between the Trail Rangers and the Old Boy's provided plenty of excitement. Both old and young alike entered with equal zest in the races and various competitions. Rawson's Bus Service transported the members of the school to and from the Park.

The others who assisted in the arrangements were Secy Bogart; Bert Flemin; Booths, Mr. Murray; B. Stock, Transportation; Treas., Mrs. David Fleming; Secy., Miss Waters; Mrs. Reid, Mrs. Bell, Vernon Weir, I. L. Moore, Chas. Delisle and Miss Blair.

Mrs. Wallbridge who resides at Massassega loaned the use of her kitchen to make the coffee, etc., and her act was much appreciated by the Committee.

Supper was laid, and after such a strenuous afternoon, together with the breeze at the Lake, all were hungry and the many good things laid out soon disappeared. After supper a number were bathing and about 8 o'clock all left for home, many claiming it was one of the best picnics they had ever attended.

The Chicago City Council is being asked by 75 women, said to represent political, business and club interests, to pass an ordinance requiring women to wear sanitary coverings when trying on dresses in stores, for unsanitary conditions are held responsible for this demand. It being stated that garments are often tried on 50 to 100 times before being sold.

DEATHS & FUNERALS

ROSS NICOLSON

The funeral services of the late Ross Nicolson who met an tragic death in the waters of the Moira at Foxboro on Friday night, were conducted at the home here Monday afternoon by the pastor, Rev. F. M. White assisted by Rev. Snell, of Foxboro.

The whole community was in mourning when the news came of the sad accident as Ross grew up from a child here and was a general favorite because of his sunny disposition especially with the children who dearly loved him. He was a member of the Young People's League, the choir, the Young Mens Bible Class of Centenary Church and was always ready and willing to do his bit: One and all feel and to think so useful a life has been snuffed out just at the beginning of a bright career for he was a youth of good homerable and upright qualities and a credit to the community where ever his work called him. The casket was covered with beautiful flowers floral tributes of the love and esteem of his many friends and neighbors.

The remains were borne to its last resting place in Frankford cemetery by boyhood chums, Harold Thrasher, Donald Garrison, David Sutherland, Lyweave Hubbel, Everett Cook and Charlie Hinchcliffe. Rev. Snell, of Foxboro and Rev. Butler, of Frankford, officiated at the grave. Very deep is the sympathy of all is extended to the bereaved parents and surviving sisters, Miss Pearl, of Toronto; Ruth, Helen and Laura at home.

The choir of young people of which he was a member and Mrs. J. Kelly rendered a very touching selection during the services.

Legends Of Capt. Kidd's Treasure Are Revived Once More

Halifax, N.S., Aug. 4.—(Canadian Press)—This summer the hoary legend of piratical treasure buried somewhere along the coast of Nova Scotia took a new lease on life and the ghost of Captain Kidd, cutlass, pistols and all, retired to haunts limited formerly to amateur treasure seekers furtively recounsel their operations with pick and shovel, but thus far no Spanish gold has been brought to light.

Captain Kidd who according to some versions was a much-maligned martinet, is supposed to have scattered his loot in carefully selected hiding places along the coasts of New England, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. If all the local legends be true, then he must have spent the greater part of his life not in acquiring gold, but in burying it for there is scarcely a locality from Yarmouth to the Miramichi which has not at least one or another claimed to possess one of his hoards. One is forced to this conclusion that the dreaded buccaneer loved the unromantic employment of a navvy.

For many years a small group of believed Mahone Bay, near Chester, was supposed favored by the adherents of the legend. Occasionally one of the enthusiast unearthed a scrap of old ship wreckage, a rusted axe, or even a sea-chest, empty. These finds encouraged the believers and brought new converts to the cult of Captain Kidd. No actual treasure was ever discovered, but there are still those who believe that the pot of gold is just around the corner for them. Years ago a particularly-favored island was christened Captain Kidd's Island.

Whether or not the treasure myth is entirely without foundation, it has given birth to a varied litter of minor legends, each with its individual twist and dash of local color. In many fishing agencies are called in to heighten the romance of these folk tales. Along the wild and secluded ever near Saint John N. B., is credited with the special guardianship of a titular demon of the old buccaneers. Fisher folk will tell you more by implication than by direct statement, that the ever mischievous harbors a fabulous wealth of doubloons, pieces of eight, rings and precious stones, but that indescribable dangers beset the path of the would - be treasure hunters.

One venturesome romanticist sallied forth by night, armed with spade and lantern. When he was found in the morning he was a gibbering maniac, to rob.

Others who claim to have braved the unknown horrors relate that, when they had dug a few feet below the surface of the sand, their lights were extinguished and a thunderous voice ordered them to be gone.

They were!

It is highly probable that the captain who is reputed to have been a thrifty man, did talk away some of his "earnings" against a rainy day. His known activities on islands and caves probably arose from the fact that he was not in good odor with the banks of his day So there is still a chance that one of the myraid conical legends will turn out to be truth and that some credulous fisherman will blossom into a millionaire overnight.

MODERN DRESS IN OLD-TIME INDIAN DANCES

Chilliwack, B.C., Aug. 2.—Modern dress was mixed with the grotesque costume of the old potlatch when Indians from the Lummi reservation and the Nooksack country gathered here for a reunion with the Chilliwack Indians.

Several of the Lummi ladies danced in silk frocs and hats bedecked with ostrich plumes, while others appeared in the inspiring measure of the Indian tom-toms that, appear to have been handed down from a hundred years ago.

The temperature was 100 in the shade on the dancing floor, but serious minded tribesmen went through their ceremonies in full war bonnet. Numbers of the men had their feathered headgear and a few had complete native dress and looked like animated totem poles.

But, there must be a shortage of the old-time uniforms, because of the gallant tribesmen. The attempt to make up for the lack primitive attire resulted in the appearance of some extremely odd exhibits. One of the liveliest dancers was correctly "fit out" Indian fashion as to his headcar and coat garment, but after that he was a sight more than an exhibit of tan brogues, colored garters and fawn pants.

The feature of the day was the bear dance, staged by the Lummi tribesmen. It must have been hot work inside those splendid furs, heads and all, of the original animals, who had evidently been killed with their winter coats on. But, in spite of the heat and exertion, throughout the dances seemed to enjoy the exhibition as much as the spectators.

Finger prints have definitely identified Daniel Forsythe, killed by a farmer in Becton, whom he was attempting

KITTEN ADOPTED BY FRIENDLY RATS

London, Aug. 3.—A new peace treaty has been signed in the animal world. A kitten forsaken by its mother has been adopted by a family of rats in the attic of a store in Finsbury square.

Imitating his friends, the kitten "mouses" down the rat holes when anyone approaches. Shop assistants have seen the kitten being fed by the rats. One day the manager of the store caught the kitten and locked it in a warehouse, but next morning it had disappeared up the chimney.

BELLE THEATRE

Laguna Dam, which serves as the locale for Warner Brothers' production of "Tracked by the Police", starring Rin-Tin-Tin and directed by Ray Enright, might well be called the golden dam, for beside the two million dollars required to build it, it undoubtedly contains many thousands of dollars' worth of gold. This is in the form of flaky gold which occurs in the nearby hills from which the rock for the concrete and fills was taken. Although the metal can be plainly seen when the raked eye in the rock, the aggregate is too small to pay the cost of milling and smelting.

"Tracked by the Police" is a story woven around the thrilling events attendant upon the construction of such a dam. The resultant complications makes a melodrama of breath-taking interest and innumerable thrills.

Rin-Tin-Tin in "Tracked by the Police" comes to the Belle Theatre today for a run of three days. Don't miss it.

Smelters Score Seven Runs In Fatal Fifth Inning

The Canadian Nationals practically assured themselves of a place in the play-off for the championship of the Day of Quinte League by taking one end of the double-header at the Exhibition Park before a small crowd of a little over three hundred fans yesterday afternoon who sat in the stands from 2:30 until after 6:30 when the night-cap affair was completed.

The Deloro Club won their fifth straight victory from the locals by a one-sided score of 11-4, in a slow, some affair but Mills and company managed to gain the verdict in the first end half of the bargain-day specia' from the Point Anne crew by an 8-7 count. The latter was by far the best game of the pair from the standpoint of the fans but because Belleville reaped the visitors but the closer score and the absence of nonchalant an home player is at least a spark of interest in the ultimate result. Deloro who have disposed of the ruinners in every meeting this year apparently have their number and cast aside all friendships yesterday and corraled for themselves an early lead and after that they refused to relent and allowed the homesters little leeway to overhaul them. The Deloro Club have proved themselves the class of the League thus far but another story may be told if the boys from the north hook-up with the Weir, Mills, Ross crowd in the play-offs.

Point Anne after getting off on the wrong leg steadied away and turned in a nice game and had the Belleville nine not nailed away a comfortable lead in the opening stages the villagers might have altered the result considerably. Good, bad and indifferent base ball was served up to the fans who have followed the boys through their ups and thin but it's a safe bet that most of them will be back for another double bill next week where Deloro and Point Anne will again be the attraction.

The smelters were all over the home team in the curtain-raiser and at no time did the losers show any signs of kicking up much of a fuss. There was little doubt in anybody's mind as to the best team on the day's play.

Manager Mills started the versatile Harper on the mound and the fans observed a shock when the ex-Athenian boy was given the assignment. He has played almost every position on the field to date and handled all of them to acquit himself honorably but the two glaring errors in the fifth, one by himself and another by Weir at third minced matters and he was relieved by Gerow who finished the affair. It was the fifth session that Deloro helped themselves to seven runs and tucked the game away in the old bat bag. Up until the fatal inning the locals had been riding along in close pursuit of the smelters but the balloon ascended and after the smoke had cleared away there was little fight left in the Nationals camp, and both teams engaged through the remaining four frames on a scoreless basis.

"Inky" Woods the ex-Lakeside youngster was on the mound and he went the full route and twirled fairly effective ball. Six batters went back to the bench via the strike-out route and Woods issued three free tickets.

Harper was given a hand when he struck out Hughes in the third inning with the bases populated. Flagler the kid short-stop clouted the longest hit for three bases to deep right field.

Boudreau was the real batting star with four safeties in five times at bat. In the opinion of the writer this boy is the most consistent hitter in the league. He is a very dependable boy in the pinches and was responsible for four runs yesterday.

Gerow also swirled up nice ball while he was on the mound he went into the box cold in the fifth after Harper had faltered and only one run was scored on him, and that one in the fifth, from then on he held the smelters well in hand.

Harry Mills with a trio of bingles was presented with the batting crown in the Belleville camp.

Evidently singing under the label of "Iron" Gibson He struck out no less than fifteen batters who faced him and was cool as a cucumber under fire at all times. After Gibson's excellent showing against the smelters last Saturday it appeared to many as though he should be flung right back at them and judging from the way in which he turned back the Point Anne batters he could have given them a right run Gibson has improved wonderfully this year and right now he is shaping up as one of the leading artillerymen in the circuit.

It brought back fond memories of Teddy Dwyer, Jack Williams and Jack Dullette when that trio were in their prime with the ex-champions to see Gibson sailing along in bang-up style. The locals do play off with Deloro here were many who predicted this Gibson could trim them.

Green who went to the firing line for Dwyer and company was no novelty to the Belleville batters who nick and bun for eight hits in his shortstop term on the mound. The cement team scored two runs in the ninth after two men were down but it was a belated rally and the margin was too great to overcome.

Murney Green pulled the best play of the day when he came in at a lighting clip to stab Weir's terrific drive at his shoe-strings. Blakely made a nice running catch of Hagerman's "texas Leaguer in the fifth.

The umpires switched places in this game, Gerow going behind the plate and Colling taking the bases.

BEAVERS LOST TO TREASURES

Thelma Golden, Toronto, Here For To-night's Benefit Game

The Beavers were defeated by the Kingston Treasures in the Limestone City last evening by a score of 11-7 in a well-played contest. Thelma Golden, star speed-ball pitcher with the Nationals of Toronto, was on the mound but developed sore arm trouble and was a little wild at times and the Treasures promptly stepped on the pas. Several of the Beavers' regular players were unable to go and Mike Stinson of Napanee went along. There were some slight accidents to mar an otherwise perfect game. Evelyn Whalen, the plucky little catcher with Alan Meagher's crew, received a foul tip in the eye and the Kingston short-stop was injured in sliding into second base.

A choice program is offered for the fans tonight when the Beavers will hook up with the Tigers in an exhibition game at 6.30. The total receipts barring the expenses of the game will go to the Tigers who hope to realize enough to purchase uniforms. Miss Thelma Golden who pitched for the Beavers last night will be on the mound for the Tigers and Evelyn Whalen will be behind the bat. Molly Gray will serve them up for the Beavers. Miss Golden is raised as one of the leading girl pitchers in Toronto and it will be well worth while to see her in action.

GIRLS OF SPAIN ARE NOW FREE

Senorita Trini Shocked At Change Since Last Visit Home

New York, Aug. 4.—Senorita Trini, Spanish dancer and musical comedy star, returned from a short visit to Spain aboard the French liner Paris today, still "startled and shocked" at the changes which have taken place there since her last visit four years ago. No more, she says, are lace mantillos, roses in the hair and fans worn by Spanish girls, and the fandango and tango are decidedly passe. The new ample of the American girl has had its effect, and Spain, last stronghold of the conventional, has given way.

Trini said she found her two young sisters, their hair bobbed in the latest flapper fashion, learning the intricacies of the Black Bottom and proud of their ability to Charleston.

The duenna, or chaperone, without whom no Spanish girl of good family would have been allowed to go out a few years ago, is rapidly disappearing from Spanish social life, she said. Spanish girls, like those of America, now see their boy friends alone, she declared.

YANKS DIVIDE WITH DETROIT

Gehrig Passes Ruth For Home Run Honors

New York, Aug. 4.—Babe Ruth can the only one who derived any real profit out of the double-header at the Yankee Stadium yesterday though some 30,000 satisfy souls derived a great deal of pleasure. Certainly the Yanks didn't gain any great satisfaction out of merely breaking even with the league's second team, while Babe Ruth was downright displeased at the result of his efforts to regain the royal road that leads to the home run crown.

Entertaining as was the Buster's big show in the opener, it wasn't as damaging as another home run, smacked into the left field bleachers by Harry Heilmann in the fifth inning with, one on that put the finishing touches on a run-run rally that overcame the Yanks' lead and beat them 6-5. It also knocked Urban Shocker out of the box.

The Tigers also threatened in the second contest when they came with a rush in the ninth, but after all they only succeeded in making the score look behind and didn't come far enough. When Dave Danforth manifest Governor Rogers and had finally been retired by that famous life-saver, Mr. Wiley Moore, they had made four runs, but were still two short of a tie. The score was 6 to 6.

The Yanks went into that final frame with a lead of 3 to 2 and the pastimers started filing out of the ark, certain that neither of the twin birds would have another turn at bat and confident that the Yanks were beyond all danger of being overtaken, but before the last of them had departed many stopped to see what all the shoutin' was about.

Undismayed at their six run deficit, the Tigers started clawing away at George Pipgras, who had been very stingy with his hits up to that time. In the first six innings he permitted only three and not a man reached second. In the seventh he wobbled a bit and gave up two more, which, coupled with an error and a base on balls, were conducive for a pair of runs. Then in the ninth he collapsed.

GREAT BRITAIN, UNITED STATES WILL CONTINUE THE NEGOTIATIONS

U. S. Secrtary Kellogg Confident Further Consultation Will Help

DIFFERENT OPINIONS

Plans To Reconvene Arms Conference Of Five Great Powers

Washington, Aug. 5.—Further negotiations between the United States and Great Britain in an attempt to save something out of the Geneva wreck and the reconvening of the Washington Arms Conference prior to August of 1931, the date first contemplated, are to follow in the wake of the Anglo-American deadlock which exploded the "Coolidge conference."

"I do not consider the failure to make an agreement now as final," Secretary Kellogg said in a formal commentary on the collapse at Geneva, "and I am confident that the work done at Geneva will make it possible after consultation between the Governments to find a basis for reconciling the divergent views and lead to the early conclusion of an agreement for the limitation of auxiliary naval craft."

Similar promises are contained in the valedictory signed by the American British and Japanese delegations at the wind up of the Geneva sessions.

Re-assemble Five Powers

It is now assured that the call for the reassembling of the five powers conference to the Washington treaty will go out earlier than planned, possibly to bring the sessions during the first of the year or in early Spring.

Although Mr. Kellogg and the departing delegates at Geneva expressed the hope of early reconciliation as to auxiliary craft, actually officials at present see no way of bringing the British and American viewpoints much closer.

The State Department continues to blame the British. It is argued that the prime cause of disagreement is British insistence that naval needs are absolute, not relative. The United States takes exactly the opposite point of view.

Throughout the Geneva negotiations the United States has contended that British needs depended on what sea strength her rivals had — that their need for if the United States and Japan the two other major sea powers, reduced and limited auxiliary craft the British were bound to do so.

The British, adhering to their position that needs are absolute, demanded a given number of cruisers to safeguard her sea lanes and ocean borne commerce.

DEATH BY NOOSE FOR GEO. MERLE

Paid Penalty Of His Crime This Morning On The Scaffold

Montreal, Aug. 5.—George Merle, native of France, was hanged in Bordeaux Jail here this morning for the murder of Andre Marelle, also a native of France, late last December. The crime was committed following a quarrel over the affections of a woman.

In contrast to his conduct during the trial, Merle was extraordinarily calm. Thirty seconds after he stepped from his cell to scaffold the trap was sprung. Thirteen minutes later his life was pronounced ended by prison doctors and the body was cut down. According to prison officials, Merle took the news of his fate quietly when he learned yesterday that his reprieve had been refused by the authorities at Ottawa. He slept peacefully last night and attired red mass early this morning. His only protest came yesterday, it was stated, when he heard a test being made of the trap in the prison yard.

CAR CRASHES A BUGGY; HURTS 3

James Maxwell, Trenton, —Piles Car In Ditch After Accident

Mrs. James Moon, an elderly woman residing near the town of Trenton and her two grandchildren, Verna Benn, 8 and Cecilia Benn, 9, were all injured when the buggy in which they were riding was struck by a car driven by Jas. Maxwell, of Trenton, on the outskirts of the town about nine o'clock last night.

Several children were in the back seat of the car and Mr. Maxwell turned around to remonstrate with them for making an unseemly racket. As he turned his head to the front again the buggy which carried no lights was directly in front of him. Maxwell swerved his car towards the ditch and in doing so struck the buggy throwing some of the occupants to the ground. The car crashed into a post at the side of the road and was badly wrecked. Maxwell is an employee of the C.N.R. in Trenton.

CHAS. GORDONIER IS GIVEN BAIL

Case Adjourned On Request Of Crown Until August 9th

Charles Gordonier of Marmora was formally arraigned before Magistrate F. C. Harman at the police court held in Marmora charged with indecent assault on a seventeen-year-old girl from Cne Hill, Hastings County, who came to Marmora on a visit to a family in that vicinity about a week ago. Two days before his appearance, Charles Gordonier's brother James, was released on $15,000 bail following his committal for trial on a serious offense charge brought by his sister-in-law.

At the request of the Crown Attorney, Mr. Hyndon Dowson, who was unable to be present, Charles Gordonier's case was adjourned until Tuesday, August 9th, when he was liberated on $2,500 bail.

The alleged offense was committed in Rawdon Township on Thursday, July 28th, the night before James Gjrdonier, former county constable and bailiff was committed to the fall assizes by Magistrate R. R. Casement. Charles Gordonier, who was arrested here Monday by the Provincial Police.

The Gordoniers who are both married and have each two children are nephews of the late Jerome Keene who was found dead in his bed in Marmora shack, his skull pierced by bullet wounds, on February 7, 1927. The discovery of the murder was made by Charles Gordonier.

COLOURED GENTLEMAN TOOK TO HEELS WITH LOT

Yesterday noon a colored tramp entered the home of George Wallace about two miles north of Stirling on the Campbellford road, and stole two watches, two cakes and some stamps. Provincial Police Constable Wetherall investigated and tracked the man for some distance, but the culprit's footsteps disappeared into a swamp. The ramp is described as about five feet seven inches in height, weight about one hundred and twenty-five pounds, and had a very dark complexion. He wores a dark suit and running shoes. The inhabitants of that locality are requested to be on the lookout for any one answering that description and to notify the local provincial police if seen.

Well Known Veteran Railroaders Of Local District Get Assignment

The Royal train the Prince of Wales, his younger brother, Prince George and Premier and Mrs. Baldwin and party will pass through Belleville tonight in the neighborhood of ten o'clock and according to railway officials, no stop will be made in this city and the train will go through to Pickering where the party will remain over night proceeding on to Toronto early tomorrow morning.

To three Belleville men falls the lot of piloting the Royal party from King ston to Toronto. Word came through this morning that engineer Norman Kerr, 306 Bleecker Avenue, Division Road Foreman; Robert J. Milne, 165 College Street East, Engineer, and Wilfred Mulr, 302 Foster Ave. Fireman, would compose the crew on the Royal train. Engineer Thomas Crozier was originally scheduled to make the run but later orders were forwarded that Mr. Muir was to replace him. The three men were selected by the thought that they had been chosen to pilot the future Monarch on the Kingston-Toronto run. This is the first time that any of them have had such a high honor conferred upon them. Messrs. Kerr and Milne are both veteran railroaders, the former having commenced his career in 1906 as fireman and has risen steadily step by step to the rank which he now occupies. "Bob" Milne is one of the best-known and well-liked Engineers on the Division and it is no surprise to his many friends that he was granted the privilege of sitting at the throttle of the Royal train. In the point of service Muir is a youngster man but his record since 1916 is one to be proud of. Co-workers were congratulating the three of them in their fortune today.

Engine To Order

Workers at the local round house were busily engaged in shining up the huge locomotive No. 6196, which is to haul the special train and as it steamed out of the yards last evening it was shining in all brilliancy and fires steamed as a human misfit who has been detailed to perform such a task. The engine is one of the latest models turned out by the Kingston Locomotive Works and has made her four runs those in hauling freight trains over the Division. The locomotive will be given another shine over at Brockville today by the workers in that city. The crew left on the early train today for the Ontario city where they will take charge

JURY URGE BAN ON GLARE LIGHTS

Recommend That Parking On The Highways Be Discontinued

Newmarket, Aug. 5.—Rield conference of the law against glaring headlights and prohibition of parking on the highways were the recommendations in the verdict of the Coroner's jury at the inquest into the death of Ross Lavin, of Toronto, who was struck and killed by a motor car driven by Dr. W. L. Bond, near Queensville, on July 24. The jury held no one to blame for the fatality.

The boy had been replacing a tire on the rack of the car in which he was a passenger. The car driven by Dr. Bond crashed into the parked automobile, crushing the lad between the two.

According to the testimony of Dr. Bond and passengers in his car, the glaring headlights of a car approaching from the opposite direction prevented him from seeing the parked car in time to avoid the collision.

SPEEDY SYSTEM OF TRANSMISSION

New York, N.Y., Aug. 5.—A wireless transmission system enabling pictures, photographs and complete messages to be tossed across the ocean at a speed ten times greater than any yet attained will be placed in operation within a month between New York and London.

The Radio Corporation of America has announced that it will adopt the beam or short wave method successfully used by the Marconi Company in England and express the belief that within three years the system will link the world's leading cities with radio communication on facsimile basis.

The beam system differs from the method of transmitting photographs now in use in that it uses shorter wave lengths and that "listening in" is impossible.

NO REASON FOR BARRING NEGROES

Lady From U. S. Started Agitation Against Colored Folk

"They have as much right there as anyone else as long as they behave themselves," stated a city official to The Intelligencer this afternoon, when asked if a color-line would follow the disturbance at the "Quinte Park" Tourist Camp on Wednesday night last when some "democratic" Americans refused to sleep in the same camping grounds with seven of their colored brethren.

This city official stated that the whole "fuss" was raised by an American woman who is nearing the evening of her life As soon as she discovered that the "darkies" were intending to camp at the park for the night, she immediately commenced an agitation, but after a short time was quited down and even "compromised her dignity" by remaining in the camp with negroes and negresses.

DISAPPOINTMENT IS KEENLY FELT

British Newspapers Blame United States' Attitude For Failure

London, Aug. 5.—It would have been better to have had no conference at all than that it should have failed. The British delegates alone showed themselves prepared for compromise and the conference was convened with unfortunate preliminary misunderstandings.

These are the three main points upon which opinion here is agreed, both by newspapers and by unofficial indications of diplomatic feeling in London with regard to the breakingup of the Anglo-Franco-Italo Naval Conference at Geneva.

The majority of the papers represent the collapse as being due to the American refusal to accept the British plan for more naval concessions. Elsewhere it is contended that the failure was due to a lack of preparation before hand and allowing naval experts to handle questions which belongs to statesmen.

Take Royal Salute At Alexandria Bay—River All Decorated

Kingston, August 5.—His Royal Highness, The Prince of Wales, Prince George and Premier and Mrs. Baldwin will arrive in Kingston at nine o'clock (fast time) this evening at the Yacht Club Dock, where a reception will be held after which the party will form up a procession of about twelve automobiles. The entire time to be spent in Kingston by the Royal party will be no longer than an hour. A drive around the city is proposed for the visitors.

Brockville, Aug. 5.—The royal train split up at Ottawa, the first section of nine cars, carrying the two Royal Princes arriving here at 9.45 o'clock this morning. They were met by Mayor Reynolds and J. Gill Gardner, President of the Brockville Country Club, and escorted to the clubhouse, situated at the westerly limits of the town, where they played golf, the clubhouse and grounds being restricted for the use of members only.

Premier Arrived At Noon

At 12.30 Premier and Mrs. Baldwin, Premier King and members of his Cabinet arrived in a three-car special train, and at 1 o'clock the entire party were guests of Mrs. G. T. Fulford at her palatial residence, King Street East.

An hour later they attended a reception at the C.P.R. wharf by the Mayor and members of the town Council, after which they left on Mrs. Fulford's steam yacht Magedoma, for a sail through the Thousand Islands to Kingston, stopping at Gananoque for ten minutes enroute.

The party arrived in United States waters, near the Nine-Mile Lightboose the Magedoma was met by L. Lagdon Hayden, Commodore of the Thousand Islands Yacht Club, with a convoy which will remain on either side of the royal yacht until it leaves to re-enter Canadian territory.

Royal Salute

This convoy escorted the Magedoma within the reef of islands fronting at Alexandria Bay, where hundreds of Americans were assembled. The convoy circled the Thousand Islands Yacht Club house, during which a salute of 21 guns was fired, while the British and American ensigns were dipped alternately.

Included in the private yacht of W. H. Coverdale, President of the Canada Steamship Lines, was the Magedoma, which left Magedoma from Brockville to Kingston. The Royal party will be waiting at Kingston to convey the Princes and party to Toronto, where a busy Saturday awaits.

Handshaken Limited

Toronto, Aug. 5.—Only a chosen few will be allowed to shake hands with the Prince of Wales at the civic reception to be tendered him in his visit to Toronto tomorrow, according to plans arranged by the police authorities. To save the people from a handshaking ordeal, a small stand will be erected for the prince's party, and another for members of the council, board of education and members of the Provincial Parliament.

He appeared before Magistrate Brunton and after reserving plea and election, was released on bail of five thousand dollars until August 26.

The charge was laid in connection with an accident near Newmarket on July 24, when Dr. Bond's car struck the rear of a parked automobile and killed Ross Lavin, aged 14 years, Toronto, who was standing at the rear of he car observing the tail light.

TODAY'S THOUGHT

"Before you begrudge another his success, take a look at the ladder he has climbed."

CRANKS AND SCIENCE

It is announced by the Christian Register that a movement is now being organized by Fundamentalist leaders to secure the enactment of laws in all the states of the American Union, prohibiting the teaching of evolution. The organization of the movement is said to be far advanced, arrangements having been completed for the introduction of anti-evolution bills in 22 state legislatures, including those of New York and Pennsylvania.

This movement is in reality an attempt to smother freedom of thought and enquiry. It is an attack upon science. True, evolution is as yet only an hypothesis — a way of accounting for the existence of the physical universe and organic life as we see it, and also for social and political institutions. But it is a doctrine which has become so closely interwoven with every branch of modern science that any attempt to teach that branch without reference to evolution would make it necessary to scrap most of what has been written on it within the last twenty-five or thirty years and have all the stand and text books rewritten. For it is a fact that almost all scientists now accept the evolutionary hypothesis—not necessarily Darwinism, but at least the general principle of evolution.

It is almost inconceivable that such a movement could make any headway in a country inhabited by people who can read. Probably the Fundamentalists are encouraged by the success which attended the effort to put prohibition into the U. S. constitution, a dozen years ago such a thing would have been thought impossible; but it was done. However, there is a vast difference between the suppression of a business and a habit by legislation and the suppression of thought and speech by the same means. The latter cannot be done, as the Fundamentalists will discover if they launch the predicted crusade. If they were to succeed, what would follow would probably be an organized attempt to suppress certain religious doctrines and practices which the crusaders might deem superstitious and corrupting. And why not. If it is permissible and proper to make the teaching of erroneous scientific doctrine illegal why not make use of the law to suppress erroneous religious doctrine and practice?

THE BUSY MAN

Modern business has engendered several axioms which rival the rarest bits of wisdom of the ancients. Among the most frequently quoted is, "If you want something done take it to the busy man." A companion epigram reads, "A good workman never wants for a job."

Axioms and epigrams that endure dont just happen. To go down through the generations they must express in a concise and vivid manner an obvious truth. The axioms of the busy man and the good workman fill this requirement.

There is a reason why one should patronize the busy man and workman who has a job. The busy man is busy because he has earned a reputation of giving service expeditiously and satisfactorily. The best recommendation a workman can desire is the fact that he is not out of work. Very often employers are forced through a labor shortage to accept workers who do not come from another job, but when allowed to choose between the employed and the unemployed they always pick the former.

The axiom of the busy man applies to the professional man, store, hotel, factory, office and every other branch and phase of business. The axiom of the good workman is applicable to all classes of labor. The world wants more busy men and good workmen.

COMMON SENSE

Ogilvie by no means stands alone in the problem of reckless motorists and of late Hon. J. L. Perron, Minister of Roads in Quebec, as shown in these columns, has been giving serious attention to the elimination of stupid and careless drivers. With the co-operation of the Royal Automobile Club he now announces that the following offences among others, shall render drivers liable to prosecution and cancellation of their licenses:

"(1) Failure to keep to the right over the top of a hill in cases where it is impossible to see traffic approaching in the opposite direction.

"(2) Driving with one headlight, or without taillight, or without any lights. The first mentioned is the most common.

"(3) Failure to keep to the right on a curve where it is impossible to see approaching traffic.

"(4) Stopping in the centre of the road to make repairs or for other purposes. Motorists should be warned to keep close to the right hand side, or off the road where possible, when they have to stop for repairs or for other purposes.

"(5) Attempting to pass the car in front travelling in the same direction, in the menace of traffic approaching in the opposite direction."

These are all very excellent provisions and might be enforced to advantage everywhere. No careful driver will violate any one of them, and circumstances justify the utmost severity with those who refuse to have regard to their own and other lives and property.

The Ontario Government will have the support of public opinion in general and of the vast majority of motorists in particular in whatever action it may take to make the highways safe for law-abiding persons.

DREAMS

By D. Maitland Bushby.)
("The Desert Poet.")

Dreams! Dreams! O God, why must we dream?
Why live in the land that might have been
And vision things that really seem
To be, yet are but echoes dead and thin?

Happy, I sit in an old armchair
Before the fireplace joyously bright
There's a smile on my lips as I sit there
In the flickering, shadowy light.

On my lap sits a little lad,
His chubby fingers in my hair;
He has the brown eyes of his dad,
But the face of his mother fair.

"Horsey," he cries in childish glee,
Teasingly he begs, then laughs awhile
When I settle him on my knee
And let him ride for a fairy mile.

The Sandman calls, my baby's eyes close.
Slowly he nestles in my waiting arms;
Lying quiet now in sweet repose—
Dearer to me are his boyish charms.

Lovingly I kiss his tiny eyes
And hold the dimpled, darling hands.
No more than this ask I of Paradise,
This lad fulfills all of my demands.

Dreams! Dreams! O God, why must we dream?
Why live in the land that might have been
And vision things that really seem
To be, yet are but echoes dead and thin?

OTHER MEN'S THOUGHTS

Mistakes are liable to happen in the best of families. A Seattle woman has been sentenced to a term in prison for shooting another man in mistake for her husband.—Vancouver Province.

If they keep on producing motor cars they will soon have one for every filling station.—Galt Reporter.

Girls in a United States college voted on the "ideal husband." The three qualities in the "ideal husband" most insisted on were that he must be handsome, intelligent and gentle. The girls are aged about 18. At 25 it is probable that they will drop the handsome, at 30 the intelligent. And after that gentleness will be present without even insisting on it.

AN ANNOYING CAT.

A kitten perched on the top of a front street business house caused a heap of consternation among the residents of the locality until a valiant young Sir Galahad removed the pesky critter from his lofty position this morning. How kitty happened to become marooned on the roof is a mystery to everyone, but he evidently got his pedals keenly and met the air with blood-curdling yells thus robbing peace-abiding citizens of more than one night's sleep The annoyance continued and plans were laid to rescue Mr. Cat, and a ladder was pressed into service. The creature, half-starved and weary, resented being touched by human hands and clawed his rescuer as he stooped to pick it up However a brilliant mind solved the problem and a blanket was stretched in the street and the young man who had ascertaken the hazardous task quickly snatched the pugnacious animal and tossed it into the spaces to be landed safely in the waiting blanket Today the cat is making its why about apparently much relieved at being back on terra firma again.

CARNIVAL CLOSES TOMORROW NIGHT

Veterans Look For Big Crowd At Beauty Show Tonight

Although some may not be aware of the fact the Canadian Legion of this city are sponsoring a Carnival at the Exhibition Grounds this week and so far the attendance has not been up to the expected mark. Ten years ago everybody was heart and soul behind those who went overseas but time has changed the attitude of the people of Canada and the many promised things have long since been forgotten. The Veterans Association, although many say not know it, are doing a worthy work every day, in the form of providing food and lodging for those who are down and out and helping those who suffered wounds such as to incapacitate them in their work.

The local branch of the Canadian Legion need money badly in order to continue to function and have a chance to aid in a material way by attending the Carnival which closes at the Fair Grounds tomorrow night.

The finals in the Beauty Show contest will take place tonight. The object of this contest is to select a "Miss Belleville" from among the boy of beautiful girls for which this city is noted. A beautiful silver cup will go to the winner and the public are especially invited to be on hand tonight for the final selection. The Legion is desirous of having as many as possible centered in the final judging and all the beautiful belles are invited to compete tonight. The Royal Light Infantry Band , under the direction of Lt. Reg Hinchey, will give a concert in the band stand The charges on all rides and other forms of amusement for the kiddies will be lowered to 5 cents tomorrow as an added attraction to the Carnival The Veterans are looking for a big crowd tonight for the Beauty Show

New York, Aug. 5.—The recovery in stock prices, which has been under way since Wednesday's sensational break on the Coolidge statement, gained added momentum today by the reduction in the Federal Reserve rediscount rates with its implied stimulus to business.

Speculative activity centred largely in the industrial shares, many of which were bid up 2 to nearly 10 points to record levels. Rails continued to lag behind the drop of $50,000,000 in June liquidity of class I carriers and the wage increase to eastern engineers having a temporarydepressing influence on speculation in that group.

Waves of realizing swept through the market at intervals, but they were fairly well-absorbed Houston oil broke more than 6 points and weakness also prevailed in Baldwin, Mack Truck Postume and a few others The selling of Manhattan Electric Supply, whose recent sensational advance has been a feature of many sessions, progressively was inspired by the exchange investigation of recent transactions in that issue.

Public Utilities gave one of the most impressive demonstrations of group strength, Brooklyn Union Gas standing out with an extreme gain of nine points. Peoples Gas, Consolidated Gas, Brooklyn Edison, Columbia Gas, Railway prior pfd, and American Express all reached new high ground American Telephone was in brisk demand during the afternoon.

Chicago, Aug. 5.—Influenced by black rust reports coupled with warm weather the northwest wheat prices registered a fairly higher early today. The spin however, failed to hold well, prices upchanged to 1-4 to 3-4 cent off, wheat fluctuated nervously with ing fractional limits. Corn, oats and provisions were firmer, corn opening unchanged at 3-4 cents up and later keeping near the initial figures.

Police Court

Benton, Ont., Aug. 5.—Provincial police officers at a late hour last night discovered hidden away in a dense swamp at the rear of the Edward Hickland farm, some thirty head of cattle, allegedly stolen from local farmers.

Officers who made the discovery, picked out seven head of cattle which had been stolen two days before the murderous attack on Alex Hodge on his farm here on the night of July 22. The seven cattle belong to Daniel O'Leary, of Adjala Township. Officers managed to get six of the animals out of the swamp.

Police are of the opinion that previous to the killing of Daniel Forsyth a wholesale cattle stealing and vending business was carried on in this district, by persons as yet unidentified.

RISKS LIFE TO SAVE THE FAMILY CANARY

Windsor, Aug. 5.—While firemen fought flames in the Brownfield Block on Ouellette Ave. on 97 Pitt Street West at noon today, L. A. Digaillard, 55 years old, ventured out on the fire escape and rescued the family canary. The incident was witnessed by several hundred persons who had been attracted by the smoke.

The rescue was apparently just in time, for as Mr. Drouillard carried the cage containing the canary into the street the bird was showing signs of distress from the smoke.

Mr. Drouillard returned to the upper part of the house. Its cause was undetermined.

PILING UP FOLLY UPON ONE TERRIBLE MISTAKE

By ELSIE MARLOWE

She was a lonely, inexperienced girl, caught in the misery of a hateful home. He was a suave and educated man, many years her senior, sophisticated in the sleek ways of the world, gentle, ingratiating.

He saw the young beauty that lay beneath her troubled shyness. He was kind to her—he first adult who had ever been kind to her. She thought she saw in him a God-sent man for her deliverance, and she handed her heart over to him, as an adoring child would hand over a toy.

He said they would be married!

Married! The drab sky splintered into rainbows and the long, sweet nights were filled with song. She was a little drunk those days with the joy of it all, and the dazzle of it blinded her foolish young eyes.

Married! Only, of course, they might have to wait a little while. His mother objected. She was anxious to have him marry another richer girl. Yes, they'd have to wait. But, in the meantime, they were "as good as mar-ried." Didn't she know that she was already his "little wife" in the sight of God?

The old, old pitiful story!

I wonder how long she believed it after she had given him all she had to give? One year, two years—three—and four. Did she believe it all that time? But at last she could no longer believe it, for with the end of the four th year he left her and went to the Outer Girl.

Then she grew desperate and beat her weak young hands against his cruelty and begged for mercy. But he only sneered! And with that sneer something went wild in her. She'd show him! She'd rouse some fire in this monstrous coldness. She'd make him suffer as he had made her suffer! And with that she screamed out lies — told him how she had cheated him.

Lies, every one of them, but she thought they'd make him repent and marry her. But he only sneered the worse and, believing it all turned away.

"And then, in time," she writes "came a man who loved me enough to risk marriage with me, even after I had confessed my past to him. In my marriage I should be happy, with two sweet babies, a wonderful home, a car all my own, and the best of husbands. But marrying without love the way I did leaves me desolate and I cannot find happiness anywhere. The lies I told my old sweetheart haunt me, for I have been a good wife and mother, and I can't bear the thought that he should be the only one that is learning me.

"It seems I must see him and I know where I can see him, but—there is no ways a sense of honor holding me back But now my nerves are so shattered by sleepless nights and days filled with thoughts of him, and the explanation that I think I must give of all this mess that I cannot go on any longer. Will you try to help me?"

Stop fooling yourself. You're trying yourself now more terribly than this man ever tricked you. It isn't just the thought of your lie that is troubling you. If it were only that, you could settle it all with a letter. He might not believe the letter but neither will he believe you if you go to him in fact your very going to him under these conditions will confirm his belief that you're unscrupulous.

But it isn't really his belief or disbelief that is troubling you. YOU WANT TO SEE HIM. The old wicked desire that wrecked your life in the first place is at work in you again, urging you to go back to this man whom you now know to be utterly worthless. There might have been some excuse for you as an ignorant girl, but there can be no possible excuse for you now if you leave your husband and babies.

And, make no mistake. You WILL leave them if you yield to this madness. You will wreck your happiness, and when it is too late you will realize that you have sacrificed your Paradise for the blackest hell to which a woman can go. And you'll drag your innocent babies and your fine husband there with you.

DON'T DO IT, girl. Turn back before it is too late. Put this man out of your mind What he thinks of you is of no earthly importance. Decide once for all that only your husband and your babies count, and you'll find that suddenly your whole life will be flooded with love and peace.

WHAT'S NEW

(From a Woman's Standpoint)

Beige receives outstanding endorsement by Paris authority for fall, and blue for the spring of 1928 and most of the new tones incline to a yellowish cast. It is noted, this decided as true for the straw while also for spring are the rose tones, principally in subdued versions with a slight bluish breed.

Some Helpful Hints For Busy Housewives

Delicate colors in wash materials will not fade if they are soaked in luke warm water to which a few drops of turpentine have been added before they are put into the suby water for laundering.

Soak pink wash materials in a solution of 1 tablespoon vinegar to a quart of water and hang by the selvedge in a shady place to dry before cutting out the dress. Then your materials will neither fade nor shrink.

Blue materials will hold their color best if soaked in a salt solution. 1 tablespoon to all salt to 1 quart of water.

The best part of drinking Iced Tea in the summer time is that it is distinctly beneficial. The vitamine Soluble B (the same as in spinach) which tea contains, has positive food value. As well as that, no other summer drink s so refreshing. The flavour is most delicious if good tea like "SALADA" is used.

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

Please tell me how I can forget a friend of mine who is married. I love him, but I want to forget.

KAY.

KAY: There's only one thing I can tell you, my dear, and that is this: Exercise your will-power and determination in putting this man out of your heart and mind. Time is a great healer, and while it may take some time for the forgetting process to become effective, I am sure that you will eventually find your happiness.

I am a young girl in my teens, and am deeply in love with a young man two years my senior. He wrote me a letter and I answered it. He has told me that he loves me, but I can hardly believe it. And now when I see him he hardly ever speaks. What shall I do?

HEART-BROKEN.

HEART-BROKEN: I think the best thing you could do would be to forget him, my dear. If he truly meant that he loved you, he would never in the world act so rudely. So just try to forget him and find your happiness among your many other friends.

To remove machine grease from fabric, rub, add a little and soap and wash in cold water and apply it to the fabric. Ammonia in which salt has been dissolved will also remove grease stains.

A tablespoon of vinegar in the store polish or shoe polish will produce a better luster and gloss.

SINCLAIR'S

CURSE OF LOVE

By Mildred Barbour

"I promise," said Kendall, suppressing a smile.

CHAPTER 17.

AN INTRUDER IN PARADISE.

Carson and Philip Kendall ran the shining new car into the garage and remarked down the narrow, rapid path to the house, arriving on the beach in the sun.

"A peach of a place for a honeymoon!" remarked Carson appreciatively. "But it looks to me as if you had many neighbors." His gaze ran the length of the beach, where other bungalows were tucked in sheltered angles of the bluff.

"We're quite alone," explained Kendall, "all the other bodies are closed. This isn't the season!"

"The season!" repeated Carson and laughed. "What a lot I've heard about the world and its ways, after ten days in Canada!"

Norma, cool and refreshed after her plunge, prettily dressed, showing no trace of her recent exhaustion, was waiting for them on the screened veranda.

"Ah, Fee is missing cocktails—hard work on the sure beach," the announced, when the presentations had been made and Carson had been prettily welcomed.

"You knew what you were about, old man," murmured Carson, when he and Phil had gone up-stairs. "If I'd been out, I'd have run off with her the first day I met her."

His friend licked at his cigarette.

"You see why I wanted to be square with her? She's too sweet to be the victim of a shameful deception. If she doesn't know the truth and can't believe somehow that she does, it would kill her pride to find out."

The luncheon more than came up to expectations. Served by Ah Pick on a pergola, it was of an excellence." Carson, accustomed to the slipshod cooking of the Mexican oil camps, could scarcely credit."

They had their coffee on the screened veranda. Carson, lounging in a cretonne-covered chair, stared frankly and admiringly at Norma, as she performed the pretty office of filling cigarette guns, adding cream and sugar, and handing them about.

"You may smoke," she offered, but when Carson offered her a cigarette, she shook her head smilingly. "I'm frightfully old-fashioned. I've never learned how."

Carson, having met her father, having dined at the ridiculous pink Venetian palace, having shrewdly appraised both, could scarcely believe that she belonged to such a background. She was so sweet and fresh and simple and unaffected. Her clear skin needed no artifice; her blue eyes were candid and serene. Her voice was soft, and she spoke with a shy hesitancy that was extremely pleasing to the ear.

Through the long afternoon, while they lounged on the beach, and later, when the sun was lower, went for a swim, he found himself contrasting her voice with another that was still fresh in his ears. He wanted, more than he cared to admit to himself, to hear again the imperious, crisp tones of the girl whom he had met and married, all in one short, mad night in May.

As he watched the young couple in their happiness, he caught himself wondering, half-wistfully, what it would be like to be married—really married—to the girl whose veiled image was still to vivid in his memory. He had never wanted to be married. He had always held his freedom; he liked the chance of adventure that each new dawn heard in, without any ties or obligations to bind him. Suddenly everything seemed different. The tang of adventure was not in being the lure of the fair he must had lessened.

Was it the shirt of his friend and his bride, on happy opportunity? Or was it the strange fact of his own marriage — if that marriage ceremony in the dawn of a May morning could be termed such? He had no answer to his questions and so, in his own fashion, he shrugged them away.

Norma tactfully left the two men alone soon after dinner, pleading letters to write, and they talked far into the morning. They had ten years of reminiscences to recount on each side.

Next morning, when they were alone Kendall asked Norma:

"What do you think of King? Isn't he a prince?"

"He's splendid!" she declared sincerely, but her heart was heavy.

King Carson was too splendid, she thought He and Philip belonged to the same class. Life on the frontier of civilization had rendered Carson breezy while Philip had become more quiet, more reserved. But, fundamentally, they were alike; each was the scion of an excellent family, each the product of an exclusive university.

Norma felt outclassed, awkward, shy she wondered what Philip could possibly see in her. She envied the two men their social ease, their complete lack of self-consciousness. She was miserable with her imaginings.

She neglected, when Philip said to her that evening:

"Norma, darling, would you mind terribly, if we went back to town at the end of the week? I hate the thought of leaving her, but I've a very important lot of business to attend to."

But she cried herself to sleep

CHAPTER 18.

AN "AD" FOR THE OPAL.

"Well, my girl, how goes it?"

The honeymooners were back in town and Norma was alone with her father for the first time since her marriage. Old J. P. had insisted that she and Phil stay with him in the hideous Venetian palace, until he could build a house for them on a wedding gift. Norma hoped that Philip's good taste would be strong enough to overrule his the architectural whims of her father.

"Just splendid, Dad." She answered the paternal question, as she kissed her self with a bit of rowing. "I'm very happy."

"He treats you all right?"

"Oh, yes, Dad, he's—he's quite wonderful."

"I thought he would be!" J. P. shifted the inevitable cigar in the corner of his mouth. "He's a fine young fellow. So's the other one that Carson. He's more my kind. I can slap him on the back. I guess I wouldn't have got on to my fine manners," he chuckled.

"Oh, Dad, you mustn't misjudge Phil. He's sensitive, but he's not at all" up stage."

She flushed at her inability to express herself more elegantly. It seemed to her that she was always being reminded of her own inadequacy, measured by the standards of her young husband.

"Hum! I guess he'd better not be" buttered Collins, thinking of the barrier between him and his son-in-law. As yet, he knew nothing of the significance of King Carson's arrival. He felt that he had—would always have—the advantage over Phil. It pleased his sense of power and assured him of the happiness of the daughter he was clasped.

FAMOUS LEADER OF IRISH DEAD

John Dillon Fought For Home Rule For Over Thirty Years

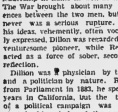

London, Aug. 5.—John Dillon, famous Irish leader, died late today at a London nursing home following a severe abdominal operation.

John Dillon, who succeeded John Redmond as chairman of the Irish National party in 1918, was for more than 30 years one of the outstanding figures in the fight for Irish Home Rule. Almost from the day he entered Parliament from Tipperary in 1800, at the age of 29 years he was conspicuous in Irish politics, beginning his career as a supporter of Charles Stewart Parnell, coadjutor with Gladstone in starting the fight for Home Rule.

Long an understudy of Redmond, there were many who maintained that Dillon dictated the politics of his chief and shaped the Nationalist party's course for years before taking over the leadership in name as well as in fact. The War brought about many differences between the two men, but there never was a serious rupture. If all his ideas, vehemently, often vociferously expressed, Dillon was regarded as the venturesome pioneer, while Redmond acted as a force of sober, second-day reflection.

Dillon was a physician by training and a politician by nature. Retiring from Parliament in 1883, he spent two years in California, but the thought of a political campaign was uppermost in his mind and the year 1885 found him back in Ireland, running for office. He was defeated as member from North Tyrone, whereupon he entered the race to represent East Mayo and went in by a substantial majority.

Early in the second year of the World War he bitterly opposed the British Government's plan to raise an additional 1,000,970 troops. Failing to carry this provramme, he launched an attack against conscription, but finally

This woman, Mrs. F. Coombs, 45 Janette Ave., Windsor, Ont., says: "I suffered from gas and sour stomach after meals for years. suffered to abide by the wishes of Rest mond and withdrew his opposition to the Military Service Bill.

In 1916 he denounced the Government's methods of dealing with the Irish revolt and condemned the practice of executing Irish revolutionaries. He was the author of several motions in the House of Commons urging the Government to disclose its plans for the administration of Ireland, declaring that a decision in Dublin Castle on the Home Rule question would be welcomed by the Irish at the Empire.

In 1917 he attacked the Sinn Feiners, declaring that had alienated sympathy in the United States for the Irish cause. In another speech a year later he defended the Imperial aid which the Sinn Fein party was receiving from New York.

Previously, Dillon was of great weight, which was accentuated by his bonhomous, His knee, this face was covered by a full beard. His dismissal was described as melancholic when he entered Parliament and his friends saw it never changed.

Mr. Dillon was born in 1851. He attended the Catholic University of Dublin, and became a member of the Royal

ALIMONY CLUB HOLDS MEETING

Rebellious Husbands Of Illinois Organize To Fight Gold-Diggers

Chicago, Ills., Aug. 5.—Millions for defense but not one cent for gold diggers.

Thus paraphrasing Patrick Henry, the Alimony Club of Illinois, held its meeting to adopt a constitution and by laws last night, and found work enough to keep members busy if not happy for months.

Sixty rebellious men who are paying alimony and down it an opposition, attended and dug into their pockets, already depleted by much alimony paying, to erect a fund to hire lawyers who will fight "gold diggers" in the courts.

The man who will be the first aided by this fund, are a former Lutheran minister, who appealed for aid, saying his ex-wife was getting alimony larger than he could afford, and a Northwestern University student who said luck of money was threatening to halt his education because his entire resources went into paying alimony to an ex-wife who had since re-married.

The club disclosed one intention to eliminate alimony in cases of obvious merit and was struck for assistance and support of wayne children. The members, however, pledged united action for legislation to prevent "gold diggers," unscrupulous attorneys, trumped up divorce charges and individuals from evolved judges profiteering on their victims.

The clubs also declared its objects included prevented of fraud, perjury, collusion and extortion, prevention of prompt hearing for domestic litigation thoroughness of needlessly scandalous and salacious testimony, settlement of reconciliation, and furtherance of social justice in all matters that affect family life.

Louis Wiskowski, vice-president of the club, who is also vice-president of the Chicken Armor Corporation which manufactures bulletproof armored vests, submitted a resolution to admit a publication as the official organ of the club. It was passed

A letter of congratulation was read from John J. Gardner, founder of the New York City Alimony Club, now in Kings County Jail, and it was voted to send him sympathy.

Remains in Pickering

The Prince of Wales and his party journied from Brockville to Kingston by private yacht where he attended the yacht races today and filled a couple of social engagements. At Brockville he enjoyed a round of golf with friends and was officially received by the Mayor and other dignitaries. The Prince will officially open Toronto's new Union Station tomorrow morning.

By remaining at Pickering over night he feels that he will ensure himself of a good sleep and escape the troublesome newspapermen and curious ones who always trail him for a souvenir or the privilege of asking his hand.

There is little chance that Belleville's youth get a glimpse of the smiling "Eddie", should the train stop as by the time the train reaches Belleville, tired from the cares that infest it is anything probable he will have retired the train and run it into Kingston his daily life.

STRICT CENSORS GIVE POSTERS WEIRD EFFECTS

Montreal, Aug. 4.—Censorship of theatre posters in Montreal is conducted in a direct and primitive manner which results in startling displays at the entrance of the cheaper moving picture houses. If one object in a pictorial paper arouses the censorship regulations, the entire sheet need not necessarily be discarded. The offending portion may be painted out, and the picture, thus mutilated, exposed to the unashaking eyes of the populace.

Thus a person strolling along St. Lawrence Boulevard may be confronted with a dramatic portrayal of a high ly infuriated villain pointing a dash of green paint at an obviously horrified Lady. Any amateur Sherlock can deduce that the gentleman is supposed to be painting a revolver. Revolvers are not allowed in the proximity of ladies in Montreal, so in order to pacify the censors, the manager of the theatre has painted out the weapon.

Frequently the costumes of the "movie" heroines, as portrayed in the posters shock the sensibilities of the guardians of public morals. When this occurs the hardworked paintpot is again called into service and gowns are suitably lengthened and heightened —with little regard to color harmonization or the edicts of feminine fashion.

A display sheet in front of one of the picture palaces on the Main' which recently puzzled many passersby depicted a gay party in a cabaret. Several of the dresses had been amplified with more prodigality than artistry but the figure which provoked greatest astonishment was a young buck in evening attire who extended a hundred arm into a large splotch of red, the while he leaned confidentially forward as if to whisper light nothings into a phantom ear.

It developed upon inquiry that in his private glory the display included a lady whose costume was too deculle to yield easily to artistic adaptation. So with one bold stroke of the brush the theatre manager extinguished her entirely—and incidently amputating the hand of her gentleman friend which had been resting on her too-exposed shoulder.

Dice and women may not be associated—that is the Montreal theatre posters. One frequently comes upon a display sheet upon which three or Stage folk from this side of the water are making a big hit overseas just now. The beautiful Fay Marce of four very "sporty" looking males are bent intently over a blank table top, while a disappointing matron looks on from the background. One man has his right hand suggestively suspended in the air. But no dice are to be seen —or dear, no!—The purifying paint brush has done its work.

A few years ago a church society became incensed over a particular bill ster and declared war, pertinent the fronts of theatres. The local city to ban all display pictures from Theatre Managers' Association agreed to arms and succeeded in the citing the dire plot in its infancy.

Walking down St. Lawrence Boulevard, which is Montreal's "Bowery" one may still be edified by several stirring products of the poster designers' art, but one must be prepared for strange multitudes. Gods, girls and gambling as pictured by the theatre entrance s conform to the literal word of the personal edict.

BOBBED HAIR IS HERE TO STAY

Windsor, Ont., Aug. 4.—Canadian Press:—"Bobbed hair and short skirts are here to stay. No matter what fads Grundies may say, the women will never go back to the long dresses trailing in the dust, and the girls do not want to have the tangle of long tresses. The comforts of the bobbed hair and short skirts are too great to be given up."

So says the Border City Star, apropos of a bobbed hair war which is raging in Mexico City. There, girls at the normal school who have had their hair cut short are denounced from the rostrum and in fine lines. They are going about with scissors and forcibly bobbing those who will not submit voluntarily. The Mexican girls are afraid that the intervorable law of custom will force them to grow their hair again.

ESSEX RING TO BE PLACED IN WESTMINSTER

London, Aug. 3.—The historic Essex ring, emblem of Queen Elizabeth's first love, has changed ownership for the last time and is to be placed on her tomb in Westminster Abbey.

The ring recently was sold at public auction at Christie's, and brought only £600. Its purchaser, Ernest Makarov, has since presented it to the nation so that it may remain forever in England.

Queen Elizabeth gave the ring to the Earl of Essex, who shared her heart with the Earl of Leicester, as a pledge that whatever he might be accused of, he would either pardon him or submit him to her presence to justify his conduct.

Late in Elizabeth's life Essex rose in a rebellion. The revolt was a fiasco; Essex was taken and condemned. After his condemnation he gave the ring to the Countess of Nottingham to deliver to Elizabeth.

The ring, however, did not reach the Queen, and she, decidine that Essex was obdurate, permitted the execution. After the death of the Earl, the Countess of Nottingham confessed to Elizabeth that Essex had given her the ring to deliver to the Queen, but that she had not carried out her request.

Despair then rolled the heart of the Queen, who refused all medical aid. She died within twenty days of the Countess's confession.

The ring is of gold and bears the Queen's portrait, showing her headdress and the familiar ruff. It was the work of an Italian who settled in England in the Sixteenth Century.

After the death of Essex the ring descended to Lady Essex Devereux, his daughter, in an unbroken succession from mother to daughter, until it came to Louise, daughter of John, Earl

CARROL HUMBLES MIGHTY YANKS

Ruether Pitches Poorly And Detroit Wins— Gehrig's Hitting

New York, Aug. 5.—A few years make a lot of difference in the life of a baseball player. Take the case of Ownie Carroll, who pitched Detroit to a 6-3 victory over the Yanks at the Stadium yesterday. A few years ago Ownie was mowing them down as fast as they cropped up in the collegiate ranks. As a pitcher for Holy Cross he was the wonder of the undergraduate world. He stepped from his studies into the major league class, and found it quite a hop, skip and jump. In other words he couldn't make the grade.

Then he partially disappeared from view. He was learning the difference between college pitching and big league pitching via the minors. He must have learned his lessons well. Certainly he handled Miller Huggins' ball mates in a manner to which they aren't accustomed.

The Yanks hit were few five and, for between. They had the benefit of only one pass, and the little business of scoring runs was practically a forgotten art. They saved themselves from a shut-out, but there wasn't anything overpowering in their method. One run was batted in on a double play and the other was the result of Carroll's only bit of generosity.

To make matters even worse Dutch Ruether had an off-day while Carhell was batting the day considerably en. The Tigers tapped Mr. Ruether for a dozen hits and bunched them like clusters of wild flowers on a balmy spring day. They started off with three hits in the first that put them ahead and they wound up with three more in the ninth which knocked Ruether out of the box. What they did in between is nobody's business.

This all developed into only the third defeat Ruether has suffered this season, yet he would have had to be at his best or thereabouts to have outpitched Carroll. Just another case of youth being served perhaps. Even the great American home run handicap

BROKE RECORDS IN DETROIT SWIMMING

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 5.—Records fell as swimmers from the east and middle west splashed in the Detroit Boat Club's first outdoor meet to be held under electric lights last night.

Johnny Weismuller, of Instnola A. C., accomplished his aim of several years, crashing the world's record for 220 yard free style long course, covering the distance in 2.01 1-5, lowering the record of 2.13 2-5 held for thirteen years by Duke Kahanamoki, of Honolulu.

George Kojac, of New York, who has beaten Weismuller in back stroke swimming, knocked 22 seconds from the national junior record in the 300 yard medley. His time was 4.34.

LITTLE GIRL SLEPT ON RAILROAD TRACK

Nipawin, Sask., Aug. 5 (C.P.)—"It was a nice warm place to sleep." This was the explanation of the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Gordon, who had a miraculous escape from death when a section foreman's "jigger" passed over her body as she slept on the planks between the rails of a crossing, near here. The men on the "jigger" noticed the girl on the track, but too late to stop. She was uninjured.

came to a complete stop before the upraised arm of Mr. Carroll.

Junior Gehrig came close. In the sixth inning he smashed a drive to his favorite section of the right field circus seats, but it didn't quite carry the wire screen that protects the bleachertes, who, no doubt would rather have souvenir baseballs than protection. The ball bounced against the wire and bounced right back again on the field. The best the laddie that's known as Lou could get out of it was a double. Still he had a single in one of his other three times at bat so it wasn't a completely wasted day as far as he was concerned.

It was for the Babe though. He walked once, but in his other three efforts to catch up with the Buster in the race for the home run crown he failed to hit the ball out of the infield. One drive who hit right on the nose, but also right into Neun's waiting glove There wasn't much satisfaction in that if any

The Intelligencer softball team has been challenged to a game of the pastime by the Bankers, and a game will be played on Hendley evening next on the Queen Mary School Grounds. ROOT'S PITCHING WINS FOR CUBS

Heathcote Triples In 8th Pirates Take Two From Phillies

New York, Aug. 5.—Heathcote's triple in the eighth innings, after Adams and English had walked, kept Chicago in first place yesterday, the Cubs routing out Boston at Chicago 5 to 4 and giving Charley Root his 15th victory of the season. It was the fifth consecutive victory for the Cubs. Chicago hit Genewich opportunely, tieing his statement in the fourth inning.

The Pirates drew half a game closer to the league-leading Chicago Cubs by taking two games from Philadelphia at Pittsburgh 8 to 5 and 7 to 2. The first was lost by one full game. Ray Kremer hurled the Pirates to victory in the second game and aided his own cause with two singles and a home run. The opener was a hard-hitting contest which the Pirates snatched out of the fire with a four-run rally in the seventh inning.

The Giants observed the return of John McGraw from a scouting expedition by whipping the Reds at Cincinnati, 4 to 1. Larry Benton went the distance in the box for New York and allowed but six safeties. Pete Donohue made his first start in a month for Cincinnati but gave way to Lynch-hitter in the eighth.

Timely hitting helped Brooklyn down the world champion Cardinals at St. Louis by 4 to 2. Clark started in the box for the Robins and was relieved in the seventh when a Red Sox rally threatened. Bob McGraw, formerly on the Brooklyn staff, was wounded for ten hits by his ex-team mates.

CITY LEAGUE IS ALMOST FINISHED

Beavers And Tigers Clash On Armouries Lawn Tonight

The Prentenears won the right to meet the Deacon shirt team in the finals for the City League championship by dint of one of the Optical company's team in a smart game on the armouries lawn last evening by a score of 6-3. It was one of the best games to date in the city loop and both teams were in the thick of the fight until the last player was out. There was no scoring to the third inning but the Prentenears managed to forge ahead by dint of hard work.

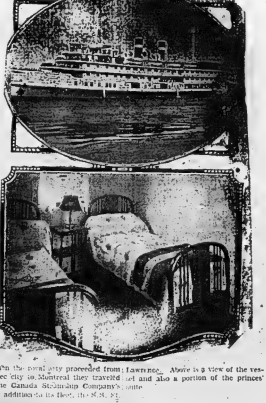

Miss Saylor and Miss Douglas were in the points for the winners and Miss Poe did the flinging for the Optical, while Miss Smith did the catching. Lena O'Neill and Miss Thompson batted home runs and helped in the scoring. Alan Meagher umpired behind the plate and Twig Woodley officiated on the bases.

Tonight the Beavers will meet the Tigers in a benefit game for the Tigers who hope to realize enough to purchase uniforms. Thelma Gordon, pitcher with the Toronto Nationals, who is in the city will be on the hillock for the Tigers and Evelyn Whalen will do the catching.

PRAIRIE EAGLE ALARMS VALLEY

Goodwater, Sask., Aug. 5 (C.P.)—A huge prairie eagle threw the residents of the Souris Valley into a mild state of alarm recently by attacking a woman and a child.

The cap of Alan Bown, eight-year-old son of a Canadian National Railroads surveyor, who accompanied his father on the survey party, was neatly plucked from the boy's head by the eagle. The bird was noticed by the party flying very high but with the speed of a falling stone it swooped down, grabbed the boy's cap and as swiftly flew into the air till it was a small speck against the blue sky.

The boy suffered from nothing more than a bad fright, a scratch on his head, and the temporary loss of his cap which was found in the bush a few

SYMPATHIZERS WITH CONDEMNED COMMUNISTS BOMB N.Y. SUBWAYS

Fourteen Thousand Police Called Out To Guard Public Buildings

SCORES INJURED

Two Stations Completely Wrecked And Other Property Damaged

New York, Aug. 6.—The entire New York police department consisting of approximately fourteen thousand men was mobilized at full strength today by police commissioner Warren and a guard thrown around all public buildings, subway and elevated stations. This action was taken following a double explosion in the subways shortly before midnight which injured a score of persons, wrecked two stations and shattered store fronts over a wide area.

The specific places in addition to railroad terminals and public utilities ordered guarded by the Commissioner were the city hall, court houses, municipal buildings, stock exchange, banks, the public library and the Metropolitan museum.

The bomb outrages were attributed by traction official to sympathizers of Sacco and Vanzetti, communists under sentence of death. At least a score of persons were injured, two of them seriously, hundreds of trains outside the immediate area of danger were thrown into confusion in the darkened, flame-filled tunnels, and window fronts for blocks in the street above were shattered by the explosions. The first explosion demolished the north bound station of the Brooklyn Manhattan transit company at 28th Street and Broadway and the second, ten minutes later, demolished the north bound station of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company at 28th Street and Fourth Ave. While the police declined to assign a motive for the bombings, they believed the bombs had been placed to go off while trains were in the stations, and had exploded prematurely.

The Interborough Superintendent said he was confident the explosions were set off in sympathy for Sacco and Vanzetti. Clothing lingerie and a varied assortment of merchandise was strewn about the streets by the force of the explosions. Windows in buildings on both sides of Broadway were wrecked for two blocks and a score in the Hotel Breslin were frightened by the building rocking. Five tons of debris were strewn about the station and tracks. They uncovered small pieces of metal. It was the greatest wreckage since the wall street explosion of 1920 when 33 were killed.

MORE ARRESTS MADE FOR CATTLE STEALING

Barrie, Ont., Aug. 6.—Another unexpected development in the investigation by Provincial Police into the series of thefts which culminated in the slaying of Daniel Forsythe by Alexander Hodge at the latter's farm home, occurred late yesterday when the police arrested Joseph McDermott, cattle dealer, and Elwood Noville, friend of McDermott.

These arrests followed a long conference between the police and Edward Hickland, under arrest. Noville is charged with received stolen goods while McDermott, who had been out on bail for perjury, was re-arrested on charges of stealing cattle.

RASPBERRIES GO TO 30 CTS. A BOX

An aeroplane ascension in the price of raspberries featured today's market; they selling at thirty cents a box, but later dropping a little in price. Blueberries were going at twenty-five cents the box while cucumber, cauliflower, sap ash and celery sold for 10 cents. Chickens ran as high as $1.25 each. Eggs sold for thirty five cents a dozen, plums for twenty-five cents a box, apples 20 cents a half peck, potatoes forty cents a peck, while many beautiful flowers were seen at several stalls.

Petition Prepared For New Trial For Condemned Men

Boston, Mass., Aug. 6.—Last day of the week before which Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti must die saw their counsel perfecting plans for an appeal for a new trial based on what was described as newly discovered evidence. Action will be taken some time today at Dedham, Mass., where six years ago the new world-known radicals were found guilty of the double murder for which they are to go to the electric chair next Thursday.

Arthur D. Hill, now chief defense counsel remained in strict seclusion working on the petition he hopes to file today, refusing to discuss its nature or where the papers would be submitted. The two prisoners had not given up hope. Sacco started his twenty-first day of hunger striking while Vanzetti who has eaten irregularly for three weeks has not touched anything since Wednesday.

SMART YOUNG LADY OF 84 VISITS SCENES OF YOUTH

A smiling young lady of 84 is Mrs. Margaret Lennox, who is visiting her nephew, Mr. Addison Thompson, of 200 Station street. Mrs. Lennox makes her home now at Port Pierce, Florida, but she was born and brought up in Thomasburg and loves to come back home. She travels alone and finds little of concern half a continent to the south of Belleville and old places. Her health is perfect and all her faculties are in excellent condition. After her long train journey, she enjoyed a lunch and insisted on helping Mrs. Thompson clean up the dishes.

Mrs. Lennox has two sons, George living at Ottawa, and William in Cleveland. Her two daughters are married and their homes are in Port Worth, Texas and Western Springs, Ill., so she has quite a lot of travelling to do to see all of her family. She is looking forward to a big time visiting the scenes of her girlhood this Summer. It is more years since she was here before.

First Ticket Out Is Issued To The Prince Of Wales Good For All Time

The first locomotive to haul a train into the new Union Station at Toronto, on the occasion of the opening of this station by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales on Saturday was one of the 6100 Northern Type locomotives, recently placed in service by the Canadian National Railways for handling their fast passenger and manifest freight trains. These locomotives, which are the largest in the British Empire, and of which 40 have been ordered for use on Canadian lines, are distinctly a product of Canadian type Eleven All Stations" on the Canadian National System. Immediately after declaring the new station open, the Prince of Wales proceeded to the Canadian National Railways ticket windows where he was issued "Ticket No. 1" of the issue of the new station. Tickets number two, three and four were issued to Prince George, Premier Baldwin and Mrs. Baldwin respectively.

TORONTO GREETS WARMLY HEIR TO BRITISH THRONE

Packed Streets, Sirens And Wild Cheering For Royal Visitors

Under the shadow of the centopath and facing thousands who filled the streets leading to the city hall, the two princes and the Prime Minister of Great Britain were welcomed to Toronto.

The Prince started "Mr. Mayor, it is when Toronto's big ben above him began to boom out eleven o'clock. It's deep notes made speaking impossible. The crowd insisted. H. R. H. grinned, made a little gesture of helplessness and stood waiting for the tolling to cease while the vast throng cheered him. To-day's reception was perhaps the most public of the present tour. Every one who wanted to, could catch a glimpse of the party and many thousands heard all that was said at the reception through the amplifiers on the city hall. It was a brisk friendly reception with warmth and yet without display. Premier Baldwin delighted the crowd by his reference to the increased circumference of Toronto and his own increased circumference since his visit of forty years ago.

"I realize that I am in a new world of cattle when I find that I am 83 years three times to-day" said Premier Baldwin. The mayor had said that he, the Premier, was enjoying a "brief relaxation in Canada", "If that be a brief relaxation, I would like to see you at work in this country."

Hopes to Come Back

The two Princes and Premier Baldwin with their parties occupied a stand royally decorated, on the city hall steps while soldiers and navies paraded in larger stand nearby. The Prince of Wales expressed his great pleasure in being with his brother on Prince George's first visit to Toronto, in reply to the mayor's address and voiced his regret at being unable to be present for the opening of the Canadian National Exhibition three weeks hence. He assured the mayor that if time permitted he would revisit Toronto on his Eastward journey.

CAR BUMPS INTO MOTOR CYCLE

At 5.30 yesterday afternoon William McCreary, rotter of Dr. J. S. McCreary while riding his motor cycle west on Bridge Street was struck by a car driven by R. Bunchard, of Toronto, and slightly injured.

Mr. McCreary was in a "pocket" as car driven by W. Lennox was directly in front of him, and when he jammed on his rakes McCreary shot into the car, and Bunchard coming up behind McCreary hit the motor cyclist, injuring his knee cap and bruising his leg. McCreary was taken to his home to have his injuries dressed.

The three occupants of the Bunchard car, which is owned by Y. Pearsall, of Toronto, were taken to the police headquarters for examination and were released upon their promise to appear on Monday.

COST OF BEING DEAD IS NOW HIGHER; NEW RATES GIVEN

The directors of the Belleville Cemetery announce that it has been found that the charge made until this time for the care o the Cemetery lots including of trees, fences, etc., has been insufficient for that purpose, owing to lower rates of interest obtainable from the investment of the Perpetual Care Fund, as well as the largely increased cost for labor and materials, etc. required for the proper upkeep of the property of the owners of the lots and of the Cemetery premises. The new rates which are slightly higher for all services may be seen at the Cemetery Office, 228 Church Street, Belleville.

About Five Hundred Citizens Watched Her Go Through At 11.45

PRINCE RETIRED

No Glimpse Of Distinguished Visitors Vouchsafed To Belleville

Belleville folk to the number of five hundred were on hand at the North Station last evening to get a glimpse of the Royal Train as it halted here for five minutes on its Kingston-Toronto journey. As the piercing headlight of the giant locomotive 6100 the largest engine in the Empire, announced the approach of the royal visitors' train the expectant people surged down the platform retaining a slight ray of hope that His Royal Highness had not yet retired and that he might favor them by coming to the rear platform. But they were doomed to disappointment as officials on the train informed them that the Prince had slipped away in his sleeping compartment shortly after the train pulled out of Kingston.

Evidently none of the members of the royal party are superstitious as an examination revealed that there were thirteen coaches in the train owned by the C.P.R. all specially designed for the use of the royalty. The engine, manned by Norman Kerr, Wilfred Muir and Robert Millne, all of Belleville, was a sight in itself, dazzling with brilliancy and polish.

McMillan Stopped Train

The train was scheduled to go right on through without any stops and Belleville citizens would have been denied the privilege of examining it if only from the exterior. Speaking with Mr. J. D. McMillan who was on the train last evening, The Intelligencer learned that word was flashed ahead that a few hundred were waiting and as a result orders were given by Mr. McMillan to make a short stay. The genial Superintendent of this division was not at all nervous but anxious that no untoward event should mar the trip in his territory. A squad of Canadian National detectives formed a line and people were told to remain on the platform of the station. Mr. McMillan stated that the Prince was one of the most amiable chaps he had ever met, a typical British youth. "In the finest sense a prince of good fellows he might be termed," said Mr. McMillan. The special car "Mount Stephen" which was hooked on the extreme rear of the train and in which trains were drawn closely there was little chance to get a glimpse of the Prince as he passed. As soon as the engine was brought to a stop half a dozen car inspectors went over the train quickly for possible defects.

Guide Engine Ahead

A guide engine ahead through the city an hour ahead of the Royal Special as is the custom in such affair the way and make sure that all of the switches are closed. A railwayman told The Intelligencer that two men were stationed at each switch along the line. The guide engine was brought thus far by Engineer George Adams and Fireman Arthur Jackson of Belleville. Engineer Hugh Singer and Fireman A. Jordan boarded her here and had charge from this city to Toronto.

A corps of Scotland Yard men as well as the Canadian National detectives were stationed at each car on the train and hopped off as soon as it was brought to a stop. R. H. Fish, General Superintendent, J. D. McMillan, Division Superintendent, Belleville and Don McQuaig, Superintendent Moliye Power, Toronto, were the chief railway officials accompanying the royal train.

The two Princes, Right. Hon. Stanley Baldwin and Mrs. Baldwin went to the observation car where they remained overnight, continuing on to Toronto this morning.

PROTEST ACTION OF U.S. CUTTER

Canadians From Belleville Claim They Did Not Cross The Line

(Special to the Intelligencer.)

Lewiston, N.Y., Aug. 6.—Claiming that their launch and cargo of Canadian Ale and liquor were seized by the U.S. Coast Guard in Canadian waters, Ernest Wagren and Fred Spring, Canadians, arrested July 26 near the Main Ducks, presented evidence from lighthouse keepers and others in support of their claim, in a hearing before U. S. Commissioner Charles N. Bulger here Friday afternoon. A motion to discharge the defendants from custody was made by their Attorney Thomas L. McKay, of Owsego at the close of the hearing. Commissioner Bulger declared action until Tuesday next.

The motion was opened by Attorney Floyd Spangle, of Fulton, representing U. S. district attorneys office. The testimony of ten Canadians including keepers Wesley Thomas, of the Main Ducks, and James Hutchinson at the Pigeon Island, substantiated the claims of the defendants that they were seized in Canadian waters. Keeper Thomas testified he saw the seizure and that it took place northwest of the Main Ducks.

Warren and Spring swore that on the night of the seizure they were enroute from Belleville to the Main Ducks all in Canadian territory. They positively tested the capture by the coast guard but made no resistance, they said, owing to the formidable armament of the American craft. Chief Boatswain's mate Richard Hestine, commanding the C. G. Rum Chaser and members of his crew claimed that the launch was two to three miles within the American boundary when it was halted and captured. The boat was a fast inboard launch, and the officials claim the cargo consisted of 50 bags of Canadian Ale and 75 bags of Canadian Ale. One witness testified that he knew conditions as well as boundary line that he could tell by sticking his finger in the water whether he was in west or dry territory.

TODAY'S THOUGHT

This restless world
Is full of chances, which by habit's power
To learn to bear is easier than to shun
J. ARMSTRONG.

NEW WEALTH

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics gives the best of news in reporting that the crop situation is favorable in every province. In territory, Canada is a vast land and to have the crops good in every part is something to be devoutly thankful for. It means comfort and prosperity for the farmer and benefit for all other industries. Harvest time is at hand, and the wealth of grain and other products of the soil will soon be pouring to the home and foreign markets.

OPTIMISTS BOTH

A few hours before his departure from London for Canada, Mr. Stanley Baldwin told an agricultural audience that he was looking forward to his visit to Winnipeg, because the people there were optimistic, and he wanted to meet a few optimists for a change.

The British Premier has always been considerable of an optimist himself. During the darkest days of the war he manifested his optimism by donating a large share of his private fortune secretly to the State. When things looked at their blackest in the great industrial struggle of a year ago, he merely lit his favorite pipe, took a good draught of tobacco, and worked on, optimistic amongst the millions of pessimists, who were of the opinion that the end of Great Britain's social fabric had come. Baldwin believed in Britain. He knew the heart of the nation was as true as in the days of the World War, and he hoped on, certain in his own mind that all would come out well in the end. And events justified his faith and his optimism.

It is perhaps fitting that his travelling companion on this memorable visit to Canada should be the Prince of Wales, for where can one find a more determined optimist than the young man who is the idol of the hearts of most women in the British Empire, and the hero of many of the men. All optimist in Britain, an optimist in Canada, in Australia or where else his duties have taken him, the Prince is a living manifestation of that confidence in the future of the British Commonwealths which is the mainspring of the confidence with which we all in our various walks of life do our bit towards the piecing together of the web which destiny provides for all us Citizens of the Empire.

We in Canada, as a younger land, are naturally more inclined to cheerfulness than are the majority of the folk "at home." Perhaps there is something in our climate which "ginger" us up each spring to carry on after the planning of the winter months; but even we at times have our moments of pessimism, mostly, it is true, at election times. And it is well that we should have as visitors at this particular time the two leading believers in the glorious future of our British nations.

His Royal Highness has admitted more than once that the cheerfulness in Canada in war or in peace, has been a tonic to him. Mr. Baldwin has yet to sample that phase of our national character; but we are certain in advance that when he leaves for home at the end of August he will return an even more pronounced optimist than when he landed at Quebec.

We have our problems, of course. What country is worth its salt unless it has its difficulties to solve? But on the whole it is a pretty cheerful country that our visitors will tour, and it should be the duty of each one of us, in our humble way, to prove to them that in declaring he was coming to a land of optimists Stanley Baldwin was not mistaken.

IN THE SPOTLIGHT

In the seclusion of his summer home in the Black Hills Mr. Coolidge has become aware that a presidential election is scheduled for next year and that there exists a certain public interest in his own plans and ambitions if any, pertaining thereto. Therefore the cryptic Mr. Coolidge has issued a statement which will not serve greatly to enlighten the Republican stalwarts who are not averse to taking over the White House job but who see the door blocked by the figure of the dour Vermonter.

"I do not choose to run for president in 1928" said Mr. Coolidge—nothing more. Political circles interpret this variously to mean that he is out of the field definitely; or, on the other hand, that he will not seek the nomination, but should it come to him unsought he is not committed to a refusal.

The incident seems to reveal either a sense of humor for which the President has not been given credit or an extremely astute press agent. Thousands of political "experts" will write millions of burning words in speculation of the Presidential mind. Will he run, or won't he? Are the Pavorite Sons to organize their slate booms in the belief that the White House is all but cleared of its present incumbent, or must they await further word from the Oracle of the Hills? There is a new subject of discussion for politicians of the inner circles in Washington, and for those millions of others who discuss the state of the nation in country stores, automobile camps and city clubs. Through all of it one Calvin Coolidge holds the centre of the stage, and whatever may be his real plans for next year Mr. Coolidge does not object to occupying the spotlight.

FOR US WHO STAY AT HOME.
(B Y. Williams in the New York Times.)

If gray-green olive trees upon the hills
Of Italy hold all of beauty's store;
If fronded palms along a tropic shore
Were all of loveliness; if daffodils
By English streams held nature's only thrills;
If edelweiss on alpine slopes meant more
Than other flowers, we could not but deplore
The fate that shackles us against our wills.
But there are lovely Springtime apple-trees
For us who stay at home, and sycamores
Beside the streams, and gallant pines that dare
The Winter's chill, slim swaying in the breeze,
And hollyhocks and parsley by our doors.
I thank Thee, God, for beauty everywhere!

LETTERS TO EDITOR

August 6, 1927.

The Editor Daily Intelligencer:

I note in your issue of August 4th in a front page item that the activities of the Municipal Tourist Camp are under review in regard to the presence of colored guests using there.

The article in question quotes in conclusion the remarks of the camp-cop the evening of Aug. 3, 1927, were so engaged by the decision to let the colored tourists remain that they immediately left the park and sought shelter elsewhere.

This is not true and I would ask that the fact receive the same degree of publicity to correct the impression created by your article. There was only one camper who voiced any objection to me on the evening in question and after I refused to order the colored tourists from the camp she did not leave but remained till nearly noon next day. No other camper offered a protest to me, by saw them all and spoke of the objection to them. So far as I know there is no intention of making any color distinction among our guests, the only checking being in the matter of deportment while in the camp.

Yours truly

Chas. Campbell,

City Engineer.

THIRTY DOLLAR TOURING MODEL REFUSES TO TOUR

"Sometimes she goes and sometimes she doesn't," said Elmer LaBarr, of the Royal Bank staff to The Intelligencer last evening when his thirty-dollar automobile stopped at the corner of Front and Bridge streets between eight and nine o'clock.

This "car" is a touring model and from his actions last evening it would give the impression that she touring days are about to a close. Elmer with several of his boy friends, among whom were William Hurst, Royal Bank; Ernest Holway, Dominion Bank, Wilbur Fox, Standard Bank, "Red" Doran Canadian National Railways and Ronald Hinkley of the Bank of Commerce were coming west on Bridge street and just before crossing the intersection to Front street the "touring car" stopped, and after some thanking and much work by each of the occupants of the car it was started and again it stopped and again it was cranked and after making another attempt to slide over the hill it was started and again it stopped. It suddenly came to a halt and all the occupants with the exception of the the captain of the ship, Elmer LaBarr got out and pushed it around the corner facing up Front street, but after looking in this position, someone made the happy suggestion that there was no gas in the tank, so the dauntless captain and his crew pushed the "automobile" over the bridge, either to get gas for the car or an automobile to use the gasoline which was in the tang.

This scene created much merriment on the Four Corners while it was being enacted.

FRANCES SCOTT JUDGE'S CHOICE

Selected In Finals As "Miss Belleville" At Veterans' Carnival

Miss Frances Scott, 42 Yeomans street, was named "Miss Belleville" and was awarded a beautiful silver cup, last night in the final elimination of the beauty contest which was held under the auspices of the Canadian Legion, at the carnival held at The Park Grounds this week. The judges had difficulty in choosing a winner as several active girls in the contest gave Miss Scott a close run for the honors Miss Marjorie Hill, Foster avenue, was second and was given a box of chocolates. Both of these girls received a fine reception at the hands of the crowd which jammed every available inch in the Main Agricultural Building. The girls paraded individually across the floor and were judged of their general appearance. Both Miss Scott and Miss Hill wore the long tresses so seldom seen since the influx of the bobbed hair style. They were charming and dignified in appearance and captivated the hearts of the crowd.

The other finalists were Doris Marsh, Mary Smith, Ruth Brandhall and Vera Tredo, all of whom were active contenders for the prize.

The judges were D. J. Batchelor, Geo. Dawes, Hope McGinnis, C. A. W. Thompson and Stephen Salaman.

Each entrant was introduced to the crowd by the judges and the latter based the results partially on the applause that each girl received from the crowd. The contest has proved to be a popular success and it is likely that similar functions will be tried in the future.

The Argyll Light Infantry band rendered an open-air concert from the ...d stand around which a large crowd collected. Bandmaster Reg. Hinchey had arranged a fine program which was enjoyed.

The midway was well patronized and the eVierans found a ready response from the people and experienced the best night, financially of the week. The Carnival will close with a dance in the main building tonight at which Robertson's Jubilee Orchestra will play.

GYPSY PRINCESS SOLD FOR $2700

Bows With Tears To Old Custom And Will Wed Man Selected

New York, Aug. 6.—An ancient custom and a modern idea clashed today out at Freeport, L.I., and the ancient custom won. The conflict was typified in the apparel of Lilly Marcus, gypsy princess, who sat in the tent of her father, Chief Joe Marcus, wept. Lilly wore a long flounced and tufted dress of gay red and green petticoats, likewise gay. About her neck were strands of linked coins. Her legs were bright and jingling with black heel pieces. Her slippers were of snake skin.

Lilly is a modern and she wished to choose her own husband, but she will be married to Tom Demetro, member of pots and kettles, to whom her father sold her for $2,700. Lilly will bow to ancient gypsy custom.

Lilly has no objections to Tom. In a fashion that is neither ancient nor modern, she has the coaxed the wailings and spoke her mind: "After all," she said, "he look such a nice looking sheik." Then, in a fashion, likewise, neither ancient nor modern, she took up her weeping again.

Meanwhile great preparations were going on. Two sheep and a lamb were being spitted before the camp fires. Buckets of vegetables boiled against the coming of gypsies from all over New York. There were also big strong boxes and pulled multi-colored flannel and gaudy blankets. Stones stood naked children in tubs of soapsuddy water and there were screams from the over scrubbed.

Lilly, who is sixteen, first saw Tom only a couple of days ago, when he and his father arrived in time for the fulfilment of an agreement made by the two fathers when Lilly was born and Tom was a boy of two. By custom the bride and bridegroom may not talk together until after the ceremony.

VICTIMIZES PREY BY HYPNOTISM

Savona, B.C., Aug. 7.—The old controversy as to whether the coyote is a pest or an asset to alive again in this province of the British Columbia sage brush country.

It all started this time when someone wrote in the government, asking the prospect of an increased bounty on the coyote. The letter writer argued that coyotes were valuable to the country because young coyotes ate grasshoppers and that a plague of grass hoppers was far more destructive than the biggest pack of coyotes ever made its left the park and sought shelter elsewhere.

But the anti-coyote party claims that the grass-hopper story is based on fiction. "It would take thousands of coyotes to rid an infested area of grasshoppers," they say. "I saw a coyote chief of Deadman's Creek, who knows a lot about both grasshoppers and coyotes," says, "The only time a coyote will eat grasshoppers is when he can get nothing else. And any level-headed person knows that a coyote prefers chicken."

"The coyote, is a killer" persists Threlkeld. "He mesmerizes his game, then sits on the birds at night and snaps off their heads while they stare at him. Deer, sheep, moose are constantly pursued and killed by coyotes. They are killing hundreds of sheep in the province every day, and the same

Immediately the reception was over the Princes motored to Chubbs Street Hospital, where they were eagerly greeted by disabled veterans of the war. Immense crowds as before lined the streets and Toronto's full police reserves were called out to keep order. The Princes had a private luncheon at the Government House and then attended the third in their honor in a week. Premier Baldwin at a luncheon of combined Canadian and Empire Clubs. Here the third important speech of the Canadian tour. Tonight the visitors are guests at the Ontario government's state dinner while tomorrow morning they will attend a great open air service for veterans in Exhibition Park.

Opened New Station

The Royal party were greeted on arrival by Lieut.-Governor Ross and Premier Ferguson. The first act of the Prince was to open, with a golden key, the door to the new Union Station and, with a pair of golden scissors, to cut the tape strung across the entrance. He then went in turn to the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific ticket offices and purchased ticket No. 1. In each instance all the ...tions. Premier Ribbelin did not take his ticket. The party then left the Union Station.

Their progress from the new Union station to the city hall was through streets dense with cheering crowd, with cheering crowds, with an echoing with sirens and whistles.

DIVING BRIDES

In the pearl fishing section of Japan one of the requisites of a bride is that she be a good diver. This is because girls from an early age are trained to dive for pearl-bearing oysters and for other forms of sea life use in making ear shells. These diving women wear abalone and have baskets around their shoulders in diving for "mother" oysters, and by the time they are twenty they are supposed to be adept.

BIRD PROTECTION

The value of bird protection as a money-earning enterprise has again been shown at Pewter Quebec. Pewter is a small island in the river, where gens birds nest in thousands have been given bird sanctuaries under Provincial and Dominion law. Last winter an addition of twenty-seven rooms was made to a local hotel to accommodate the growing number of nature lovers who come each summer to this mbces of the sea-fowl and an increase was also made in the number of houses which tourists can be accommodated.

TO MARRY ONE GIRL BUT LOVE ANOTHER

By ELSIE MARLOWE

Suppose you were simply crazy about an only man and he returned your ardor 100 per cent? BUT HE WAS ENGAGED TO ANOTHER GIRL—what would you do?

DEAR ELSIE:

Did you ever hear of such a mess as I am in? I'm crazy about a man And he is engaged to another girl. And here's the worst of it—he's crazy about me.

The engagement has been of long standing. These two knew each other as children. Bert thought he was in love with Lila when they were first engaged a couple of years ago. If they had married then I suppose everything would have been all right.

But Bert and I met almost a year ago when he came to work in my office. It wasn't very long before we discovered that we were attracted to each other.

But now, with the wedding plans set what can we do? I wouldn't hurt this girl for anything. We both want to do the right thing. He has given his promise and he will keep it. I suppose perhaps we should tell, but with everything planned she would be terribly embarrassed now. So we are letting things go on; but it sure is hard.

ELEANOR.

You say you want to do the right thing, Eleanor. There's only one right thing for you to do—STEP RIGHT OUT OF THE PICTURE.

No, I don't say that you should stop loving the man yet. Nor do I advise his marriage to the girl. Indeed, I think there could be nothing more cruel or dishonest than to marry him under these conditions. It may "embarrass her" to be told the truth, but, believe me, it will embarrass her much more poignantly to spend her life with a man who doesn't love her. He should tell her now, and if he has a spark of manhood he will do so

BUT THE TELLING SHOULD BE UP TO THE MAN

No, it isn't up to you. You're out of this affair temporarily. It isn't even up to you to insist that he tell her. If he doesn't love you enough to tell the truth, then you should discover that fact right now. If you leave it up to him, and refuse to interfere, you will discover it.

I know it is hard to leave it all to him, my dear, but it is the only way. Nothing wrecks marriage more surely than weakness in a husband. If he loves you is innately weak, you'll be saved a thousand agonies if you can prove it now before you place your future in his helpless hands.

Here's something to talk over with the mother next door.

We have our Edisons who lighten tasks by "press-the-button" methods.

We have our Fords who amass billions.

We have our wealth, our wisdom, our strength, our great, free marvelous country—

CURSE OF LOVE

By Mildred Barbour

After he had gone away to the office I sat down by her room. She wondered about restlessly, finally seating herself at her dressing-table and starting with another blue pencil into the mirror.

Was she pretty enough to hold Phil Ip? she wondered. Was that fresh charm of hers sufficient to make up for deficiencies that he must have found in her — else why had he cut short their honeymoon; why had he welcomed King Carson's advent so jubilantly?

Mechanically her restless fingers played with the clasp of the jewel-case that contained her modest collection of baubles. J. P. would have decked her out in diamonds and emeralds if he had had his way, but the man's innate good taste had prevented that. She possessed only a small strand of real pearls, a few modest rings, and a bracelet.

Under her fingers, the clasp opened the lid sprang up, and, with a gasp, she found herself staring at the black opal that she had placed there hurriedly on her wedding day. In the rush of subsequent events, she had for gotten it completely.

"Oh!" she exclaimed softly, as the flawless beauty of the gem dazzled her eyes anew. "Oh, you lovely, lovely thing! How could I have forgotten you?"

She lifted it in her palm and stared long at it. It seemed to her that the thing lived, that a shadowy something stirred within it. She recalled the legend of the opal—that a wicked one is imprisoned in the jewel as a penalty for his sins, and that only the tears of a mortal can release him. So he uses all his power to bring misfortune to the one who owns the gem, that she may weep and free him from prison As he moves restlessly inside the stone, trying always to escape his cay, bright cap gives the changing colors that catch and fascinate the eyes. Was not my talisman" she whispered, "You have brought me my heart's desire. But will it be happiness—or misfortune?"

Later, as she put the jewel away, she remembered that she had a real right to it. She had found it, but somewhere, some one, probably was frantic at its loss. Although she could not bear the thought of giving it up, she went down-stairs to the library telephone and, calling each of the newspapers in turn, directed that an advertisement be placed in the "Lost and Found" column. She possessed a degree of her father's shrewdness, for the "ad" she dictated stated that any one describing the hand-bag in which the jewel was found and the contents could claim it.

All the next day she waited, half-fearfully, for replies.

But the one person who could have answered promptly and truthfully—Cynthia Greer — was, at that moment, lying in a hospital, dangerously ill.

There was no answer to Norma's advertisement for the owner of the black opal—no answer, that is, that could possibly be construed as coming from the owner. Various people tried to claim it, naturally, but there was no one who could give an accurate description of the hand-bag in which Norma had found it.

She became convinced that Pate intended the jewel to be hers. The thrill of possession was tremendous and caused her secret wonder She didn't care particularly for jewels, but she desperately wanted to keep the opal. It fascinated her, as it had Cynthia—and yet when she was away from it, she could forget it. Or did it forget her? Was the secret of its charm some thing like that of a capricious woman?

She laughed at her own fanciful thought. But she was glad that no one claimed the opal. And, for some curious reason, she didn't confide, even to her husband, the secret of her possession. She had a superstitious conviction that the jewel had brought him to her, and that to tell him of it would break the charm

Her father came upon her one day, when she was gazing at it, and revealed that he too had superstitions.

"Tis bad luck!" he exclaimed, when she had told him how she had found it. "I'd have nothing to do with it."

His brogue, when he was deeply moved, was very apparent. Norma laughed at his vehemence.

"But Dad, it's my birthstone, and they say that opals are lucky for any one born in October."

"Have ye seen any luck it's brought you?"

"Yes," she answered gently, "it brought me Phil."

But the following day he was not so sure, for Philip Kendall appeared at his office and paid in full the loan of thirty thousand dollars.

"My friend, King Carson, has bought all interest in my business," he explained, "so I am able to reimburse you, Mr. Collins."

The old man was changed.

Kendall left the office light of heart, and hurried back to Norma. At last, he thought, he could go to her with clean hands and a clear conscience.

She noticed a change in his manner and was puzzled. The shadow had disappeared. Their love seemed renewed, as before. And yet, she wondered —was it Carson who, in some subtle way, had wrought the change?

King Carson was their guest at the pink Venetian palace. Old J. P. had insisted upon it. He felt more at ease with Carson than with his son-in-law, and he looked to spend long hours with King, swapping yarns of the old days and smoking the pipe that he reserved for strict privacy. Carson had also business tales to relate too—tales of the Mexican oil fields and the mining camps.

So, while the honeymooners strolled in the scented gardens at night, or sat in the shadow of the vine-covered pergola, listening to the songs of the birds, King Carson kept the old man entertained in a discreet distance. He saw to it that the isolation of the lovers was complete and uninterrupted.

One day, however, he said to Kendall:

"My visit here has been delightful, but soon I must be leaving you."

Philip laughed.

"Leaving restless, old man?"

"A goodish bit," acknowledged Carson. "Don't forget that I've been in Mexico for ten years. There's lots of the world left for me to see. I'll be telling my story soon—to China and India and the rest—but first I'm going to see a few well-known and much-exploited sections of these United States."

"Just what is the object of your explorations?"

Then he said: "See here, do you mind if I keep it low down, if I lunted around for her, just — er — on a chance?"

Philip clapped his friend on the shoulder.

"Go in — and try to win. If you think it's worth while, that is it."

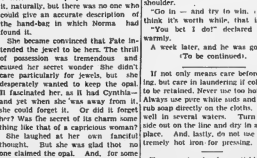

"You bet I do!" declared Carson warmly.

A week later, and he was gone.

WHAT'S NEW

(From a Woman's Standpoint)

The predominating model at the early autumn millinery shows in Paris was the velvet turban draped close to the head.

At a pig Washington wedding where the bride's gown of white satin and point d'Angleterre lace was distinctly quaint, simply dined at the attendants had rose organdy gowns with fichu drapes of ciel blue satin which extended to the waistline in front and terminated there in a large bow, while organdy flowers in pastel tones dotted the bouffant skirts.

Ever since last season the vogue for checks has grown until today they are quite correctly placed as the favored material chosen by the New York woman for her new tailleur for country, and sometimes for street wear. Even in town for a few hours shopping, while quite often the checked material is combined with a plain material that makes the basis for the coat or skirt. These suits are fashioned of the soft finished velours and cashmeres.

The Best Medicine She Ever Used

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Highly Praised By a Quebec Lady.

Mrs. David Logan, Thetford Mines West, Que., gives unstinted praise to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for the good they have done in her family. Mrs. Logan says:—"I have been a user of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for many years, as occasion required, and have always found them a most reliable medicine. My husband who was recovering from an attack of typhoid fever, and was in a very weak condition, took the pills, and through them aimed health and strength. My daughter was in a run-down condition, and was forced to discontinue work. Again Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were resorted to and she soon was restored to excellent health. Then my eldest boy had an operation performed for tuberculosis glands, which left him in a weakened condition. Once more Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were tried, and with splendid results. I feel that I can truly say that more than satisfactory results has been obtained by the use of this medicine. The pills have done more good in my home than hundreds of dollars worth of other expensive medicines."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills assist digestion, correct the stomach, the palpitation of the heart, shaky nerves and the pallor of the face and lips that are the results of thin, impure blood.

You can get these Pills from any medicine dealer, or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SINCLAIR'S

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

Dear Annie Laurie:

I am a widow and have two children, both married. I have been very lonesome until I became acquainted with a man. He asked me to go riding with him at night and I would meet him after everyone else was in bed He says he likes me but he knows that he can see me in the daytime, or takes me any place, so I am beginning to have my doubts about him.

I know another man whom I have known since I was a young girl. He was very good to me all the time and came to see me as often as I would let him. For some reason or other he doesn't seem to call to see me any more. I do not know whether he found out about me going out riding at night or not, but rather think he did.

Tell me if you think I am doing wrong by going out riding so late at night.

SARAH.

SARAH: It may be, Mrs. Sarah, that your old-time friend is just a wee bit jealous because you have gone riding. Don't you thing so? I'm sure that if you would explain to him how you have enjoyed the visit he would not mind in the least, for when one cares for a person, one is ever ready to be able when they need and enjoy to do anything that gives pleasure to the one for whom they care. As to the "old woman," well, perhaps he's just shy. You know, most men are, particularly where their affections are concerned.

Dear Annie Laurie:

I am a girl of fourteen years of age I was married at the age of sixteen and divorced at the age of eighteen

I am a stenographer and bookkeeper in an office. Just before Christmas I met a young man He comes in occasionally to see me, when he happens to be in the building. He only stays a few moments and leaves because of business.

NOW the problem is, every time he comes in I turn cold and hot and blush terribly and then get it a terrible temper when he leaves because he cannot stay. I feel lonesome. I dream about him at night and think of him in the day.

I would ask him out to the house but it is not presentable—soon we will move into a nice home Then I can.

What can I do to make him ask me out and perhaps take me. He seems to like me

HOPEFUL.

HOPEFUL: Aren't you ashamed of yourself to say that you would ask the young man to call, only your home isn't presentable. If you're not, you ought to be. If the young man thinks anything of you, he would think ten times more welcome to see him in your home in spite of whatever or wherever it may be. And perhaps, that's all he is waiting for. Try it and see!

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

About six weeks ago I met a young man three years older, than I. I have learned to care a great deal for him. I am quite positive he hasn't "fallen" quite as hard as I. He calls once or twice a week, and is very good to me. But often says he likes me a lot just asks me if I like him. It's a struggle to keep from telling him. Please tell me how to get over this feeling. I am so afraid he is just a heart-breaker.

TOO ROMANTIC.

TOO ROMANTIC: From what you tell me it would be very unwise to take the young man's attention seriously. It would seem that he is taking every pre caution to assure you that he does not take them seriously. He could not make that more clear unless he were to tell you so point blank.

But, after all, yours is such a short acquaintance. You interest him. He wants your friendship. You must accept him as a friend and interesting companion. And that is all for the moment. Perhaps time will crystallize the young man's interest into love. But if love comes to him at all, it will develop naturally and freely — not through any effort or design on your part. In fact, any move to hasten things, any effort to stampede the young man into a state of love would be the surest way to scare him away altogether. By being a good friend, who makes no demands upon him, attempts to exact no promises, and is a pal in all sorts of congenial activities, he will acquire a sense of security when with you, that he does not now possess. I rather think that the young man has been much pursued in the past. You must not give the slightest suggestion of pursuit for that reason. Therefore, by no means declare your love for him.

However, in all of this, I want to caution you against being too sanguine. Don't sit back and wait for develop, ments. Continue your other friendships. Make new friends and go out with them. Not only will you have other people to fall back on if things don't go as you wish, but your cultivating other contacts will create a desirable state of uncertainty in the young man's mind.

When dressing salads, do not use a combination of sugar, or salt, and vine gar, it is bad for the stomach. Use a mixture of oil and vinegar, delicately seasoned.

Mrs. Wilson's Experience a Guide to Women Passing through the Change of Life

Hamilton, Ontario.—"I have taken several bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I cannot speak too highly of it as I was at the Change of Life and was all run-down and had no appetite I was very weak and sick, and the pains in my back and sides so bad I could hardly sleep, and I got very nervous at times and thought I had not a friend on earth. I did not care if I died or died, I was very nervous, too, and did not get out much. A friend advised me to try a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I did. I am a farmer's wife, and always worked hard until lately, and was in bed for two months. I began now the problem is, every time to feel like a new woman after the first bottle and I recommend it with great success, also Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills. I am willing to answer letters from women and tell about your medicines, as I cannot speak too highly of them."—Mrs. EMMA WILSON, 471 Wilson Street, Hamilton, Ontario.

TIES A PROBLEM FOR RAILROADS

Use Millions Every Year And The Cost Runs High

Montreal, Aug. 5.—The requirements forman important item in the purchases of a railroad, the demands run ning into millions with costs also amounting to millions of dollars. The Canadian National Railways system is now in the market asking for tenders for track ties for next year's work and the contractors throughout the Dorl.nion are being invited to offer prices on approximately 9,000,000 ties. Last year the track ties purchased totalled 8,831,000 at a cost of over $6,000,000. For the coming year a similar amount will be required.

Each section of the country has woods suitable for the purpose. In Nova Scotia and New Brunswick Princess Pine, Hemlock, Cedar, Tamarack in softwood and Beech, Hard Maple and Yellow Birch in hardwood are used.

In Quebec Jack Pine, Hemlock, Tamarack and Cedar in softwood and Beech, Hard Maple and Yellow Birch in hardwood are used. In Ontario similar woods are used with the addition of Red Oak, White Oak and chestnut in the hardwoods.

In Saskatchewan a similar condition prevails, while in Alberta Jack Pine is the only wood but the tie production is very large.

For the Grand Trunk Western lines there is used Red and White Oak, Gum wood, Cedar and some Tamarack. On the New England lines the woods used are Hard Maple, Beech and Yellow Birch.

NOTED AUTHOR IS RELEASING SERIES

Cavendish, P. E. I., Aug. 4. (C.P.) —L. M. Montgomery, who is known so generally as the author of "Anne of Green Gables" and the "Emily" series, is to bring out the third book dealing with Emily's adventures this Autumn. She has been spending a vacation in her own old home by the seat which she visits annually for the many delights it affords. This year she is leaving it a little sooner than she expected to, for Premier Baldwin has expressed a wish to meet "the author of books which had given him so much pleasure." He wanted to see "Green Gables" for the Green Gables contest but according to his published litters this will not be possible as he is to be away just one day in Charlottetown. Mrs. Ewan Macdonald is the wife of the United Church minister at Norval Ont.; so she will go to Toronto and "shake hands" as requested. Meanwhile she is receiving "mild acquaintance," which by her is never "forgot."

Taxes amount to $200,000 of which $100,000 are treated by a creosoting process and $400,000 are untreated. The treatment consists of a solution of 50 per cent creosote oil and 50 per cent coal tar.

All ties are adzed, bored and inclosed and properly seasoned before treating. All of the hardwoods are treated with the exception of the White Oak. Of the softwoods, Jack Pine, Hemlock and Coast Douglas Fir are treated. The mountain Douglas Fir will not treat successfully.

The estimated life of the various species of ties is as follows:—Softwoods untreated; Jack Pine, seven years, Hemlock, six years; Tamarack, nine years; Cedar, ten years; Douglas Fir, light traffic lines only; and Douglas Fir seven years. In the hardwoods White Oak is the only one used untreated and that has a life of ten to eleven years. When softwoods are treated, the estimated life rises to 15 to 20 years and the treated hardwoods have an estimated life of from 20 to 25 years, showing the value of the process.

ANNOUNCE A NEW "JUBILEE" SERIES

Oldsmobile Shown In Smart Models For Confederation Year

Announcement is made of a new Jubilee" series Oldsmobile Six, at prices which greatly broaden its market. The manufacturers of this well-known and time-tried car have put on the market as one model in the new line a sport coupe which retails at less than $1000. This, like all other models in the series, carries new items of standard equipment that a few years ago would have been regarded as luxurious accessories.

The new model is a smart cabriolet-type four-passenger car dubbed in St. James style with fabrikoid top in a harmonizing shade. Two passengers are accommodated in the body of the car and two in the comfortable rumble seat which is easily reached with low-slid of nickelled steps on the right fender. Window recesses and moulding are in suede gray with double ivory stripings. Fenders, door shields and lamps are in black which contrasts with the body. Natural wood wheels lend a touch of additional brightness to the effect. The rumble seat is upholstered in genuine leather and is of standard spring construction. A door opening on the right side of the car gives access to a compartment ideal for carrying golf clubs or medium sized packages.

With its four-wheel brakes, bumper and bumperettes, motometer and bar cap, spare tire and rear view mirror, dash fuel gauge, twin beam headlights with control on the steering wheel, and improved locking device this new car admirably suits the requirements of the automobile owner who while preferring the coupe style set desires to be able to accommodate extra pas engers at times.

The same basic Oldsmobile lines that have proved so popular have been retained by the designers in this, as in the other "Jubilee" models, but by skilful refinements in curve and line additional beauty and smartness have been made apparent. Careful attention to detail in the interior finish, exemplified by such items as inlaid wal nut panels under the windows, has resulted in an air of richness and beauty.

Improvements in the motor, designed to increase its power, have resulted in quicker acceleration and increased power and speed. A feature on which Oldsmobile engineers pride themselves is the absolute accuracy of Oldsmobile speedometers, and this feature is further exemplified in the new models.

EASY TO CHANGE RUSSIAN NAMES

Moscow, Aug. 6.—Changing name has become such a simple and inexpensive process that it is being widely practised in the Soviet Union.

A change costs about $10 and entails only the filing with the proper authorities of a brief declaration stating the motive. It is sufficient if the name sounds odd or is too common.

Some applicants seek more revolutionary names. Communists usually apply for names of old revolutionary leaders, sometimes for aristocrats, and children and officers for common names.

An advertisement appears in the official Soviet organ once a month or so elapses while the applicant is investigated — and then a Ivan Ivanovitch Ivanov may become a Rudolph Clo-tvleviteh Zapolski.

OLD SMUGGLERS BEING EMULATED

Swift Motor Yachts In Place Of Sail And Row Boats

Wivenhoe, England, Aug. 6. — Exploits of bold, bad smugglers of fifty to one hundred years ago are being emulated by present - day smugglers in conveying contraband goods from the Continent to out - of - the - way places on the Eastern Coast of England.

Instead of using sail and row-boats, the smuggler of today pursues his trade in dodging revenue officers by means of swift motor yachts or shallow - draught motor boats which can enter and leave secret coves almost forgotten by the present generation.

With the abolition of almost all of the coast-guard service, there are long stretches of coast not so carefully watched as formerly, and the "free traders" are reaping a rich harvest in landing cargoes of wines, spirits, tobacco and silks. Motor cars are then brought into service and the goods rushed to various parts of the country for quick sale.

Rye, in Sussex, Maldon in Essex, Poole Harbor in Dorset, - Deal and Sandwich on the Kent Coast all have centuries old association with smuggling and it is at these spots where most of the smuggled goods are landed.

NIGHTIES ARE BACK IN FAVOUR

Paris, Aug. 6.—Now that everybody has pyjamas, the arbiters of fashion have turned thumbs down on the two-piece garment of the night and have declared for nighties.

Nighties when worn formerly grew longer as skirts grew shorter. But with the return of the nightie decreed by the parisian autocrats of clothes, the demand is for more abbreviated affairs. They are still elaborate with lace and have inserts and appliques of stunning materials.

BLACK BOTTOM IS POPULAR IN SPAIN

Madrid, Aug. 6. — The notorious black bottom has made progress against the stately fandago and for those who like their pulses and man there remains only the Cafe Magdalene, in Madrid's Bowery. Other wise the senoritas have discarded their high combs and flowing skirts, and stamp and twist to moaning saxophones till dawn.

Boulogne, Calais, and Scheveningen in Holland.

Many of the goods are stored in little sheds on the East Coast of England until a market can be found. Others are taken direct to London and and disposed of. As much as $1,000 a week is said to be made by one motor-yacht owner who hasn't the same fear of being hanged as his forebears were it caught.

YOUNG KING OF ROUMANIA TALKS GOOD ENGLISH

Bucharest, Rumania, Aug. 6. — A small unpretentious house in Calea Victoria, Bucharest's main street, has suddenly thrust into its shadow the golden palaces of the King and Queen on the lower part of the same street. It is the home of Princess Helen, mother of the five-year old boy whom fate virtually has made ruler over sixteen million people.

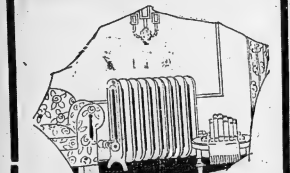

The little house is just like any Canadian brick and plaster home. In side, in the kitchen, is the beautiful Helen, "a slim, grey princess," wearing a checked, white apron. She is bending over the cook stove cooking a new dish.

Tugging at the apron strings of the princess, or sitting in his high-chair, is the baby king, Michael, begging her in perfect English for another helping of oatmeal. He is unaware not only of all he surveys in the kitchen but of millions of Rumanian, but he cares not only on getting enough bread, jam, cookies and other sweet things dear to every child's heart and tummy.

Gun fight over line fence resulted in deaths of John Mutter and T. M. Hunt at Pikeville, Ky.

POLYGAMY NOW BANNED TO TURK

Kemal Pasha Has Modernized Standard Of Marriage And Morals

Angora, Aug. 6.—The secure ploy-remous Turkish peasant is going to lose money by having fewer wives under Kemal Pasha's modernized standard of marriage and morals. The adage that "two can live more cheaply than one," was perhaps true only in the land of Uncle Tom.

Peasant wives, even the ones agree, do more work than the men. They do the housework, and the farm work and anything else. They get the small cup of strong, black sweet coffee for their lord by the time he gets up short before sunrise, they out-labor him in the fields, serve him at dinner and all-together put in more and harder hours each day than he does.

Wives, in a word, are cheap labor for the Turkish peasant. Those who have a good supply may keep them under the new laws but the code says there may be no more polygamous marriages.

Each of these wives, even in peasant poverty, is supposed to have her own home, at least a corner of the house to herself. Long custom, religious influence and the approval of all wives for the addition of a new one, generally eliminated jealousy from the home.

One reason for the ban on a new wife by either rich or poor was the desire for more children to work the land. If the first wife or wives did not give this requirement, it was customary for them to buy wives for sometimes a dozen.

Plural marriages, however, have been by no means general, contrary to ancient belief abroad. The well-stocked harem was something known to few. Few city dwellers have more than their livings had more than one wife.

TRAVEMUNDE WILL BE LARGE AERDOME

Berlin, Aug. 6.— Transatlantic air passengers will probably find themselves touching German soil first at Travemunde, airport of the ancient Hanseatic city of Lubeck. The Federal Government, the Free State of Hamburg and Lubeck are spending 1,100,000 mbarks annually on a theme for making Travemunde the international cross roads of Europe.

Women motor drivers always have the right of way, Denver, Colo., traffic code provides.

BELLE THEATRE

A clock span of twenty years, in which the players with two exceptions appear at different ages is one of the outstanding historical feats performed by the actors portraying the roles in "Stella Dallas," the Samuel Goldwyn production directed by Henry King and adapted by Frances Marion from Olive Higgins Prouty's celebrated novel.

At the opening of the picture, Stella played by Belle Bennett, is a romantic mill-town girl of twenty who sets her live fire and was killed at La Crosse cap" for Stephen Dallas, a youth of higher social sphere, played by Ronald Colman. They marry.

Action in the drama next century around a period eight years later, Lois Moran, as Laurel, the daughter, is preparing to celebrate her sixteenth birthday. Sheron has become estranged from Stella, whose harmless flirtations and social faux pas have become distasteful to him.

In the third period, Lois Moran is shown at the age of eighteen in the throes of her first love with Richard Grovesnor, played by Douglas Fairbanks Jr. Stella, now a dowdy, gaudy creature, has slipped outside the pale of society. Stephen is in New York.

Alice Joyce's initial appearance is as the first sweetheart of Colman. Then as a mother of three boys on a Long Island estate, where Lois Moran visits, and later as the second wife of Colman.

Jean Hersholt appears in the first period as the show-off riding master. He injects a meaningless flirtation with Stella. After ten years he still visits Stella, having a lot of fun at the expense of Laurel, for which tricks the child tolerates him for her mother's sake. In the second period, Hersholt plays a drunken sot on the down path of life about to marry Stella.

The two exceptions to the 16-part portrayals of the cast are Lois Moran as Laurel, who discovered a baby to double for her in the first period with Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., who arrives in the third period to fall in love with and marry Laurel.

"Stella Dallas," sponsored by Samuel Goldwyn, comes to the Belle Theatre Monday as his first production to reach the screen under the United Artists Corporation banner.

DELORO BEATEN BY POINT ANNE

Strachan Struck Out Eight Deloro Batters—Wednesday's Games

Point Anne have accomplished what Belleville failed miserably to do. The Cement Makers took another fall out of "Bob" Elliott's boys yesterday in the northern town, which makes the teams even-Stephen on the season's games with three each. The score was 5-3 and on the day's play the Guyer Clan deserved to win.

Bill Strachan, who learned his baseball on the sand lots around Belleville was fast enough to step in and baffle the heavy Deloro hitters for nine innings this year on the mound and he nings. It was Strachan's first appearwill likely get a crack at the Belleville Nationals here next Wednesday when another double-header will be staged with Deloro and Point Agne finishing the schedule.

Strachan fanned eight batters and issued one walk. The champions were all set for an easy victory but the signals were crossed and after it was all over, they wondered what it was all about.

Frank Guyer was the big man with the willow, going out two decades with a single. Harry Blakely also had a field-day at bat with three juicy hits.

As it now Belleville must defeat Point Anne here next Wednesday in order to avoid any possibilities of a tie.

Bill Rolph went along nicely until the ninth when "Finky" Thomas was sent in to finish the piece.

Die's running catch of Quinn's screeching drive in the fifth was the feature play of the day.

"SHAMATEURISM" IS BAD FOR TENNIS

London, Aug. 6.—"Shamateurism" is the greatest menace in the world to good tennis, in the opinion of Charles H. Cochran, who has been managing Suzanne Lenglen and other professional tennis stars on a tour through Great Britain.

"Professionalism will do no more harm to tenis than it has to golf cricket, football and baseball," said Cochran. "The all important thing is to keep amateurism and professionalism entirely separate and not to have amateurs camouflaging their professionalism."

Professional tennis has brought great tennis within the reach of the masses Mr. Cochran says, and since most republics have encouraged tennis players so generally by providing court there is universal desire to see good tennis at a low cost. This was impossible with strictly amateur matches.

"At Glasgow a crowd of 15,000 sat through a rain to watch Mlle. Lenglen and her associates in professional tennis," said Mr. Cochran. "This is said to be the largest crowd which ever attended a tennis match."

Why is a person far-sighted?

Because the eyes are smaller than they should be. The degree of the error depends upon the extent of the variation from normal.

Can a far-sighted person know he is far-sighted?

Not unless the defect is excessive

Then a person may suffer from far-sight and believe he has normal vision?

Yes, most far-sighted persons have vision, especially distant vision, better than normal, or have no reason to believe they have any error of vision.

RUTH TRAILING GEHRIG CLOSELY

Flagstead's Triples Account For Boston's Victory Over Chisox

New York, Aug. 6.—With the rejuvenation of Ruth the Yankees emerged yesterday from what has been termed by Miller Huggins as a "slump" and knocked the Tigers into submission thereby getting an even break on the series. The score was 5 to 2.

The Yanks had to get their emerging over in a hurry however. They took advantage of the presence of Mr. Ken Holloway as their opposing pitcher, and accumulated enough tallies to win before Manager Moriarity caught onto the fact that he wasn't good enough to stop the mighty maulers of Manhattan. After Holloway had been yanked it was a different story.

George Smith allowed just three hits in the six innings he worked. Comb got a useless single in the 4th an from then until the 8th when Ruth hi his homer only three Yanks faced hi tantalizing talent.

Waite Hoyt did even better than hat. After the Tigers had dan a pair f runs out of him in the first innin they might just as well have put away their bats, and kept them dry. Hoyt was tapped for six hits thereafter, making nine in all that he yielded, but the wereen's productive of any runs.

The Babe's gain of one lap on Gehrig wasn't attained without some ad ventures. Right after Ruth hit hi long one to deep centre the Buster reached that he was in danger of losing ground and poled one to far left. Lik Ruth's that blow just missed being f homer by inches. It went for three bases, which was the sum total of the Buster's blow for the day.

At Boston two triples by Tris Speaker and Flagstead put in the winning run in the 9th inning as the Red Sox four to one victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Washington hammered four St. Louis pitchers for a total of seventeen hits and won a slugging match from the Browns, 17 to 8 at the Capitol.

In the fourth the Senators secured two runs and Goslin, after starting off the inning with a single, hit a homer over the right field wall, scoring ahead of him. It was his ninth circuit clout of the season.

WRIGHT CAPTURES AMERICAN LAURELS

Detroit, August 8.—Joe Wright, jr., of he Argonaut Rowing Club, of Toronto, won the National Association singles event of the National Amateur Rowing Association regatta at the Wyandotte course yesterday. His time was 7.01 6-5. John J. McNicholas, of the Pennsylvania Athletic Club, was second.

Kenneth Myers, of the Bachelors' Barge Club, Philadelphia, led the field to the mile post, but collapsed and was removed from his scull and taken to a Detroit hospital.

The senior 145-pound four-oared shell event was taken by the Pennsylvania Athletic Club, with the Argonaut Club, of Toronto, second. The time was 6.29 2-5.

BEAVERS BESTED BY TIGER GIRLS

Thelma Golden Fans Ten Batters—Two Games Today

Lead by Thelma Golden, of Torrington Nationals, and Evelyn Whalen, of Oshawa Beavers, the Tigers defeated the Beavers in an exhibition game last evening by a score of 10-6. It was a real snappy game from start to finish and a fair amount of money was realized which goes to the Tigers to pay for their new Black and White uniforms.

"Twig" Woodley managed the Bengals last evening in the absence of the regular pilot and he was tickled pink over his team's victory.

Alan Meagher used Molly Gray on the mound and sent Miss Douglas of the Prentenars behind the bat.

Thelma Golden the speedy pitched with the champion Nationals of Toronto struck out ten and walked four. She pitched fairly effective ball. Miss Gray fanned two and walked one.

Only seven innings were played as darkness prevented the teams going any further.

CUBS CLEAN UP 3 GAME SERIES

Cy Williams, Phillie Slugger Has Field Day At Bat

Chicago, Aug. 6.—Chicago increased its lead over the Pirates yesterday by making a clean sweep of the three-game series with Boston taking the final game yesterday 5 to 2. It was the 4th victory in a row for the Cubs.

Kent Greenfield whose pitching aided materially in beating the Pirates in two games in their last series, was unable to check the Cubs' yesterday when they launched their attack in the fourth inning. He was replaced by McQuillan. Percy Jones, in addition to holding the visitors to eight scattered hits, led the Cubs attack with the bat, making four hits in four times at he plate.

The bat of Cy Williams yesterday pelled defeat for the Pirates at Pittsburgh and Philadelphia won the final game of the series 9 to 7. The veteran Williams, who is leading the National League in home run blows increased his total to 23 and also got a single, double and triple and a base on balls for a perfect day at bat. He drove in five of the Phillies' runs and scored three himself.

Under the soft spelling influence of former Adolfo League, Ike Cohen manager, the Giants made no runs today and got so many hits and lost the second and last game of the series to the Reds 3 to 0.

Sensational relief pitching by Jess Petty proved too much for the world champions and the Cardinals bowed before the Robins in the St. Louis series wind-up by 5 to 2. Petty worked the last four and one-third innings, yielding only one hit and was officially credited with the victory.

INTELLIGENCER TO CLASH WITH BANKERS

A fast game of softball is on the bill for Monday evening on the Queen Mary School Grounds between the Bankers and the Intelligencer squads.

Although only an exhibition affair it is likely to bring out a large crowd of fans. The game will get under way at 6.15 sharp and should prove one of the best of the local season.

The newspapermen have not had much luck so far this season, but neither have they been beaten by any large score to date and they are going to put a crimp in Manager Cassidy's pen-pushers if they can on Monday night.

O'Donohue the Intelligencer's stalwart flinger should be in good shape as he has only this week-end returned from two weeks' holidays and should turn back the opposing batters with ease. Cook will likely take care of the receiving end with Arnott or first Barry second, Gene Doyle on third with "Warpy" O'Brien at the short field, McPherson, Broadhurst and a dark-horse will look after the outfield.

COMPARE the Chevrolet of seven years ago with the Chevrolet of today and realize how radically Chevrolet has revised all conceptions of motor car value.

In 1920, the Chevrolet illustrated here represented the highest standards of quality and value . . . at a price of $1795 (f.o.b. Oshawa) . . . over a thousand dollars more than you pay today for a Chevrolet that possesses style, luxury and refinement unthought of in any car a few years ago.

In following its fundamental policy of constant improvement, Chevrolet has built up a production volume which places it first among all cars in the world. And Chevrolet has shared the savings of volume purchasing and production with the public by reducing the prices of Chevrolet cars.

So, to-day, you get a Chevrolet with amazing QUALITY in its every detail at a fraction of the cost of a similar model Chevrolet of seven years ago.

EXPEDITION HAS MANY HARDSHIPS

Endangered By Blizzards, Rock Slides and Snow—Delayed By Heat

Edmonton, Alta., Aug. 6.—(By Canadian Press).—Encountering every conceivable obstacle and endangered by blizzards, snow and rock slides, delayed by intense heat, forest fires and attacked by swarms of mosquitoes, the Cathelmer Scientific expedition of Philadelphia, Pa., has, notwithstanding, succeeded in exploring miles of new territory in the Canadian ice field in the Canadian Rockies according to word received from J. Cathelmer, Jr., leader of the party.

The progress being made by the scientists was related in a diary despatched by courier to Edmonton and at the time of writing the party was divided into two sections, Cathelmer with Hans Fuhrer and Jean Weber, the Swiss guides, leaving the base at Fortress Lake to survey hitherto unscaled peaks while John de Laittre, mineralogist, and W. Rupert MacLaurl, of Boston, were exploring the regions of the Continental Divide for mineral, flora and other scientific data.

On July 8 Adam Joachim, the diary states, left Fortress pass with two pack horses for Jasper for additional supplies. He first transported Fuhrer, Weber and Cathelmer across Chaba River. They were heading for Mount Quincy, 10,400 feet and hitherto unclimbed. Simultaneously Don Hoover and Ken Allen started over Fortress Lake for a two days' expedition on trail cutting so that supplies might reach the base camp.

After a hazardous journey through timber, alder, and willow, Cathelmer and his two guides passed around the southwest arete of Quincy at 11.40 that morning. They moved slowly over rock and snow and the summit was reached late that afternoon. They encountered treacherous slopes, ice walls and tremendous canyons. Snow and rain drove the explorers to cover and several small avalanches placed the lives of the climbers in jeopardy.

After back tracking over treacherous stretch of ice-covered rock the three reached the Chaba River and gained their camp during the night after a terrifying experience in dodging sliding boulders and ice.

Next day the party rested a little. Cathelmer and de Laittre completing

YOUNG CANADIANS THRIFTY CHILDREN

Quebec, Que., Aug. 6 (C.P.).—That young Canadians are a thrifty lot and are learning more thoroughly each year the truth of the old adage "a penny saved is a penny earned" is well proven by the recent report of the Penny Bank. From it we learn that Canadian boys and girls now at school have $607,862 on deposit in the Penny Bank. One year ago, they had only $590,194. In one year they have thus increased their saving by $112,708. The figures are significant in that they have increased appreciation of the value of thrift by young people. The habit of saving inculcated early in life is one of the most potent factors making for happiness in old age.

HAMILTON SHIPS A LARGE ORDER

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 6.—(C.P.)—The largest individual shipment of farm implements in the history of the Canadian farming industry reached this city recently.

The shipment was made from Hamilton, Ont., and consisted of a special train of 40 cars containing 120 threshing machines, valued at $25,000.

On the morning of the 8th, Ostheimer, Fuhrer, de Laittre and Weber, carrying sixty pounds apiece, left for a week'strip to Lich Creek, 20 miles away. They worked up the survey cut along the Continental Divide experiencing extreme hardship with underbrush and fallen timber. At timber line, 6500 feet, they turned northwest ascending the valley of Fortress Creek. They crossed a small snow jam at a level of 8,000 feet and the four dropped to the beautiful valley of Catacombe Creek. Behind them reared the mountain stream to Fortress Lake, a glacial, blue green stretch of water. For six miles this lake stretches out, flanked by giant trees, rock walls and towering ice fields. At the western end rise the three white slopes and peak of "Serenity" while behind it juts out a shoulder of Mount Hooker. Chisel Peak forces high above the lake in a great sheer face and massive buttresses. Before them stretched the valley of Catacomb Creek descending rapidly to Lich Creek. At the end of the valley rises the Massif, topped by the three peaks, Brunschig, Christie and Lowell.

Poems Old And New

MIDSUMMER

By Thomas Curtis Clark

Is this the world the tempter knew
In days that were December's?
Where are the wailing winds that blew
As Autumn turned to embers?
What fairyland of joy is this
That overwhelms our senses?
Can there be anything but bliss
In all the waiting morrows?

Through forest lands of sun and shade
Up-hush while Summer lingers;
Resplendent days like this were made
For happy hearts and fairies
Let every fear that cursed the past
Resplendent days like this were made
For happy hearts and fairies.
Let every fear that cursed the past
Be buried, as a duty
Rejoice, the noon is falling fast.

Seek out her bowers of beauty.

A RAIN SONG

It isn't raining rain to me,
It's raining daffodils,
In every dimpling drop I see
Wild flowers on the hills.
A cloud of gray engulfs the day
And overwhelms the town—
It isn't raining rain to me—
It's raining roses down!

It isn't raining rain to me,
But fields of clover bloom,
Where any buccaneering bee
May find a bed and room.
A health then to the happy,
A fig to him who frets!
It isn't raining rain to me—
It's raining violets.

—Loveman.

Let Me Tell You

Melted butter makes an excellent substitute for olive oil in a salad dressing.

If icing becomes too soft in the making, add a little more sieved icing sugar.

Sponges can be quickly cleaned by squeezing in water to which the juice of a lemon has been added.

Ivory or bone handles that have become stained or discoloured may be improved by rubbing with a cut lemon dipped in salt.

CHAMOIS GLOVES

Chamois gloves should never be rinsed in cold water, as this hardens them. Use lukewarm water that is slightly soapy. When washing the gloves be careful not to have the water too hot, or the gloves will lose shape.

OIL PAINTINGS

If dirty, these may be improved by rubbing them softly with a raw potato afterwards wiping clean with a cloth dipped in cold water. Dry, and then polish with a soft cloth. A coat of varnish may then be added, if necessary.

PAINT STAINS ON GLASS

To remove paint stains on glass, mix some powdered pumice-stone into a paste with equal parts of turpentine and oil. Rub the paint stains till they disappear, then wash with soapy water, and polish with a little methylated spirits.

CHARCOAL AND ITS USES

Meat that has to be kept for a day or two before being cooked will remain fresh if sprinkled with charcoal. A piece of charcoal placed in the saucepan in which rubbage is boiled will prevent a disagreeable smell arising while the vegetable is cooking. Charcoal absorbs impurities, and makes an excellent filter. Pieces of charcoal placed in flower vases will keep the water sweet.

USE FOR WORN-OUT SILK STOCKINGS

When artificial silk stockings or underwear are worn out, do not throw them away. Cut them up for polishing cloths and dusters, hem them before washing, and they will last a long time until all the feet off the stockings and open out the seam you will quite a large piece to serve as a polisher or duster for china, silver, glass, furniture, and the piano. Articles of silk are very useful as hurriers for the hair, after washing and drying it, also for, finger nail polishers.

The Modern Girl

A yard of silk, a yard of lace,
A wisp of tulle to give it grace;
A flower placed where flowers go,
The skirt knee-high, the back waist low,
One shoulder strap, no sign of sleeve
If she should cough, 'Good morning, Eve.'

- Cowper.

Unbounded courage and compassion joined,
Tempering each other in the victor's mind,
Alternately proclaim him good and great,
And make the hero and the man complete.

WOMAN'S WORK.

Reprinted from "The Farmer's Advocate," 11876.

To wash and bake to mend and make,
The weary steps of toil and take;
To cook and scour to dust and sweep,
And all the house in order keep.
To rise at morn and o'er and o'er
Do duties done the year before.
And know that in tomorrow's train
The same things will come o'er again.
And often to herself to say,
The old, old lines in weary way,
"From dawn of day till setting sun
Woman's work is never done."

To watch and pray to gladly take
Love's crosses for love's crowning sake
To love and grieve, to smile and weep:
Her deepest thought. In silence keep.
To teach and lead to hope and trust—
Have trust betrayed—as woman must.
To gently chide, to cheer and bless,
And bear with patient tenderness
Her burdens all; not shrink away,
But lovely stand and say, I stay.
"From dawn of life till setting sun
Woman's work is never done."

ANCIENT GUN IS FOUND IN SASK.

Fastened To Upper Limb Of a Large Tree In Paynton

Paynton, Sask., Aug. 5.—(By Canadian Press).—An ancient muzzle loaded gun, believed to be a relic of Indian inter-tribal wars, was recently found in a woodcutter on a farm here. It was fastened to the upper limb of a large tree with the steel trigger guard firmly embedded in the wood.

Local Indians believe the gun was placed in the tree forty years ago, possibly, as is the custom of the red men, an offering to the war god to ensure success battle. On the stock is engraved the Roman numeral X, which is interpreted by Indians here, to mean that the owner of the gun believed his death to be imminent.

The wooden stock and the rammod which is also of wood, are bleached. A piece of cotton rag in a remarkable state of preservation was tied to the trigger ring.

Brige and green are stressed for sports apparel, including all types, in several Fifth Avenue displays for this year, and white is also emphasized.

JUST IN PASSING

THE LITTLE THINGS

Oh, it's just the little homely things,
Te unobtrusive, friendly things,
The "went - you - let - me - help" your things

That make our pathway light;
And it's just the jolly, joking things,
The "never - mind - the - trouble"
things,
The "laugh - with - me - it's - funny"
things,

That make the world seem bright.
For all the countless famous things,
The sanctified, record-breaking things,
These "never - can - be - equalled"
things,

That all the papers cite,
Are not like human things,
The "ever - day - encountered"
things,
The "just - because - I - like - you"
things,

That make us happy quite.
So here's to all the little things,
The "done - and - then - forgotten"
things,
These "oh-it's - simply - nothing"
things,
That make life worth the fight.

PIANO TUNER'S REVENGE.

If you happen to be a pianist, you should make a point of attending the addression to your tuner, for your fate may lie in his hands. One such tuner who travelled with Mr. Mark Hambourg took exception to something the famous pianist's manager had done, and to revenge himself, unbeknown to anyone, he filed a small bit off the tops of the hammers of the piano just before Mr. Hambourg went on to the platform to play.

"I began my performance," says Mr. Hambourg, "and practically no sound came from my instrument! I sweated and pressed, and nearly burst myself in the effort to get some tone out of the piano, but nothing would come but a faint tinkling. It was a dreadful experience, and the audience sat there in amazement. A similar incident is said to have happened to a great piano virtuoso when he was touring in Australia. Something, for some reason or other, upset the tuner, and while ostensibly preparing the piano for the evening's performance he loaded each of the keys with four ounces of lead. They became so heavy as to be almost immovable, and the pianist, not understanding what could be wrong with the action of the piano, had to retire from the unequal contest, bleeding from every finger and exhausted

The concert had to be postponed, the public's money returned; and the tuner's revenge was complete.

MAN WHO INVENTED MATCHES.

Not the least interesting of the many important centenaries which fall this year is the invention of matches, the hundredth anniversary of which occurred on April 7th. John Walker is the inventor, was a singularly modest man. He declined to patent his invention. He might have made a fortune out of it, and he probably made no more than a few shillings. He was born at Stockton-on-Tees in 1781, and was apprenticed to a surgeon. He was deeply interested in chemical experiments, but he had a horror of surgical operations, so he became a pharmacist. Two years before he invented the phosphor match he had been selling a mixture of equal parts of potassium chlorate and antimony sulphide as a "pervuvian powder," and it may have been "scientific following up of this that led him to produce the friction match. At any rate in April 1827, it is recorded in his daybook that he sold "one hundred sulphur "friction lights" for a shilling. These matches were thin splints of wood, three inches long, one-sixth of an inch broad, and one-twentieth of an inch thick. Each tin contained only a piece of glass-paper. The light was made by the head of the match being pinched in the folds of the glass-paper. In 1827 and the two succeeding years John Walker sold the tins of friction lights, and by this time some of them had spread. Scientific journals and lecturers mentioned them, and a manufacturer of them began to make them in London, and would be nothing for it. I decided to try Dr. Chase's Ointment, and never regretted that step for the first application stopped the itching. By continuing the use of the Ointment, the eczema was entirely removed and the complexion greatly improved. No one would ever know that my patient had previously been so disfigured by this horrible and distressing disease.

Dr. Chase's Ointment is the recognized standard treatment for eczema. It should never be confused with preparations made for like ailments, but is a medicinal ointment of proven merit and effectiveness. 60 cents a box, all dealers, or The Dr. A. W. Chase Medicine Co., Limited, a Toronto-

Nurse Tells How To Relieve Eczema

Mrs. Wm. Campbell, a graduate nurse of Morden, Man., reports a very interesting experience she had recently with a distressing case of eczema. The patient was a lady who had suffered intensely both mentally and physically because of it. Her face was disfigured and also by the itching, burning sensations of the skin. She had become discouraged because doctors considered her case incurable.

Mrs. Campbell had known of similar cases and by patient, persistent treatment was able to obtain complete relief and restore the natural beauty of the skin.

Mrs. Campbell writes:—"A patient under my care was so severely afflicted with eczema on her face that the doctors considered it incurable and could do nothing for it. I decided to try Dr. Chase's Ointment and never regretted that step for the first application stopped the itching. By continuing the use of the Ointment, the eczema was entirely removed and the complexion greatly improved. No one would ever know that my patient had previously been so disfigured by this horrible and distressing disease."

WOMEN AND NERVE

The importance of mental hygiene was emphasized by Dr. Charles T. Thomson in a recent lecture on "Women's Health." Nervous breakdown, he pointed out, may be just as tiring as running a race, and in itself is sufficient to cause a nervous breakdown, but the causes of collapse are many and complex. Neurasthenia, some people might say, was due to a change in the physical condition of the nerve cells or nerve fibres. But what of the mind? The mind is a sort of electrical current generated by batteries of brain cells; it is a brilliant flame which wakes and wanes with the physical health of the nervous system. It was possible that our thoughts and emotions made structural changes.

What we think and what we feel are certainly in the closest relation to our nerve health or lack of it. Massage, rest cures and diet cures and electrical treatment had all a curative value in neurasthenia, especially electrical treatment. But not one of them was a panacea. Restoration of health was a matter of mind and body. The only way to free people from the network of crippling thoughts and sensations in which they are caught is to show them how and where they can break their bonds by understanding the true facts of the case. Sufferers of the mind is just as important as care of the body.

You must call nerve disorders in people who never do any hard work. Dr. Thomson said, and people with no definite object in life, but with present nervous symptoms. Such people must find work or find an ailment. Brain work often suffered from neurasthenia, but it was not the mental work in itself that led to trouble, but mental work accompanied by worry, grief, or with more business acumen than their inventor, Samuel Jones, of 201, Strand London, bought up the imitations of them, which he called "lucifers." When John Walker heard of this he took interest in his invention, and refused to make any more.

MANY BOOKS ARE MAILED TO BLIND

Thousands Of Copies Of Braille Type Loaned To Blind

Toronto, Ont., Aug. 4. (C.P.)—Just 70 years ago a library for the unfortunate users of the raised type which must read with their finger tips was established in Toronto. Now, the library department of the National Canadian Institute for the Blind, situated on College Street, distributes 1,700 bulky volumes a month to blind persons in all parts of Canada and in Newfoundland. Last year the library handled more than 20,000 books.

This library is practically unique in Canada, being the only one with more than merely local distribution. The sheer bulk and great cost of books embossed in Braille makes it practically impossible for the blind man to collect a private library, so he must depend for his reading matter upon the institution which sends through the mail the books he craves.

Books supplied to the blind cover every range of literature, from geology to poetry, explained C. E. Smith, chief librarian of the institute. History, biography and scientific works are in great demand and the librarian believes that the sightless consume a relatively greater quantity of this solid fare than do those who read with their eyes.

Canada can claim a highly creditable distinction in that it was the first nation to grant free transportation through the mails to embossed literature. This step was accomplished in 1918 by Sir William Mulock, new chief justice of Ontario, upon the representations of Sir Frederick Fraser, one of the most active friends of the blind. Its vast importance can only be comprehended when the weight and bulk of an embossed book is considered. It requires 29 Braille volumes to accommodate the Bible, which is available to the ordinary reader in one small volume.

"An ordinary Bible can be purchased for 25 cents, but the price of a complete Braille Bible is over $25," pointed out Mr. Swift. "Its catalogue price is 45 cents a volume and that is far below the cost of production. This typical example at the high cost of Braille books will indicate why the blind can not own books in any number.

"'My Lady Lee', a novel published recently which has an especial interest for blind readers, occupies four large volumes in Braille and costs $16.50, though the sighted readers can buy it for $2. 'Ohio's Decline and Fall,' which by the way is so popular that you will never find it on the shelves, requires nearly twelve feet of shelf space."

An important feature o fthis humanitarian work is the aid it offers to university students. There are today a score of blind graduates of Canadian universities, several of whom have won high academic honors and occupy professional positions in this country and Great Britian.

There is no library fee for the blind reader. Whether he lives in an out of the way corner of Newfoundland or in Vancouver the Toronto library will send him the books he wants free of charge. And, thanks to the Dominion Government, neither the institute nor the blind reader has any postage to pay upon the massive packets.

CORN STALK TO SUPPLY SILKS

Toronto, Ont., Aug. 4.—(Canadian Press)—Women, who are the buyers of most of the silken things from the once useless corn stalk, a movement is now on foot to manufacture a silky suitable for the making of hosiery and fabrics. Dr. O. P. Sweeney, chief chemist of Iowa State College says that at some future time a billion pounds of silky fibre manufactured from cornstalks will be used annually and men and women will wear clothing of a silky cloth made from that fibre.

"There are enough cornstalks wasted in every year to make 'silk' stockings as cheap as gunny sacking and to duplicate every silk dress in all the world," says another authority. But "silk," it was asserted, was not the only product to be derived from cornstalks. They were to furnish material for the manufacture of lumber substitutes, such as insulated board and sheathing. From them also would be obtained paper of some kind. They would also yield, it was predicted, a supply of acetic acid that would be employed in the manufacture of high explosives. From them would be obtained alcohol for the generation of power and for other industrial uses. "Horn" for rims for spectacles and for other purposes, varnish and lacquers.

TWO PIONEERS MEET AT COAST

Vancouver, B.C., July 30.—When the mountain passes for the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway were being explored half a century ago two expert levellers and transit men under the direction of Walter Moberly, the engineer in charge of the exploratory work, were J. H. Gray and Edgen Allard, the former a son of one of the fathers of Confederation in Eastern Canada, and the other the son of Ovid Allard, the famous fur trader for the Hudson's Bay Company in the West.

Recently, the Canadian Club of Vancouver entertained a number of the pioneers of British Columbia. These honored guests were given numbered tickets as place cards. Allard drew number 17, and made his way to the head table. Inside him, waiting the word to be united, was a white-haired man. They looked at each other, and then started to speak, but hesitated.

"Are you Jason Allard?"

"Are you Hamilton Gray?"

Their hands met in a warm clasp as these two old comrades of half a century ago sat down together. Each had thought the other dead for more than forty years, and by a strange coincidence, who had worked together to find a pathway for the Confederation railway, met at a dinner to celebrate the Diamond Jubilee of Confederation.

SIR HENRY HAS 4 BAD STROKES

Jasper Park, He Hopes, Will Enable Him To Avoid Recurrence

Jasper, Aug. 6.—The report which has been circulated that Sir Henry Thornton is in bad health and that his condition is causing his friends alarm is entirely incorrect. Three weeks ago Sir Henry suffered an attack of intestinal flu but he has entirely recovered and has never been in better physical condition than at present.

Seen this morning in connection with the report which also stated he had suffered a stroke Sir Henry said "Yes it is quite true I had a bad stroke yesterday. In fact I had four bad strokes in quick succession. They occurred near the fourteenth green on the golf course. The first bad stroke, one of the worst I ever suffered, got me into the bunker and I had three more bad strokes before I got out.

"Thanks to the recuperative qualities of Jasper I hope not only to improve my health but my golf as well and to be able shortly to do the course in par. I strongly recommend Jasper to those who desire to improve their health and their golf."

Sir Henry and the executive who is accompanying him on his inspection trip over the lines of the company in Western Canada, left this afternoon for Prince Rupert.

IMPERIAL POTENTATE TO VISIT TORONTO

Toronto, Aug. 6.—Clarence M. Dunbar of Providence, R. I., Illustrious Imperial Potentate of the Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine in North America, is coming on an official visit to Ramses Temple, Saturday, August 20. He will arrive in the afternoon, and leave again at midnight for Boston. Potentate D. E. Gillies of Ramses Temple is arranging for a fine ceremonial session to celebrate the visit of the ruler of the order now numbering 600,000.

The Yonge Street Masonic Temple owing to alterations, may not be available for the event, but an announcement of the place for the ceremonial session will be made later.

Much damage was done to the Calgary lalanda by a terrific hurricane.

NOTED EXPLORER OUTLINES PLANS

Boston, Aug. 6.—Dr. Arthur Torrance, explorer and scientist, Fellow of The Royal Society of England, was in Boston recently for a short visit and told something of his plans for his expedition to Africa next fall in search of the parent race of humankind. A secondary object will be a study of remedy methods of eliminating sleeping sickness by efforts to exterminate the tsetse fly.

The expedition, which is expecting to start from Boston about September 30, is the sequel to Dr. Torrence's discoveries of strangely formed natives in his six months' exploration of African jungles in 1924 and 1925. The region which he will revisit is in the vicinity of Lake Chiard in Northern Nigeria.

Dr. Torrence said that the normal members of the tribe which he visited as well as these showing abnormal physical formations were tall in stature but very primitive and of an intelligence inferior to many other African tribes. He advanced the theory that this may indicate that the start of the human race was in the African jungles. He will take an X-ray machine to aid in his study of the physical peculiarities.

Dr. Torrance, who is a graduate of New York University, plans to assemble a party of five scientists and three big game hunters. It is expected that the Smithsonian Institution and the National Geographic Society will be represented in the expedition.

ADDS NAME TO LIST CHANNEL SWIMMERS

Dover, England, Aug. 6.—E. H. Temme, English swimmer, succeeded to day in the first attempt of the season to swim the English channel. Taking off from Cape Gris-Nez this morning, Temme, landed two miles west of Dover. Temme is captain of the Corn hill swimming club and has twice won the Essex long distance championship. He is 22 years old, stands six feet two and half inches and weighs about 205 pounds.

He used a trudgeon stroke for his successful channel swim and was escorted by the Boulogne tug Alsace. The water was warm and the sea calm when he entered the channel from Cape Gris Nez in the darkness. He was reported still in good condition and five o'clock he was five miles out, heading strongly for Dover. At 10.45 today one p.m. he had ploughed to within two and a half miles south of the Admiralty Pier at Dover.

An hour later his steady stroke had gained another mile. Temme's time, as computed by representatives of Lloyds, was fourteen hours, 27 minutes. This has been beaten by Ernest Vierkoter, Georges Michel and Norman Leslie Durham all of whom made their successful attempts last year. Michel holds the record of eleven hours five minutes.

PILCHARD RUNS OFF VANCOUVER

Vancouver, B.C., Aug. 6.—The pilchard run is on again off the west coast of Vancouver island and millions of them will be caught during the next few weeks, ground into oil and meal and exported to the markets of the world.

Non-existent four years ago, before the dominion government passed an order, in-council legalizing the use of pilchards for purposes other than human consumption, the industry is now one of the most important along the rimmed west coast of British Columbia and there are thirteen plants engaged in that trade between Victoria and Prince Rupert.

The new industry had necessitated the construction of special facilities in Vancouver for handling the shipments eastward by tank car and westward by carco steamship. Storage tanks with 200,000 gallon capacity have been established in Vancouver harbor in addition to a 40,000 gallon tank maintained by the Canadian Pacific Railway.

This storage accommodation is utilized, when the pilchard oil movement is curtailed, by oils shipped in from the Orient—wood, coconut, peanut and soda. The pilchard catching season is on now. The first of the year's oil output will start to flow into Vancouver early in August.

INQUEST ORDERED INTO GIRL'S DEATH

Toronto, Aug. 6.—Considering the circumstances under which Jean Gilmore, 15-year-old girl, came to her death in a bathroom of an apartment on St. Clair Avenue not far from Yonge Street, Coroner J. M. Cassidy and Crown Attorney Armour, K.C., yesterday decided to hold an inquest on August 9th.

Both Dr. Cassidy and Mr. Armour are satisfied that there was no foul play. The autopsy failed to show any external injury. Pipes from a coal heater and the chimney were examined by plumbers. It was found that the chimney was blocked. Death is believed to have been caused by coal gas fumes.

Help to Weed Out

The Incompetent Motor Drivers

BY SECURING YOUR MOTOR VEHICLE OPERATOR'S LICENSE NOW

NO matter how cautious you are in the handling of your car, the safety of yourself and your passengers is dependent largely on the other drivers on the road.

To prevent incompetent persons endangering your family and yourself, each driver in Ontario, not already licensed as a chauffeur, must possess a Motor Vehicle Operator's License.

Secure your application form today. You can get it from any garage or issuer of motor car licenses in the Province. The fee for a License is $1.

Traffic Patrol Officers may call for the production of Operator's Licenses both on city streets and country highways. If you cannot produce your License you will be subject to a penalty under The Highways Traffic Act.

New Drivers, and those suffering from physical disability, have the opportunity to pass an examination by Inspectors of the Department. These Inspectors are located at convenient points throughout the Province. Your garage will tell you of the one nearest to you. The examination fee is $1.

Ontario Operator's Licenses are recognized in every Province and every State. Wherever Operator's Licenses are required, an Ontario Operator's License is necessary for everyone in charge of an Ontario car. Do not attempt to leave the Province without your Motor Vehicle Operator's License.

A satisfactory measure of support by the great majority of motorists has been accorded the Department in its past efforts to maintain the safety of the highways. The higher speed limit and an abnormal increase in traffic now render this additional measure necessary. The Department therefore sincerely hopes you will indicate your support of safe highway travel by securing your Operator's License without delay.

With its smooth stretches of sand and its lapping waves, the beach calls all lovers of the out-of-doors to a picnic supper. If the day has been hot, or crowded with distractions, remember that the beach offers cooling breezes, quiet, and beauty. It is a place where the grown-ups can rest and the children can romp. It provides a perfect setting for a young folks' party. It is a change from the formality of city entertaining.

The very next time the family needs a little recreation, take them to the beach for supper. The next time the daughter of the house wants to have a party, make it a beach supper. Or set a crowd of grown-up friends tog-ther and let them help cook supper over a driftwood fire.

If there isn't a beach nearby, there is always a pretty spot in the country with woods and perhaps a brook that will serve as a setting for the same sort of supper that is planned for the beach.

For the family gathering, the foundation sandwich lunch is most satisfactory. With sandwiches and milk and a little light cake or some cookies, the children will be well fed. For a special treat, carry along a box of marshmallows for them to roast over the coals of the fire which is built to cook Mother's and Daddy's coffee.

Camp Cooking Comes Into Play For The Beach Supper

For green-corn, a cooked supper is not only more fun but more interesting. There are all sorts of possibilities for this, from broiled steak to clam chowder, a supper that can be quite quickly prepared and in which each person can share the work should preferably be planned.

Frying is a quick method of cooking which is always successful with a camp fire. A bed of coals is necessary, with a wire rack resting on bricks or flat stones to provide a firm foundation for the skillet.

"Fried Sandwiches" Are Novel

If you want a satisfying food and one that is easy to prepare, try "fried sandwiches" Carry the bread, sliced and buttered, in a package, and the filling in a jar. Any sort of filling, or several sorts for variety—sliced cheese; a mixture of ground ham, hard cooked egg, chopped pickle and mayonnaise; or pimento, hard cooked egg with mayonnaise; or chopped tomato and broiled bacon. Take along also a small can of Crisco or other fat for frying the sandwiches.

To prepare the sandwiches—

Put enough Crisco in the skillet to cover the bottom generously (about ¼ inch). Put it on to heat. In the meantime, spread the filling between 2 slices of bread. Press them together firmly and slip the sandwich into hot fat. As soon as it is brown on one side, turn to brown the other. An egg turner is handy for turning. Serve hot.

To accompany the sandwiches, have potato salad, whole tomatoes or pickled beets, and coffee.

For dessert, chocolate cake with "lots of frosting," is always acceptable. If it is convenient to carry an ice cream freezer, something cold and frozen can be served with the cake.

Chocolate Cake with Fruit Filling
4 squares bitter chocolate
¼ cup boiling water
2 tablespoons sugar
½ cup Crisco
1½ cups sugar
2 eggs beaten separately

Fold in the slightly beaten whites of eggs. Bake in two rather deep pans (preferably square) layer cake pans in a moderate oven. When cool spread fruit filling between layers and frost with chocolate frosting.

1 cup sugar
1 egg beaten
2 tablespoons melted Crisco
1 cup thick sour milk
½ cup prune juice
1 teaspoon soda
1 cup baking powder
½ cup bread flour

Bake 1½ to 1¾ hours, depending upon the size of the pan, in moderate oven 325°F.

FOXTROT MUSIC AIDS STUDENTS IN TYPEWRITING

Commerce School Has Up-To-Date Methods That Prove Popular

Vancouver, B.C., Aug. 4.—At the end of a long class-room a table phonograph whirls with raucous fervor into the opening bars of "Yes Sir, She's My Baby." Two score young men and women yield themselves to the rhythmic pulsation of the music, yet with their feet firmly planted on the floor. It is the fingers that spring into life. A strange staccato accompaniment is swift upon the air as 60 typewriters swing into action, proclaiming to the hurrying jazz that "now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of the party."

This is no torpsichorean festival, but a regular session of the typewriting class of the Vancouver Business Schools. No eager young couples swing down the floor, for the scene is held in a class-room of the Commercial High School and the students seated at the typewriters are too intent upon acquiring mastery of the keys to think of foxtrot steps.

During the past two terms music has proved itself a very important aid in the teaching of typewriting, according to Miss Mary Jones, instructress of the typing class. Students pick up speed far more rapidly when practising to the strains of the phonograph than under the old methods. They are almost forced to keep time with the insistent beat of the music and so acquire certainly and precision in such an almost "painless" manner.

Typewriting is only one of half a hundred subjects, including commercial, technical and academic matters, listed in the curriculum of the night classes conducted by the Vancouver board of school trustees for the benefit of those who desire to learn while they work. While it is doubtful whether any of the other classes practise the foxtrot, the most modern methods of instruction are employed throughout the entire system. Enthusiasm prevails everywhere for the majority of these pupils have as the object of their study the increasing of their earning capacity. They realize that greater knowledge means more dollars. All of them are sacrificing a share of their scanty leisure time to this end and are eager to make the most of their opportunity.

At the beginning of last term more than 2,000 persons of all ages and classes enrolled, practically equal numbers taking commercial and technical courses. A wide range of subjects is included under the heading "technical," among the most popular being cabinet work, electrical engineering and radio construction. There are many special classes, such as those in cooking and dress-making for young housewives and housewives-to-be.

These municipally-conducted night classes are increasing in popularity with astonishing speed and W. J. Beech, M.A., director, expects an even larger enrollment this autumn.

ESTABLISHED NEW ENDURANCE RECORD

Dessau, Germany, Aug. 5.—Junker W-33 aeroplane, after being in the air in an endurance test since early Wednesday morning, shuttling between Dessau and Leipzig, came to earth at 10.13 this morning. Officials of the Junker works claimed that the plane beat the U. S. endurance record of 34 hours 11 minutes 25 seconds, set up by Clarence Chamberlin and Bert Acosta.

Unofficially the take-off of the plane was given as 5.50 Wednesday morning. This would make a new endurance record, if confirmed, of 28 hours 23 minutes.

TIES OF STEEL ARE SYMBOL OF PERMANENT PEACE

Police In U.S. Cities Prepare For Trouble As Death Hour Of Sacco And Vanzetti Approaches

PEACE BRIDGE CROSSES NIAGARA SYMBOL OF NATIONS' FRIENDSHIP

Notable Gathering Of Famous Personages To Mark Opening

PLEDGE TO FUTURE

Prince Of Wales Performed Dedicatory Ceremony Sunday Afternoon.

Buffalo, Aug. 8.—A span of stone and steel across the Niagara River stood today officially dedicated to the continuance of more than a century of peaceful relations between Great Britain and the United States.

The dedication ceremonies attended by the Prince of Wales, Prince George Vice-President Dawes, Prime Minister of Great Britain, Canada and the Province of Ontario, Secretary of State Frank Kellogg, Governor Smith and other official guests, to a memorial culmination seventeen years of effort to have the Niagara crossed at Buffalo by a vehicular bridge.

Good Omen for Future

London, Aug. 8.—British newspapers devote much space to the opening of the Peace Bridge between Port Erie, Ontario and Buffalo, N.Y., yesterday. The Daily News says it was stroke of undeserved good fortune that so soon after the dismal breakdown of the Tripartite Naval Conference that British and American statesmen should be able to meet together on Canadian territory in the opening of the new Peace Bridge.

How's Your Game?

New York, Aug. 8.—The New York Times says the response of the Prince of Wales to his formal introduction to Secretary of State Kellogg at Buffalo was "I'm glad to meet you Mr. Secretary; I hear you have been golfing. How's your game?" "Fine," replied the American minister, probably startled out of the time-honored reply of every golfer to that inquiry.

Unique Assemblage

Port Erie, Ont., Aug. 8.—Peace was the word which kept recurring in the ceremonies of the day and power between English-speaking people was the very spirit of the occasion at the dedication yesterday by H.R.H. Prince of Wales of the new international bridge between Port Erie, Ontario, and Buffalo, N. Y.

It was a rare meeting of public men Two Princes of the House of Windsor, the Prime Ministers of Great Britain and Canada ,the Vice President and Secretary of State of the United States, the Premier of Ontario and the Governor of New York State and cabinet ministers and the Canadian Ministers to the United States stood bareheaded on the bridge frontier.

The Princes motored from Toronto in the morning, after attending a military' open air church service at Exhibition Park. All along the highways the crowds greeted the Royal party and the Ontario countryside was at its midsummer best. In Hamilton and in St. Catharines memorials to the war dead were decorated with wreaths by the Prince of Wales. Premier Baldwin and his party crossed Lake Ontario by boat and met the Princes at lunch

Difficult for Moment

The bridge dedication was a ceremony of deep solemnity. Premier Baldwin made a reference of immediate significance between nations he said:

"Problems have arisen and will arise, and will vary as to how they should be solved. Only recently we have had an instance of this. We have had to differ for the moment, but we know in our hearts that this does not affect our friendship."

The Prime of Wales hoped that "this bridge be not only a physical and material link between Canada and the United States, but may it also be symbolical of the maintenance of their friendly contacts by those who live on both sides of this frontier."

PRINCES ENJOYING FIRST REAL RESPITE

Cartier, Ont., Aug. 8.—Westward bound, Princes and Premier are enjoying the first real respite of their Canadian holiday. Since they arrived in Canada their lot has been one of almost continuous ceremonial. Today and tomorrow they travel to the Rockies with the briefest possible stops. The Royal special motored this afternoon at Sudbury, while crowds on the platform cheered and waved.

DITCHED CAR IN AVOIDING PEOPLE

Whole Party Escaped Serious Injury But Motor Is Damaged

Mr. James Flagler, of Montreal, formerly of this city, Mrs. F. N. Flagler, of Montreal, Mrs. Margaret Flagler, of Belleville and Laura Doherty, a nephew of the Flagler's were all shaken up when the car driven by Mr. Flagler was forced into the ditch at Westbrook near Odessa on Saturday evening at nine o'clock.

Mr. Flagler was coming westward at a moderate rate and came upon a car parked at the side of the road with a group of people congregated in the middle of the highway. Mr. Flagler realized that either he must strike some of the people or take to the ditch and he pursued the later course. The car turned partially over and the occupants were bruised and shaken up.

The top of the car was crushed in and the one side battered but Mr. Flagler was able to brine it to this city under it's own power. Earl McGowan happened along at the time and brought some of the party to Belleville in his car. A Ford car had previously left the road at this point and one or two motorists had stopped to assist their less-fortunate brother.

LAST DESPERATE EFFORT TO SAVE CONDEMNED MEN

Sacco And Vanzetti Have Only Three Days Of Life Left

MAKE THREE MOVES

New York An Armed Camp Pending Execution Of Radicals

Boston, August 8.—Justice Sanderson of the State Supreme Court today denied petitions by counsel for Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti for a writ of habeas corpus and stay of execution. He also denied petition for a writ of error.

Boston, Mass, Aug. 8.—Counsel for Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti pinned their hope to-day upon three separate steps to obtain a respite from death for the two convicted murderers, it found guilty of a double-murder. If any one of the steps succeeds there probably will be no execution at Charlestown State prison Thursday, but, if all fail, the doomed men will be a bit nearer to the electric chair and one of their precious three remaining days of life will have expired inside of.

Pleas for a writ of habeas corpus, an attempt to obtain a reversal of decision and a new trial will be asked by counsel, and Governor Fuller will be asked to grant a second stay of execution.

Justice Sanderson said that after giving arguments all consideration he must deny the application for a writ of error. "This Court" he continued, "has no authority to grant a stay of sentence. Questions included in the petition for a writ of habeas corpus are not proper to an action for a writ of error and are therefore dismissed."

Orders were issued to strengthen guard on all public and semi-public buildings such as the telephone exchanges and Banks. Police mobilization will continue "until further notice."

BAIRNSFATHER IS OPTIMISTIC

Sees Great Future For Moving Picture Industry In Trenton

Captain Bruce Bairnsfather sees a great future for the moving picture in Canada with Trenton as its headquarters. The famous creator of "Old Bill" was the guest of the Belleville Rotary Club at lunch today held in the Bay of Quinte Country Club house along with a number of his staff and company.

Captain Bairnsfather spoke briefly but most optimistically of the possibilities of the Trenton Studio suggested as it is by the Government. They have wonderful equipment there and are quite capable of turning out first class pictures which can become a great stimulus to Canadian National life.

Final arrangements were made for the great inter-city meeting at Watertown on Wednesday. BURNING BRIDGE DELAYS TRAFFIC

Holiday Service To New York Held Up By Strange Fire

Matawan, N. J. August 8.—The wood en railroad bridge over Matawan Creek here was destroyed for two-fifths of its length by fire early Sunday morning. The blaze may have been caused by hot ashes dropping from a passing engine according to railroad officials, some of whom were inclined to scout imputations that Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers had set fire t ohte structure. Matawan was firemen extinguished the flames before they had made enough headway to render repair of the bridge an impossibility

As the bridge is used by both the Pennsylvania Railroad and the Central Railroad of New Jersey for trains carrying passengers and freight from New York and northern points, Agent Lowry Asbury Park, Long Branch and other coast points, the fire caused havoc with the Sunday services of the two roads.

Nobody was hurt, as the workers, previously having heard crackings and rumblings, were withdrawn.

Police diverted all traffic and ropped off the area. Barriers were erected to keep the crowds of theatre-goers on the scene.

The whole side of the seven-storey building hurled down into a fifty-foot excavation, with a great roar.

Harold Nicholson an employee of the Dominion Store at Trenton, formerly of Stirling sustained a broken shoulder a rnile companion suffered a fractured wrist and a young lady companion received a laceration above the right eye when a car driven by Nicholson ran over an embankment and turned turtle in the ditch three times on the Prankford-Stirling highway at 3.30 yesterday afternoon. A fourth member of the party a girl from Brighton escaped with a minor scratches.

According to the story Nicholson was following closely a car driven by T. Gladwin of Toronto, accompanied by his wife and daughter, when suddenly the Gladwin car turned in front of the Oldsmith car and the driver pulled up quickly to avoid striking the youngster. Nicholson was only a few feet behind and jamming on his brakes he struck Mr. Gladwin's car which swerved his own motor into the ditch. As the wheels hit a slight embankment at this point the car rolled over 3 times breaking the glass in the wind-shield and damaged the car almost beyond recognition How the occupants managed to escape without being more seriously injured is a mystery.

Neither Mr. Gladwin nor his wife were injured although their car was tossed into the ditch by the impact.

TODAY'S THOUGHT

The countenance is the portrait of the soul, and the eyes mark its intentions.

CICERO.

ROAD TO SUCCESS

In the attainment of solid, well-founded success there has been found no substitute for honest labor with the hands or mind. The ages have recognized this as an immutable truism, yet every age, including the present, has had its skeptics, its unbelievers, its seekers after fame and fortune without paying the price in work.

Success has said that to attain success one half as much effort as you would exert in attempting to seek success without work. There is much wisdom in the axiom that it takes less mental effort to climb to legitimate success than to climb to illegitimate success. Legitimate achievement requires no fortification, no protection. Illegitimate achievement demands more in its retainment than in its attainment.

It is a gross injustice to humanity to say that if there is any one thing more than another that enlists very much of the attention, time and effort of the people it is in scheming and planning to get something of value for nothing. The number of society's parasites may be large but the number of honest, hard-working supporting pillars of society is preponderously larger.

DAIRY PRODUCTS

As an indication of the trend of butter-making in Canada, a statement from Ottawa shows that in 1926 the products of the butter creameries amounted to 178,156,375 pounds, a gain of 8,061,408 over the previous year. The value of last year's output is placed at $42,025,949. The prospects are favorable this year for volume in dairy products and it is anticipated the total output will exceed anything on record for past years in Canada. As might be expected, Ontario led the line of provinces in creamery butter production, having 35 per cent. to its credit, or slightly more than a third of the total. With the cheese factories and butter creameries offering for milk, the task of the dairymaid at home will be lessened and the cash returns for milk and cream kept up quite as high. This looks like real progress in good farming.

Another gratifying feature about the official returns of this week is that ice cream and milk this year in the United States show marked increase over 1926. For the month of June alone 373,037 gallons of fresh cream valued at $775,990 were exported all but 200 gallons going to the United States Fresh milk exports also show an increase for June amounting to a total of 383,225 gallons as compared to a total of 333,831 in June, 1926. This trade is worth cultivating and can be increased if due care is observed to keep up to a good standard of health regulations.

Exports of both cheese and butter for June indicate a return of the former volume of trade. The year 1926 was not favorable in this regard, exports of butter falling away below 1925 while cheese also showed a decline. Canadian cheese holds a high place in the British market, gained over a long period of years by quality and keeping faith with the consumer. There is no reason why the former volume may not be exceeded in exports. The home market for dairy products is yearly becoming more valuable. The demand for ice cream is now looked upon as a permanent factor in the market, and will help to take care of the overplus supply. In a year like this when pasture is abundant there is apt to be a surplus product, but care in storage and marketing should help overcome that and with the added buying power of Europe, conserve for the farmer a fairly good return for his dairy products.

BETTER THAN FATHER

There are few boys who have not been buried either by words or by inference, to grow up to be as good a man as your father." The wisdom of such advice is questioned by Sir Robert Baden-Powell, Chief Scout.

Sir Robert, apparently, has known too many fathers to be at all enthusiastic over the idea that their sons should ever grow up to be at all like them. He does not believe in setting such a narrow limit upon the boys.

As Jamial said to the Duke of Gratton: "I do not give you to posterity as a pattern to imitate, but as an example, to deter." Many fathers, it must be admitted, could be used very successfully for the world's improvement in this way. With so many negative examples before him, the boy should be well equipped to work on his own salvation. But, unfortunately boys, like monkeys, are imitative creatures.

Nevertheless each generation has the benefit of all that previous generations enjoyed in the way of knowledge and learning and a lot more. Why therefore, should not each succeeding generation be expected to develop something superior in the way of manhood and womanhood?

The boy who is no better than his father has hardly measured up to his opportunities.

NEED FOR AIRPORTS

While the spectacular side of aviation, as exemplified in the long distance trans-oceanic flights, is very much before the public at the present time, there is another phase of this science which is worthy of even more attention, this being its growing use for commercial purposes. Aerial freight, express and passenger services are going to be important features of the commercial life of this continent in the very near future, and the cities which are going to reap the benefit of his development of aviation are those which are taking time by the forelock and preparing for the coming great strides in commercial flying. The essential preparation, of course, is the provision of an airport at which aeroplanes can land and from which they can take off.

Already several of these have been established by Ontario cities which are alive to the future opportunities offered by aviation. In Western Ontario London has taken the lead and already has a flying field. St. Thomas council is taking action which is expected to result in an airport being established there, and the matter is under consideration by other important centers.

The general cool weather this season in Western British Columbia and the amount of moisture about has scared a great deal of timber from destruction by fire. So far this year there have been only 2018 forest fires in the province, as compared with 870 for the similar period of last year. The present condition of the woods are excellent.

IMMORTALITY

Let us together seek the spring
And lay aside the burden of the years.
With this year's blossoming.
How strange to us now seem the fears
That once did haunt us, when we thought
That winter ne'er might end,
For now we see that life by death is bought,
And Nature is our friend.

Nature that shows but in the slightest part
The purpose she nurtures in her heart
She must have 'none regard for us,
Her human children, that she fashions thus
The tender leaf, the beauteous flower,
Each in its appointed hour,
And shows to every eye
The pageantry of earth and sky.

Oh surely we may trust
That, after winter's death,
Out of the dust,
That which our hope and faith
Have planted in a dim surmise
May bud and blossom see
Under the kindly skies
Of immortality.

NEW BRUNSWICK TO BE A GREAT STOCK REGION

Dr. Creelman Also Believes Province Will Come Into Its Own

Fredericton, N. B., Aug. 4 (C.P.) "New Brunswick should be a great stock raising country and I foresee the time in the not too distant future when New Brunswick will be shipping out sure bred live stock to the other parts of Canada and to the United States," says Dr. G. C. Creelman, who for 20 years was President of the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph and is now President of the Canadian Society of Animal Agriculturists. He has just completed an exhaustive survey of agricultural conditions in New Brunswick standing over six weeks.

Dr. Creelman is regarded as one of the outstanding agricultural authorities in Canada and his services were secured for the survey of conditions in New Brunswick through E. W. Batty, C.C., President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, who was requested by Hon. J. B. M. Baxter, premier of New Brunswick, to nominate the most outstanding independent expert obtainable to make a complete report on agricultural conditions. For the past six weeks Dr. Creelman has been travelling about New Brunswick, consistently visiting every section of the Province and looking into the agricultural situation. His formal report will be made for some time, but before leaving for Ottawa Dr. Creelman gave the Gleaner an early interview in connection with his visit.

"Everything speaking your Agricultural Department is going along in the right way," said Dr. Creelman, who retained the most first hand knowledge of its branches. "Every good centre is being established and the only thing that holds back development in the extreme remote places is lack of funds. I know that New Brunswick has no money to waste, but it seems to me that the annual agricultural appropriation might be increased by $100,000 at this time and so reach more people. What New Brunswick wants is not the spending of large quantities of money on any project, but publicity everywhere," declared Dr. Creelman, who added, "the province is now ripe for a general agricultural development."

He urged that farming be taken seriously and carried on scientifically in New Brunswick. "If this is done," Dr. Creelman said, "I do not see why New Brunswick should not come into its own as a farming country." So long as money continues to be made from potato growing, there is not much reason to get farmers who have been prospering by growing potatoes to change in other things extensively. Dr. Creelman thinks, nor is there much likelihood of having farmers living along the seacoasts give up fishing, but the farmers who have been dependent upon their woodlot, which is now becoming depleted, are the ones who are in difficulty. Dr. Creelman finds and he suggests that it may be possible to move these families to suitable available agricultural land and have pulpwood or timber grow up across on the land which would thus be left untenant ed.

Dr. Creelman also much impressed with the potato production of New Brunswick. "I used to be hostile way, that they were always getting potatoes grown, cultivated, enthusiastic," he said, "but I have fertilized and kept clear of weeds as I have in this Province." Potato growing, he said, has been developed to its highest point of efficiency in New Brunswick. "True, they have gone bet ter years that others, but on an average where the price ranges from $1 to $1 per barrel these people are doing well."

FRENCH TRAPPER TOOK LONG TRIP

Edmonton, Alta., Aug. 5.—(By Canadian Press)—Joe L'Hirondelle, a trapper in the Lower Peace country, took an entire tribe of Indians on a 600-mile trip through unknown territory, when the trader and the band were faced with ruin as a result of the scarcity of fur, according to advices just received from the north.

In debt to local wholesalers for a large sum, and the winter half over, L'Hirondelle knew he was a ruined man unless he could get some fur. He came to the city and asked for additional accommodation, offering to take the whole band who lived in the best area to another hunting ground. The trader's plea was granted.

Looking to L'Hirondelle to lead them to some place where fur was to be had, men, women and children, with pack horses and toboggans followed the trapper through blinding blizzards, and over territory in the vast, wild country unknown to them.

Undismayed they pushed doggedly on, buoyed up by a blind belief in the trader, and heedless of the words of Indians of other tribes they met on would be lost; they would die of starvation; they were going into a country of which nothing was known. Such were the replies they received from those they asked for help.

The first word came from L'Hirondelle that he was on his way back to the post, loaded down with fur.

When the fur was disposed of it was found that the trader had a considerable balance remaining after his creditors had been satisfied. L'Hirondelle then revealed how he had led his tribe 600 miles to the northwest, away up into the little known country of the upper Liard.

A new clock has recently been installed in the tower of the Church at a cost of $2,000 and yesterday was the first Sunday when it struck the hours. It is remarkable that the dedication of the Presbytery of Kingston will be held in Madoc at an early date when the new clock will be dedicated. The Rev. Dr McTavish also preached in St. Andrew's Church there yesterday afternoon.

"THANK YOU"

Oliver Munnings, 130 McDonald Avenue, presented to The Intelligencer staff today a bouquet of sweet peas grown in his own garden. They are the most beautiful samples of this form of flower seen this year. Mr. Munnings takes a great deal of pride in his flower garden and experimenta each year with the different loams and earth in order to get the best results. A phenomena in the form of a stock bearing seven flowers was included in Mr. Munning's bouquet. This is among the most unusual as in most cases the stocks bear but three or four flowers. Flower fanciers would be well-repaid for a trip to the Munnings garden on McDonald Ave.

RUN INDEPENDENTLY

"Carl Read and Company" will be what the Radio shop will be listed as in future. Mr. Read told the Intelligencer today that the store will no longer be the Toronto Radio Company as formerly, but that he had a two-year option and has bought the shares from that company. The store will still be "The Radio Shop".

Mr. Read has had a successful business here, and last week he renovated the interior of his store. A new office has been installed back of the store and the showcases have been moved.

DEATHS & FUNERALS

MRS. JAMES PARKS

Death came with alarming suddenness yesterday morning to Mrs. Nancy Parks at her home, 18 Dunbar Street. The deceased lady was down on Front Street twice on Saturday and in the evening was at the Belleville Fair Grounds and to her relatives appeared to be enjoying her usual good health.

The late Mrs. Parks was born in Pendinnaye 82 years ago and for the past 39 years was a resident of this city. Her husband, the late James Parks died over a decade ago. The deceased was a member of Holloway Street United Church.

Surviving are two sons, Blake Parks, Saskatchewan, Wesley Parks, Plainfield, three daughters, Mrs. W. Sills, Thurlow, Mrs. O. Glass, Tyendinaga, Mrs. J. Dale, Marmora, also two brothers, George Collins, Plainfield, John Collins, Lait; and one sister, Mrs. Thomas Sullivan, Belleville.

WILLIAM GEORGE VANCE

The funeral of the late William George Vance, who was fatally injured in his hay field near Roslin on Wednesday last, was held from his late residence this afternoon to Thomasburg United Church, where in the presence of a legion of sorrowing relatives and friends a most impressive service was conducted by Rev. Mr. McDonald, pastor of that church. After which the interment was made in Thomasburg cemetery. The many floral tributes were a fine bouquet together with the wealth of flowers silently testified to the sorrow caused by the death of the deceased and the sympathy felt for the bereaved relatives. The funeral was under the auspices of L.O.L. No. 638 of which the deceased was a member. The bearers were Messrs. Stanley Vance, Harry Burley, Robert Kincaid, John Kincaid, John Johnston and W. Preston.

'PAT' JENNINGS TRAINS FOR SWIM

"Pat" Jennings, known around Trenton as the "human fish" is rapidly rounding into shape for the Canadian National Exhibition grind in which he is one of the entrants. He has been out in the Lake from the canal every day that the weather would permit for the last two months and his time in the distance tests has been improving regularly. Last week this swimming marvel swam to Fisherman's lighthouse which is nearly five miles out in the Lake. He did the return journey, a distance of ten miles, in five hours and forty minutes. This is nearly one half of the distance that the swimmers will need to go in the big Toronto marathon. Pat's niece is looking after his diet and only allows him the food that is suitable and which will best strengthen him for the 50,000 classic. He places unbounded confidence in his ability to complete the distance and also hopes to land in the money ranks. Jennings who has been a cripple for many years is known as almost every follower of sport in the Quinte district and besides being actively interested in swimming has sponsored two or three boxing tournaments in Trenton. A week or so before the swim Pat will go to Toronto to taper off his training.

TODAYS MARKETS

New York, Aug. 8.—The market turned decidedly irregular today on heavy selling for both accounts. Selling pressure was most active against the high priced industrials, several of which broke 4 to 8 points. Rails yield with the industrials although the losses were not as large. The weakness of the stock market, contrasted with the strength of cotton markets which advanced $10 a bale on publication of a bullish government report showing prospective yield about one million bales less than expected.

In the absence of any definite news developments the selling of stocks was construed as a further correction of a weakened technical position. Despite rumors of a substantial extra distribution among holders Du Pont broke more than 8 points and General Motors 4. Collins and Aikman, Timken Roller Bearing, International Harvester, Case Threshing, General Railway Signal, Houston Oil, U. S. Cast Iron Pipe, and Manhattan Electric Supply all sold down 5 or more points.

A few issues resisted against the current trend. Bethlehem Steel cross ed 60 to a new 1927 peak on buying influenced by the belief that the company would profit through the expected increase in naval armament as a result of the failure of the Geneva naval conference to reach an agreement. International nickel and congoleum also showed evidence of strength.

LONGING FOR THE GIRL WHO MIGHT HAVE BEEN

By ELSIE MARLOWE

Remember that wonderful mince pie you had for Christmas dinner? Every now and then you get to thinking about that mince pie—don't you? And your mouth fairly waters. Yes, of course, you have plenty of other food in the pantry. There's a line cut of cold roast beef, and a chocolate cake and some marmalade and a plate of salad—good chow, all right, but you sort of lose your interest in it when you think of that dear, vanished mince pie.

Well, that's T. J. B.'s predicament. His mouth is watering too. But it isn't for a vanished pie—it's for a might-have-been girl!

DEAR ELSIE:

This is a large order for you I hope you can fill it. Can a person love two people fully, wholly and as truly as one? I am to be married shortly and am perfectly satisfied that I love the girl I am marrying better than life itself. Everything points to it. Yet there has persisted an echo of another girl that I can't get out of my mind.

She was the first love. Born, lived and died in two short months. A ship that passed in the twilight and left a wake that has survived bankruptcy and the descent to the bottom of the money ladder. Never admitting it before, but now that I am at the bottom of ladder, on the way up again, and engaged to marry, she has said that which a few years ago I would have willingly given up the position I held, to hear. She wishes that new union all the luck in the world and has stepped out altogether. But though she has gone physically, the memory of her sometimes almost drives me crazy.

Both of us have promised to forget. The girl I am to marry is totally ignorant of the memories, and I would forget the whole world to make her happy, but I am warned over the echoes. We both want to make a success of the marriage. The echoes will never be audible to her — I love her too much to ever hurt her, or even want to.

Getting rid of the echo when every show I go to see, and half the radio programmes, plays and music revive memories of what was and what might have been is a large order. Elsie, it has me down. I've tried hard to be fair and desire above all else, to enter marriage with a clear hand. But can I when mutilated memories wake me up at night and cause me to mope about and kick myself during the day?

I'm asking you — what's the answer? T. J. B.

What's the answer?

The answer is that you're a regular human being with a normal penny's yen for the thing he hasn't!

We're all alike, brother.

The apple we DIDN'T take looks redder and juicier than the one we did.

You're that way at twenty-seven and you'll be that way when you're seventy. There will always be echoes" and "visions" and fruitless yearnings.

Well, what of it? You can't have everything. If you take Rose you can't have Rose. And the stars won't fall if you do pine a little now and then. But you're certainly going to smash your happiness if you take your self too seriously.

Stop counting your symptoms and if you have an atom of sense DON'T TELL YOUR SWEETHEART ABOUT THE OTHER GIRL. For she'll never never understand. Even though as is entirely possible, she's hearing a few "echoes" herself.

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a young girl and am in love with a young man one year my senior. Please tell me how I can keep my love for him because I expect to move away from this place and I am sure I will miss him. JUST BETTY.

JUST BETTY: What a question to ask me! You evidently recognizes neither time nor distance, and I'm afraid that if you feel shaky about retaining your love when you leave town it isn't as real a love as you now think. Time alone can tell, Betty, and if you find that in your new environment the thoughts of the present or act of your affection are sort of creep into the dim, dark depths of forgetfulness—why you aren't in love at all

Por too juicy pies roll a soda cracker up in fine pieces and sprinkle it on the lower crust before filling with fruit.

To make home-made bread shiny swab the top with vinegar when almost baked. Then return it to the oven for a few minutes.

When making berry pies cut the low er crust half an inch larger than the top and fold it over like a hem; the juice will never leak out.

When a pie has run out in the oven salt sprinkled over the juice will prevent it from filling the oven with smoke and odor.

When baking juicy pies put in each pie a spoonful of fine tapioca. It prevents the juice running over and gives pies a rich flavor. When baking fruit pies or tarts, brush over the lining of the pastry with milk before putting in the fruit and the juice will not run out.

One expert insists that organdie should be laundered in ice water—that it should not be dried nor starch ed when washed, but rolled in a thick towel until just dry enough to iron. This method it is claimed, will preserve the crisp new look that is a part of the charm of the fabric.

WILSON'S FLY PADS

Will kill many times more flies for the money than any other fly killer. Each pad will kill flies all day, every day, for four weeks. At all Grocers, Druggists and General Stores—10c and 25c per package.

CHAPTER 30

The Rejected Suitor

With King Carson's departure, Norma felt infinitely happier. She admitted that she had been jealous of him. She wanted Phillip all to herself and, unreasonable as had been her resentment against sharing him with a friend whom he hadn't seen in years, she had not been able to overcome it.

Now she was alone with Phillip, except for her father's sometimes trying presence. But she knew that many of his foibles grew out of a mistaken sense of devotion and a passionate desire for her own happiness, so she overlooked them. The foundation for their new home, as the opposite end of town, was already being laid, and the plans, carefully, but tactfully, expurgated by Phillip, were in the hands of the architects.

It seemed to her that the last cloud that had darkened the horizon of her honeymoon days had receded into the distance.

Under the spell of her perfect love she bloomed with a new beauty and sweetness. Phillip Kendall, watching her, felt himself being swept away by a renewed and, ever-increasing passion. He almost began to wonder how he, knowing that she loved him, had been down-hearted over the mere matter of a few thousand dollars. To have her was enough.

And yet he was peculiarly particularistic. He was by nature a big and poignant to put into words. He had not King Carson's ready gift of expression. It was his nature to be reserved, just as it was Norma's to be gay. A little afraid of her husband and her new estate. Even now, they failed to understand each other completely. Each was afraid of revealing the depths of his own emotion and his dependence upon the other for happiness

Little by little, Norma, wrapped in her new, wonderful happiness, lost touch with her former world. Old associates—there were not many—were forgotten. She lived only for Phillip and her father.

One afternoon, when she was shopping down-town, she dropped into a little tea-shop that she had formerly patronized. It was crowded with the elite of the town.

As she dawdled over the muffins and tea, it annoyed her to note the number of bows and smiles she received from smart women who had scarcely noticed her heretofore. Marriage with phillip Kendall had done that for her!

She was too innately sweet to be cynical about the obvious change in her social status. She was grateful—but there was nothing in the simple unaffected manner of receiving these tab tations to suggest that she was in the least flattered by them. She acknowledged them with a pleasant bow and a smile, but offered no further encouragement to those who seemed to want to join her, or to ask her to share their table.

Just as she was about to leave, a young man strode into the shop and crossed directly to her.

"I saw you from the street," he announced abruptly, and seated himself without waiting for permission.

Norma's clear cheeks flushed, and a little, annoyed sparkle came into her blue eyes. The man was an employee of the bank at which her father did business.

"Really, Sydney, you're as sudden as a tornado! Must you always descend on one like this, without saying: 'How do you do?' or 'by your leave'?

"I've learned by sad experience never to ask your permission for anything," he said, flat. "I'm always turned down."

She laughed a trifle tayedly. People were looking in their direction. Sydney Stoke's hopeless infatuation for her was a matter of common knowledge. He was a rather striking and conspicuous young man — tall and gaunt, with curly blond hair. His eyes were as green as sea water and there were faint purplish hollows in his pale face. He was reputed to be brilliant, when he chose to be so, and he was in line for an excellent position in the bank, but, in his private life, or at least, in his talk, he was scornful of all conventions and codes.

"If you'll signal the waiter for another cup, I'll give you tea," offered Norma, somewhat nervously conscious of the glances of the people about her, who remembering the ugly Stoke's row duet created when she had refused the "I do hope he'll drink his tea quickly and go," she said to herself, "I wonder why he wanted to see me."

Sydney Stoke, consuming muffins and tea with tragic gloom, didn't help her, so she began to chatter lightly about commonplace matters. Finally, he cut deliberately into her account of a motor collision that she had seen on the way down town:

"So you went and married that — that boundder!"

Crimson flooded Norma's clear cheeks.

"How dare you speak like that of my husband!" She started to rise indignantly, forgetful of the sixpence eye and her unpaid check.

But he reached out a bony hand and caught her wrist.

"Not so fast! I have travel for what I say!"

The Innuendo

With Sydney Stoke's fingers clutching her wrist, and the eyes of those in the tea shop upon her, Norma sank back into her chair.

"I don't want to make a scene, Sydney," she said, as gently as she could, though her blue eyes still blazed, "and I won't have you speak against my husband. Finish your tea, like a good boy, and let's go. I'll drop you at your apartment on my way home."

"I want to talk to you!" he declared obstinately, "and I can't, while you're driving through the traffic."

Norma felt herself trapped. She couldn't get up and leave him, with all those curious listening eyes upon her. For a moment, she almost wished Stokes had carried out his suicide threat the last time she had rejected him.

With a slightly unsteady hand, she poured his tea, refused a cup for herself, and, resting her elbows on the table, cupped her pretty chin in her palms, and said:

"Well, go ahead, Sydney. What have you to say to me—that is, if it doesn't amount to insults against Phillip?"

He stared at her somberly. She could not guess what he was thinking or what he was about to say.

"You hate me," he accused her abruptly.

She shook her head gently.

"I am your friend, Sydney. I am sorry that I had to hurt you—but it couldn't be helped."

"I dare say that you were in love with Phillip—" Her eyes warned him, and he continued, "this Kendall chap, all the time?"

"Yes, all the time."

He ate a muffin gloomily and considered.

"You might have told me—instead of turning me down cold, without a word."

"I had no right to tell you—then." He sifted his head sadly.

"You mean that he hadn't asked you?"

She nodded.

He leaned back and lit a cigarette. He seemed to be considering something and to be intensely pleased with his reminiscence.

"How I rather thought as much," he said at last.

"It's rather obvious, isn't it? Why such deep and mysterious thought about it?"

"I was thinking of—other things," he told her darkly.

She was getting more and more irritated with him.

"For Heaven's sake, stop talking like the villain in a melodrama, or a—a detective! If this is all you have to say to me, I think we'd better be going."

But he continued to awake impatiently and Norma began to have a curious sense of fear. She looked around the room. She would have welcomed an interruption — a friendly glance to which she might respond by leaving her chair and thus ending the interview.

She wondered whether Stokes could have been drinking. But that was hardly likely, for according to the hour, he had just left the bank, and he never drank during business hours.

Finally, when he continued silent, still watching her with a curious smile that she found both insolent and irritating, she glanced at her watch.

"I really must run now, Sydney. You'll have to save the suspended subject until some other time. I'm afraid." She smiled at him and drew on her gloves.

He beckoned the waitress, paid the check, and followed her out to her car that was parked at the curb.

"You're coming, too?" she asked, as she seated herself behind the wheel and waited, with a hand on the open door.

He shook his head.

"I'll leave you now. As you suggested, we'll postpone that talk until another day. Meanwhile," his green eyes shot a swift, significant glance at her, "I'll give you something to think about."

She sighed resignedly.

"Yes, Sydney, what is it?"

He leaned lightly on the door of the car. And he smiled.

"Suppose," he said slowly, "suppose you ask Philip Kendall—your husband —where he got the sixty thousand dollars with which he paid off all the notes against his business, on the afternoon of your marriage—shortly after two o'clock."

He left her sitting motionless behind the wheel, staring after him, stupidly.

Paris is more enamored of the ensemble costume than ever.

The leather coat achieves a more formal aspect in the application of broad cashmere flannel border bandings and scarf collar.

With their pale green chiffon frocks the ten bridesmaids of the daughter of the Peruvian ambassador to Britain recently carried bouquets of wild flowers.

Nothing is smarter at present than chokers of flat gold links of the semi-precious carved beads and three rows of semi-precious beads usually have large carved pendant-shaped clasps.

Elaborate fabrics are appearing increasingly in coat collections for the coming season and among these, mate lasse and various types of imported fabrics woven so as to suggest embroidery are conspicuous.

Blue predominates in the famous gardens of the royal estate at Sandringham for the Queen is particularly fond of that color, and plants with blue blossoms of all shades are blooming there, including immense beds of lupins.

PRECEDENT MADE BY WASHINGTON HAS HELD GOOD

Six Presidents Refused Third Terms—Two Up successfully Tried

Washington, Aug. 8.—Calvin Coolidge's "not choosing" to run for the Presidency next year made him the sixth President of the United States to prefer not to be a candidate for the third term since George Washington, who, unanimously elected twice, refused a third term and laid down the precedent that two terms were enough for any man to occupy that office.

Thomas Jefferson declined a third term in 1809; so did James Madison in 1817. James Monroe in 1825, and Andrew Jackson in 1837—all holding to the principle laid down by Washington's action amplified by Jefferson's writing and by common consent accepted by the people as an unwritten provision of the Constitution.

Only two men have tried to ignore the tradition against a third term—Ulysses S. Grant in 1880 and Theodore Roosevelt in 1913. Grant was defeated in the Republican National Convention. Roosevelt, bolting the Republicans and going before the people as the leader of the hastily formed Progressives, was beaten in the election in which he divided the Republican vote with William Howard Taft and helped bring about the election of Woodrow Wilson.

Washington's words in declining to be a candidate for a third term were greater in their implications than in their specifications of the potentialities of danger to the republic in the unlimited tenure of the Presidential chair.

Writers and speakers had earlier enlarged upon this danger. They argued that if a President were elected for a third term the third term might extend into a fourth and a fourth into a fifth or until for all practical purposes a tenure became for life; and as Jefferson wrote life tenures "slide into inheritances."

The people who had just won free dom from kingship saw in the possibility of life tenures the possibilities of another king, a monarch who might, attempt to rule them in their own Capital, even though he bore another name. The growth of the nation, the development of party politics, the formation of two strong parties who rewarded their faithful leaders with public positions and sought thereby to help maintain themselves in power has add to keep alive the fear of continuing the tenure of the Presidency for longer than two terms.

Jefferson, indeed, deplored the absense from the Constitution of an express provision forbidding when a President should be eligible for re election. He sought in the Constitutional Conventional with others to put it the continuance of the Presidential office to seven years, and the subject he recorded was discussed there at length.

"That this continuance," he wrote "should be restrained to seven years was the opinion of the convention at an earlier stage of its session, when it voted that term by a majority of 8 against 2, and by a simple majority that he should be ineligible a second time.

"This opinion was confirmed by the House as late as July 26, referred to the Committee of Detail, reported favorably by them and changed to the present form by final vote on the last day but one of their session.

"Of this change three States expressed their disapprobation: New York by recommending an amendment that the President should not be eligible a third time and in Virginia and North Carolina that he should not be capable of serving more than eight in any term of sixteen years.

This discussion in the convention was known to the people, and when Washington, who in fact specially could have been elected quite easily for a third term, declared to stand for re-election, the action was accepted by the people as a precedent. Congress so recognized it in an address to him by the House of Representatives on December 15, 1796, that body said:

"We cannot be unmindful that your moderation and magnanimity, twice displayed by retiring from your exalted stations, afford examples no less rare and instructive than valuable to a republic."

DR. NAPIER BELL GIVES HISTORY OF MAN. CAPITAL

57 Years a Resident Of Winnipeg—Well Known

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 6 (C.P.)—Dr. Charles Napier Bell, F. R. G. S., president of the Manitoba Historical Society, gives full and authentic information of the history of Winnipeg for the past two hundred years in an illustrated booklet, published recently.

Dr. Bell, who has been for 57 years a resident of Winnipeg, and is the best known authority upon her local history, reveals a quantity of entirely new matter concerning the history of the city.

He reveals that in the century between 1727 and 1825 there were erected nine, and possibly 11 forts, ten of them on the site of present Winnipeg, and one in St. Boniface. Dr. Bell arrived in Winnipeg with the Selkirk expedition of 1870. He gained valuable information from surviving members of the exodus that brought out Lord Selkirk in 1812-15.

Many of the old patriarchs, including Andrew McDermott of the old Nor'Westers and Donald Gunn, Manitoba's most authentic early historian of the same party, were interviewed by Dr. Bell.

The interviews were taken down in writing and have been preserved in Dr. Bell's collection of rare old maps, contemporary drawings and photographs, the most complete private collection in Winnipeg.

The author gives a list on all the old forts that once stood on the now bustling city of the gray and old maps sent to Paris by Governor De Beauharnois, in 1737, with Fort Rouge plainly charted upon it, is reproduced in the booklet. Fort Rouge, which was originally supposed to be south of the Assiniboine River fork, is shown on the map with Dr. Bell's self authenticated location of it north of the Assiniboine fork. This is, therefore, new matter to the historian.

In consonny with Corporal fatherwards grounds from Hudson Bay, Dr. Bell while walking along the bank of the Red River in 1871, personally located Fort Gibraltar built by the Northwest Company in 1807. The remains of the fort was discovered in most of it has disappeared into the river through the crumbling of the bank.

Description of Fort Garry, Fort Douglas which was swept away by the great flood of 1826, and Riddell's Fort, also swept away by the same flood, are given in the booklet. Another fort or store of the Hudson's Bay Company, which stood on the east bank of the Red River, about the mouth of the Assiniboine, was also uncovered by Dr. Bell.

These revelations of the history of the forts, which once occupied the present site of the city of Winnipeg, raise the number of forts from a certain nine to probably eleven, instead of four or five as previously supposed.

DRASTIC PUBLIC SAFETY BILL IN IT'S FINAL STAGE

Includes Death Penalty For Persons Illegally Carrying Arms

Dublin, Aug. 3.—President Cosgrave's drastic public safety bill, which provides the death penalty for persons illegally carrying arms passed its final stages in the Dail and now goes to the Senate.

The bill was framed shortly after the assassination of Vice-President Kevin O'Higgins and is designed to give the Government greater power in dealing with subversive movements.

Eamon de Valera, leader of the Irregular Republicans recently elected to the Dail but refused admission when they declined to take the oath of allegiance to the King, has called a council of his followers to decide what action to take in view of the Dail's adoption of the measure.

Opposition to the bill is voiced large by the Republican and the followers of Captain William Redmond, who have challenged the drastic power given to the Government to deal with secret societies and conspiracies against the state.

The Government also insisted upon rushing an electoral bill which barred all candidates from standing who undertake to take the oath of allegiance and sit in the Dail. Gumbletone the Republicans, but it was served to postpone the operation of this act until February.

Thus in the coming Dublin by-elections made necessary by the deaths of Vice-President O.Higgins and the Countess Markievicz, the Republicans will have their last opportunity of appealing to the electors unless they agree to take the oath of allegiance.

INDIAN CHIEF DIED A HERO

Kamloops, B.C., July 30.—Jim Antoine, chief of the Lesaman's Creek Indian reservation and one of the greatest horseman in the wild horse country, died a hero, as all his tribesmen knew he would.

When rounding up horses to be sold to the Russian government, Chief Jim's horse stumbled and fell heavily, breaking the Indian's leg. The horse rolled on him, and the horn of the saddle penetrated his thigh at the fractured part. The horse reared to its feet, with Chief Jim suspended in the air, his flesh and muscles caught on the horn of the saddle.

Without a word to the other Indians who came to his aid, the chief took out his cleak knife and cut away portions of the thigh until he fell off the running animal. Friends carried him on an improvised stretcher for four miles to the wagon road, and, according to one report, he had to remain out all night in the rain, with a single blanket covering him.

The next day he was taken to Kamloops and immediately went on the operating table. The doctors, who had previously refused to let any of his friends treat him, were determined to leave everything to the surgeon. The amputation, however, proved fatal. He died without a word of complaint, courageous to the end, as his fathers of Shuswap's Creek did before him, and as his friends knew that he, too, would die.

MR. W. C. MIKEL AT W. I. PICNIC

Gave Interesting Talk On The Fathers Of Confederation

Teh Annual Picnic of the Rednersville Women's Institute was held in Mr. Welbank's grove on July 28th. Owing to threatening weather the attendance was not large, although quite a number were present including visitors. After the transaction of the usual business, ex-Mayor Mikel, of Belleville, gave the following excellent Adress on Confederation, after which all partook of a bountiful supper on Mr. Welbank's lawn, before dispersing to their homes. Everyone reports having had an enjoyable afternoon.

Mr. W. C. Mikel, K.C., addressed the ladies on The Fathers of Confederation. In which he claimed that the idea of a federation of the British Colonies of North America as expressed in the British North American Act of the British Parliament was unsuccessful to this country by the United Empire Loyalists.

These people had participated in a movement for self government in the thirteen British Colonies to the south before the Revolution, and they saw the Empire lose those thirteen colonies, one of the reasons being the refusal of self government and confederation.

If you want to be happy,
The experts say:
Keep plugging away!
Keep plugging away!
Just grin at your troubles
And tell them to try
To enter your mind

When you're working in high,
If pestered with doubts
And bothered with fears,
Don't give them a chance,
But throw in the gears
Of your daily routine
And work like the deuce,
In no time at all
They'll exclaim: What's the use!
You may not be happy
Right now, or today,
Tomorrow you'll smile

Great Pier Dedicated to Empire Service

1. New C.P.R. Pier at Vancouver. 2. The C.P.R. Dock as an ivory appears on the eighty days of the world.

One notable feature of Greater Vancouver's celebration of the Diamond Jubilee of Confederation, and one that no other city in the Dominion can boast of duplicating—was the dedication and official opening of the new $6,000,000 Canadian Pacific Pier B-C.

The new mammoth pier is the second longest in the world, and was planned with an eye to the growth of future when Vancouver will be one of, if not the biggest, port on the Pacific coast, and designed to accommodate at least two of the greatest liners built.

It is a far cry from the first wooden pile ocean docks built by the Canadian Pacific in the early spring of 1887 when Vancouver was a city of stumps, and possibilities to the present pier, with nearly 2,000 feet of berthing space available and accommodation for the care of one of some of even the most modern ocean greyhounds. Representing the last word in modern methodic construction, the new pier is also notable for the pleasing manner in which the practical has been combined with the artistic.

The Canadian Pacific is interested chiefly in the trade with the Orient Australia and New Zealand. Although imports and exports are of a mixed character, the most valuable single article is silk. Silk shipments used to be transferred from boat to rail with the least possible delay. Facilities embodied in the construction of this pier ensure the rapid and careful handling of all cargoes.

While designed primarily for the use of its own ships, the C.P.R. will allow pier B-C to be used by the ships of other lines. Its length of 1,140 feet permits the docking on either side, of the largest of the present day trans Pacific liners—the Empress of Canada, 640 feet in length—with a smaller vessel. Its width of 331 feet permits a moderate sized boat to be docked at the of shore end, at the same time that either or both sides of the pier are in use.

A special feature of the construction of the pier is that a promenade is constructed down each side of the building from the head-house over the roofs of the freight sheds. Connections are made from this promenade to the shine by a long gangway so that passengers may embark or disembark without hindering the freight handling on the lower deck.

In officially opening the pier Mayor Taylor unveiled a magnificent bronze plaque, a gift of private citizens of Vancouver, which bears the following inscription: "Piers B and C formally opened and Dedicated to the Canadian Pacific Empire Service during Greater Vancouver's Celebration of Canada's Diamond Jubilee of Confederation by Louis D. Taylor, Mayor of Vancouver."

It takes a MAN to make motor repairs—but a WOMAN to prevent them

It may take a man's mechanical sense to make motor repairs—but the common-sense of many a woman prevents them, as, for example, making sure that the car has THE RIGHT MOTOR OIL and not just ANY OIL.

You needn't know a thing about motors to understand why it is ruinous to run your car without the right oil. The reasons are very simple.

Every mined you drive, your motor is threatened by its twin enemies—heat and friction. Against those two destroyers of your motor stands only a film of oil, thinner than this sheet of paper. This oil film is the only protection your motor has against both heat and friction. But if the oil-film fails, it results in breakdowns, a laid-up car, big repair bills.

That is why Tide Water engineers spent years in studying not oils alone, but OIL FILMS. Thousands of experiments were made in the laboratory and on the road. Finally they perfected in Veedol the oil that gives the "film of protection"—a film, THIN AS TISSUE, SMOOTH AS SILK, TOUGH AS STEEL.

PICADILLY IS TO BE REPAVED

Consternation Reigns As Great Milliners, Etc., Foretell Ruin

London, Aug. 6. — Consternation reigns along Picadilly because of the announcement that the famous throughfare is to be repaved and must be closed to traffic temporarily.

Announcement of the end of the world would not have created a greater flurry in clubdom. Business houses along the throughfare sprang up in arms.

Efforts have been made to get the Westminister City Council to pave only one half of the street at a time, thus permitting it to be a one-way street during the improvement.

Promises have been extracted that the drilling will not continue during the night. Restaurants, hotels, theatres and fashion shops in the fashionable London West End are writing letters to the papers declaring they will be ruined.

Even the King and Queen will be greatly inconvenienced by the necessary paving work on Picadilly, which has not been completely resurfaced for fifteen years. Henry Traffic is to be diverted from Picadilly past Buckingham Palace, which heretofore has not been passed by buses and lorries.

It is estimated that the work from Picadilly circus to Brick street, which is the section of the street that is to be repaved, begun August 2 and will be completed in October. However, all this strife will not be closed at once. The section from Picadilly circus to Bond street will be done first and open to traffic.

TWO BARNS DESTROYED

Peterboro, Aug. 7.—Two barns in this district were destroyed by fire yesterday. Spontaneous combustion is believed to have caused a fire which demolished the barn on the farm of Hilbert Wood, containing a calf, eight pigs a large number of bees, machinery and the recent hay crop.

Semi wireless with speed of 250 words per minute will soon be installed New York to London.

Public Auction of Desirable Property

There will be offered for sale by public auction on Thursday, Aug. the 11th, at 2.30 p.m. the seven room solid brick house and large lot on the S. W. corner of Victoria Ave., and Ann Streets, City, owned by Whitfield Cronk.

BELLE THEATRE

Does romance flower in the heart of every girl or must that impulse first be plucked and blooin in specially prepared soil, nurtured by the warmth of sunshine?

Within the ken of every one interested in romance—and that marks it unanimous—is some one young woman born with romance radiating from her smile, eyebeams and gestures. Then again, everyone knows the type of girl never troubled by romance until some revolutionary vent from the outside jolts her concepts, revealing a tender glow of love, surprising even to the girl herself.

"Stella Dallas," the leading character in Olive Higgins Prouty's novel, was a girl who lived, dreamed, walked and talked romance.

As "Stella" as pictured in Henry King's film production, her romantic personality is recreated and made more vivid by realism. Romance was in Stella's heart, romance exuded from her every moment, and its colorful dreams suffused her being, and kept her moaning at her hum-drum work in a little mill town.

Her romance with a young man in higher social sphere, her love-life, her harmless flirtations, her deep feelings toward her child, her emotional heroism, are incidents that carve in outline a character, strong in its weakness, with "love of life," the keynote of her existence.

Belle Bennett plays the romantic role of Stella. Ronald Colman is her sweet heart. Alice Joyce, Jean Hersholt, Lois Moran and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., complete as great an all-star cast as ever appeared in a film.

Samuel Goldwyn's presentation of this Henry King production for United Artists Co.'s "stars" is at the Belle Theatre today, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Far, far in the Lead!

IF YOU were to come suddenly upon a tower that was over 9 miles high, you would certainly open your eyes in astonishment. If, however, you then learned that the tower was made up sheet by sheet of the advertising of a single manufacturer during 1927, you would be utterly amazed.

But then—Truth is stranger than Fiction. The advertising of the Kellogg Company of Canada, London, Ont., for this year would make a tower just like this—a tower which, by the way, would be fifty times as high as the Woolworth Building.

But even more interesting is the fact that 90% of this tower would be built with sheets from the daily newspapers of Canada. Just think of it—9.12 miles out of the 9 miles would be contributed by the daily press!

WHERE could be found any better proof of the leading place occupied by the daily newspapers in the advertising world of today? The daily newspaper is a national institution and is vitally important to the life of the nation. The daily newspapers will continue to merit your fullest confidence in the printed messages that appear in its columns.

Get the most out of life. Read the advertisements in your daily newspapers. They'll tell you how it can be done.

YANKS SQUEEZE NARROW VICTORY

Moore's Pitching Halted Chisox—Ruth, Gehrig Silent

New York, Aug. 8.—The family doctor arrived just in time to save another game for the Yankees at Col Ruppert's play ground yesterday. With a three- run lead steadily sinking from sight under the unsteady pitching of Urban Shocker, old Doc Moore was hurriedly summoned into consultation and decided the best way to improve matters was to prevent the White Sox from hitting.

They had rapped Mr. Shocker with an ominous freqbency and by the time the fifth inning had crept up to within a run of the lead acquired by the Yankees in one stormy session against Ted Blankenship, but after the arrival of the pitching physician, the White Sox did no more hitting worthy of the term.

Moore stopped them in their tracks and thereby the Yanks acted as though they were paralyzed by Blankenship's puzzles, they still managed to squeeze through with a 4-3 victory.

Encouraging as was the result of Moore's timely operations, Miller Huggins isn't completely satisfied with the condition of his pet patients and the pessimistic public probably feels the same way. The Yankee chief's show anything to warrant a definite bulletin to the effect that they're completely out of the slump into which they have fallen.

They made only seven hits off Blank enship and only because four of them were clustered in one inning did they emerge right side up.Except for that one big spree they were as gentle and submissive as a flock of canary birds.

The twin thrillers, Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig were just as subdued as the rest. The Babe hit two that might have been homers, but weren't. One was too straight away and Metzler caught it on the running track. The other wasn't straight enough and landed foul in the right field bleachers. The Buster confined his attack to a single.

That single, however, started the storm which sank the Sox, with a triple by Bengough proving the most productive blow and a safe bunt by Shocker which sent Bengough over the plate, providing the winning run Shocker received credit for the victory but he earned it with his bat, not his arm.

The Sox started a persistent rapping at Mr. Shocker's damp delivery early in the encounter, but fast fielding nelled him out of a couple of holes while a lucky home run by Ward pushed him into one.

Touching two Cleveland pitchers for 15 hits, the Senators turned the tables on the Indians and won the second game of the Washington series 12 to 3.

Although he yielded seven hits, Tom ley had little difficulty holding the Tribe while his teammates chalked up a safe margin of tallies.

Why is a person far-sighted? Because the eyes are smaller than they should be. The degree of the error depends upon the extent of the variation from normal.

Can a far-sighted person know he is far-sighted?

Not unless the defect is extreme.

Then a person may suffer from far-sight and believe he has 20/20 vision?

Yes, most far-sighted persons have vision, especially distant vision, better than normal, or have no reason to believe they have a crossed vision.

CUBS AHEAD BY OVER 4 GAMES

Scrapping Reds Defeat Phillies Twice—Root's 12th Victory

New York, Aug. 8.—Chicago stretched its third winning streak of the season to seven straight games yesterday by defeating Brooklyn at Chicago 6 to 5 in 11 innings, increasing the Cubs' lead over the Pirates to 4½ games.

The Robins got off to a four-run lead in the first inning. The Cubs came from behind in the fourth, driving both Flitt and Elliott off the hill to gain the lead. Doubles by Felix and Heilne tied the count in the eighth.

Hack Wilson's timely single brought the victory in the eleventh. It was Charley Root's twelfth victory of the year.

Both games of the doubleheader at Cincinnati were taken by the scrapping Reds who bested the Philadelphia team, 6 to 1, and 2 to 1, before a crowd of 20,000. Jake May pitched the first game of the day by striking out eleven Phillie batters while the Reds were hitting both Decatur and Will Sanghby.

The second game was a pitchers' battle between Red Lucas and Haraveland, with the support given Lucas in the field proving the deciding factor. A timely homer by Wattie Holm, Cardinal left-fielder, in the eighth inning, with one on base, handed the St. Louis team from behind the Boston Braves and brought a 6 to 4 victory at St. Louis yesterday. Cardinal batters pounded the Braves' twirler Genewich for 12 hits in 7 1-3 innings including the home run and five doubles.

Here and There

Air mail service between Winnipeg and Regina, North Dakota, has been inaugurated and the first mail for Winnipeg from the United States arrived recently.

The Shorthorn bull, King of the Fairies, recently sold from the Canadian ranch of H. R. H. the Prince of Wales in a United States breeding, again won the premier prize at the Calgary Exhibition.

Evidences of the renewal of interest of Old Country investors in Western Canada are seen in a number of recent transactions reported in Winnipeg, including the proposed purchase of three motion picture houses by means of English capital.

Frederic Beaupeurant, when cleaning a farm south of Verner on the Canadian Pacific lines, found a 300-lb. boulder which was half native silver and worth about $1,200. The discovery has aroused considerable interest among mining men in Cobalt and elsewhere who are arriving in numbers.

London, Ontario, now has an air harbor. Through efforts of the part of the Chamber of Commerce an ideal air-field site has been secured over and, within a month's time, will be completely equipped and ready so as to provide an air depot available to all planes that seek London as a stopping place.

According to a financial statement issued from the headquarters of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, the gross earnings of the Company for the first six months of the year ended showed an increase of $2,614,-778.06. The net profits, however, decreased about $200,000 due to 1 four million dollar increase in the working expenses for that period.

Quebec City lived up to its traditions as the historic gateway and welcomed their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales, Prince George and Premier and Mrs. Baldwin with a tremendous burst of enthusiasm and a blaze of color. Vast crowds thronged the docks and were ready as the Canadian Pacific R.M. Empress of Australia, bearing the distinguished visitors to Canada, steamed into sight.

Experiments in rust prevention by means of spraying chemical over ocean fields from airplanes is about to be tried out in Manitoba, under the direction of the Dominion Government Department of Agriculture. The chemical used is merely sulphur in a colloidal state, technically known as "Cola." It is said that one plane can treat 4,000 acres a day, flying at a height of 50 feet. The machine will carry 700 lbs. of chemical in the mechanical spraying apparatus.

"Austrian bakers have discovered that with the use of Canadian flour they can make more and better bread. The prohibition of night baking also favors the employment of fast-baking flour," says the Commercial Intelligence Journal, Ottawa. Frederick Franke, Austrian Consul, says his country is negotiating with gratification a trade treaty with Canada; for, while the war reduced Austria's population from 54,000,000 to 6,000,000 the city of Vienna has still 2,000,000 to feed.

LEAFS CAPTURE DOUBLE HEADER

Newark, Aug. 8.—Fine pitching by Joe Zubrik and Mamaux gave the Bears two victories over the Rochester Tribe at Newark yesterday by the scores of 4 to 1 and 5 to 4. Outside of the second frame in the opening tilt, when the Rochester club scored their lone tally, Zubrik had the Tribe at his mercy.

Buffalo at Reading rallied for three runs in the seventh inning to overcome a Reading lead and then scored three more in the ninth to sew up the decision, evening the series at one-all by winning, 9 to 5. Quelich hit his fifteenth home run of the season in the fifth inning with the bases empty.

The Toronto Leafs took both ends of a twin bill at Baltimore yesterday by a score of 9 to 6 and 2 to 1. Toronto bunched hits for a four-run rally in the first game after the Birds had pulled up to even terms for a winning margin. The game was marked by three home runs. The nightcap was decided in the first inning when al Hoe runs were scored.

Syracuse took a double-header at Jersey City, winning the first game by 8 to 3, and the second in 12 innings, 2 to 0.

The second game was a thriller, neither side being able to score till the twelfth inning when Syracuse got to bie Rob Crabb, rookie hurler for two hits and a double. Morrison's single, a sacrifice by Hurst and a passenger by Layne.

QUINTE LEAGUE TO CLOSE WED.

Deloro And Point Anne Here For Double-Header With Nationals

Deloro and Point Anne will be here for another double-header at the Exhibition Park on Wednesday afternoon. These two teams furnished the attraction on Wednesday afternoon and the fans enjoyed the twin bill. These are the final games of the regular schedule and Belleville must defeat Point Anne to get into the play-offs with Deloro. The locals have been beaten every time this year and Mills and Conway will endeavour to hang up their first victory on Wednesday.

Point Anne handed Deloro a trimming last Friday with Bill Strachan pitching and the same boy will likely be given a chance to repeat his success against Belleville. "Hoot" Gibson who has been dishing up some remarkable good pitching of late will take the hill for against Point Anne as this is the game that the locals need.

The lay-offs will start immediately after this game if the locals send Point Anne into the discard. Deloro will bring their full line-up along in hopes of adding another victory to the mound total games on the one ticket at a reasonable price.

LITA REFUSES OFFER OF MILLIONS TO QUIT,

Los Angeles, Aug. 8.—An offer of approximately $1,000,000 failed to dissuade Lita Gray Chaplin, in her determination for a finish fight in her suit for divorce from Charlie Chaplin, her film star husband, Lyndel Y. Young, who until recently headed her legal staff, has revealed in support of his demand for attorney's fees.

Young representing the legal firm which withdrew from the case as her counsel, testified in court here that Mrs. Chaplin not only refused the cash settlement, but remained insistent upon naming a "prominent motion picture actress" with whom she alleges Chaplin was unduly familiar. Several times the name of the actress in question has almost come to light, but legal complications have intervened thus far. The case now is set for trial on August 22.

The hearing was held in Superior Court to determine the amount of fees due the firm of Young & Young, which withdrew from Mrs. Chaplin's side of the case severedly because she had once tentatively agreed to accept the settlement offer and later rejected it.

FOOT GASHED

Peterboro, Aug. 8.—Ernest Creighton, 13-year-old son of Jack Creighton, was badly cut as a result of broken glass thrown on the side of the road near his home. The little fellow was running home with his sisters and brother when he tripped and fell over a large piece of glass, part of a bottle, lying on the road. A doctor was immediately called to the scene, and found several arteries cut in the boy's foot. The boy was rushed to the hospital, and after the flow of blood was stopped it was found necessary to put nine stitches in the foot.

It will be two or three weeks before the little fellow will be able to be around once more.

SAVED A LIFE

Kingston, Aug. 8.—Jumping into the water with all his clothes on, R. Dougall, custodian of the Richardson Bathing Pavilion, in Macdonald Park, on Friday, saved the life of a fourteen-year-old boy named Beverly, who was beyond his depth, and would have drowned but for the quick work of Mr. Dougall.

The young boy was swimming off the raft in front of the Bathing Pavilion when he was overcome and called for help. Mr. Dougall, who was standing on the steps of the pavilion, rushed to the water and swam out to where the boy was struggling, bringing him to shore and using artificial respiration.

At the same time Dr. Campbell was called, but the boy was in good shape again when the doctor arrived, and was able to go to his home.

BARN BURNED

Peterboro, Aug. 8. — Spontaneous combustion from wet hay was apparently the cause of the barn fire at the farm of Wilbert Wood a short distance west of the Village of Millbrook, near Peterboro, Thursday night. The loss incurred included a valuable calf, eight choice pigs and about two hundred hens, together with the hay crop recently cleared and some machinery. The barn, driving shed and stable on the farm of Thomas Jones on the second line of Emily, near Orange Corners, was destroyed by fire of unknown origin last night. The season's crop of hay, a binder and a plow were also burned. The total loss amounted to several thousand dollars, with some insurance carried.

TRAMPLED TO DEATH

Kingston, Aug. 8.—John Zedman Smith, who was employed on the farm of Col. Fred Ferguson at Inverary, was found dead Friday forenoon on the Ferguson Farm, where he had been working with the horses hoeing potatoes. Col. SIOUX MAIDENS GO TO BEAUTY PARLORS

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 8.—Bobbed hair marcels, manicures, lipstick and all the rest of the beauty parlor specialties are being adopted by women of the Sioux Indian tribe.

From the Sioux reservations has come Miss Mary Shangreau, full-blood ed Indian girl who is student of the reservation school, to take a course in beauty culture so that she may go back and make modern flappers out of the straight-haired and unpainted Sioux girls.

For centuries the women had left all frivolity in dress and make-up to the Indian braves but the styles followed by their white sisters made them so envious that 150 students in the school petitioned authorities to allow them to bob their hair and use beauty aids. This was done and now the potential flappers eagerly await the graduation of Miss Shangreau so she may give them everything from facials to permanent waves.

NOVELS FOR BLIND PLAYED ON RECORDS

London, Aug. 8.—By a new process invented by Captain Round of the Marconi Company, phonographic libraries for the benefit of the blind have been brought within practical reach. The process enables a full-length novel to be recorded on a half-dozen 12-inch records.

Captain Round has succeeded in producing records of readings capable of running forty minutes and reproducing intelligently 5,000 words on each side.

Although the records are of the ordinary size, they have as a result of the sound invention, three to four times the usual number of grooves and rotate at only a third of the speed of ordinary records.

Captain Round said that in the future he expected electrical photographs, working with records made on the same principle as his, would be able to reproduce a whole symphony from one side of the record without any break whatever.

What Theodore M. Edison Says

New York, Aug. 8.—When informed of the phonographic record process credited to Captain Round of London, Theodore M. Edison, son of Thomas A. Edison, said at his home in East Orange, N.J., that he had not heard of the invention before, but believed it perfectly possible that such develop ments could be realized.

The fundamental idea is not new he said. A number of years ago experiments were made in the Edison labor atories with slow-speed records, according to Mr. Edison, but no such record ever was marketed by the Edison company.

TRENT RD. RESIDENTS PROTEST HIGHER ELECTRIC RATES

Head Of Local Income Tax Office Resigns--Bankrupcy Proceedings Started For Raynor's Garage

GRAHAM POWER LINE IS TAKEN OVER BY HYDRO

Users Of Current Are Notified Of Greatly Increased Rates

PROTEST MEETING

Held At Country Club Last Night To Form Plan

A meeting of the patons of the Graham Electric Light Line was held in the hay of Quinte Country Club last night. The users of the Graham power line are protesting because the Hydro Commission have formed a Belleville Rural district and have notified Mr. Graham that they will take over the power line by September 1st. The old rates are to be changed by the Commission and will be greatly in excess of the present rates. Naturally, all who use the line are incensed and the meeting was well attended.

Two Offers

A resolution was moved offering two plans to the Hydro Commission. The one desired the Hydro to allow them the ratepayers to keep the present arrangement or, the other, to sell them the line users of power on this line, and Mr. G. A. O. Wills, a director of the Club and Major Eardley Wilmot, president, represented the Country Club's interests.

Mr. Orland H. Scott local manager of the Hydro, was present as well as about thirty patrons of the power line. The matter rested largely the passing of the resolution ,but it is unlikely that the Hydro Commission will agree to either proposal. Mr. R. J. Graham present proprietor of the power line was present at the meeting.

2 MORE ARRESTS BEETON CLEAN-UP

Men Are Alleged To Belong To Cattle Rustling Gang

Barrie, Ont., Aug. 9.—Two further arrests yesterday brought the Provincial Police still closer to the heart of the crime situation in the district surrounding Beeton, where the Alex. Hodge-Dan Forsythe death battle was lately staged.

The pair taken into custody yesterday were Reginald Andrews, aged about 21, married, who faces as far as one charge of the theft of 14 head of cattle, and Alfred Hartley, aged about 31, single, who faces a charge of the theft of 12 head. The arrests were made in the afternoon by Inspectors Stringer, Gurnett, Rae and Grasay, who descended upon the farms which the accused operate and charged them with the offences which they were alleged to have committed. The prisoners were lodged in the Barrie jail.

Occurred Near Cookstown

The offences for which Andrews and Hartley are charged occurred in the neighborhood of Cookstown some time ago. The cattle which were involved and likewise the pigs have by this time become respectively beef and bacon. But sufficient evidence remained of the thefts to bring Inspecters Stringer, Gurnett, and their colleagues upon the trail.

The police declare that Andrews and Hartley are both connected with the band of cattle thieves, who have been operating through the district, for some time past, causing a reign of dread amongst the honest residents for fear of their depredations. So far five arrests have been made in connection with the clean-up of the situation. Four of these who have been taken into custody have already confessed.

Speding down the Trent Highway about 11.30 last night in a big car, G. E. Provincial Police Officer Sylvester and Provincial Police Constable Wetherall investigated the accident and placed Jarrel under arrest. This morning he appeared in police court charged with reckless driving and upon pleading guilty to the count was fined $25 and 10 costs.

The police claimed that it took over three hundred feet for Jarrel to bring his car to a full stop.

HEAVY LOSS IN SAVAGE STORMS

New Jersey Visited in Three Successive Weeks By Lightningg

Newark, N.J., Aug. 9.—For third time in as many weeks, New Jersey today was suffering from the effects of electrical storms which left floods and destruction in their wakes. Destruction by latest, which began after noon yesterday and continued intermittently late into the night, was caused main ly by lightning and high winds. So strong was the gale in West Berlin that three homes were lifted from their foundations, roofs of small buildings were blown off and trees uprooted. No personal injuries were reported. Fires started by lightning caused damage estimated at a hundred thousand dollars on the estate of Richard V. Lindabury and Reeve Schley. The blazes were confined to barns, valuable farm machinery and many tons of hay being destroyed.

BORROWED A CAR

Chas. F. Thompson Of Bloomfield Is Looking For His Automobile

The automobile sales and garage business conducted in Belleville and Picton by R. H Raynor which for some weeks has been conducted by Moffat, Hudson and Company, as interim receivers, is expected to go through bank ruptcy to-morrow or next day and it is likely that Moffat, Hudson and Company will be apointed permanent receivers.

The affairs of the company have been in bad shape, but bankruptcy proceedings were held off in the hopes of making as good a settlement as possible for the creditors. Mr R. E. Smith of Toronto in charge of the business for his company would not deny to-day that immediate steps were to be made to take up the concern.

Raynor In United States

The Intelligencer is reliably informed that Mr. R. H. Raynor is in the United States. On Saturday morning, Raynor called up Mr. Charles F. Thompson of Bloomfield and asked for the loan of his car to go to Kingston over the week-end and promised to return it Monday morning.

Mr. Thompson obligingly drove his automobile (a new President model Studebaker) over to Belleville and turned it over for the use of Mr. Raynor. Since then he had heard nothing of it and it is practically certain that Mr. Raynor crossed the boundary line Saturday night or Sunday morning and is now in the United States.

Mr. Thompson has had business dealings with Mr. Raynor. According to the story he bought the car which he lent this spring for $3,200 cash and in March lent him Raynor $4,500 on a per sonal note at seven per cent Recently, he made a further loan to Mr Raynor of $1,400.

CROPS ESCAPED FROST DAMAGES

Winnipeg, Aug. 9.—Reports received today indicate that no frosts occurred in Saskatchewan or Manitoba last night, despite predictions of colder weather, and warm sunshine is predicted by the weather man for tomorrow. Reports of frost on Monday morning in Saskatchewan sent to Winnipeg and Chicago grain exchanges, which caused a great flurry in those markets yesterday, apparently greatly exaggerated. Frost occurred at a few points and damaged tender garden stuff. It is too early to say whether damage to grain crops at these points have resulted. If there has been any damage it is negligible.

TODAY'S THOUGHT

A crowd is not company, and faces are but a gallery of pictures, and talk but a tinkling symbol, where there is no love.

BACON.

MAKE SURE ABOUT IT

Although there has been a great deal in print regarding the U. S. quota law there are many who appear really do not understand it, and some have rather rude surprises when they find out what peculiar things it can do.

A woman who came from a point beyond Detroit to attend an old-home celebration in Ontario has just been able to go back to her own home after a delay of five weeks.

Her husband is a Canadian and has been living in the United States for a number of years; his wife came from England some years ago and was married in Ontario but went with her husband when he entered the United States.

When she went to go home from her trip this year she was stopped at the border; she had no papers to show she was entitled to enter the country, so she was sent back, being denied the right to go to the land that was her home and had been for some years.

There are other cases, too, where people living in Canada of British birth have made all arrangements to go to the United States only to find that they could not enter. It has resulted in all manner of inconvenience and also in monetary loss.

No good purpose is served by wasting time complaining about the U. S. quota law; it rule queer ones and makes odd situations, but it's the law and the U. S. government has a right to make it and see to its enforcement.

It's a better investment of time to get in touch with the nearest U. S. consul and securing all the necessary information; it will save a great deal of worry and trouble later on.

PREPARING TO SERVE

Gossip has often credited the Prince of Wales with the lack of any desire to assume the responsibilities of the Crown. But that he is devoting serious thought to preparation for these responsibilities is shown by his remarks in a speech at Ottawa in which he made special reference to the newly-defined equality of status of the autonomous communities within the Empire.

It is quite evident that he realizes that the Empire inherited by King George V. is a totally different thing from that which William IV. handed on to Queen Victoria. As Sir John A. R. Marriott says in a volume just issued on "The Mechanism of the Modern State," "The actual centre of political gravity is shifting; the economic politics of Great Britain even her European relations, are shrinking into true perspective; and as a result a new sphere of influence and activity is opening out before the occupant of the Throne. . . . The loyalty of the over-sea Dominions is evoked not by an institution but by a person; not by a Parliament, imperial only in name but by an Emperor-King. In a word, the Crown has become in an especial sense the guardian and embodiment of a new idea—the sentiment of imperial unity."

The Prince of Wales, in this connection said in his Ottawa speech, "To me in particular, as the King's eldest son the conception has a special importance which, in whatever part of the Empire I may be, I try always to keep in mind; the Crown stands above all distinctions of country, race and party, and serves to mark the unity in which all such differences are transcended. If some day, it should fall to my lot to assume that high responsibility, I trust I may be found worthy of it."

As far as acquaintance with the Empire is concerned, the Prince is certainly qualifying himself for his task as no other Prince has ever done in the world's history, for since the war he has accomplished journeys in Europe, Asia, Africa and the two Americas which should give him greater insight into the duties and problems of Empire than any successor to the Throne has ever had. Not including his many trips in Europe and his constant public appearances in the British Isles his journeys since 1919 have been as follows:

1921—Gibraltar, Malta, India, Oct. 26 to March 17, 1922.
1923—Ceylon, Japan, Manila, March 19 to June 21.
1923—Canada, Sept. 5 to Oct. 20.
1924—Canada and United States Aug. 23 to Oct. 41.
1925—South Africa, (Gambia, Sierra Leone, Gold Coast, Nigeria, Cape, Orange Free State, Bastuland, Natal, Transvaal, Swaziland, etc.) March 28 to July 29
1925—St. Helena, South America (Uruguay, Argentina, Chile) July 29 to Oct. 16.

HAVE YOU HEARD THESE?

HARV YOU HEARD THESE?

An Irishman got a job at an observatory. During his first night's duty he paused to watch a learned professor who was peering through a large telescope. Just then a star fell.

"Man alive!" exclaimed the astounded Irishman. "You're a fine shot".

Irate Parent—Young man, I don't know whether you can support my daughter, but you can certainly keep her up.

Pat, who had been fighting, arrived home with his left eye badly discolored "Mike Murphy" she exclaimed. "Do you say you let a little undersized man like Mickie Murphy black your eye for you?"

"Martha, Martha," said Pat, holding up a forbidden hand, "don't spake disrespectfully of the dead!"

The sad-looking man at the corner table had been waiting a very long time for his order. At last a waiter approached him and said:

"Your fish will be coming any minute now, sir."

"Oh yes" said the sad man, looking interested. "And what bait are you using?"

I wish that I knew something more of France.
I wish I knew; there are things I ought to know,
Things that the guide-books never think to tell
And I can never learn by any chance.
How shall I know what little wild flowers blow
In the spring grass? Or if the distant spell
Of the low hills is blue and kind as here?
Do sweet-briars blossom at the summer's birth?
Has France an Indian summer, made for dreams
And memories? Does the first snow of the year
Bring a still lambent glory to the earth,
Veiling the weathered crosses till it seems
They are made of marble or of porphyry?
Are there green willows? Does the meadow lark
Plaintive and sweet, welcome the alien spring?
Do wild plums blossom for the pirate bee?
Do the same stars shine through the velvet dark?
And are French hearts kind and remembering?

FRENCH FLIER REIGN OF TERROR NOW HAS LEAVE IN COFFEE POTS

Costi's Plane Fitted With Pontoons For Paris-New York Flight

Paris, August 8.—Dieudonne Coste, re-entered the lists as a competitor in the transatlantic flight today when he obtained permission from M. Bokanowski, Minister of Air, and M. Painleve, Minister of War, to use a three-motor military plane for the attempt. His plans have been for the time held up by fethiel of the French authorities to permit this plane to undertake an overseas voyage unless structural alterations were made to permit it to float in case of accident. These alterations having been completed the necessary authorities have consented to the plane being used for a Paris to New York flight.

Coste declares he will be ready to leave by the middle of the week as the plane is practically ready and needs no more than a few special tests, having already shown its worth on the Paris to Dzak flight and on the recent successful flight when it was compelled to come down in the Tura Mountains by bad weather. It is not yet settled who will be taken as navigator, but probably a marine officer will be selected.

Between Levine and Drouhin there was a truce and nothing was done at Le Bourget. Drouhin spent the day with his wife, and Levine, tired out by yesterday's excitements, also spent the day quietly with his family. Miss Columbia stands in her hanger all ready to leave whenever weather reports permit, and the pilot and his passenger have settled the difficulties between them so unfortunately could not settle directly.

Farman's plane, Oiseau Bleu, was today in the hands of mechanics getting still further finishing touches. Given the pilot chosen in Drouhin's place, is confident he will be able to take off this week, and he may be that three planes will all take the air at once on the great road of adventure through the air to New York.

THREE KILLED WHEN CAR TURNS TURTLE

Quebec, Que., Aug. 8 (C.P.)—Three persons were killed and four injured in an automobile accident at Mont Joli on the south shore of the St. Lawrence yesterday.

The dead are Mrs. George Brushfilly, mother of eight children, Mrs. Frank Dumfee, 32, mother of four children, George Berube, eighteen, son of the dead woman. The accident occurred at Lake Malbaie, north of Val Brillant Matane county. As the driver of the seven-passenger car in which all the victims were riding was taking a sharp turn, he lost control of his machine, which turned turtle and pinned beneath it all the occupants except Mrs. Dumfee, whose four occupants of the machine were seriously injured.

CONSERVATIVE PICNIC HELD AT WESTON

Weston, Aug. 8.—Almost 5,000 people attended the annual picnic of the West York Conservative Association, held at the Weston Fair Grounds on by Saturday. The extensive program which had been arranged included only two brief addresses. Sir Henry Drayton, M.P. referred for a moment to the approaching Conservative convention, and declared that the reorganization would result in a stronger Tory party in Canada. Hon. Dr. Forbes Godfrey M.P.P., also felt confident that Ontario would remain Tory, an dthat a new Premier would be staged in the rest of Canada.

Slightly Drunk Two Youths Clean Up Cash Registers Of Stands

New York, August 9.—Two slightly intoxicated young men, each waving a pistol with a sandwich born of alcohol and mounting sirens, instituted a reign of terror in the lunch wagons and coffee pots below Fourteenth street in the early hours of Sunday morning. They left a trail of empty cash registers, several proprietors, agitated detectives, and one aching head. The fortune they amassed amounted to $200 taken from four lunch wagons.

At 3.30, the two terrorists walked into the Coffee Pot at 300 West Fourteenth street, pointed their pistols at Joseph Isaman, the manager, and ordered the stock quotation "stick 'em up." Mr. Sherman thought rapidly, made up his mind that his life was worth more than the $200 in the till, and decided the bandits might be steered with their gun hands than they were upon their feet. Accordingly, he allowed them to despoil his cash register.

Suddenly, however, Mr. Sherman was smitten with compunction. He made a lunge for one of the robbers, only to be struck down with a pistol used as a blackjack. When he woke up he notified the Charles street station and detective Devine, in the van of several patrolmen, went to the restaurant. Devine drew a description of the robbers as Dr. Barker, of St. Vincent's Hospital, was treating Mr. Sherman's scalp.

Arrived back at the Charles street station house, detective Devine learned that two men, apparently the same two inasmuch as their stock in trade was ugly and ancient sedan, answering the description made by Sherman had just robbed two Varick Street lunch wagons. At 3.40 the drunken banditti had held up the Coffee Pot, manager Sherman of the wagon at 168 Varick street, and robbed him of $11. They informed him that they meant to continue their unlawful operations in a neighboring wagon at 174 Varick street, and threatened to shoot him if he emerged before they had finished with the second robbery.

"We've just held up your friend below," they told him pleasantly, "and we didn't want to play no favorites; so take for the dance."

Twenty minutes later they entered the Coffee Pot, owned by Gustav Amrose, of 187 Third avenue, and pounced upon him as he was counting the night receipts.

"Don't both counting," one of the bandits said, "we've been here." And they disappeared whence they had come. Ambrose said he had counted up to $30 and had about $10 to go.

RUBBISH HEAPS SPREAD DISEASE

Montreal, Que., Aug. 9 (By C. P.).—Yes, we have some bananas. But where do they go?" This is the comment of a Montreal citizen in telling hom some of the garbage from Montreal's uncovered rubbish heaps gets disseminated, to spread germs.

He was passing by a fruit store recently when he saw a young woman with her head hidden in a barrel sorting out discarded fruit and handing it to another woman nearby. The two were engaged in filling two potato bags with the half-rotten fruit that had filled the barrel. No cover had been sup plied for the barrel and it was a veritable paradise for germs, being divided and perhaps distributed to a dozen homes.

STANDING TOO MUCH FROM SHEIK HUSBAND

By ELSIE MARLOWE

What price marriage? How much shall we pay for our homes, our husbands, our wives? Money, labor, time, self-sacrifice, patience, tact—yes, we expect to pay heavily in all these things. And if we find a loving, loyal mate and build a friendly home, marriage is well worth all it costs in struggle and sacrifice.

But suppose marriage demands a more tragic price of us?

Suppose it demands that we sacrifice honor and pride and self-respect? Suppose it drags us in the mire and soilies every decent dream. Is marriage worth THAT price?

That's what marriage is doing for Jerry. Would YOU abide by such compact if you were in her shoes?

DEAR ELSIE:

I am a woman of twenty-four married two years, and still working.

I married rather rashly, but am too busy to repent. I believe that although the bloom of love might vanish one owes a duty to others and to the nation to avoid divorce, if possible. You get about everything but love from marriage, any way, and I would like to "play the game."

When in public I show my husband every respect because I do not like others to know I made a mistake. But, oh, the way he acts toward me! He has no sense of sportsmanship or honor. He believes in doing everything and anything he pleases and does not care how it looks.

He carries on love affairs with intimate friends of mine until it has reached the point that I cannot invite any fairly attractive girls to the house, because he makes fools of himself and he of course falls all over the girls in his office and of course, they think he is nothing but a joke. You can imagine how I enjoy being married to a joke.

He runs off to dances without me, never saying a word about it, until the gossip gets back to me, and then he violently denies it. He goes off on weekends, saying that he doesn't care what I go no long as I don't go near the place he is to be. When he comes home he has a new string of sweeties. He says he doesn't mean anything but just likes to get them excited about him.

When I say I am tired of it, and am going to divorce him, he gets furious and says I'm tired of being married or I have another wife. Else if I never should see a man again I wouldn't be hurt. I had my share of love affairs which I do not regret; but oh, boy, I certainly am sorry that I was every crazy enough to get married. What do you think? JERRY.

You say, "One owes a duty to others and to the nation to avoid divorce, if possible."

That is true, Jerry. And if little children are involved there is hardly any price which a true woman will not pay to keep her home together. But—Does such a marriage as yours render service to your nation or community? Does it make anyone finer, happier, cleaner, stronger? What is it doing to you? Is it putting your life to noble service or is it making you the despised tool of a vicious voluptuaryman?

I have no right to advise you to get a divorce, Jerry. Divorce is the gravest step which any woman can take and no outsider should dare meddle in such a problem. But I can certainly see no reason why you should stay with this man who neither loves you nor respects you.

You have evidently done everything in your power to put your marriage on a dignified basis. You have no children. You're not financially dependent on him. He is neither sick nor a cripple. There doesn't seem to be the least love between you. And you yourself say that your union stands disgraced in the eyes of your friends. Then what decent end does it serve?

DO YOU CALL SUCH A UNION "MARRIAGE"?

I don't. To me it profanes every thing that is beautiful or sacred in human life. If you have religious convictions against divorce, you should not divorce him, but you certainly can refuse to live with him. No church would censure such an act. If he wishes to divorce you for desertion the burden of the act is on his shoulders.

I do hope your desire to "play the game" Jerry. But I wonder what sort of a game you are playing? Are you playing a game which will keep marriage honorable and pure? Or are you doing the very thing which most degrades marriage?

Advice to Girls
By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl in my teens and am deeply in love with a young man one year my senior. For a long time in order to test his love I have pretended to dislike him, and foolishly paid attention to other boys. Now he has ceased caring for me because of the fact. I tried to explain but with no avail. I can't live without him, so what can I do to regain his friendship?

WORRIED.

WORRIED: What a foolish thing to do, my dear. The only course for you to pursue now, is to act so sincere in every way that you will be able to convince the young man of your love and prove to him that you have been foolish. Be very foolish girl! But don't run after him.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a young girl of sixteen and am considered very odd. At times I am jolly and amiable and at other times it is the reverse. I have often tried to overcome this unfortunate disposition but always met with very little success. How would do anything to master it—as this oddity is the cause of my dearest friend's unhappiness.

Considering yourself in my place what would you do?

TILLIE.

TILLIE: There's only one thing I would do, and that is try my very hardest every second of the time, to keep my disposition under control, not let it control me. It's nothing to be proud of to think that one is so odd from from everyone else, and there's a certain amount of vanity connected with such a thought. Be different, yes, but in such a way that will endear you to your friends, not antagonize them.

CHAPTER 22

"Ask your husband where he got the thirty thousand dollars . . . ."

Sinister, words! A sinister insinuation!

"Anything wrong with your motor, Mrs. Kendall?"

She managed her pretty smile.

"Oh, no, I was just thinking," and she added hastily, with a flush: "I was wondering whether I'd finish all my errands down-town."

The man was a friend of her father's and he laughed:

"Oh, a pretty girl can always think up an additional expensive trifle to buy."

She laughed, too, put her car in motion, and lifted a gay hand in thanks. All the way home, she passed other acquaintances, and she smiled and bowed to them, forcing back the disquieting reminder of Sydney Stokes' words, refusing to allow herself to think about them.

And yet why had that parting speech been so disquieting? she asked herself—and she could find no answer.

Phillip was home when she arrived. She dashed with him and her baby into the valiantly ornate dining-room, and her mood seemed light and happy, as usual. They played three-handed bridge after dinner.

It was only when she was in bed and staring into the darkness that she permitted herself to face the ugly thing which had lurked in the back of her mind all evening.

What had Stokes meant by that curious challenge: "Ask your husband where he got the thirty thousand dollars . . . on the afternoon of your marriage . . . ?"

Phillip had never confided his business affairs to her. She had neither asked, nor had she wanted to know about them. Her son did not have her confidence in him forlade questions. She hadn't known that he was in financial distress, that he needed thirty thousand dollars to pay off notes.

As she looked back, trying carefully to recall every detail of that memorable afternoon of their hasty marriage, she told herself that it was all very simple and natural. Somewhere Phillip had obtained money unexpectedly—probably a belated inheritance—and, feeling himself at liberty to do as he liked in early, had hastened to propose to the girl he loved.

But, striving for the truth, her mind rejected this simple explanation. It didn't hold water. She herself was not too vividly the curious shadow that had marred her happiness in the first days of the honeymoon. Phillip had not been happy—she was sure of it now—therefore had troubled him, and made him remote and distrait.

Would he have been like that, if her first explanation were correct? Would any man who had just come into a fortune, who had been put on his feet financially, and who had just married the girl he professed to love, as Phillip had been in those first days?

She knew the answer only too well. Phillip had been troubled. He had tried unsuccessfully to hide his worry. That had been the source of the thirty thousand dollars of which Sydney Stokes had hinted—or herself!

The last thought turned her sick and giddy. Had Phillip, the moment after he had married her, been worried by the how was that possible, when he had two years to decide whether he wanted to ask her to be his wife? He could not have asked her, unless he was sure he wanted her.

It was nearly dawn when, weary in mind and body, she sank into a troubled sleep. But her first waking moment brought the old, unsolved question vividly to her consciousness. She rose dispiritedly, had her bath, and dressed. In the sunny breakfast room she poured the morning coffee for her father and her husband and forced her self to eat, thankful for the newspapers that kept both men's eyes from her pale face and troubled eyes.

All day long, while she was alone, except for the servants, she pondered the question. Try as she would, she couldn't forget it. Yet, she told herself, she was undoubtedly making a mountain out of a spiderweb. Every hill erected by a man who had taken his reluctant bride and had a desire for reverse against the successful suitor.

She shuddered she dared confide in Phillip. But her awe of him, her fear of making herself ridiculous in his eyes, held her back. For two days she suffered in silence. Then she resolved she must find out the truth—or have her whole married happiness poisoned with doubt.

Feeling like a traitor to the man she loved with all her heart, yet telling herself that only in this way would she be able to dispel forever the sinister thing that was threatening her, she went to the phone and called Sydney Stokes.

His voice sounded complacent, not at all surprised, and as if she had expected her call. The knowledge made her bite her lips vexedly, but she left the matter feeling more at peace. Since she had talked to him, she would discover the absurdity of that insinuation. Of this she was confident.

She had made an appointment to meet him after the bank closed that afternoon.

CHAPTER 23

The Rendezvous

Norma was essentially simple and honest. She believed in people. She knew very little of intrigue, and, though she was aware that a great many men and women—more often married than single—carried on "affairs," she felt that she could never be a party to so degrading a thing. She was remote, protected by her own good nens and sweetness.

And yet, when she parked her car around the corner from the bank where Sydney Stokes worked, and waited for him to appear, she felt horribly guilty and disloyal to her husband. She even planned this secret meeting, without his knowledge, a former suitor for her hand, but because of the mission on which she had come to question this same suitor regarding facts of her husband's life that he had not chosen to confide in her.

But I must know!" she told herself striking her gloved hand desperately on the wheel. "Our happiness depends on it. Of course, it's nothing at all! But Sydney must admit that it's nothing."

He came finally, triumph glowing in his green eyes. He looked more gaunt than ever, a dull cloud of excitement sat on his prominent cheek-bones, and emphasized the violet circles below.

"I rather thought you'd ring me today," he remarked, as he seated himself beside her.

Norma made no answer. She was busy piloting her car out of the traffic into a little street.

"If any one sees us together like this, there'll be talk," she thought. "But I shan't care, if I'm happy again And, when it's all over I'll go and confess. I'll tell how foolish I've been. Surely he'll understand and forgive me."

She headed the car into the country. Stokes watched her with satisfaction from under half-closed lids.

"You're discreet, Norma" he remarked meekly.

She flushed with annoyance.

"The necessity for having to be what you call discreet is very unpleasant to me," she replied coldly.

He chuckled.

"It won't be only because you're still in the honeymoon stage. Later, you'll like it like to be a bit naughty."

She did not speak until they were well out of town speeding along a comparatively road. Suddenly she hedges in fragrant blooms.

"I asked to see you, Sydney, because I wanted you to explain and—and to apologize for that insinuation you made when I left you yesterday. You were leaving me the other day," she was beginning, but he silenced her with a lazy wave of one hers on the wheel.

"Then slow down a bit," he said. "I

"Stop here," he directed suddenly. "I don't say a word, I swear it."

Biting her lips, she reluctantly brought the car to a halt under the tortuous shade of a towering tree, meadows stretched about them. They were insects droned in the hedges.

Norma moved as far away from Stokes as the narrow seat permitted, and said coldly:

"Well?"

He leaned at her mournfully.

"Oh, I say, Norma, don't be so huffy. One would think from your manner that I'd stolen the family ratile. What I'm going to tell you is all your own good. I have you never mind the details—everything—I love you, and I'm proud of it, even if you did treat me badly."

"If that is what you wish to tell me, we'll return to town immediately," said Norma, and she started to rise.

But he reached over and coolly removed the key from the ignition-switch.

"We'll stay here until I've had my say" he announced, and his green eyes flashed.

Norma sank back with a sigh.

"Well, please hurry. I'll be late for dinner, as it is."

"And I suppose that Phil Kendall insists on your giving an account of yourself, if you're late in getting home" he remarked mockingly. "It would be just his style."

"My husband," she emphasized the words, "will not be dining at home this evening. He motored out of town with a client who wanted to see a piece of property. If it gives you any pleasure to know it, I dine at home, whether my husband is there or not," she concluded icily.

"What a little spitfire it has become! You didn't used to be. I dare say that's the effect of true love," he added blithely, a grim line about his mouth.

She didn't answer. She was wondering whether the whole mysterious but mess was merely a ruse on Stoke's part to make love to her. She heard devoutly that that was all there was to it; and she was eager to have the whole affair over and done with.

While she waited, trying to control her impatience and distaste, a car flashed past, headed for town.

She though that there was something familiar about the profile of the man who sat beside the driver. He looked like Phillip. "But, of course, it couldn't be."

The first minute she had forgotten all about the car and its occupants, for Stokes had begun to speak. She listened, with growing horror.

M'MILLAN TOLD OF ROBIN SNIPE

Birds Fly North Over 11,000 Miles Or So

Sydney, N.S., Aug. 9.—The story of the South American robin snipe which flies way up into the Arctic to hatch his young was one of Commander Donald B. MacMillan's most remarkable tales when he was in Sydney just before leaving again for the Arctic. Every year robin snipe fly north, the commander said, 11000 miles or so. There, in a nest in the Arctic moss, the mother snipe lays one egg. After the egg is hatched out and the young bird develops they start back southward again. They fly thousands fo miles away down to Patagonia. Commander MacMillan's stories are related in the Sydney Record.

Nobody knows the great urge behind this long-distance trip, but Commander MacMillan's theory was that long ago the Arctic was the habitat of this species of bird, and the racial instinct of centuries ago persists to this day.

Another thing related was that 9000 feet of line were failed to touch the bottom of the sea a few miles from the North Pole. Foot after foot it reeled off, carried down by a lead in a great ice crevasch, but the 9,000-foot mark was reached—and the supply of wire all used up—with bottom still untouched. Near the Pole, Commander MacMillan said, the ocean is probably a couple of miles deep. But halibut swim about in those far northern waters. That was one of the interesting facts and one of importance to ichthyologists or students of the life of the fish, that was revealed during one of Commander MacMillan's trips to the Arctic. The halibut, which it had generally been supposed never went so far north, were found in the stomachs of great narwhals—the sea unicorns of story.

Something of wide importance near the Pole are great deposits of coal. "There's enough on millions of tons of coal up there," Commander MacMillan said, "good coal too. One day I sent one of my Eskimos out to do something for me. He came back with a big lump of ice under one arm—and a big lump of coal under the other. "Where did you get the coal?" I asked him. "The valley is full of it" he replied. And it was."

The commander took occasion to con found the dogma that no vegetation grows in the Arctic regions. On his trips to the Arctic waters Commander MacMillan has found over 700 different kinds of flowers. As for trees, evidence has been found on these trips that once upon a time at least 36 varieties of trees now found in the temperate and tropical zones grew in abundance in the Arctic territory, among them the giant sequoia now familiar in California.

He suggested that the Eskimo people—uneducated today, as the world rates education, without books or written language a primitive people as they were 2,000 years ago—were the equals of supposedly superior people in point of intelligence and more than their equals on the physical side.

"Every year when we leave the north Commander MacMillan went on, "one of my scientists always turns to me and says MacMillan, those people are just as intelligent as we are."

KING FUAD MET VATICAN RULES

Egyptian Monarch Moves From Royal Palace Before Visiting Pope

Rome, Aug. 8.—A good example of the latest hostility existing between the Vatican and the Quirinal was afforded Sunday when King Fuad of Egypt was obliged to move with the whole of his suite from the Royal Palace to the Excelsior Hotel before being allowed to visit the Pope. High Vatican officials met him there in five motor cars and accompanied him to the Vatican and later re-accompanied him to his hotel after his papal visit. King Fuad remained in the hotel to receive a return visit from Cardinal Gasparri, papal secretary of state, and for lunch afterwards returned to the royal palace.

Since the fall of temporal power the Vatican etiquette forbids any one coming from the Quirinal to the Vatican to call on the Pope.

King Fuad had his retinue moved to the Excelsior Hotel early this morning. At eleven o'clock Vatican dignitaries wearing characteristic medieval costume with white starched Elizabethan ruffs, presented themselves at the door with five closed motor cars and accompanied King Fuad to the Vatican. The papal guard was drawn up in the court of Saint Damascus and rendered military honors while the band played papal and Egyptian anthems.

The meeting between the Pope and the Egyptian monarch was most cordial and lasted twenty minutes. The Pope presented the King with his autograph, and conferred on him the Order of the Gold Spur, the highest honor which can be conferred by the Vatican. King Fuad is the only living ruler to be thus honored. Then after the King had presented his suite to the Pontiff they descended to the floor below and paid their respects to Cardinal Gasparri. The visit to the Vatican ended with a walk through the Vatican museums.

With the same pomp and ceremony King Fuad was escorted back to the Hotel Excelsior, where a few minutes later he received the return visit of Cardinal Gasparri. Then after stopping for lunch at the hotel he returned to the Quirinal.

LOCAL COLOUR IS DISAPPEARING IN OUR POETRY

Ottawa, Aug. 5.—Recently a discussion arose pointed out that Canada's youngest poets are largely influenced by the "spring fever" or spirit of place, than were the men of the 1860 Group whose stanzas have won prominent place in English literature. Canadian poetry is reaching its experimental stage in its development when sophisticated glow-pot supplies the inspiration, little or nothing in Nature, and it may be that in the immediate future lyrics rich in local color will be deplorably few.

Yet even so Canada will have heroes and nobly sung, for there is scarcely a district in the country which has not been idealized by a native master of word-music.

While the mountains and prairies have had their poets, the forests, rivers and pasture lands of Eastern Canada have also been most fortunate in this regard. A very creditable anthology could be compounded of the poems which drew their inspiration from the Laurentian hills, which echoed into the northern wilderness beyond Ottawa and Montreal.

It would contain some of the best lyrics of Archibald Lampman, Duncan Scott and Arthur S. Bourinot, as well as much fine work by minor singers. A viola and half a dozen other splendid pieces by that model Ottawa poet who links his poetry under a room de plume would be found between its covers. Its contents would be no more descriptive verse, but classics which exhale the atmosphere of the painter and ancient lolls.

Miss Carman has immortalized the Grand Pre country and the tidal rivers of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. The Tantramar marshes and the river islands of New Brunswick have made rich tribute to Art through the poetry of Charles G. D. Roberts and Theodore Goodridge Roberts. The fertile farm lands of Canada's oldest province have contributed largely to the charm of Henry Bernard and Wilfrid Jones.

Nor has the Great Lakes district been in any way neglected. Scott and Lampman responded to its influence, its rhythms more in the work of William Wilfred Campbell and Ethelwyn Wetherald.

These senior poets did for Canada what the Canadian landscape painters are now so finely undertaking. Even if their successors expose the influences of physical environment and give us very little full of female subjugations there will still be a rich treasury of Canadian poetry that is distinctively national because its composers yielded

SEARCHING FOR MISSING HEIRS

Left About $60,000— Believed They Are Alive

Toronto, Ont., Aug. 9 (By Canadian Press)—With two estates waiting to be disposed of because of their absence, renewed efforts are being put forth to find some trace of the whereabouts of Charles Kenneth Grey Kains and his son, George Kains, who mysteriously disappeared from their branding house in Toronto, in May, 1926, and have not been heard from since. The two men are heirs to about $50,000 and there is every reason to believe they are alive.

One estate that cannot be cleared up until the two men are found or declared to be dead is that of Mrs. Charles Kains, who before her marriage in 1902 was Christina Crane, of Turnbull, Ontario. She died in 1917 and left to the family resided in Toronto. Mr. Kanes was a neice of the late George McVicar, a wealthy land owner of Port Arthur who at his death left a valuable legacy to Mrs. Kains and she in turn willed her husband and their son, George, each a sum equal to $100 per month as long as each of them should live and in the event of Charles dying first, George would receive his father's share. They drew some of this money and disappeared.

The executors of Mrs. Kane's will, Alex Crane of Byron, Ont., and J. W. McCullough, lawyer, of Toronto, endeavored to secure trace of the missing men, and the will was not probated until 1927, at which time Mr. McCullough remained as executor, leaving Mr. Crane sole executor. The amount standing to the credit of Charles Kains and his son in this estate is $21,000 and this is still waiting. There is also the home, St. Mary's street.

The second estate which awaits news of the missing father and son is that of Dr. Robert Kains, a brother of Charles who died in St. Thomas, Ont. on May 3, 1927. Dr. Kains left $2,500 in cash outright to his brother and $2,500 to his nephew, George. There are a number of other beneficiaries under this will, including Archibald John Kains of St. Thomas, the only other near relative of the Kains' family, which is one of the oldest and has been one of the most prominent in the Talbot City.

Charles Kains, the elder of the missing pair, is a man 52 years of age. He was of a very quiet and retiring disposition, smoked a pipe almost incessantly and came from Toronto from St. Thomas where he was employed as a painter in the Michigan Central Railway shops, and some little social labor. The son, a man of about 25 years of age, was of a young disposition and sailed the lakes for a time. The supposition of detectives who have been following the case, is that the pair may have struck off together for some distant point, but the fact that neither has drawn on the fund created under the will of Mrs. Charles Kains gives a mysterious turn to the case.

DANISH WOMAN LIKES TO TALK OF HOME TOWN

Toronto, Aug. 9.—Miss Kitty Christensen, of Copenhagen, Denmark, who has been a happy traveller around the world, for some years, is interested on the subject of her native city.

"Nearly all our girls work, even the daughters of the well-to-do. We have a great many women doctors, and dental college admitting each year an equal number of male and female students. The medical profession seems to attract many of our women also, and then, of course, they are found in hospitals, offices, stores and factories."

Politics are alluring to a great many of the Danish women according to Miss Christensen, and already the important position of Minister of Education, Literature and Art, has been filled by one of them. For two years Mrs. Nina Bang occupied this position in a Socialistic Ministry. The voting privilege is appreciated by Danish women as a whole, but those in the labor ranks use it most conscientiously.

Asked concerning the educational system of her country, Miss Christensen referred with pride to the Folk High Schools, where during the winter months, most helpful courses in agriculture and many other types of "real life" are given for the benefit of young men and women on farms. As school days frequently end for this section of the nation at the early age of 11 the winter courses of the Folk High Schools make possible extension work in many subjects.

Now Indigestion Is Conquered

By a new scientific method which cannot fail to benefit—Here is the proof.

This new product of a Canadian laboratory is causing much favorable comment by physicians.

Renzyme cannot fail to relieve indigestion because it restores the digestive fluids to the stomach. Relief is obtained promptly because the very first dose of Renzyme is effective in helping to digest the food in the stomach.

Rev. A. B. Palmer, The Rectory, St. James Church, St. Mary's, Ont., writes:

"Having been troubled for some years with indigestion I have tried a good many remedies but without results. Some time ago friend of mine spoke to me about a preparation called Renzyme being put out by your firm and immediately I secured a bottle and found almost instant relief.

"I can say without hesitation that it is the best remedy for stomach and bowel trouble that I have ever tried and wish to tell you that I will never be without it and take this opportunity to show my appreciation for what it has done for me."

You can obtain Renzyme from your druggist at $1.50 a bottle or if will be sent to you, postpaid, on receipt of price. If you mention this paper. The Renzyme Laboratories, Toronto, 2, Canada.

BELLE THEATRE

A reversal of the usual order of things—a pronouncement by a director's faith in a story, and a producer with vision to see that that faith needs some moulding—are the prime elements responsible for a combination that has contributed one of the outstanding accomplishments in the screen.

"Samuel Goldwyn did not select me to make 'Stella Dallas.' I wanted to direct this film." So spoke Henry King, best known as the mainspring behind behind "The White Sister," "23½ Hours Leave" and the gold medal photoplay, "To'able David," and now for his masterful direction of the best seller novel "Stella Dallas" scenarized by Frances Marion.

"Stella Dallas" appealed to me because of its humanity, the greatness of its story and its out of the ordinary central character. Stella is the kind of a girl with glamor and glow, life can be laughed at and cried with. She you wonder that Stella Dallas as a book made such a lasting impression on me? I only hope I have been fortunate enough to catch the same spirit in my screen translation."

CAPITOL THEATRE

Local theatregoers turned out in large numbers at the Capitol Theatre last evening to witness one of John Gilbert's latest and best productions "Flesh and the Devil", a screen feature of gripping interest, and not a few thrills. Supporting John Gilbert in this excellent Clarence Brown production are Greta Garbo and Lars Hanson combining to produce a feature which is well up to Capitol standard. It will be shown again today and Wednesday, together with an entertaining Pathe-tonal vaudeville act and a good comedy.

LOOKING FOR WOMAN

Oshawa, Aug. 8.—While parked in front of the New Martin theatre on Saturday afternoon, a motorcycle driven by Martin Parrow was struck by a lady who did not stop or return to the scene of the accident. The license number of her car has been given to the police who are acting in the matter. The motorcycle was not seriously damaged.

PEDDLING TEA

Cobourg, Aug. 9.—Magistrate W. H. Boyd today announced his decision in the case of Ruse vs Ocean Blend Tea Co., convicting the firm of peddling tea in Cobourg without a municipal transient traders' license. A fine of $75 was imposed. In lieu of a license to be taken out by the company, costs of court to be paid in either event. Magistrate Floyd ruled that blending of imported tea in Ontario could not be considered as a manufacturing process as claimed by the defense, as the tea itself remains a foreign import and only the mixture. The decision is an important one as the same company have been similarly charged in Port Hope, Campbellford and other centres.

SUFFERED BROKEN RIBS

Port Hope, Aug. 9.—Sideswiping a truck driven by Jas. Ashton, Port Hope, at the intersection of the C.P.R. driveway on Ontario street, a motorcycle touring car turned completely over into the ditch on the south side of the road about 11.30 Monday morning, the car which was occupied by a mother and her daughter, was driven by the former, Mrs. Hanley from Pennsylvania state. They were on their way to Toronto. After the crash which was travelling west, turned completely around on the road facing east and landed over into the ditch up side down. The occupants were severely shaken up and Mrs. anley is now in Port Hope hospital with several ribs broken. Her daughter however, escaped any serious injury beyond the shaking up.

MET WITH ACCIDENT

THIEVING POPULAR

Oshawa, Aug. 9.—Thieving was an all too popular pastime in Oshawa over the week-end and four instances in which residents were victimized have been reported to the police. In common with most centres of any size this city endures a certain amount of petty thieving but with four thefts reported within a few hours of one another the thieving assumes the proportions of an epidemic. How brief this task with which remains to be seen, and bicycles a club bag filled with clothing and a license plate are among the article of list reported stolen.

BANKERS LOSE TO THE PRINTERS

Intelligencer Triumphs In Softball Game 12—9

The Intelligencer soft-ballers took the Bankers team into camp in a well played game on Queen Mary School grounds last evening by a score of 12-9. It was a real snappy game between two evenly - balanced clubs and the Intelligencer boys coralled an early lead and headed the parade throughout, although the Bankers threatened seriously to overhaul them a number of times.

Gene Doyle made his debut on the mound for the ink-slingers, and he went the full-route and hurled effective ball. He was given excellent support by his team-mates — Bernie Brown in left field made several brilliant catches and robbed the Bankers of several hits that were tagged easy two-baggers.

Most everyone expected that Dan O'Donohue would do the firing but the Manager of the Intelligencer sent in the former although a number of good hits were registered off of Doyle, he was very effective in the pinches and at the end of the game had struck out four batters, to his opponents two. Cook took care of his slants behind the bat.

Ron Blakely toued them up for the Bankers and he is developing into a nice pitcher and will improve with age if given a chance. He had as his battery mate Hetherington, a big boy who knows the game and handled the pitcher well.

"Curly" O'Donohue did some nice batting for the printers and came through with a timely home-run in the first inning to send two in ahead of him.

Leo Doyle was in centre field for the printers and was placed at the top of the batting list and this change worked out perfectly as he is short in stature and was a very hard man to pitch to, O'Brien always a lusty cluster was next and O'Donohue in the third position and these three accounted for a percentage of the hits and runs.

"Piper" Ladefond has been added to the Intelligencer team and will greatly strengthen the printers.

T. McKinnon looked after the umpiring and his work was all that could be expected, and he will be welcomed back in future games by both sides.

Scorer — Earl Gilbert.

IT'S VALUE TO THE PUBLIC BY J. A. McFEE

Is far sight a question of age?

No, age has nothing to do with it. In fact most children are far-sighted in some extent, but-in youth the defect is often not suspected.

Does far-sight in children cause distress?

That depends upon the extent of the error and other circumstances.

It would be possible for a far-sighted person to suffer severely and not recognize the cause of the trouble?

Yes, thousands are so afflicted.

DOUBLE - HEADER HERE TOMORROW

Nationals Must Defeat Point Anne To Get In Play-Off

The two "Bobs" Elliott and Redner will lead their ball clubs into town onorrow for another double battle with the Canadian Nationals. The hustlers have nothing to gain or lose, in this game but the rivalry with the Belleville Club has been of the keenest variety and although they have won five straight from the Mills crew the latter are not yet convinced that he Sinellers are better ball team. The Northerners are a smart Intermediate club but the Belleville pitchers are meeting with better success than any time this season. Gerow or Derry will likely start against the hampions in the first game.

On the other hand the railroaders must defeat Point Anne and thus prevent any possibility of a tie for second place. If Belleville wins the day-offs will start immediately while if the present-holders are victorious things will be somewhat complicated.

The first game will get under way at two o'clock sharp with Colling and Greene in charge.

Gibson and Strachan may oppose each other in the mid-week affair although Bennett may possibly do the flinging for the villagers.

RICKEY TO STAY WITH CARDS

St. Louis, Aug. 9.—Branch Rickey will continue as vice-president and business manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, world's champions, under the terms of a five-year contract announced here by President Sam Breadon. Rickey's old contract expires with this season.

Rickey was field manager for the Cardinals until May, 1925, when he was replaced by Rogers Hornsby, now of the New York Giants.

THEVENOW RECOVERING

St. Louis, Aug. 9.—A week or ten days may bring Tommy Thevenow Cardinal shortstop, back into uniform again after an enforced absence following a double fracture and dislocation of the ankle while sliding in second base June 21. Dr. Obert Hyland, the club surgeon, said the ankle was healing rapidly.

ONTARIOS GRAB WIN IN EIGHTH

Champions Play Kingston Alerts Wed.—City League Finals

The Prontenacs and Ontarios were tied going into the final innings of last night's exhibition game but the exchampions of Eastern Ontario helped themselves to a quartette of runs in this chukker and walked off with the long end of a 7-3 score. It was without any doubt one of the best games seen this year on the Ammovites lawn. Close and tight-fielding with but very little hitting was the order of the day and up to the end of the seventh each team had only scored three runs but the tricolor hit the ball hard in this frame.

Aileen Wilkins and Miss Douglas were the respective catchers and both were in fine form.

Miss Thompkins turned in a smart game at second base and got a hand when she made a nie running catch in the fourth inning. Miss Thompkins and Miss Evelyn Cook reinforced a smart double play. Vern Weir and Kilen Colling umpired.

Alerts Coming

The management of the Ontarios have arranged with the Kingston Alerts for a game here on the Ammovites lawn tomorrow evening at 6 p.m. The Limestoners are bringing their strongest line-up here and a fine game is expected. Margaret Fairbairn is slated to do the cunning for the Ontarios with Aileen Wilkins behind the bat.

City Finals

On Friday evening the first of a three-game series for the City League championship will start. The contending teams are the Prontenacs and Second Shirt. The first club winning two games will be awarded the cup. Both Rev. Moncrief of the Prontenacs and Ruth Barrett of the Deacon Shirt have their teams ready for the fray. Every Friday night open for this game

SOCCER LEAGUE IN OLD COUNTRY OPEN NEXT WEEK

Professional Clubs Have Been Recalling Their Players.

London, Eng., Aug. 9.—The Scottish soccer league swings into action on Saturday, Aug. 20, and the English season opens a week later. For the past few weeks the professional clubs have been busy recalling their players, while the soccer fan is having plenty of excitement in the post-season practice matches. The money derived from these games annually goes to charity, and each year an amount of half a million dollars is realized for worthy institutions.

In the English League

Leeds United and West Bromwich Albion have been relegated to the Second Division, and the vacancies thus created in the First Division will be filled by Middlesbrough and Portsmouth. With regard to Middlesbrough it is a case of renewing acquaintance with a division of which in former years they achieved some distinction but Portsmouth will be in the upper circle of the League for the first time.

The clubs that have lost their place in the Second Division are Bradford City and Darlington, and the relegation of Bradford City means that the great Yorkshire industrial center which has had both of its clubs in the First Division, will have to be content next season with Third Division fare.

The promoted clubs from the Third Division are Stoke City, and Bristol City, both of whom have had experience of the First Division.

The League has placed Bradford City and Darlington in the Northern Section of the Third Division, and to enable this to be done Walsall has been transferred to the Southern Section, a change they will probably appreciate because they are likely to receive larger gate money percentages from the Southern clube than they did from the majority of the Northern recreations.

The two retiring clubs in the Northern Section were re-elected, Accrington Stanley and Barrow both finding favor at the annual meeting of the League held in the South there is one important change, Aberdare Athletic having been dropped.

Torquay United were elected in their stead, in spite of the fact that the whole of the Southern Section clubs recommended the re-election of the Welsh club.

Torquay have been earnestly at work getting together a team, and the management are confident that the new club will place in the field will abundantly justify the choice the League has made in admitting them.

The annual report of the Welsh Football Association says the Association are gratified in the upward trend of the game but many clubs are financially embarrassed through the after-effects of the industrial trouble in their areas while other clubs through making rash contracts and not carefully considering their position, found themselves in difficulties. In the Scottish league Bo'ness comes up into the first string by virtue of winning the second division championship last season. They will be accompanied by Cowdenbeath, Dundee United and Stenhousemuir, bottom of the standing last season.

BOLD BID FOR LIBERTY LIKELY MEANS MAN'S DEATH

POSSIBILITY GROWS OF DELAY IN EXECUTION OF CONDEMNED MEN

Judge Sanderson To Give Decision Tomorrow On Last Plea

DUE TO DIE.

Unless Governor Orders Delay Electrocution Will Occur Before Morning

Boston, Mass., Aug. 10.—A possibility that the execution of Nicola Sasso and Bartolomeo Vanzetti might be postponed from early tomorrow morning was seen when Judge Sanderson of Supreme Court announced today that he would not give his decision until tomorrow morning on the move by defense counsel. He is to decide whether he shall permit a bill of exceptions from his refusal to grant writs of error and habeas corpus to go to the full bench of the Supreme Court, Governor Fuller, however, had made no announcement of his decision on a petition for a stay of execution.

Last Hour Pleas Heard

Boston, Mass., Aug. 10.—Justice George Sanderson, of the State Supreme Court, today notified Arthur D. Hill, Chief Counsel for Sacco and Vanzetti and Attorney A. K. Reading that he would hear at noon today arguments in defense exceptions to his refusal to grant a writ of error. Completing their notice of appeal given yesterday counsel filed a formal bill of exceptions this morning.

Electric Chair Waits Victims

Boston, Mass., Aug. 10.— Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti awoke today to face what presumably is their last day of life. Unless Gov. Alvin Fuller and his council decide to grant them an eleventh hour respite or their counsel can succeed in their last minute legal strategy, the seven year fight of the condemned men to escape the electric chair will come to a dramatic end shortly after midnight.

Riots In Chicago

Chicago, Ills., Aug. 10.—Led by a sixteen year old girl, a mob, numbering four thousand men and women, alleged naively roaring "The Third International" battle song of world radicals and shouting "Mob police" marched toward the loop district early today. It was dispersed only after a clash with police reserves who resorted to tear bombs and revolver shots. Twenty four men and three women, including the girl leader, Aurora Angelo, a pretty, bobbed-haired high school girl, were arrested. Several persons were reported injured as the rush began and end before stubborn police resistance.

Bombs at Buenos Aires

Buenos Aires, Aug. 10.—A bomb exploded in the Palace of Justice early today. The damage was slight and it is not known whether anyone was injured. The explosion at this building came a short time after an explosion at the railway station of Velez Sarsfield. There were no victims, but a few freight cars were damaged.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 10.— Nicola Sacco today refused to sign a petition for a writ of Habeas Corpus which Attorney Ciaglolo, Attorney associated with the Sacco-Vanzetti defence committee, submitted to him at the State prison. Ciaglolo, accompanied by a notary public and a lawyer associated with the defence committee, said after coming from the death house that Sacco had become angry when the petition was shown him, had denounced the courts and had exclaimed, "They have crucified me for the last seven years. I will have no more to do with them." Vanzetti, the lawyer said, had seemed pleased at the idea of a petition and had signed readily.

MARRIED FIVE MEN WITHOUT DIVORCING

Kashaw, Slovakia, Aug. 10.—Old Chimineti blames her first husband "shade" operating from the other world, for her four-fold bigamy.

The husband was jealous, Madam Chimineti told the court, and forbade her to marry again. She sought relief from loneliness by marryin four men in succession. Each time however, the voice of the dead firs choice reproached her so threatening by that she fled frbm her new mate going to another place where she thought she would be hidden, ever from the psychic husband. The voice followed her, she testified, and in her flight she neglected to get divorces.

Madame Chimineti was sentenced to five months in jail—one for each husband.

PROTESTS FROM ALL THE WORLD

Protest came from nearly all over the civilized world to save Sacco and Vanzetti on this the last scheduled day of their lives. The protests were mostly peaceful.

In Buenos Aires they bombed the Palace of Justice slightly and in Monte Vido an unexploded bomb was found.

France, Ireland and Canada reported meetings marked by good order.

In Havana and Santo Domingo American Legions were guarded.

A sixteen year-old girl led a wild crowd that did some damage in Chicago.

Governor Fuller's reply to their request for a delay of execution was not expected until late in the day. Their counsel was promised consideration at a hearing by the Supreme Court of the State on a plea of errors.

Sacco refused to sign petition for the writ of habeas corpus but Vanzetti, however signed it.

WHO WILL GET THE PLUM IS BURNING QUESTION NOW

Much speculation is being made on the streets as to who the successor to Mayor Charles Boyle, become Tax Collector, for this city will be.

Some people are of the opinion that the local office will be removed from this city to Peterboro, while others say that Col. Roscoe Vanderwater will be appointed to the position made vacant by the resignation of Mr. Doyle. It is rumored that Col. Vanderwater has been contemplating retiring from farming and taking up residence in this city for some time past. Prominent Conservatives state that they are satisfied that Civil Service Commissioner Gave had a man stationed in this city for some time past watching the movement of Conservative civil servants.

Charles E. Hanna, Ex. M. P., who "ed Roscoe Vanderwater who was the Liberal candidate in the Federal election last fall hold the Federal patronage for this riding and the Intelligencer learned today from a reliable source that Mr. Hanna was a caller at the Vanderwater Farm in Sidney on Sunday evening last and on one man stated "anything may happen to the "Tory" civil servants now."

114 YEARS AGO CANADIANS IN GALLANT NAVAL FIGHT

August 10th is a memorable day in Canadian History. It is 114 years ago since a little Canadian squadron on Lake Ontario attacked and defeated a much larger United States squadron and captured two of their ships, the "Julia" and the "Growler." Commander, Yeo was in command of the Canadian fleet and Admiral Chauncey was the U.S. Commander.

Theodore Roosevelt in his history of the War of 1812-15 gives the Canadian Fleet credit for displaying great gallantry and dash in the engagement which were fought under weather conditions favorable to the Americans. The Canadian fleet suffered no damage beyond a few shot holes in their sails.

LEAPED FROM SWIFTLY MOVING EXPRESS FRACTURING HIS SKULL

Germun Deported From United States Makes Bid For Liberty

EXPECTED TO DIE

Not Missed At Time Of Escape — Discovered Lying On Track

Jumping from the window of a swiftly moving train, John Vicik, a Slav, who was being deported from the United States through the port of Montreal suffered a fractured skull, a badly cut head and is not expected to live. A carload of men being deported from the States passed through Trenton this morning between 1 and 3 o'clock on the Canadian Pacific Railway line. After the train had left that town, Vicik was found on the railway track with a fractured skull and a nasty cut behind his ear. He was not missed until the train had reached Smith Falls.

Brought to Belleville

Vicik was taken to Dr. McQuaid's office at Trenton, but shortly afterwards was brought to the Belleville General Hospital and handed over to the care of Dr. J. S. McCreary. An X-ray was taken of the man's skull, and a bad fracture was shown. Vicik was about 36 years of age. In his pockets was found some correspondence, letters to some woman in Montreal, but as they were written in German they could not be read.

Not Expected To Live

The injured man was a native of Slovenaku, Czecko-Slovakia and was born in 1901. He was admitted to the United States in 1925 but was being deported after serving a term in jail at Toledo, Ohio. There were 133 men in the party who were being sent back to various quarters of Europe.

When about 150 yards out of the C. P.R. station, at Trenton, Vicik made his bid for liberty with disastrous results to himself. He was picked up shortly afterwards by C.P.R. engine crew.

At press time Vicik was in the operating room at Belleville General Hospital with but slight hopes held out for his recovery.

TODAY'S THOUGHT

To lose a friend is the greatest of all losses.

SYRUS.

THE CONQUEROR

Lord Balfour confesses that during all his life he has been a "devotee of Idleness." This was perhaps an excuse for his not being able to go to the Derby, but is in line with the rather languid manner which he used to assume when, as secretary for Ireland, he was the object of ferocious attacks in the House of Commons by the Irish members.

The sincerity of Balfour need not be challenged, but it is perhaps idle for him to maintain that he has led the life of an idle man. He has, in reality, got through an immense amount of hard work.

Perhaps he would say that he had been forced to do it against his inclination and that he would have preferred to spend far more time loafing and inviting his soul. That is the kind of protective coloration many men have adopted. They are reproached for not having done more, although they themselves are conscious that they had exerted their full power. Their vanity prompts them to explain that they would have wrought more valiantly had they not been incurably lazy.

Undoubtedly, some affect an air of indolence and appear to have no fixed engagements, for the express purpose of astonishing the world with their achievements and causing the question to be asked how they possibly could find time to do so much.

The sin is not in loving idleness, but in being idle. As long as one keeps busy there is no harm in preferring to be idle. There may be such a thing as "insured effort" but most human effort is forced. Great men, inherently lazy, must often force themselves to great works.

The brave man is the one who conquers his fear. The industrious man is the one who conquers his laziness. Balfour has been both industrious and great.

SPIRIT OF PEACE

At the formal opening of the Peace Bridge over the Niagara River between Buffalo and Fort Erie, all the speeches delivered breathed the sentiment of peace and concord between the two great branches of the English-speaking peoples. The Prince of Wales, Premier Baldwin, the Vice-President, General Charles Dawes, U. S. Secretary of State Kellogg and Premier Ferguson—all of them expressed the heartiest desire for the continuance of close and brotherly relations between the great republic and the great empire. It was an opinion common to all that anything which threatened to disturb those relations would be a menace to the peace and welfare of the whole world, and that the strongest guarantee of world-peace is the continuance of Anglo-American friendship and co-operation.

We believe these sentiments are genuine. Indeed they are so solidly based on reason and fact that it is not easy to understand how any responsible statesman can fail to be influenced by them.

Naturally, allusions were made to the failure of the Geneva Disarmament conference. On this subject the most significant utterance was made by Vice President Dawes. It was a characteristically frank expression of plain common sense. Experts, said General Dawes, may be slow to complete the difficult task of harmonizing conflicting views; "but if Great Britain requires light cruisers which the United States does not need, and the United States requires heavy ships which Great Britain does not need, there is no excuse for inaugurating a competition under which ships will be built which neither of them need." In these words there is the germ of a solution of the disarmament problem.

LOOKING AHEAD

There is significance in the fact that $80,000,000 of life insurance is in force in the United States and over $5,000,000,000 in Canada. It represents three things: First, a vast increase in national wealth; second, the diffusion of that wealth, and third, a growing sense of foresight. No one may say which of these factors has been the most influential. Having regard to general social and economic conditions however it is probable that the distribution of wealth, which has added so much to the purchasing power of the common people, has had more to do with these amazing figures than anything else. Indeed, we must regard this advance in buying strength as the salient feature of the past four or five decades, as well as the vast convincing proof of the tendency to make North America the centre of the world's wealth. It has grown out of the power to produce. How far that power is in excess of its natural resources, as against the will to do, it would be hard to say but it would be sheer blindness to ignore the human element. We are on this side of the Atlantic, an eager ambitious and aggressive people, with a rich heritage.

At one time and not remotely, men spoke of insurance with qualifications. Perhaps the common judgment was summed up in the conviction that it was a privilege rather than a duty. No one talks that way today, and this change in the popular attitude has come about through a clearer appreciation of the service given by life insurance. Fifty years ago men believed that the only protection they could give to their dependents lay in what they could accumulate in money, a business or a home. That was an unsound view, because it omitted from the reckoning the natural hazard of life. Survival was the pivot. Death meant the shipwreck of such a plan. There was also the risk of disablement or impaired health. If the head of the household died prematurely, the entire structure fell. His family, too, often found themselves in poverty. As time proceeded, however, there came about a realization of the vital fact that insurance could be made to serve the purpose of providing against the dread contingency of death, or to make the span of life complete; and when that truth had become generally recognized the statistics relating to insurance took on a new meaning. By great leaps, the volume of life insurance in force began to rise. In Canada it rose from $8,000,000 in 1867 to over $5,000,000,000 in 1927.

Life insurance is today an integral factor in the broad plan of civilization. Its purpose is to conserve human values and experience has demonstrated that it is in a very comprehensive sense doing that very thing.

The maharajah of Indore was asked in New York the other day his opinion of prohibition. With a gracious smile he potentate replied:

"Prohibition is no good to the prohibitionists, for they wouldn't drink any way and it is no good to the anti-prohibitionists for they can easily buy or make all the booch they want."

"It is not wine that makes a man drunk; it is the man himself."

A correspondent of the Montreal Star gives instances of Irish bulls that leave little to be desired. Here are a few of them:

"At peace with all the world and on good terms with everyone else." (Mr. Parnell).

THE PHARISEE

(A Special Poem Dedicated to Mr. Jack Miner)

The crow, in a decent suit of black,
With invisible hands behind his back,
Walks over my shaven bit of grass
On his way to teach his Sunday School class.

No other bird of meadow or tree
Is quite as respectable as he,
But his Moral Sense, if the truth were out,
Is nothing to tell the world about.

For the solemn garb and the measured gait
We're a mockery, I regret to state.
The devil lurks in his bright, black eye,
And he wears a little while passing by.

But still in his decent suit of black
With invisible hands behind his back,
He passes grave my bit of grass
On the way to corrupt his Sunday School class.

BEGGARS IN OLD MONTREAL HAVE NO IMAGINATION

Motto—Stick To a Good Tale When You Find One

Montreal, Aug. 10.—Montreal's beggars lack imagination. Though they are many and ambitious, their repertoire of hard-luck stories is meagre. Their motto apparently is to "stick to a good tale when you find one," and in consequence their appeals to the pocketbook have taken on a wear some monotony.

There is the lachrymose recital of the woebegone gentleman who has just arrived in the city and has been expeditiously "rolled" leaving him penniless and minus his watch and chain—usually a valued family heirloom. Fur tively he pleads for the price of a bed and a bowl of soup.

It is hard to take an evening stroll along St.. Catharine Street East, St. Lawrence Boulevard or Craig street without meeting that benefactor of mankind, the "car ticket salesman." With fine generosity, he offers to sell one a seven-cent tram ticket for five cents, offering a sad story of starving wife and children in explanation of his bargain. He gleans many nickels and even some dimes and quarters in this manner, but he would be greatly disconcerted if anybody ever took the car ticket.

"Lo the pardon, brother," opens another purveyor of loose change, "but I wonder if you could help me out with a quarter? I've been out of work for a month and now there's a good job open for me in Ottawa. I just need a quarter to complete my railway fare. If you would lend it to me..."

If one escapes him unscathed, one will probably be accosted at the next corner by an ill-clad and unsavory ancient.

"Mister, do you speak English?" he queries, laying a detaining hand upon one's arm. In such a polyglot city as Montreal this question often gains unnecessary attention and the panhandler is able to launch upon the misery of his misfortunes before the intended victim has collected his wits.

Even during the summer months, when employment conditions are at their best, all cities abound in beggar and Montreal has it full quota, despite the unsympathetic attitude of the police. During the season of navigation, some of the most accomplished panhandlers acquire a nautical gait. Though they have a more intimate acquaintance with four-legged "schooners" than with any of the vessels to be seen in the harbor, they can recite moving tales of how they have missed their ships and become stranded in a strange port. With the approach of winter, these professionals usually abandon the sea and become denizens of the war.

WHEN KIDNEYS HURT CONSULT YOUR DOCTOR
No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys internally, says a well-known authority. Eating too much rich food creates acids, which excite the kidneys. They become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood. Then we get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.
The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys, or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, begin drinking a quart of water each day, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, and in a few days your kidneys may act fine.
This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush and stimulate the kidneys; also to help neutralize the acids in the system, so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.
Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby often avoiding serious kidney complications.

DANCE HALL OPENS

Riley's Pavilion at Bayside opened last evening with the crowd present. Tom Mason and his Rhythm Kings orchestra supplied the dance music. The floor was a revelation to the dancing folk and many favorable comments were heard on the accommodations provided. The management have opened a refreshment booth in connection with the Hall which was well-patronized. The pavilion which fronts on the main highway was remodelled from the old cheese factory which has been a landmark in the locality. The building borders on the Bay Shore is ideally located between Trenton and Belleville and within easy motoring distance of either town. The hall is prettily decorated and has been touched up both outside and in. Other improvements are contemplated by Mr. Riley.

AIR-MOTOR FAKE IS NOW EXPOSED

Used Small Powerful Batteries Concealed To Run Car

Kansas City, Mo., August 10.—A fantastic scheme of H. E. Perrigo, who purported to draw electricity from the air so that it drove a motor car at a speed of forty miles an hour, was exposed as a fraud this afternoon when the Better Business Bureau and the Blue Sky Commissioner of Missouri began an investigation.

The real source of the power, which drove the car in the demonstration, tests tests proved to be nothing more nor less than small but powerful storage batteries concealed in the upholstering of the car with a mass of concealed wire coils showing to lend mystification.

Behind Perrigo's free energy fraud was the money motive, brought to light by the investigators when numerous persons were found who had invested $1,000 to $10,000 in the project, some as far back as fourteen years ago.

J. L. Parker, branch manager of battery company, and C. W. Wilson, his assistant, gave George M. Hossar, manager of the Better Business Bureau, the specifications of the battery sold to Perrigo. It consisted of twenty-two small batteries built into six units. The total size was 13 1-2 by 14 1-2 by 10 inches.

They told how Perrigo ordered the battery built and demanded that it be strong enough so that at the end of an hour's use of it would still be delivering 30 amperes at 110 volts. That much current, they said, was enough to operate a motor car for several hours at any speed to which it was geared.

NO SCORE UP TO THIRD FRAME

Gibson Strikes Out Five In Three Innings—Big Crowd

Exhibition Park, Aug. 10.—Belleville and Point Anne teams met here this afternoon in a crucial fixture of Quinte League game which the locals must win in order to assure themselves of getting into the play-off with Deseronto who have already cinched the League title. The Deloro club will meet the Wallbridge in the second half of the double bill but nothing depends on this encounter, the smelters having won five straight from the railroaders.

The stands were filling up quickly shortly before game time and everything pointed to the best crowd of the season Point Anne was well-represented and were confident that their team would come home on the long end of the score.

Strachan, who was a puzzle to the Deloro club last Friday, was warming up with Manager Coyer stated that he would do the flinging with Frankie Bennett held in reserve. In case Strachan fails to go the route.

Gerow will start for the Nationals in the night-cap affair with "Bunny" Woods who turned back Belleville last week, Manager Elliott's probable choice.

At 3.20 game time the stands were over half-full with the crowd still filing in.

Ceiling and Gerow will umpire.

First Inning

Point Anne — Ceiling out to short stop, Cretney struck out; Coyer ground out to Post for final out. o runs, o hits, o errors.

Belleville — Ross walked; Weir sacrificed Ross to second; Mills lined to centre field; H. Mills out at first to short stop.

o runs, o hits, o errors.

Second Inning

o runs, o hits, o errors.

Belleville—Hagerman grounded out to Blakely; Harper flied out to Caulin Gibson made good running catch; Post was hit by a pitched ball. Scott drove one at Blakely who made a bare-handed stab to whip it to first in time to get the runner. At 2.45 nearly every available seat in the stand was occupied. o runs, o hits, o errors.

Third Inning

Point Anne — A. West struck out; Strachan struck out; Dies walked; Blakely hit to Harper who forced Dies on second base. o runs, o hits, o errors.

Belleville—Gibson went out to E. Green; Ross grounded to Blakely who made another sensational pick-up to get the runner. Weir singled to centre field for the first hit of the game, but was out stealing second. o runs, o hits, o errors.

NEED MORE THAN A PEACE TREATY

Constructive League Better Than Agreement Not To Shoot

East Northfield, Mass., August 10.—International treaties and agreements which attempt to keep nations "at different sides of a fence" will never lead to world peace, the Rev. James Reed of Eastbourne, England, declared from the platform of the Northfield summer conference of Christian Workers here.

"Peace is never an agreement of brigands not to cut each others' throats declared. "It is a league of friends. Treaties and Geneva-feeding are so close that for one to hurt the other would be to hurt himself. The League of Nations is not a fence with agreements that keep us at different sides of a fence, resorted to our rights, even when these have been infringed."

Constructive friendship is the way to peace. The way to peace in a world like this can be found by no other way than by the way of constructive friendship that will suffer and be patient even against its own interests," Rev. Mr. Reid stated.

Quoting a well-known writer, the speaker declared that "the trouble with many people is that they so deeply intoxicated with a mild form of Christianity that they are proof against the real thing." There are many people in life where the way of Jesus comes right up against our natural inclinations and prejudices. "If it does not sometimes face us with some unwelcome challenge, it is time to examine our Christianity."

Moscow, Aug. 10.—Professor V. I. Ivanitchin, of the Kazan university, claims to have established the fact that the dialect of the Yeniseisk tribe, living in the Turuchansk region, northwest Siberia, belongs to the group of American aboriginal languages. Hitherto the language never has been identified with any of the Asiatic languages.

DEATHS & FUNERALS

RALPH LAYCOCK

Ralph Laycock, a well-known citizen of Marmora was buried this afternoon from the United Church, Marmora. The funeral was held under the auspices of the Marmora Lodge of which he was a life long member. The Rev. C. A. Buckley conducted the funeral services. Mr. Laycock died on Monday at the home of his son Thomas, on the Deloro road. He was 73 years of age.

DOUGALL DINGMAN

Dougall Dingman, a prominent business man of Toronto and a former resident of Picton Ontario, recently passed away at Winterhaven, Florida. Mr. Dingman was the founder of the Dingman Soap Company, afterward incorporated as the Pugsley, Dingman Company, and the builder of the Dingman block in Toronto. He took a prominent part in the early history of the electric development of Toronto.

Mr. Dingman would have reached his eighty-ninth birthday on September 13 next, and his death was due to heart failure. He is survived by his daughter and his wife, who was formerly Emma Noxon of Bloomfield, Ontario. Mr. Dingman was the owner of Glen Island where George Young is now training for the world's swimming marathon. He was born at Picton, Ontario, his parents being John and Millicent Dingman, early loyalist settlers of that section.

The late Mr. Dingman was an amateur artist of very marked ability, and a number of his pictures have been exhibited where they have called forth the warmest commendation of distinguished critics.

Interment was made at Winterhaven, Florida., where the deceased has made his home for the last 25 years.

MRS. JAMES PARKS

The funeral of the late Mrs. Harry Parks, widow of the late James Parks, took place this afternoon from her late home, 14 Dunbar Street to Victoria Cemetery, where the interment was made in the family plot.

The sorrow caused by the passing of this estimable lady and the sympathy felt for the sorrowing family were silently testified to by the very floral tributes assembly at the house for the impressive funeral service which was conducted by Rev. L. S. Wiehl, Minister of Holloway Street United Church of which deceased was a member assisted by Rev. J. Sharp. Both these clergymen referred to the shining example of the late Mrs. Parks and offered words of comfort to the bereaved relatives.

The pall bearers were members of the deceased to the grave and the wealth of flowers bore further evidence of the sympathy and sorrow. At the graveside, the committal service was conducted by Rev. L. S. Wiehl and Rev. Mr. Sharpe.

The bearers were Messrs. S. Parks, H. Parks, Charles Parks, Jr., A. Glass, D. Lazier and A. Glass.

FRANK LEWIS BENSON

Frank Lewis Benson, a card merchant of Niagara Falls, New York, passed away at the residence of his uncle Myles, 4th concession of West Hunterton. The deceased was born in Niagara Falls 59 years ago. He was a member of the I. O. O. F. and Masonic Lodge and St. Andrew's United Church of Niagara Falls. He leaves a widow and three sisters, Mrs. Annie Beckett, of Detroit, Mrs. George Smith of Buffalo; and Miss Isobel Benson Niagara Falls. The remains will be shipped to Niagara Falls by the Belleville Burial Company.

PREPARATIONS ARE MADE FOR R. A. V. CRUISE

Start Made In October—Trip Covers 25,000 Miles

London, Eng., Aug. 10.—All summer preparations have been going forward for the great cruise to be made by officers and men of the Royal Air Force in four huge supermarine flouthamphen flying boats. A start will probably be made in October on a flight that eventually will cover about 25,000 miles

The machines, whose equipment is being completed, will each carry a crew of four, and the first objective of the expedition will be Singapore. Here they will be met by Royal Australian Air Force men in two similar machines, and the six will continue to Australia and around the Australian coast.

The cruise is to test the capabilities of the metal hulls of which the machines are constructed; to reconnoitre the eastern route with a special eye to likely sites for seaplane bases, and generally show the R A.F. engine right before the world.

The commander of the flight will be Captain Cave Brown-Cave, D. S. O., D.F.C., one of Britain's most distinguished aces. Squadron-leader O. E. Lovett will be second in command.

The flying boats to be used are equipped with two Napier-Lion 450 horsepower engines each. Their metal hulls, it is believed, will give them longer life in the water than wooden hulls, and the hulls are roomy enough to provide ample space for a navigator's chart table and wireless operator's section, with directional wireless.

Gunnery and bombing outfits are features of the machines, which contain collapsible bombs so that the crew of four men each can drop aboard.

Serviceability and not speed is the chief idea in the boats. Two spare machines of the same type will be first sent to Singapore as reserves for use if necessary.

Two more hulls of the same type, but with wooden hulls, are being completed here for the Australian government, and these are the ones which will join the flight at Singapore.

The flight will coast all round India up to Calcutta, probably calling at Colombo en route. A seaplane flight round the Indian coast has never yet been made, for the seaplanes of Colonel de Pinedo and Sir Alan Cobham of Imperial Airways on their recent flights over India will be the next important part of call, and in view of the naval developments there the visit of this flight will certainly be of considerable importance. Probably the Australian flight will meet the same flight there and both will then proceed to Darwin and thence to the eastern coast ports of Australia to Melbourne. The most difficult part of this last stage is crossing the Great Australian Bight. But Wing Commander Cobbe once flew across the bight in a Fairey float seaplane, so the six Southampton ought to be able to manage it.

The whole cruise will cover some 25,000 miles, and in all probability the Royal Air Force will return Cobbe and his party will be away from home for the best part of a year.

ONTARIO MAIN SOURCE OF COBALT

For the past twenty years the Cobalt silver district of Ontario has been the main source of the world's supply of cobalt. In the past twenty-eight years, both years included, the total output of cobalt was 21,643,764 pounds.

WHEN SOCIAL VICES BECOME DANGEROUS

By ELSIE MARLOWE

Here is the code of one modern girl. You probably will not agree with some parts of this code, but your heart will go out to Jean's honesty and her brave plea for moderation. Jean respects herself and she has tall, fine dreams of what she will do with life. She may outwardly differ from her grandmother but at heart she is one with all the sweet, noble, kindly women who have made the world beautiful and blessed.

DEAR ELSIE:

This is about cigarettes and other fixings.

I think moderation is a wonderful thing, don't you? It has brought me happiness. I smoke a little occasionally. I do this when with congenial friends but I do not indulge freely, because I think it is really unattractive to see anyone a slave to a habit.

It takes a certain amount of will power and discretion to keep with in the bounds of moderation, but it's well worth it. Anyone who has reached the age of reason should know when to stop.

The same thing goes for kissing. A girl doesn't have to cheapen her self if she does things in moderation, at the right time and place and with the right ones. I don't admire or advocate promiscuous kissing—but most girls know when they should and when they should not.

I'm no better nor worse than the average girl. I'm not a prude nor a little goody-goody, either. I've known a certain girl for a long time who is considered a wonderful model by all my girl friends' mothers, who encourage friendship with her. We've been on many parties with her. No one has ever seen her touch a cocktail or smoke a cigarette or kiss a boy, but she is the most vicious gossip I've ever known.

She's an abject victim of the nasty habit of prying into everyone's affairs. She never hesitates to ask the most intimate and personal questions of everyone and about everyone she knows. She has caused more misery by her craving for information and gossip than if she smoked ten packages of cigarettes a day. At least the cigarettes would injure only herself.

There are certainly far worse habits for a woman than smoking. Her breath may be slightly tainted and yet her heart, mind and morals can remain pure.

Is it wrong for me to pride myself on my self-control? Does pride always go before a fall? I know I'm not stronger than the majority of girls and I've had the same temptations. I'm in love with a wonderful man. For a year we have gone places and kissed each other and yet we've always kept level-headed. Our love is founded on mutual respect and admiration. We don't dare break down the main foundation.

I've seen many marriages fail because the man is selfish when they're engaged and sacrifices the girl, or else the girl cheapens herself and loses his respect. This is very sad and it could all be avoided with more moderation and self-control. I know, because I've proved it, and I'm anything but an icy blonde. And I'm charming. S. F. isn't all intellect, either.

JEAN.

"I'm sixteen, an' awkward, an' gawky, an' dumb, an' I never know what to say—etc., etc., etc., cries Mabel. "What's the matter with me, anyhow?"

DEAR ELSIE:

I would like to, know why boys don't ask me to go out. I'm awfully quiet. I can't keep up a conversation. I guess they think I'm a wet blanket. I don't know what to say. When they ask me something I answer "Yes," or "No," or in a short sentence, and I suppose they get tired of me.

I'm good looking, but I'm tall and I feel awkward. I'm sixteen but I look older. I do not go out on solid parties. I used to go on them, but I came to my senses.

Hardly any girls like me, either and I would like to know why. I'm a good dancer but I just can't seem to fit in.

MABEL.

Mabel dear, have you seen a new sprout on a fruit tree? It's hard and stiff and awkward isn't it? Yet in time that sprout will burst out into a blaze of color and fragrance and grace. That same thing will happen to you, when the time of your growing has been fulfilled. Give yourself time to grow.

"But others have these at sixteen" you cry.

Of course they do! Many plants burst into full flower the first year of their growing. It's because they happen to be that particular kind of a plant. It's the same way with girls. Some girls are much more advanced than others at sixteen. But that does not mean that the slower ones won't blossom too.

So wipe your eyes, honey. Your time will come. It always does. And don't waste the waiting time with fussing and grieving. Do something. Become interested in something. Take up swimming or tennis. And before you know wit, without your feeling it, your flowering time will come too.

ELSIE.

CURSE OF LOVE

By Mildred Barbour

CHAPTER 24.
THE SERPENT

"Of course, you understand," said Sydney Stokes, watching Norma with malicious satisfaction, "that what I'm telling you is a betrayal of a business confidence. I could be fired for it. But I love you enough, in spite of everything, to want you to know the sort of chap you preferred to me. That afternoon — the afternoon you married Kendall — he received thirty thousand dollars from your father, without one scrap of security. I know, because the business passed through my hands. As I understand it, twenty minutes later, he was at your house, and, that very day, you two were married. Figure it out for yourself. What do you make of it?"

Norma sat behind the wheel of her white, she said faintly:

"Don't believe it."

He shrugged and fumbled in his pocket for his cigarettes.

"That's all very well to say. But I happen to have the facts to show you, if you like. You can't get away from records in black and white."

Norma turned her white face to him Her lips were bloodless. The misery in her eyes should have stabbed him. But Norma had behind the wheel of her

"No!" She laughed shrilly, mirthlessly. "You only wanted to ruin my happiness, my life. And that's what you call 'love'!" she added bitterly.

"Would you rather not have known?" he countered grimly. "Would you rather have gone on, ignorant as to what sort of man you'd married — a man who thought himself worth thirty thousand dollars to you — and took his pay before he asked you to be his wife?"

She flinched under his brutal directness, and closed her eyes momentarily as she opened them and looked across the green meadows that had smiled in the sunlight only a few minutes before, it seemed to her that the world had gone black, that the sun had ceased to shine—would never shine for her again!

"You're — you're quite sure, Sydney?" she whispered. "There couldn't be some horrible mistake —something you don't know about that might have taken place between my father and — and Philip?"

He shook his head.

"Not a shadow of a chance! I known every detail of the transaction. I tell you. The money was paid to your father for your — prospective husband."

Norma sat in silence, staring straight before her. Little by little, the whole thing was fitting together, like the pieces of a jigsaw puzzle.

Philip's appointment with her father at two o'clock that memorable afternoon, which her father himself had mentioned it at lunch, she recalled. Philip's unexpected appearance at the house, a few hours later! His equally unexpected proposal! His suggestion that they be married at once. Their feverish haste of it all! The honeymoon, with Philip distrait and preoccupied.

How blind she had been! What a fool, what a trusting, unsuspecting tool fool! How Philip must have been laughing at her in his own secret thoughts!

And she had believed he loved her! That was the bitter thought that made her cringe and blush with shame. As if he could ever have loved a woman who was so far beneath him by birth and social position! What a self-deluded fool!

By a stern effort, she gathered herself together and spoke with an attempt at calmness.

"Is that all you have to tell me, Sydney?"

He looked at her curiously. He was a trifle disappointed by the cool way she took his revelation.

"Isn't that enough?"

He kept to himself the knowledge of the second transaction, a week later, when Philip Kendall had returned in full the money that his father-in-law had given him.

Norma shrugged.

"Yes, I think it is," she agreed grave ly, and started her car.

"What will you do about it?" he asked, rather piqued, as they drove to wards town.

"I haven't decided yet. I'll have to think it over," she replied, with her eyes on the road.

"If I can be of any service—"

"You can't!" she retorted crisply. "You've been of quite enough service already."

"Telephone me, when you've decided," he said coolly, refusing to be crushed. "I'll be at home all evening."

"No need to stay in on my account," she declared flippantly, determined that he shouldn't have the satisfaction of knowing what sorrow he had brought to her.

To her surprise, Philip was at home when she arrived. She greeted him brightly, but her eyes were averted.

"I thought you were dining with a client," she said lightly.

"The chap came to a decision quicker than I anticipated, so we hurried back to town. He wanted to catch the six o'clock train home."

She was conscious that he was looking at her closely, fixedly, so she hurried up to her room to change. Surely, she thought, he didnt suspect..the knowledge that had come to her that afternoon?

Philip Kendall stared after her slim figure, brows drawn, a curious new pain gnawing at his heart.

He had been in the car that had passed Norma and Sydney Stokes as they sat in the roadside.

And she hadn't told him that she had seen Stokes that afternoon!

CHAPTER 25.
Vain Search

On the afternoon that Norma was learning from Sydney Stokes that her husband had received thirty thousand dollars from her father before proposing marriage to her, Cynthia Greer, Philip's cousin, was out in her garden, was staring at her thin white hand, wasted with weeks of illness.

Her pretty face was grave as she tried desperately to recall the events preceding her illness.

They had told her that she had had an accident while driving her car. How had it happened? They were vague. How had it happened? They were so evasive about it—doctors and nurses, even her father and mother.

She must have been ill a very long time, she thought. The tiny circlet of diamonds on the third finger of her left hand—the guard-ring she had worn since her eighteenth birthday—slipped off too easily. Once it had fitted closely.

Though she didn't remember, it was the ring with which she had been married to King Carson in the early spring that memorable May morning. When the obliging justice of the peace had held out his hand for the ring, Norma had cried:

"Oh, I forgot all about the ring! Shows I'm not accustomed to getting married!"

The justice had suggested: "Any other finger will do." and Cynthia flushing, had produced her guard-ring.

Now, as she turned and twisted the circlet on her finger, she tried hard to recall the circumstances of her motor crash.

"I must have been horribly frightened," she thought. "I must have had some terrible thought when I felt myself going. What was it? What could it have been? Why can't I remember?"

But the very effort to pierce the veil that hid the past wearied her, and she gave it up with a sigh and a light slumber.

When the nurse awakened her to give her broth Mr. Greer was sitting beside her. He looked anxious and haggard, but his eyes were unusually gentle and kind. There was a compassion in them that moved her.

"Uncle, I mad, Daddy?" she asked him suddenly.

"Oh, my dear child, no!"

"Then why don't I remember how I came to have an accident?"

"The shock, my dear—er—everything!"

She shook her head gently.

"That doesn't seem enough. Was it night or daytime?"

"Ah—daytime." He cleared his throat awkwardly.

"But, Daddy, I drive well, you know I do," she protested. "I drive fast, but I don't take chances. How could it have happened, unless some one ran into me? Was that it?"

He took out a silk handkerchief and wiped his moist brow. He was suffering acutely, but the doctors had warned against telling her the truth suddenly. They said her memory would return in time. It would be better that way.

SINCLAIR'S

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a young married woman. I've been in love with a married man and he sent me a note to meet him. I did meet him, but now I regret having done so. I told my husband of meeting this other man. Now my husband is going to leave me. Please tell me how to make him stay and learn to trust me once more. I love my husband dearly.

BROKEN HEARTED.

BROKEN HEARTED: In the first place you did a very wrong thing in meeting this other man. There is only one thing to be said in your favor and that is the fact that you had sufficient bravery to tell your husband of the happening. However, I am afraid that it will take some persuading to convince your husband of your trustworthiness. If only girls would stop to think before they yield to such impulses they would save themselves much misery later on. The only course for you to pursue is the one which will convince your husband of your undivided love and loyalty. You may have a hard road to travel for a while, for now that the seed of suspicion is sown, every act of yours will be magnified in your husband's eyes. However, patience, tact and an unwavering loyalty may in time lessen your guilt in your husband's mind. But it will not be easy, Broken-Hearted. So take your medicine and be brave and patient and I am sure that in time you will win out.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I have gone with a boy a few years older than myself. I like him very much. One evening as I saw him coming down the street I turned my back and walked away. I was not properly dressed.

My girl friend informed me that he has said that I ought go to him and ask forgiveness.

Please advise me.

BASHFUL.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

The writer of the above letter is my little girl, not yet fifteen. She has known this man only about three weeks and I hear he isn't a very nice fellow. The girl friend that is advising her is only sixteen and they go to the same school.

I wish you would advise my daughter as though I had not written.

AN ANXIOUS MOTHER.

BASHFUL: I don't suppose your mother wishes me to print her letter with yours. But I must do so, in order to let you know that I know your age You failed to state it in your letter. Your extreme youth throws an entirely different light upon your problem and makes me answer it somewhat differently than I would have done if information that you have given me.

You are far too young to permit your mind to be occupied by problems of this sort—too young to take the attentions of young men seriously. You really ought to devote yourself to your studies to sports and other activities natural to a girl of your age. I can well understand your mother's pertain alarms. She feels as I do that the girl and boy friends of your own age are the all right companions for what loving and other youthful activities. But I am sure that she must question as I her from any suspicion of "pose."

New York notes that the touch of silver or gold in the evening mode still comes in the slippers and silver or gold heels and straps trim the brocade evening shoe, and silver is used as trimming on the newer slipper of pearl kid but at the moment, however, the newest thing is the slipper of satin to match the gown, or of brilliant green or claret red worn with gowns or black or with these two colors.

WHAT'S NEW

(From a Woman's Standpoint)

Paris notes that the Spanish shawl continues to be the favorite evening wrap.

A London editor notes that fewer women are becoming barristers than a few years ago because just after graduation like Miss Helena Normanton had been called and a university woman says that women once eagerly took the Bar examination because everybody thought they were so difficult but that now there is less glory in it because undergraduates have decided that they are easy.

Dame Millicent Fawcett's friends are a determined sort of people for when she told them she did not wish to receive any ordinary presents on her eightieth birthday they thought of a very original way of getting over the difficulty and instead of giving her or dinary presents, they raised a thousand pounds for endowing a room to be named after her at Crosby Hall.

On the evening of one of Their Majesties' Courts this summer the crowd of sightseers, who line the Mall and criticize the debutantes and make comments on their clothes, was somewhat amused and no doubt, astonished at the vision of a charming girl on the way to her presentation, redeeming the time by reading Roman Law, but they learnt from the newspapers next morning that she was cramming up for an examination that day, so they absolved do the advisability of going out with young men of their own age.

But aside from all this, the fact that you describe is probably not worth such perturbations. By deliberately suggesting that you apologize, I believe that he merely wishes to humiliate you. He sounds like a very conceited young man and needs to feel his power. Forget him and your problem.

In the future, I would suggest complete frankness with your mother. Remember that she is worried about you and only concerned with your well-being. Remember too, that she has had much more experience with people than you have had. From her note appended to your letter I judge her to be reasonable. Talk to her. I am sure you will find that I am right.

New Antiseptic Becomes Popular

Affords prompt relief for sore throat and Tonsilitis

Ever since the discovery of germs, and their relation to disease, men of science have been ever vigilant toward the development of preventive measures for combating infections at their source.

The problem of securing a germicide which is strong enough to do this, but which will not harm the most delicate membrane, has been solved by the discovery of Dr. Chase's Every-Day Mouth Wash.

Although prepared primarily as a Mouth Wash, the healing and nonirritating qualities of this fellow make it an ideal general antiseptic. It can be used effectively on the nasal passages, throat, skin tissues, and for every purpose for which a healing lotion is needed.

For sore throat and tonsilitis Dr. Chase's Every-Day Mouth Wash is most effective in affording prompt relief. While it destroys the germs it is also delightfully soothing and healing to the delicate membranes of the throat.

It is a fine habit to rinse the mouth after each meal with Dr. Chase's Every-Day Mouth Wash. In this way both teeth and mouth are kept in a healthy condition, the mouth is clean and antiseptic and you safeguard yourself against serious, painful and often fatal infections, most of which have their beginning in the throat.

FOR Sour Stomach
PHILIPS' Milk of Magnesia

Hereafter instead of soda take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

Better Than Soda

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it over comes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. Besides, it neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges this scouring waste from the system without purging. It is far more pleasant to take than soda.

ANNUEL CONVENTION

Peterboro, Aug. 10.—The Ontario Memorial Association, composed of tombstone manufacturers from all parts of the Province, began its sessions at the Empress Hotel yesterday afternoon.

His Worship Mayor Holloway welcomed the men to the city, assuring them of the pleasure of the citizens in entertaining guests and expressing the hope that their meetings would be pleasant and profitable.

STRUCK BY CAR

Peterboro, Aug. 10.—Mrs. J. A. McElhinny, formerly with the Salvation Army here, was hurt last night at Chemong Park when she was knocked down by an automobile. Mrs. McElhinney had been up to Mrs. Wheeler's cottage seeing a sick person, and was returning with Mrs. Wheeler to her own cottage, when a car driven by George Rutherford, struck her and knocked her down, smashing the lens around the left eye and shaking her badly. Dr. McNally was summoned and had the patient taken to St. Joseph's Hospital. County Constable R. C. Smith was summoned to the scene of the accident.

CONSTABLE HONORED

Peterboro, Aug. 10.—Provincial Constable N. P. Maker was one of the constables assigned to special duty at the opening of the Peace Bridge between the Province of Ontario and United States at Fort Erie on Sunday. Thirty-six Provincial constables were present, and Constable Maker was specially honoured by being chosen as the constable to be present on the platform with the Prince of Wales, Prince George, Vice-President Dawes of the United States, Premier Baldwin and many other noteworthy men.

BARN BURNED

Kingston, Aug. 10.—John Stirling, a well-known farmer, residing three miles west of Collin's Bay, suffered a serious loss a few days ago when his barn was totally destroyed by fire. Children playing with matches are blamed for the fire.

Mr. Stirling had just started to fill the barn with hay, and some of it had been stored in the barn at the time of the fire. The barn was valued at $1,500 and was partially insured.

OSHAWAN ENTERS

Oshawa, Aug. 10.—Ernest Fawcett, 126 Oshawa Boulevard, is now officially entered for the Canadian National marathon, swim which will be staged on Aug. 31. His Oshawa official entrant papers were completed only last evening.

CLAIMS QUEBEC HAS FAME DUE

Montreal, Aug. 9.—Miss Alice Dresser, Provincial Convenor of legislation of the Provincial Institutes has sent a general letter to members in which she says: "The province of Quebec has many claims to fame. There is one point of distinction which, however, we do not care to mention. In Quebec women may not vote in the provincial elections. This grievance of course, is not accepted in silence.

"The women of Quebec have been waiting many years and the waiting period is not yet ended. This is the time for them to learn as much as possible about the problems our law-makers are facing. The newspapers touch on these subjects daily and women should discuss them with other women." And—meantime— it is pointed out that there is much that women voteless though they may be, can do to influence the legislation of the province. "A woman does not need the vote in order to have the house painting to suit her taste, or to direct the family vacation trip towards Toronto instead of the White Mountains. The power of persuasion, aided by the knack of cooking favorite dishes, plays no small part in the making of our laws."

RIDER PENALIZED AT MONTREAL

Montreal, Aug. 9.—For committing one of the most glaring fouls witnessed on a local race course in years, which he endangered the lives of four other riders, Jockey P. Moore was indefinitely suspended at Blue Bonnets yesterday afternoon and his mount, Missionary, was disqualified and placed out of the money after having finished in second place. The foul occurred in the first turn at a mile and one eighth race and only good fortune prevented serious accidents to the riders and horses.

As the field left the barrier Missionary was on the outside position. In the dash for the first turn, Moore was crowding his mount and cut straight across to the inner rail. As he cut across the track, Missionary bit five other horses and then another, until all of those back of him were piled up in a heap against the inner fence. According to the stable of Edward Arlington, which won the race, escaped a serious part of the jamming and got clear saliive behind Missionary, which had dashed to the front, and was forced a fast pace. Opperman and Allelchie were the greatest sufferers from the mix-up, the former being knocked at most sideways, while Allelache was thrown to the inner fence, and never had a chance of getting up with the leaders.

As the field swung into the back stretch Missionary was deaths in front with Acrosket second and Opperman, Allelache, Fawcett, Lamb and Chapman, hustled the horse alone to get into a contending position. All was going well for the riders that Moore would be disciplined. In the run through the stretch Acrosket weakened and passed Missionary to win, while Opperman had closed into a third several lengths back of Missionary.

Before the horses returned to the stand, the stewards ordered Missionary's number taken out of the box and Opperman moved into second place with Pat Calhoun third. As soon as the disqualification was made, there was a loud cheer from those on the rail for keen many of whom held tickets on Missionary, which was the well-supported second choice. When the riders weighed in it was announced by the stewards that Moore had been suspended until the first meeting of the directors of the Canadian Racing Association when his case will be discussed of. It is likely that Moore will receive a severe penalty from the governing body. Many in the crowd hissed and booed Moore as he came to the scales to make his weight.

GEHRIG'S HOMER SAVED SHUT-OUT

Athletics Hit Yankee Pitchers Hard—Senators Beat Indians

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 10.—Buster Gehrig saved the Yankees from a shutout and probably saved Miller Huggins from a suicide when he knocked his thirty-eighth home run of the season over the right-field wall in the ninth inning here yesterday.

Aside from these two little items, his clout did not help much, however. That was the only run the Yankees scored . . . the Athletics banged out 11 hits and clean sweep of the on-game series by winning, 8 to 1.

Walberg was on the verge of accomplishing something that no other pitcher had succeeded in doing this year when Gehrig tore a tile off the roof of a nearby house with his mighty blow.

For eight innings Walberg had held the Yankees scoreless. In that time he had allowed only five hits, a moral victory in itself.

But the Buster came up first in the last inning and shattered his dream of a shutout. While Gehrig was circling right along in the American home run handicap, his twin thriller, Babe Ruth, went through his third successive game without a safe hit, much less a home run.

He smote one mighty blow to deep centre that would have gone over the fence if it had been a bit more to right but Cobb pulled it down. That was the nearest he came to anything resembling a safe blow and tonight he wonders over the fact that he is three hits behind the Buster in the quest of the diamond diadem.

Walberg was in something close to invincible form and kept the Yanks' hits well assorted over the innings. He was hit in the first two and the last two, but the five in between were close to perfection, only two Yanks reaching first base, one on a pass and one on an error.

After the opening frame Gehrig was the only Yankee to get as far as second hits.

CHICAGO'S LEAD CUT TO 3 GAMES

Waner's Double In 9th Wins For Pittsburgh 7—6

Pittsburgh, Pa., August 10.—Paul Waner's double with two out and his brother Lloyd on second base in the ninth inning broke a tie score and beat the Giants, 7 to 6, in the second game of the series with the Pirates yesterday.

A few minutes before the Waner family put on its brother act, the Pirates had scored two runs in their half of the ninth and tied the score. John Joseph McInnis was feeling pretty good about this and his athletes also were broad and cheerful smiles, but it just went to prove that merriment goeth before a fall.

To start the ninth George Grantham, the Cornair first-baseman, dropped Wright's throw to first base and Mel Ott was safe. Mr. Grantham seemed to be suffering from gentility and too many thumbs. Then Heinie Mueller batted for Dutch Henry and stung a single to centre, sending Ott to third, whence he scored on Reese's fly to Barnhart.

Lindstrom forced Mueller, as Traynor singled to left and Lee Meadows, the well-known bespectacled pitcher, was removed by Dannie Bush in favor of Carmen Hill, who also pitches through a pair of windshields. Hill found Rogers Hornsby camping impatiently at the plate and Rogers greeted Carmen with a single to left, scoring Lindstrom with the tying run.

Concealing a smile behind his hand, Manager McGraw sent Freddie Fitzsimmons in to pitch to the Pirates in the last half of the ninth. Freddie had stood the Pirates on their heads in Saturday's game, but the process was reversed yesterday. With one out, Hill toiled to left and was forced by Lloyd Waner. Suddenly Mr. Fitzsimmons became wild and walked Cuyler Grantham. And then Paul Waner gave the ball a long buggy ride to right centre. Mr. Harper ran swiftly and got his finger tips on the pill but it skidded off and fell safe, and the game was over.

Brooklyn sliced Chicago's lead to three games by forcing the Cubs to split a double-header at Chicago. The Bruins shut out the Robins in the opener by 2 to 0, but lost the afterpath, 5 to 4.

An overflow crowd estimated to have been close to 40,000 was on hand and made necessary the enforcement of ground rules.

Jess Petty and Hal Carlson hooked up in a pitching duel in the first game, Carlson gaining the edge to turn in his ninth victory for the Cubs which stretched Chicago's winning streak to nine also. It was the ninth shut-out against the Robins this season. Thus far the Cubs have won thirteen out of fifteen starts against Brooklyn.

Guy Bush was pounded hard in the fourth and fifth innings of the closing fray when bunched hits gave the Robins all their runs. Clark replaced Doak when a Cub rally threatened in the fifth.

"Cissby" Hartnett, the Cubs' best catcher, was spiked on the foot by Petit as the latter attempted to score in the second inning of the second game. The catcher probably will be out of the game for a couple of days.

The Kingston Aletts with a hang-up team are coming tonight to do battle with Walter Gerow's Ontarios at the armouries at 8.15. The Limestoners have augmented their squad with some new players since their last appearance here and are confident of taking a fall out of the Eastern Ontario champions in their own back yard. Margaret Fairbairn is scheduled to do th heaving for the homesters with Aileen Wilkins behind the bat. Fans should not pass up this game.

The Nationals are out to defeat both Point Anne and Deloro today and thus assure themselves of a place in the play-offs.

"Babe" Vincent, pitching for the Toronto Supremes, won the Sunnyside Senior League championship on Monday night. Miss Vincent who twirled several games for the Belleville Beavers went along in great style. Her battery-mate, Dot Mortimer was equally prominent in the victory, driving in several runs. Both girls will go to Cleveland on the 19th where the Supremes will meet the Cleveland Flemings, amateur champions of the United States. These two are the sensation in Toronto ladies' softball circles this year.

Alan Meagher, manager of the Beavers, has arranged with the Plaster's Pennsl team of the Toronto Industrial League for a double-header here on Saturday, August 20th. Jean Ramsay who has been keeping in trim at the summer camp, Wellington, will pitch one game for the Beavers while Molly Gray will twirl the other. The Plasters team is rated as one of the best industrial teams in Toronto and the locals will be given plenty of stiff opposition.

The City League will start on Friday night with the Deacon Shirt and Frontenacs as the two aspiring teams. The team winning the first two of three games will be awarded the championship.

The Intelligencer softball team will play against the Frankford town team tomorrow night at the village. "Curly" O'Donahue will likely do the flinging for the locals.

THE need for changing oil at five to seven hundred mile periods is now eliminated. Wakefield CASTROL, the world-famous British lubricant, requires draining only after TWO THOUSAND miles of service. A saving of over half your oil costs!

It's the Castor Oil in CASTROL that makes the difference. Wakefield chemists possess the only successful formula for blending castor oil with mineral oil to retain the qualities and reject the disadvantages of each. The result is the most successful enemy of friction existing today. That's why the Royal Air Force, the British Army and Navy selected CASTROL as the best oil for the preservation of their engines.

CASTROL mixes with all other oils, but 100 per cent. efficiency is only obtained when CASTROL is used alone.

MUST NOT DISTURB LABORER'S REST

Moscow, Aug. 10.—Merry Moscow citizens will henceforth have to do their drinking festerting and "throw ing of parties" so as not to interfere with the nocturnal rest of the hard-working proletariat. The Moscow Administrative department has so decreed.

It is pointed out that with fifteen or twenty persons, in many instances, occupying an apartment of four or five rooms, unnecessary noise must be abated. Hence there must be no drinking or carousing after 11 o'clock at night.

PARROT INSULTS YANKEE SAILOR

London, Aug. 10.—"You're a rascal" else here, friend, it's not usual for an American to be insulted by a stranger."

"I insult you, monsieur? Ah! No! No! I 'ave never speak to you."

While the American sailor in the white cap was threatening to pulverize the bearded young Parisian if he said it again, a mocking voice from a cage repeated: "You're a rascal." ?

"That bird is positively dangerous," said the American sailor, squeezing the Frenchman's hand apologetically. "Why don't they put up a sign. 'This bird talks.' "

All summer visitors have been flocking into London from the corners of the earth. And, it seems eventually every one finds his, or her, or his way to the London Zoo.

Not only America and France, but Germany, Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, Newfoundland and South Africa were represented in the stream of visitors who heard the talking raven.

A German school boy was noticed trying to teach an Australian parrot to sing the first line of the British National Anthem in the Language of the Fatherland.—"Gott wahre unser gnadi-ger konig . . ." But the bird with a bored appearance just closed its eyes and looked as if it would have preferred it in Cockney.

A Dutchman and a Belgian were seriously discussing in broken English the phenomenon of the Zebra's stripes. "Tell me, mainheer, vhince vas it leedle poy I all the time vondered if the zebra vas a vide animal vid black strikes, or a black animal vid vide stripes? Vot you think?

The un-English element in their midst seem to excite the lions and tigers strangely. The sight of many Canadians wearing straw hats made Daisy, the leopard, more highly strung than ever. A South African farmer was watching Daisy. "This is a wonderful animal," he remarked. "I just looked at it and its yellow eyes turned green."

Middle-west Americans seemed surprised that nothing happened when they said "Vodka!" to the Russian bear.

TURKEY MAKES GREAT STAB AT MODERNIZATION

Constantinople, Aug. 10. —Turkey is making great efforts to modernize herself. The Government, which for the past three years has shown almost feverish activity in the development of its railways, has just signed an agreement with a German firm for the construction of two new lines. One will be 200 miles and the other 130 miles long, double tracks and work will commence this month. A Swedish firm is about to begin construction of a railway in Anatolia and a Belgian firm has in hand the construction of two other lines in Asia Minor.. Work on these two lines will last for six years and will result in doubling Turkey's railway mileage.

The Turkish Government is negotiating with American and Dutch firms and with French capitalists for the construction of additional railways and ports, and also for the electrification of several cities. It is also lending effective financial support to large Turkish industrial enterprises, and has itself invested substantial sums in these concerns. Turkey's merchant marine is also growing rapidly.

ARCHDUKE NOW A MOVIE EXTRA

Leopold Hopes To Earn Enough To Finance Trip Home

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 10.—Archduke Leopold of Austria, who spent all his money shortly after his arrival in this country for a tour isn't a full fledged motion picture extra.

The Austria nobleman went to work before a camera here, reinforced by his secretary, to earn enough to return to Europe where he hopes to avenge the "insult" which he linked Count Laszlo Szechenyi, Austrian Minister to the United States, made at him recently when His Royal Highness asked the envoy to handle a loan for him. Count Szechenyi now is in Europe.

The archduke wants to follow him to fight the duel. But it is a case, according to his secretary, Alfred Neuhardt, of the spirit being willing, even eager but the pocketbook woefully weak.

Beginning his first day at 8 o'clock in the morning the noble actor rehearsed and toiled and perspired before the camera all day. His secretary mopped the royal brow after each camera shot.

Since the bit played by the Archduke, that of a German army captain, called for a crop of hair, and the archduke, although young, is approaching baldness, a toupee was pasted upon his head.

One difficulty arose. The archduke was required to salute a general. Leopold could not register the correct salute.

"Excuse, please," he apologized. "I have never salute. In my country everybody they salute me, but I do not salute."

BISONS TAKE BOTH ENDS FROM READING

New York, Aug. 10.—Buffalo defeated Reading in both ends of a double-header at Reading today, 7 to 1 and 11 to 3. Del Bissonette's 20th homer of the season scoring Fisher ahead of him, won the first game for the Bisons. The Herd walloped three Reading pitchers to easily win the second.

At Newark, Bill Moore's fine pitching in pinches, with hard and timely batting by Conlon, Elliott, Kelly and Manlove gave the Bears the third straight victory over the Rochester Tribe by the score of 7 to 1.

At Jersey City Erwin Braune hurled a two-hit game today, and the Jerseys captured the final game of the series from Syracuse, 4 to 0.

LARGE NUMBER OF SWIMMERS IN BIG MARATHON

Toronto, Aug. 10.—About 200 swimmers, among them the world's greatest will slowly move forward at nine o'clock on the morning of Wednesday, August 31, to plunge into the waters of Lake Ontario in the greatest competitive swim the world has ever known

About midnight, or perhaps sooner, weather conditions being favorable, the winner should emerge from the water after covering 31 miles, to be crowned monarch of all, with the gold en bait of $30.000 safely in his grasp; if the winner be a woman, of $25,000.

The remainder of the total prize money of $50,000—the great sum which like a magnet has drawn swimmers from the ends of the earth—will be divided up between half a dozen men and half a dozen women, providing that many finish.

In the field of scintillating swimming stars one stocky figure will be missing as the multitude, waiting tensely for the starting gun, eagerly watches the straggling line of starters it will be that of George Young, the native son, winner of the $25,000 Catalina Channel swim because he was the only one to finish that gruelling test; on whose account the present huge event has been staged.

Eight months will have elapsed since George's first great win; in that time he has become a world figure in swimming; he has traveled much and he learned much. An obvious question is "Is George Young as good as when he won the Catalina channel swim—can he beat the fierce opposition that faces him now?"

The answer remains to be proven but it is a fact that Young should be in perfect condition when he takes his place among the other starters on Aug. 31. Weeks ago he returned to Toronto and then, with Henry O'Byrne, his trainer and a few others, went to Picton, further east along the shore of Lake Ontario, and there he has been training diligently.

Said our Buyer, "How Much?"

Said the manufacturer, "50c". "Yes, that's all right," said our buyer, "but we are buying for twenty-two stores. How much is it FOR US?" "Well," said the manufacturer, "I guess it's 35c." This is a true story and shows why lower prices are possible to Canadian Department-Stores Limited. And Here's An Example of Those Lower Prices—

COURTS AGAIN POSTPONED DEATH OF CONDEMNED MEN

R.H. Raynor Reported To Be Back In The City--

John Vicik Died In Night Of His Injuries

TWELVE DAY RESPITE FOR THREE CONDEMNED MEN COMES IN TIME

Prisoners Notified Just Fifteen Minutes Before Death Hour

MORE CHEERFUL

Confusion Caused By Varying Messages To The Prison Warden

Boston, Aug. 11.—Judge Sanderson, of Massachusett's Supreme Court today announced that he would allow exceptions to go before the full bench on his denial of a writ of error in the cast of Sacco and Vanzetti. This announcement came after a conference with Arthur Hill, defense counsel and Attorney General A. K. Reading. A bill of exceptions was finally agreed upon and after this has been formally worked up and approved Judge Sanderson indicated he would allow it.

Boston Mass., Aug. 11.—Bartolomeo Vanzetti awoke this morning with a more cheerful outlook on life by reason of the twelve day respite granted to him. Nicola Sacco and Celestino Madeiros, a short time before they were scheduled to be executed last night Vanetti drank coffee brought him at breakfast and in other ways according to prison officials evidenced that he derived real hope from the respite. Sacco, however, remained apathetic and refused all food for the 25th consecutive day.

Whether the three prisoners would also obtain a brief respite from the death house where they have been confined for more than a week was still undecided this morning. Their cells in the main prison have been occupied since there removal by others and some re-arranging would be necessary if they are to be returned.

Prisoners Last to Know

Boston, Mass., August. 11 1927.—Chronologically Nicalo Sacco, Bartolomeo Vanzetti and Celestina Madeiros were the last persons to learn that their electrocutions this morning had been deferred by an Executive respite until midnight of August, 22. They were told exactly fifteen minutes before the first of them, Madeiros, was to have gone to his death That was at 11.45 But at 12.02 newspapermen had received the news and before that Warden William Hendry had been told

The last of the respite however, was not officially announced till 11.45.

Divers answers from the Warden's office of the Charlestown State Prison and the resultant confusion among the nearly two score newspapermen and telegraphers who had been assembled to cover the triple execution created one of the most unusual scenes in the Massachusette's death house history.

At 10.22 p.m. Warden Hendry burst out of the death telephone booth to announce, "Well boys, there's a respite for two anyway." He started to the death house apparently to tell the prisoners the good news was recalled to the telephone for a moment and sang out, "It's three" Recalled for the second time, he rushed visibly shaken through the prison lobby and into the rotunda of the prison shouting, "Hold that story up."

In the meantime, reporters were rushing from the lobby to the prison clubhouse where more than a score of direct telegraph and telephone wires had been set up. Conduction reigned as successive bulletins went out only to be countermanded a few seconds later. When the Warden next appeared it was with the flat announcement that a reprieve had been granted and papers were on their way.

FORT CHURCHILL CHOSEN AS PORT

Expert Declares Harbour Much Superior To Port Nelson

Port Nelson, Man., Aug. 11. — Fort Churchill will be recommended to the Government as the Hudson Bay port, by Frederick Palmer, engineer, according to an announcement he made here yesterday "I shall recommend Churchill to the Government as the Hudson Bay port," he said. "It is a natural harbor, in which practically unlimited shipping accommodations can be provided in the shortest time and at a minimum of cost.

Incomparably Superior

"The borings recently taken over an extensive area have already dredged material and no rock within 50 feet of low-water level. It is almost incomparably superior to Nelson in safety, cost of construction and economy of time. It is something for 30-odd vessels at all stages of the tide; whereas Nelson can only be made available by extensive dredging for 26-foot vessels over periods averaging three hours each twice in every 24 hours of the shipping season.

"A preliminary report will be submitted during August, to be followed by a detailed report dealing with the questions placed before me by Mr. Dunning last January."

REGENT THEATRE WILL REOPEN SEPTEMBER 1ST

WESTERN CROPS WORTH A HALF BILLION DOLLARS

Ottawa, Aug. 11.—Dominion Government officials are elated over the crop which forecasts a wheat yield of 357,000,000 bushels. It is pointed out that this means real money to the Western farmers, inasmuch as wheat prices now are 10 cents a bushel higher than they were a year ago. October wheat closed yesterday on Winnipeg at $1.51 3-8, and December at $1.43 a year ago, and December wheat was $1.48 as compared with $1.39 last year. The present crop is worth more than half a billion dollars on the Winnipeg market.

A similar situation holds true with respect to oats and barley. A year ago oats were selling at 47 cents a bushel. Today they are worth 63 cents, while barley, which sold at 81 cents last July 1st, is now quoted at 80 cents per bushel.

Moreover, the situation in Canada is regarded as excellent, and the West should have no difficulty in money to spend after the present harvest.

MAY DEPORT THE DEAD MAN'S BODY

John Vicik Expired In Local Hospital During The Night

John Vicik, the Slav, who jumped from a deportation car on the Canadian Pacific Railway near Belleville early yesterday morning died last night in the Belleville Hospital from injuries he had received. An inquest will be opened before Coroner Dr. Crowe at Trenton tonight at eight o'clock. Chief Bain of Trenton is conducting the affair and empanelling a jury. The body was first taken to the Picket Mortuary at Belleville but was later taken to Trenton.

The American Immigration officer who was in charge of the party of foreigners, arrived back in the city at 4.22 this morning from Montreal. He stated that the other men were all placed on the boat at Quebec bound for their homes in Europe.

Vicik attempted to make his escape by leaping from the moving train as it was pulling out of Trenton yards. The Immigration officer said that the men were lined up and escorted to their cells by four officers in charge. He feels very keenly about the affair as he was in charge of the deportation. There is a possibility that the body may have to be shipped back to Czecho-Slovakia, the man's original home.

DE VALERA WILL TAKE THE OATH OF ALLEGIANCE

45 Republican Members Of Irish House To Take Their Seats

"EMPTY FORMALITY"

Opposition Parties Will Have Majority Over The Government

Dublin, Aug. 11.—Eamon De Valera and all other members of the Pianna Fail (Republican Party) who were elected to the Dail Eireann at the recent general election took the oath of allegiance today, qualifying them for participation in the proceedings of the Dail.

May Defeat Government

London, Aug. 11.—Decision of Eamon De Valera and his entire following among the members o fthe Dail Eireann to take their seats in the assembly tomorrow after subscribing to the oath of allegiance to which hitherto they have refused to subscribe, removes to inject an immediate political crisis in the Free State and possibly may have an important reaction in the relations between the Free State and Great Britain. Exactly what will happen when Dail meets Friday can only be conjectured but the present assumption is that the Government's defeat is inevitable because the Pianna Fail deputies will add greatly to the opposition and that its resignation necess arily will follow.

Decide to Submit

Dublin, Irish Free States, Aug. 11.—The Executive Committee of the Pianna Fail, the Republican party headed by Eamon de Valera, last night unanimously decided that the 45 members of the party who have been elected by Poles to the Free State Parliament shall take the oath of allegiance to the British Crown, and assume their seats on Friday.

De Valera himself joined his followers in the unanimous decision, not withstanding the recent report that he would resign his leadership and perhaps even retire from politics rather than recant his frequently declared refusal to take the oath to "a foreign sovereign." The meeting, however, decided to regard the oath as an "empty formality", and made the declaration that Pianna Pail's only allegiance is to the Irish nation.

The question of swearing allegiance to the Crown has kept the republicans from taking seats in the Dail since the creation of the Free Stat i

The decision now on the part of the Republicans is understood to have been brought about by a threat in the Free State Government's new Public Safety Bill might destroy the Republican party. The Public Safety Bill gives the Government great latitude in what it may do in situations which it considers to threaten the safety of the country. It also greatly modifies the death penalty for any one carrying arms without authorization. The measure is designed to put into the Dail would give the Opposition party a large majority over the Government.

Roscoe Vandervoort would be appointed successor to W. L. Doyle who on Monday of this week resigned his position as head of the local Income Tax office.

During recent months the tendency has been to cut down on the staff in the Income Tax Office, no new appointments being made when a vacancy occurs.

Mr. R. H. Raynor Supposed To Have Returned To Belleville

RETURNS THE CAR

Borrowed Automobile Sent Back To Owner In Bloomfield

R. H. Raynor's Garage, this city and Picton, was declared bankrupt by the Bankruptcy Court, Toronto, August 8 and F. M. Moffat has been appointed the custodian. This step has been pending for some time and the friends of the order did not come as a surprise to any one.

Speaking with Mr. Moffat this afternoon he stated to The Intelligencer that as yet he was unable to state what the assets or the liabilities of the company would be or the number of creditors.

While The Intelligencer has not yet seen Mr. Raynor, it was rumored about the city that he had returned to Belleville. When the newspaperman called the home of Charles F. Thompson at Bloomfield over the long distance telephone this afternoon, Mr. Thompson was in Belleville, but Mrs. Thompson stated that her husband's automobile (President model Studebaker) was returned to Bloomfield this morning.

It will be recalled that on Tuesday of this week this paper quoted Mr. Thompson as saying that on Saturday last, Mr. Raynor called him by phone from Belleville, asking for the loan of his car for the week-end and up to date it had not been returned and he was becoming very uneasy. It was known that Mr. Raynor had crossed over to the United States.

Aggressive Business Man

Two years ago last spring, Mr. Raynor purchased the business and goodwill of the Rigg's garage this city and immediately started to establish a name for himself by the unusually large number of Studebaker cars which he sold the first year. Later he began to push the Chrysler car and last fall he purchased the garage business of Wilson and Gribble. This firm had the agency for the Willys-Knight and Overland cars.

Much of the success of Mr. Raynor in this city was attributed to the big prizes which he allowed on seals for used cars and it is stated that during the operation of the province who were contemplating exchanging their car for a new one invariably came to Raynor's Garage either at Belleville or Picton to make the deal. Mr. Raynor also was his reputation for liberal allowances on used cars. Only this spring Mr. Raynor staged a brilliant automobile show at Picton with Romanelli's Orchestra from Toronto in attendance for three evenings.

Well Known in Picton

Previous to coming to Belleville, Mr. Raynor for some years carried on a garage business at Picton and their residence which he still occupies. About one year ago, Mr. Raynor purchased the beautiful residence of Mr. George K. Graham on East Bridge Street for approximately fifteen thousand dollar and since taking possession has made extensive improvements to it, including the planting of an Oriental rose garden on the rear lots.

It is only a few years ago since Mr. Raynor was engaged in the farming industry in Prince Edward County.

"What others think of thee stay not to ask—
Rather than please the many, serve the few;
Knowing that life's most glorious regal task

DANGEROUS GAME

A despatch from the Washington correspondent of the Toronto Globe contains a warning of coming anti-British agitation in the United States as a result of the failure of the Geneva disarmament conference. The correspondent alludes to a "latent prejudice" against Britain "which can upon occasions be capitalized by politicians" and adds that "the failure of the conference gives a talking point for many politicians willing and anxious to trade upon anti-British prejudice."

The prejudice is more than latent. It is open and active. Already the Anglophobes are at work preparing to take advantage of the opportunity offered them by the disagreement at Geneva. One specimen instrumental ity for the propagation of anti-British sentiment will suffice. The American First League is a propagandist agency a hang-over from the early years of the great war. Its headquarters are in New York and its president is Alphonse G. Koehle, a German-American lawyer. Mr. Koehle has sent to President Coolidge, the U.S. secretaries of state and of the navy, and Ambassador Hugh S. Gibson, in behalf of the league's executive committee, a letter "congratulating this country because it did not accept at Geneva a sinister disadvantage in auxiliary ships, and because it can now build a navy which will secure its safety against its only two potential enemies England and Japan." And the letter says further that "Japan is America's enemy because she needs and covets the Philippines, and England is America's enemy because she has crushed or helped to crush every rival."

When congress meets the "big navy" group is sure to make a determined effort to carry its program through and it will be able to count upon a widespread and well organized body of public opinion in favor of its objective. When it is recalled how "Big Bill" Thompson appealed successfully to the anti-British sentiment in Chicago—in getting himself carried into office as mayor by telling the people that King George was conspiring against the interests of Chicago, and that he (Big Bill) and he only knew how to foil the sinister plotting of the interfering monarch, one must realize that it will be difficult for politicians to resist the temptation to make use of campaign material all ready to hand. There is more than a little danger in the situation.

WAR ON DISEASE

An international Clinic, which serves as a clearing house for discoveries concerning the cure or prevention of disease, has been established in Paris, and during the recent summer students from sixteen nations there attended lectures by forty professors. Dr. Eastman Sheehan, a plastic surgeon, of New York, has returned from the Clinic with a word of cheer for cancer patients. He admitted the cause of cancer had not been ascertained but he added that the art of the plastic surgeon had developed to a stage that cancer on the jaw, lip, face, or any other part of the body easily accessible could be eradicated by an operation and the bone or flesh replaced. "In case," he said, "of cancer on the jaw the bone is removed and a new one set in its place at the same time, so that the flesh and the bone grow together. We performed that operation in Paris for an old man over 70. A few days later the only trace of the cancer or the operation was a small lump on the jaw."

At the same time medical journals report the claim of Dr. Charles W. Duval, head of the department of pathology of Tulane Medical School in New Orleans, that he has taken a long step forward in the prevention and cure of measles. The New York Times says:

"According to these reports, as explained by Dr. Duval, he, with the assistance of Dr. R. J. Hibbard, was the first person successfully to innoculate lower animals with the germs of measles and to produce in them the identical effects of the disease in human beings. Then, by injecting germs from these inoculated animals into human beings, he produced measles in those who were not immune while those who were immune were unaffected, thereby proving that the germ causing the disease had been isolated and paving the way for the production of preventive and curative serums."

Everywhere in the world men of science are fighting the age-long war against disease, carrying a trench here establishing an observation post there generally making progress in behalf of the human race. Some deadly germs have been conquered, others chase pursuit but in a thousand laboratories the campaign against cancer, tuberculosis and all the others of the deadly list goes endlessly on.

POOR PROSPECTS

An American scientific expedition is at present working its way among the islands and ice-strewn channels of Baffin's Bay. Under date of July 30 George P. Putnam, a member of the expedition, sent by radio a message from which this is extracted:

"Persistent southwest winds have banked the Baffin Island shore. This, with dank fogs, has made navigation about impossible and certainly highly dangerous in waters where the giant pans are forever being milled about by inshore and seaward tides. So, pending a change in weather, we are waiting for a better chance to work northward."

This information is of some interest to Canadians, for the condition described are those which prevail in the route which would have to be taken by the vessels of the great Hudson Bay transportation enterprise upon which this country has spent many millions of dollars and is evidently committed to the expenditure of many millions more. What will be the rate of marine insurance which will have to be paid on vessels regularly navigating channels like the one described and in all weathers?

THE SLEEPING CHILDREN

The house is quiet now, but all the day
The sound of pattering feet was in the hall.
How tired they grew ere night began to fall;
Come view them as they lie—no care have they.
If dreams do cause them in their sleep dismay.
Perhaps the reason is today a doll
Was broken, or some mishap did befall
A toy, that these are trifles none will say
Who knows a child. Let them sleep sweetly on;
The time will come when they will all be gone,
And no tomorrow will bring back the din
Which only dies with sundown now, and yet
A truth this is which we too soon forget.
Before we leave we'll snugly tuck them in.

OTHER MEN'S THOUGHTS

A number of newspapers have expressed astonishment that Premier Baldwin should profit by his visit to Canada to speak of Imperial co-operation. It would be astonishing were he not to do so. It must be acknowledged that he has treated the subject with admirable tact, frankness and altruism. In our opinion the mission of the British Prime Minister is being conducted in a manner that is just and convincing. He realizes better, perhaps than an immense majority of the English people that the commercial bonds between the Mother Country and the Dominions will do more to maintain the integrity of the Empire than the ether laws and the most successful diplomacy. Canadians know that Mr. Baldwin has given proof of the sincerity of the Imperial policy.—L'Evenement.

Yes, and not one of the ungrateful bounders has been around to even say much as thank me.

A VOTE FOR THE MOST POPULAR VACATION RESORT

Which is Ontario's most popular vacation resort?

If that question were put to a vote, the Kawartha Lakes would rank high among the outstanding favorites.

Here are glorious lakes and beautiful wooded shores. Here are the haunts of the fighting "muskies" and the sport giving speckled trout. Here the air is always cool and invigorating.

In Kawartha Lakes are hundreds of attractive camping sites, while on various points have been located cottage colonies and well-kept hotels. In a word, this is here that a vacationist could desire, yet none of the gateways to this land of summer delight are more than three or four hours distant from Toronto via the fast trains of the Canadian National Railways.

WOMAN FIRST AMONG BEAUTIES

Liverpool, Aug. 11.—A beautiful woman first, then a beautiful child, a beautiful flower, a beautiful sunset, a beautiful edifice.

This is the order of the five most beautiful things in creation, H. Gordon Selfridge, owner of a London department store, said in opening an exhibition by students of the Liverpool University School of Architecture at the Walker Art Gallery, Liverpool.

Belts are an important accessory since most dresses at present are worn with narrow sashs or leather belts are neutral colours are preferred to more colorful types, while belts this season often combine reptile skin with suede or leather and much emphasis is placed upon the clasps, which are made of metal in modernistic design.

TODAYS MARKETS

WHEAT PRICES RISE

Chicago, Aug. 11.—Reports of increasing black rust damage to domestic spring wheat carried wheat prices up and fast early today. At the same time, corn and oats advanced to new high price records for the season, the government crop report apparently indicating future heavy abandonment of corn acreage. Opening at 1-8 off to 7-8 up, wheat later showed gains of about 3 cents. Corn started half cent to 1 3-4 down, sagged a little more and then jumped rapidly. Provisions arrayed lower.

Some Rearlien

New York, Aug. 11.—Violent break of 56 points in the common stock of the Manhattan Electric Supply Company started a general weakness in the stock market just before mid-day after an opening outburst of buying had lifted a dozen specialties to new high levels. A handful of other high priced pool securities broke from 5 to 15 points while declines of 1 to 3 points took place throughout the general list.

The break in Manhattan Electrical Supply came while the stock exchange was investigative reports of a "crooked corner" in that issue following its sensational advance from a low of 53 1-4 this year to a high of 132 a few weeks ago. The stock closed last night at 120 1-2, fluctuated erratically with in a 5 point range in the first hour, then broke precipitately to 75, rallied above 80 and then collapsed again to 64 1-2 early in the afternoon

Hpuston Oil dropped 15 1-4 points to 128 and rallied to 135. Timken Roller Bearing dropped 10 to 122, 1-2 and snapped back to 130 and DuPont, Commercial Solvents "B," and Delaware and Hudson sold down 5 points or more Violent fluctuations of this nature invariably scared many traders and investors away from the market and resulted in heavy liquidation throughout the list.

Little attention was paid for the time being to outside news developments. A further shading in time money rates forbidding, the shorter maturities below 1 per cent. For the first time this year indicated that there was no strain on the credit situation. Call money in plentiful supply at 4 3-4 per cent

Betsy was originally come time ago on a serious charge and was released on probation, the term of which was not up when she was arrested before at the request of the local police. SOCIETY TO MAKE WORK PLEASANTER

Paris, Aug. 10.—French women who work at home, under sweat shop conditions are being enrolled in a society that is trying to help them improve their work and also get better pay for it.

An exposition of this home-made product—knitting, underwear, baby clothes and various art objects—has brought the movement into public notice. A thousand women already have joined the society and have learned that their employers have been increased and their labor made more pleasant. Aside from intelligent advice and trained instruction, the women have been able to reduce the toll taken by intermediaries and to find better markets.

IF PROPOSAL FAILS TO BRING A THRILL

Can she "marry for respect" and be happy? Is respect a satisfactory substitute for love? Or is respect really another form of love?

DEAR ELSIE:

Will you please tell me the right thing to do? I admire a boy tremendously and respect him, but I feel that the "love spark" is not lighted. Would it be right to marry under that condition?

I lived in a small country town and came to the city because I knew it offered more in salary than the country. I work for my living and I live all alone and feel that life is too lonely.

He is companionable and knows the way I feel about the affair, and is hoping that I will change and really love him. However, he doesn't wish to force me and wants me to be happy. There is no "thrill" or "romance" on my part, but I have always felt that respect comes first. Is respect really love then? We are of different faiths and he is highly educated. Could that make a difference?

M. de B.

I can't possibly tell whether respect will carry you through, dear girl, for I do not know the hidden need of your nature. It isn't possible to generalize about love. Love is supposed to hit us all in about the same way with unmistakable symptoms, like measles or mumps. But that isn't true. There are certain tests for love—no definite signs of its arrival. Each heart makes a love law all its own.

Love shapes itself in accordance with the rest of our nature. Some natures love fiercely, impetuously, dramatically, as they do everything else. Some love mercifully. To them love is a gay fiesta. To others love comes as an overwhelming storm. And there are yet other natures which ripen slowly, placidly into love, as you may ripen.

How do you do everything else in life, M. de B.? That's the question which you must ask yourself. Are you given to strong enthusiasm in other matters? Is your affection for your family and your friends ardent? If so, you should certainly postpone marriage until you feel more than "respect" for the man you love. But if you take all life temperately then this deep respect which you feel may simply be YOUR way of loving.

Though ye all love differently, one thing is true of all love. Before any love can become permanent it must suffer and sacrifice and endure, and so win its slow, difficult way into loyalty. The success of marriage does not depend on the temperature of our desire, but on TENSILE STRENGTH OF OUR LOYALTY. It's the easiest thing to desire another person, my dear—and some of us can never cure ourselves of the habit. But it's tremendously difficult to stick by another person through the long, hard journey of life.

Any husband looks alluring when he's all doiled up in his Summer flannels, with a nice fresh haircut and a romantic gleam to his eye. But it's quite another story when he leaves himself out at 6 a.m. smashing and lamenting with tears of self-pity dripping into his three days' whiskers and general appearance of a badly boiled onion. That's the time girlie, when desire fades like the dew from the desert cactus, and you just hang on to your romance by sheer spunk.

And it truly seems to me that Respect is as good a preparation for Love's Zero Hours as the rosiest romance. Perhaps better.

As for the "different faiths":

Is there really any difference in your "faiths" or is it simply a difference in religion? People can unite on questions of religion, but it is pretty hard to adjust two natures whose beliefs are opposed. Do you merely belong to different churches or do you actually see life differently? And the same argument applies to education. Is it simply a difference in the number of books you have read or "finis you have made in school, or have your minds a DIFFERENT APPETITE FOR KNOWLEDGE? If you're both eager to learn more about life and willing to go at it from the same angle, then you'll make a go of it. But if he believes in facing the truth and you believe in running away from it or are indifferent about it, then you'll never, NEVER be happy together.

Advice to Girls
By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl in my twenties. I am in love with the best boy on earth, but he hasn't much money. We are both working. Do you think it would be better for us to marry now and use our money together to furnish our home, or wait until his salary is larger? He says we are wasting the best part of our lives living apart when we could be together.

Please advise me what to do.

LONELY HEART.

LONELY HEART: Generally, my dear, I advise a young couple not to marry until the man is able to support a wife in a fairly comfortable fashion. For marriage, you know, brings on a great number of responsibilities, especially financial ones, and it is better for the husband to be well established, so he can meet them without incurring debt. But in your case, and there are many others just like you, I rather think that it would be an excellent idea for you to marry and budget your money together. I can appreciate your fiance's feelings on the subject, and I see no reason why you should not marry now and run your home on a cooperative basis. It is rather difficult on a woman to continue her business and run a home at the same time but I am sure your husband will be thoughtful and considerate of you and make it just as easy as possible. Don't take your position or your home duties too seriously, for that takes too much of the joy out of living. Simply consider them both in a practical and sane manner, and I am sure you will make a highly successful home-business wife

SINCLAIR'S

CURSE OF LOVE
By Mildred Harbour

Tortured by jealously, longing for Carson's ready sympathy, Kendall went to his club and put in a long-distance call for Carson at his hotel.

The report came back that Carson had left that evening.

"You have his address?" asked Phillip eagerly, stilling the disappointment in his heart. Carson would, he knew, come any distance, if a friend in need called him.

"I'll give you the mail clerk," was the reply.

Finally, after considerable burning and mysterious clicking, a suave voice answered Kendall's query.

"Mr. Carson? Yes, we have his address. Just a moment, please."

A moment later, it was given. Carson's bank address. An address at which a letter might reach him days, weeks, later.

To Be Continued

"There was a storm, Cynthia," said gently. "Probably the rain obscured your windshield."

"Probably," she agreed thoughtfully. "And there was nothing left of my beautiful car!" she asked, with a pitiful smile, after a time.

She considered this for a time, and then shook her head.

"I don't think I want another like it, addy," she decided gravely. "I'm afraid I'd always be thinking of the other one that I can't remember. I mustn't let it get my driving nerve, you know Daddy," she added, with a smile.

His heart ached for her. And in the back of his mind lurked the terrible question that so tormented Cynthia's mother—where had their daughter been that fateful night? What had happened to the proud, attracted young creature whom Major Carteret had jilted on the eve of their wedding?

"I'd like a car that is different in make, in color, everything," Cynthia was saying. "Will I be able to drive again soon, Daddy?"

"Very, very soon," he answered. "You're nearly recovered, Cynthia. Now be a good girl, and, put all these disquieting thoughts out of your mind. Just act as though the accident never occurred. Forget all about it and begin again on your own day little self."

She smiled at him and touched his hand lightly with her thin fingers.

"I will Daddy. I promise. You and mother are so good to me. I'm afraid I've been awfully headstrong at times. I'll try to do better."

When he had done away, she closed her eyes again and lulled by the fragrance of the garden and the warmth of the sunshine, she slept.

On a busy, fashionable thoroughfare not very far away, King Carson—the man she had married and forgotten—was idling in that same brilliant sunshine, scanning with eager eyes each smart car that passed in the throng of afternoon traffic.

He couldn't fail to recognize Her car he told himself, and he would know Her, because his heart would tell him when she was near.

But his search was in vain. The car he looked for did not pass.

CHAPTER 26
A PREY TO DOUBT

Women, it has been said, are the original masqueraders of this world. They can, upon necessity, wear a mask so cleverly and securely adjusted that not even their nearest and dearest suspect that it is a mask.

So it was with Norma that evening after her fateful interview with Sydney Stokes!

She appeared bright and smiling, to greet her father and her husband. She wore one of her prettiest frocks. There was a feverish brilliance in her blue eyes and unwonted color burned in her cheeks.

Collins beyond thinking that his daughter seemed unusually happy and gay, noticed nothing. But Philip Kendall watched her keenly bitterly. He thought that he knew why she was so unusually gay that evening. In his memory was the picture of her sitting in her car with Sydney Stokes by her side so absorbed in conversation that she had not even noticed him as he passed in another car.

The mere thought was gall and worm wood to him. He felt that he must get away to think this thing out for himself. So after dinner, he invented a business engagement and left the house to walk the dark streets for hours, alone with his thoughts.

Was it really Stokes after all—and not himself— whom Norma loved? Had she married him merely to satisfy her social ambitions as the original cir cumstances would seem to warrant? Did that account for her reserve for her not—entirely—happy air, for her shyness that made him feel a shadow upon their love?

If it was Stokes then everything that had puzzled and troubled him was explained.

Was he making a fool of himself, making a mountain out of a mole-hill? He asked himself bitterly as he strode along, striking savagely at invisible objects with his walking-stick. Perhaps there was some perfectly innocent and justifiable explanation of Stoke's presence in Norma's car that afternoon. But if so, why hadn't she mentioned it? Why hadn't she said simply: "I met Sydney this afternoon and went for a drive. He wanted to talk to me about such-and-such."

Phillip Kendall found himself wishing that his friend, King Carson, was still in town. King Carson's birth ability his power to take life seriously would have backed him on enormously. Kendall felt sure. Carson was responsible some agency for getting in touch with Sydney Stokes and with their ex-wife the truth about that afternoon with Norma. Phillip knew he couldn't. Moreover, he could ask nothing without involving Norma.

EXPECTANT MOTHERS

Read Mrs. Menard's Letter, Her Experience May Help

Chatham, Ontario.—"I want to tell you how much good your medicine has done me. Before my baby came I felt so weak and run down that I could hardly do my work. My head ached continually and I was so discouraged that I could cry from morning till night. I had a baby last spring and a half old and it gave me a lot to do. So I thought I would try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as I had read so much about it in the little books. I noticed a difference right away as my head was relieved and my tired feeling left me. My health has been doing my washing and she continued doing it, as she said it might set me back if I started to do it again. It sure did help me and I had taken just two bottles when my baby came. He is a fine big boy now nearly five months old. I am taking your medicine again and I am able to do my work all by myself now. I always recommend the Vegetable Compound to women, and especially to expectant mothers, as I believe they need help at those times."—Mrs. OLIVER MENARD, 24 Hickory St., Chatham, Ontario.

Some Helpful Hints For Busy Housewives

In making mayonnaise dressing stir the beater: ego into the cold vinegar and when mixture is boiled it will not curdle as it is likely to when eggs are added to hot vinegar. There is only one sure way of getting curdled mayonnaise to "come back". Start all over again with another egg yolk add a little oil to it and very gradually beat in the curdled dressing till all is well blended.

To sharpen the food chopper when the knives become black and dull run a piece of sand soap or scouring brick through the chopper as you would a potato. It brightens and sharpens the knives so they cut like new. Use put vertied sand soap or scouring brick, or small ends left from the cake of scour ing soap. Wash well in boiling water afterwards to remove all grit. Oil the chopper or coz beater with a little glycerine; this is a lubricant which does not taste in food.

PICNICERS MADE MERRY TO HELP HOSPITAL FUND

St. Michael's Annual Outing Well Up To Established Standard

The annual St. Michael's picnic which was held yesterday at Holden's Grove, West Belleville, was one of the most successful in the history of the parish and was largely attended by citizens of Belleville, Trenton, Picton, Deseronto, Napanee and surrounding parishes. Many of the neighboring clergy were also present. The proceeds were most satisfactory and will be applied to the St. Michael's Hospital Fund.

The grove with its ancient tall pines presented a picturesque sight with the scattered refreshment and novelty booths, the large open dining room with the immaculate table linen and profusion of flowers, the slides and swings for the children and the large dancing pavilion where the happy picnickers stepped the light fantastic until midnight. Hundreds of automobiles were parked in and around the grounds and the attendance ran into the thousands, all which gave the appearance to a passerby of a largely attended, happy event.

Long List of Sports

There was something doing the whole time for everyone and in the early afternoon a long list of sports took place in which there were prizes for the little tots, ones for the older children, races for the fat people, races for the married people, in fact races for all types and ages. Following the sports, two softball matches were played for the championship of a silver cup which was donated by the local Council of Knights of Columbus to the team emerging with the laurels from the two matches. This trophy went to the Trenton softball team, they defeated Cobourg in the first game and Belleville in the second. Much interest was displayed during these matches and many "rooters" were in attendance, cheering for their home team.

Famous Supper.

St. Michael's supper which has a distinct-wide reputation was well patronized end again this year as in the former years, the same bountiful meal was served by the ladies of the church, whose skill as cooks is generally recognized and between the hours of four and eight o'clock they served supper to thousands who did full justice to the large assortment of cooked meats, potatoes salads, pies, cakes and home-made bread, which were in evidence.

A large number of people who attended of the double-header baseball match at the Exhibition Park came to the grounds after the game for supper and remained for dancing in the evening.

Early i nthe evening the large dancing pavilion began to command the attention of the gathering where the first hour or two square dancing was indulged in by the elder people; all the old fashioned dances were given and judging by the happy countenances of those on the floor, they were having the "time of their lives." About nine o'clock round dancing was started and which lasted for about midnight.

As the admission to the grounds after supper was free hundreds more wended their way there from the city and the jitney busses and ice cream booths were taxed to their capacity during the entire evening.

The large crowds which were brilliantly illuminated many old friendships were renewed and "old times" commented on by the participants as some of whom did not come into contact with each other at these annual affairs.

MOUSTACHE TRIM KILLS

Toronto, August. 10.—Walter D. Hudson, stock broker of this city, died last Sunday in hospital from an infection caused by the dreaded Streptococcus germ. The infection is said to have set in after Mr. Hudson had had his moustache trimmed. It is thought that some of the hairs of the nose had been plucked out in the slight fracture of the delicate skin of the nose the death dealing germs had found entrance.

MISSION CIRCLE'S ANNUAL PICNIC

Tabernacle Ladies Enjoy Holiday At Home Of Member

Yesterday afternoon the members of the Here Am I Mission Circle of the Tabernacle Church held their annual picnic at the home of Miss Rhea Wagar, Lonsdale. Four car loads left the church at two o'clock and upon their arrival held their regular business meeting and program in the spacious double-parlour of the Wagar home. The Pres., Miss Laura Bell presided at the regular meeting and had charge of the program which consisted of a vocal solo by Miss Jean Rose, a piano solo by Mrs. Cecil Lent, a reading by Mrs. Stark and a short talk by Miss Viola Ashley, a nurse-in-training at Albany Hospital, Albany New York. Her subject was "the Opportunity of Canadian girls to make good at home as well as elsewhere."

The meeting proper closed with the National Anthem and a most pleasing contest in which Mrs. Whiteman won the prize. A banquet was served to twenty-eight persons on the lawn including the members and friends of the circle. A feature of the refreshments was a birthday cake in honor of all of the birthdays in August especially in honor of Miss Ashley who has never been interred in the work of the circle. Before leaving for home the visitors gathered on the front lawn and a vote of thanks was tendered to Miss Wagar for her kind hospitality.

"HORSE SENSE"

London, Aug. 10.—London has a horse that sits down in the roadway when a hobby puts his hand up to stop the traffic. The horse belongs to a firm of coal merchants and draws a load of coal every day. When the cart happens to be stopped by a traffic cop the horse sits down on its haunches. As soon as the traffic is released it gets up again and goes on. The owners say he's a very intelligent animal.

Walter Hagen, of New York, "King of the Links," who competed in the Canadian open last week in Toronto as he looks when he is not playing the game that has made him famous. He turned in the fifth best score, tieing, with Leo Diegel.

DESCO CLUB 1ST ANNUAL PICNIC

Deacon Shirt Co., Employees Spend Merry Day At Sandbanks

On Wednesday at twelve noon, fifty people quietly erased work. At twelve-thirty, fifty girls and boys, shouting and singing, started for the Sandbanks, on the first annual picnic of the Deacon Shirt Company.

The girls were all knickered out for the occasion and the boys feared they were in for a strenuous time. All cars arrived safely with Barney Oldfield alias Reg. Hinchey an easy first.

The one cloud in the sky was the absence of that "friend to all" Mr. F. S. Deacon.

Surf bathing was first on the program and was greatly enjoyed by the spectators.

The first soft ball game with Sam Hibbard and Bill Kemp against Bill Wade and Gladys Knott as batteries was pronounced a tie. Harry Harper dashing in with the tying run. The winners of the races were:

Boot and Shoe Race—Bessie Duesberry, Florrie Taulbman.

Three-legged Race—Audrey Kelliher and Bessie Duesberry, Irene Fisher and Gladys Lowe.

Relay Race—Gladys Knott and Pearl Tuttle.

The climax of th epicnic was reached when the whole party sat down to the tastefully decorated tables. Mr. W. B. Deacon who is on a water diet, won the pie eating contest and Violet Higby, who is on a reducing diet, won the sandwich race.

After supper Sam Hibbard led his team of Amazons against the Wellington girls and the game ended in a tie which is the way all good picnic games end.

And now for the ride home, tired but happy, with good company for all and the full moon riding high in a clear sky.

Increase the Profit On Every Bushel

—From field

—to elevator

Every time one man does the work of two, you save one man's wages.

With a Fordson threshing "rig", costing less than $2000 for tractor, separator and belt complete, you can thresh 700 to 1100 bushels of wheat in ten hours with about half the man power large rigs require. And with a home-made hopper to store the grain between trips, one man with a Ford grain truck can move the grain to the elevator 4 or 5 miles distant as fast as it is threshed. In threshing the season's grain crop, this amounts to a substantial saving and adds to the profit on every bushel raised.

Borden's EAGLE BRAND CONDENSED MILK

ONTARIOS ROUT KINGSTON ALERTS

The Ontarios, spick and span in brand new blue and white uniforms with blazing letters across the front proved entirely too good for the Kingston Alerts last evening in an exhibition game on the armouries lawn. The final score was 16-0 and although the locals may not have had the advantage that the score indicates on the Lansdowners they were all over their opponents from the first drop of the ball. Despite the large score there was some fine baseball dished up for the crowd of 1,000 turned out.

Hilda Adams one of the famous Adams ball family was sent to the hillock and she pitched a remarkably good game. She was opposed by Miss Aved Orr who was also effective at times, but hit hard at others.

Jessie Adams of another family cleaved the only home-run in the third inning but unfortunately there was no-body on the paths at the time.

Miss Stinson, of Napanee, who was picked up by the Alerts on the road made the feature play when she dragged down a long hoist by Olive Adams in the third frame.

Helen Lee of the Beavers, who went at short-stop bridge-playing a short cause was the king-pin in a lightning double-play.

The Ontarios were a little slow in getting away but once they got started there was little use in trying to halt them.

Alice Throgmitan of the Alerts' Frontenacs was stationed at second base and turned in a lively game.

The visitors did not take kindly to Miss Dupire Wyeller's decision, but it appeared to be O.K. through Agent.

Palatial Steamships from Canadian Pacific house this provide tri-weekly service between Toronto and Port Arthur and Fort William, Ontario, Canada. Calling at what one motorist says it is now more expensive to travel by Steamship to Port William than by rail. It is cheaper in fact, as two dollars covers the whole of ones meals as well as the berth on either the Keewatin, Assiniboia or the Manitoba which are the finest Ocean Steamships on the Great Lakes. By leaving Toronto shortly after noon on a Saturday or Wednesday it is possible in less than three hours to connect with a Steamer at Port McNicoll and enjoy two days and nights afloat. A similar connection may be made at Owen Sound on Mondays. Built for Marie is the only port of call enroute, but it is a very pretty one and affords a very delightful and refreshing break in the west ward journey. And the service is irreproachable. BELLE THEATRE

Robert Edeson, popular screen-player who is featured in "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary" is experiencing a real departure from the rules of screen characterizations he has heretofore given film fans. In many of the productions in which he has appeared he has been referred to as "Judge" or "Doctor," but in never had an opportunity to play either role.

In "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary," which comes to the Belle theatre today, Mr. Edeson is cast as Judge Hopper, former sweetheart of "Aunt Mary" and the bane of all speed violating auto drivers.

When Harrison Ford is brought before the Judge—Ford had crashed into he Judge's car a few days previously—he Judge certainly lets Ford have the oil benefit of all his pent up wrath. which is saying a lot.

"Not since I've been in pictures and even referred to as the Judge," says Edeson, "have I really been able to lay the role to its fullest extent. And I got a real kick out of it. Now I know how the traffic court justices of whom a violator is brought before him."

May Robson, Harrison Ford, Phyllis Haver, Franklin Pangborn, Arthur Hoyt, and others, screen notables are featured in this All-Sennitian production which Raymond Cannon adapted.

BELLEVILLE ENTERS PLAY-OFFS OF QUINTE LEAGUE WITH DELORO

Defeated Point Anne 2-0 In Sparkling Performance

LOST TO DELORO

Largest Crowd Of Season Enjoyed Holiday Double-Header

Belleville Canadian Nationals entered the play-offs for the championship of the Bay of Quinte League by dispoing of Point Anne in a smart game of ball at the Exhibition Park yesterday afternoon by a score of 2-0, before the largest crowd of the season. But the old Jinx again triumphed in the Deloro boys again triumphed in the final game of the regular schedule by a count of 8-3.

The curtain-raiser was equally as fast as any senior game one could desire to witness anywhere. As the score indicates the play was exceeding by fast and for right straight innings neither team could break into the run column and Point Anne were already victims of an overtime contest but one team or the other had to crack under the strain and it happened to be the Point Anne that slipped a trifle and the Nationals squeezed in the opening and the Point's supporters say their chances of a championship in 1927 go skimmering.

The Point Anne team have had a remarkably good season and have always a good account of themselves from the start. Although they were beaten out by the locals they had the satisfaction of trimming the Deloro Club three times. That has been one of the outstanding features about the league this year. The Deloro pitchers had big to toss their pieces on the mound and the Belleville team were subbed to-weekly as lambs but Point Anne managed to break even on the season's play with the champions and the Nationals turned around and sent "Doug" Guyer & Co. into the discard.

Nothing depended on the Deloro game yesterday and although the boys tried hard they did not over-exert themselves in any way. But with Gibson improving every time out they will chase the northerners to the wire. Had the team fielded behind the lad in the village two weeks ago he would have defeated them then. The loss of three runable and plenty of it as several of them have been in a batting slump since the opening of the season and have shown no signs of emerging Deloro have a nice ball team but if the locals get down to brass tacks with the idea that Deloro are no better than they are then the Ballmasters may be representing the Quinte League in the O.B.A.A. play-downs.

Belleville 2; Point Anne 0

As was predicted Bill Strachan who was good enough to turn back Deloro last Friday was given the opportunity to tackle a similar job against the Belleville club. For eight innings he breezed along in rapid-fire style and surprised the critics who openly forecasted that he would not last two innings. Try as they might the railroad men found themselves bog-tied and smacked with little leeway allowed to go out in front. The Point Anne team gave an exhibition of defensive play that has not been equalled on the local diamond for many a moon. Scorch-ing hot-line drives were snared out of the dirt and runners caught by inches. Manny felt sorry for Strachan in the eighth inning as he dejectedly walked to the dug-out after his fine performance. He hung up no strike-out record but he made the heavy artillery of the Belleville team hit directly into the waiting hands of some of his teammates in this respect. Harry Blakely, the visitor's stellar short-stop was the beacon-light. Blakely, who has been playing ball for the Point all year accepted six of the most difficult kind of chances without a sign of an error. At least two of his pick-ups and throws seldom equalled in leagues of much higher rating. Gregory too covered himself with glory around first base and his stab of Guyer's had three in the eighth was almost a phenomenal piece of work.

In the matter of pitching, "Hoot" Gibson had it over his opponent like the proverbial tent and in the nine innings he struck out eleven men and allowed but seven hits. The cement boys went down like jack-rabbits in every session except the fifth inning when Strachan was forced to fly out to Ross in this chukker to get out of a bad hole with two men on cushions.

The villagers were only allowed four hits in the nine innings two of them doubles, while Belleville were credited with seven safe blows. Gibson is the only member of the Millar pitching crew to show any kind of real hurling and he is sure to be in the points in the play-off games.

Belleville had some nice chances to score but two lightning double-steals helped materially to spoil their chances. In the fourth Harry Mills was hit by a pitched ball and Hagerman was safe on an attempted fielder's choice. Peeny had purchased a single but was out at third. Harper flied to Murney Green and Post walked to fill the bases. Scott grounded out to Weir and the promising rally was nipped in the bud.

Again in the seventh Post was hit and Scott struck out and Gibson went out to Bishop. Then Belleville filled the out Post was told to head home only to be caught flat-footed four feet off the plate.

In the eighth the old ball game went flooey. Mills was safe on an error, Peeny beat out a bunt and Harry Mills was hit by a pitched ball. Hagerman singled to centre and Manager Guyer felt that Strachan's session was over and signalled Frank Bennett to go in. Peeny Mills' catch of Alex Weir's foul tip is the seventh put-out piece of business. Dies spectacular running snipe of Gibson's short stops Bennett in the fifth was another brilliant piece of work.

Peeny Mills and Verne Weir lead the hitting department with a brace of safe blows each.

It was a nice fast game in every respect and record time was hung up in running the pastime off.

Deloro E; Belleville 2

Scoring six runs in the eighth frame the Deloro boys salted away another game in the old ball-bag, the ninth straight win from the Belleville team. The interest was not so keen in this game as the applause from the stands indicated but up until the fatal canto it was a repetition of the first till.

The homesters opened auspiciously by hanging up one run in the initial inning and lead until the sixth when Deloro went to work and grabbed two which sent them into the lead they did not relinquish. The made sure of the piece by staging one of their famous bottling sprees in the eighth.

Manager Mills took himself out of the line-up and inserted Stan Hagerman behind the bat, sending Weir to the garden. The line-up was shifted several times after that to give the boys chances at a chance.

Gerow was started and he pitched masterful ball until the eighth when the visitors laid down a barrage of hits which saw his withdrawal. Gerow said that that he developed a sore arm which hindered his ability. Lloyd Harper the versatile Post-stop completed the game. Gerow was in deep water a couple of times not altogether his own fault, and he managed to get out before any damage was done.

After being almost boogerally beaten the Belleville team made a gallant effort to regain their lost prestige in the ninth but the last two men Hagerman and Post stood at the plate and watched two nice one go by and bowed the umpire call the third strike in each

GIANTS RALLY TO BEAT PIRATES

Pittsburgh, Pa., August 11.—That cruel strain which is a part of the basic nature of the Giants blazed forth in flaming fury yesterday afternoon, and what the McGrawmen did to the Pirates was under the general head of Mayhem and torture. With the addition of 5 to 2 against them at the start of the eighth innings, the Giants staged an exhibition of scoring that would have put anybody to chorus. The Giants pranced to the plate, rapped out hits, scored and then pranced back to Gen. Bush to change his pitching three times before he could stem the tide. Benton blanked the Pirates for six rounds, but weakened in the seventh. Ray Kremer was relieved by Carl Hubbell in that session, and after Ray Grimes' home run.

The 8-3 victory made the Giants record in the west eight won and four lost.

In the only other scheduled game the Braves and Philadelphians split a double-header at Boston, the Phillies taking the opener 6 to 5, behind Prunty's slight pitching and the Braves gathering in the final five to one when Jack Smith let him down with five hits. Manager Dave Bancroft's all-around play featured the second contest, in spite of an error in the seventh.

YOUNG TO COMPETE AT CHICAGO

Toronto, Aug. 11.—George Young, who has been training here for some time, in preparation for the $50,000 Lake Ontario swimming marathon to be held here August 31, announced today that he and his party are leaving on August 12 for Chicago, where he will compete in swimming contests to be held there on the following day.

Case.

The veteran Bill Leal ascended the hillock and he remained there until the last man was out. Leal struck out three and pitched consistent ball all the way.

Belleville got the first run when Harry Mills singled and scored on Art Quinn's error. In the sixth Jack Quinn doubled and Bill Regan missed a few seconds later, sending Jack over. Regan himself counted on Howard Brown's single.

In the eighth Bond singled and Jack Quinn got down which he beat out. Boudreau was safe on a fielder's choice and "Baldy" Quinn doubled scoring Jack. Ray Boudreau scampered over. Regan fooled with another round trip to left field and Bond scooted tallying Regan. Both Hughes and Jim Quinn singled and Bond was forced out at the plate. Leal was safe on Welr's poor throw to first. Bond and Hughes scored on Post and Scott respectively.

Weir hung up a loner for the home-run in the last inning. He doubled and Flagler was safe on Leal's error. Harper singled and Weir scampered. Things brightened up momentarily but Young grounded to Hughes and Hagerman and Scott struck out.

Brown and Leal got three hits each.

UMPIRE MOBBED AT WASHINGTON

Washington, D.C., Aug. 11.—Washington takes its baseball seriously indeed far too seriously for Mr. Clarence Rowland, American League umpire.

Clarence had to have a police escort to get him out of the park yesterday after having officiated in the first game of the series between the Senators and the Yankees, which it may have been surmised already, the Senators lost. It seems that the local populace had an idea that Mr. Rowland was responsible for the defeat of their favorites in what they have blinded themselves into believing be a tercial series."

Now, as a matter of fact, there is no such thing as a "crucial series" in the American League this year. Nor will there be. But you can't convince the local natives of that. They are egied for their indagination.

Mr. Rowland retired to the club house door unaitive his appearance. They weren't there to present him with any bouquet of flowers, either. The reserves had to be called to disperse the threatening throngs, but groups re-assembled and were still scarching for the umpire far, far into the night.

In the furore that followed the finish, the fact that the Babe had his 59th thirty-sixth home run of the season and it now only two laps of the diamond behind this twin thriller, Hadar Celtrig, in the great American home run handicap, was almost forgotten.

The opening game of the series with the Browns at Detroit. The score was 2 to 1.

At Philadelphia, the Athletics stepped the Boston Red Sox' winning streak by taking the first game of the series, 12 to 2. The Athletics hammered Tony Welzer for five runs, causing him to retire in five innings and walloped Fred Wingfield for seven runs in the seventh and eighth innings. Lefty Grove fanned nine of the visitors and did not allow a hit until Buddy Myer singled to open the seventh inning.

Detroit took advantage of St. Louis mistakes, and the Tigers won the

LOW SCORES AT BELLEVILLE CLUB

The return match with the Trenton Club should have been played on Wednesday, but at the last moment the visiting captain asked for a postponement till September.

As the men's team turned up in force, the captain, Walter A. Reeves, arranged several interesting competitions—prizes being given for the best score made by the first flight and the second and third flight players. Some particularly low cards were given in by the first flight men, the popular honorary secretary of the club, J. Whalen, just losing out to Mr. E. L. McCormack. The second and third flight competition was won by Mr. J. E. Cater, a player with very great possibilities. In the ladies' match, Mrs. B. Donnan, the wife of the president of the club, qualified for the Mercury Mills prize, doing the third hole in two. Mrs. C. Walker who is playing very sound golf, rather easily won the prize offered for the lowest score. In a match played earlier in the week, Mrs. H. Ross also qualified for the Mercury Mills prize.

W. M. S. MEETING HELD AT SHANNONVILLE

The regular monthly meeting of the W.M.S. was held at the church, August 3, 1927. The meeting opened by singing hymns 1 and 7 followed by prayer led by Mrs. F. E. Mills and Mrs. Sam Elliott read the scripture lesson from Psalm 1. Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. A invitation was read from the ladies of St. Andrew's and Gilead to join them in an open meeting on August 11th in their church, also an invitation to hold our picnic on the lawn of Mrs. Ketchesons summer cottage, Stoco Lake. Both invitations were accepted by the ladies with much pleasure and a sports committee consisting of Mrs. Sam Elliott, Mrs. H. Murphy, Mr. Taylor Hoover and Mr. Fred Millburn was appointed for the picnic which is for the Sunday School as well as the W.M.S. and their families. Mrs. Dies, the treasurer, reported $21.75 sent to the district treasurer for the quarter. As the roll was called members responded by naming one of our mission stories. Mrs. L. E. Mills took up the next chapter of the study book in the steps of the Great Physician which was very interesting. She also prepared questions to ask at the close. Mrs. Robertson read the letter of condolence be sent to Mrs. Shetler on behalf of this society on the death of her mother. Seconded by Mrs. Sam Elliott. The meeting closed with a verse of Hymn 177 and the Mirpah benediction.

After the service the choir was entertained at the comfortable and hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. Black where a most pleasant social evening was spent. At the close dainty home made refreshments were served and thoroughly enjoyed.

Before leaving Mr. Green voiced the appreciation of all and proposed three cheers for Mr. and Mrs. Black and the Misses Black, and cheers were certainly given, followed by singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows." Mr. Blacks reply was "Come Again!"

GOOD SAMARITANS ROB AFTER HELPING

Moose Jaw, Aug. 12.—Being robbed by men who had played the "good samaritans" to them by pulling their car out of the ditch, was the unique experience of Inspectors Rowan and Macdonald of the Fisheries Branch, Department of Fisheries and Marine.

The inspectors' car left the road near Mossbank, and help was asked from passing motorists to get it back on the road. A party of four men in a car stopped, assisted the inspectors to get their car back, and then one of the inspectors pulled out his wallet with $50 or $60 in it to pay for the service.

The wallet was snatched from his hand, a club was grabbed from the car by another of the quartet and they made off at high speed.

The body was removed to Cobley's Undertaking Establishmuit at Trenton yesterday and an inquest held there last night and after the jury viewed the body, they rendered a verdict to the effect that the deceased came to his death caused by a fractured skull sustained jumping from the moving train on Tuesday evening last.

The United States Immigration Officer who was in charge of the party was present at the inquest and gave the name of the parents of the deceased man who are living in the United States. The authorities at once got in communication with them and today were in receipt of a letter stating them to bury the body at Trenton with Protestant rites and stating that they would not be responsible for any funeral expenses.

Break For Liberty

Thirty-four men were arrested by Staten Island police, who also seized seven 7 ton trucks and three expensive automobiles. In addition, coast guards made prisoners of 26 men aboard the Ansonia.

While the police were busy taking their prisoners, the crew of the steamer, which had not yet begun to unload, cut their boat loose from the dock and started at full speed through the waters of Kilmen Kull. In his haste to escape, the helmsman ran his boat into two anchored and barges, cutting one in fifteen cleanly in two and causing the two men on the boat barge to be thrown head long into the water.

The alleged rum runner careened onward through the darkness until it ran on rose hitch and dry onto a sand bar. COAST TO COAST WITHOUT ENGINE

Maritime Tourists Expect To Make Vancouver By Tow-Line

Touring in a dilapidated old Ford car with no engine, Frank J. Elliott and Mrs. Elliott, residents of Amherst Nova Scotia, passed through the City today on their attempted long-distance towing record trip This is something new and unheard-of but the two men both of whom are newly married hope to establish a record with the assistance of kindly motorists The pair started from Halifax on the 20th of July "dead broke" but with high ambitions and today they announced that they are worth $1.00 between them.

Beneath the radiator where the engine should be the men carry their clothes, and baggage On the front of the antiquated lizzie is a wagon tongue which is hooked on the axle of the other car by means of a rope.

A novel method of repaying those who do them favors or give them tows is introduced in the form of free advertising.

Strung about the Ford of ancient vintage are metal fish wired from the top of the car On these, the names of all those who help them are inscribed For instance one sign reads "Kingston Stop at Sunnyside Garage" There is already almost twenty-five of these metal denizens of the deep about the car. These symbols show that the men are from the great ocean fishing area, home of the famous "Bluenose."

Few Accidents

A broken rear wheel and a smashed wind shield total the damages to the car since they left Halifax The spare wheel was fixed by a philanthropic garageman at Kingston. The pair were towed for fifteen miles east of Belleville by Mr Andrews When the reporter interviewed the tourists they were endeavouring to procure tow as Barrie, Ont., Aug. 12.—The tenth man to become involved in the series of burglaries and cattle thieving that has been prevalent in the district surrounding Becton during the last few months was arrested here today when Harry Cannon, a farmer near Cookstown, entered the police court and voluntarily surrendered to the police. He is charged with stealing four head of cattle. Ten men were arraigned in police court this morning and the cases were all adjourned until August 18th.

Becton, Aug. 12.—Holland Landing came into the Becton crime picture yesterday afternoon when the Provincial Police dug up an empty lard tub containing a seal coat worth $80, and a quantity of silverware, which had been stolen by Daniel Forsyth and given to Harvey Thornton three days before the attack on Alexander Hodge. Thornton took the Provincial Police officers to the spot where he had buried the lard tub a day or two after Daniel Forsyth was killed by Mr. Hodge farmhouse. DISASTROUS HONEYMOON ENDS IN HOSPITAL HERE

Joseph Koch, aged 25 years, of Buffalo, N. Y., with his youthful bride on a tour of honeymooning Ontario have already experienced trials and tribulations on the matrimony journey.

Wednesday of this week they were happily married at Buffalo and after the usual wedding festivities and week-end amid showers of rice and confetti, and their car decked with many wedding signs and escorted out of their home city by a long line of automobiles full of friends, they started on their way around Lake Ontario.

The first stop of the honeymoon was made at Hamilton where they suffered the first matrimonial gross, the bride requiring the service, of a Hamilton physician. Yesterday morning the youthful "honeymooners" continued their trip and made Belleville last evening, registering at Miss Johnson's Home for Tourists, Highland Avenue, where the happy bridegroom was seized with severe pains which a Belleville doctor diagnosed as appendicitis. The patient was removed to the Belleville General Hospital and an operation performed.

The tourists bride after the operation asked for the appendix which she is keeping as a souvenir and when her "lord and master" was removed from the operating room to his bedroom, she had a cot put in the same room with him and throughout the night watched by his side.

Today at the hospital The Intelligencer learned that the patient is resting as easily as could be expected.

RAYNOR ARRESTED AT ONE O'CLOCK THIS MORNING HIDING IN SWAMP

Charged With Embezzling Proceeds From Sale Of Car

HELD WITHOUT BAIL

Preliminary Hearing This Morning At Picton—Remanded a Week

Hiding in a swamp a few miles south of Picton, R. H. Raynor, former proprietor of garages in Belleville and Picton, was placed under arrest at one o'clock this morning by James Lovelesa, High County Constable for the county of Prince Edward.

Raynor was taken to Picton and faced a charge of embezzlement before Police Magistrate Levi Williams this morning and upon application of Crown Attorney M. R. Allaston, he was remanded to July until Saturday, Aug. 20th when the case will be proceeded with. F. L. Ward of Picton, is the prisoner's counsel. No bail was asked and it is understood that no application will be made.

Raynor is charged with embezzling seven hundred dollars belonging to Mrs. Ida Yerex who owns a confection ary store in Picton. He is alleged to have sold a used car owned by Mrs. Yerex and failed to account for the proceeds. It is understood that further charges are pending and may be laid within the course of a few days.

Local Police Interested

Chief of Police Kidd, of the local force, notified the authorities at Picton that Raynor was wanted and the message stated that he had left this city early yesterday morning for Picton. Chief Kidd and Sergeant of Detectives Truston left yesterday afternoon for the capitol of Prince Edward County and conducted a search of all the likely places wherein Raynor might be located. They remained there until after midnight but no trace of th fugitive could be found. Shortly after their return to Belleville the Chief was informed that Raynor had been apprehended. He was informed that a warrant was not issued for the accused's arrest until last evening.

Police Lend Assistance

Raynor when caught willingly submitted to arrest. He returned a car to Charles Thompson, Bloomfield, yesterday morning on his way to Picton which he had borrowed last week and used on a week end trip allegedly to the United States. Raynor was evidently aware that the authorities were on his trail and fled to the sparsely populated section of country across the Bay.

Mr. Wamp, of the Industrial Acceptance Corporation, a financial institution of Toronto, was in the city yesterday in the interests of his company and left for Picton late yesterday after noon.

Chief Kidd and Sergeant Truslech went back to Picton this morning and were present at the preliminary hearing. Neither the Chief nor Crown Attorney Allaston would make any statement as to the possibility of Raynor's arraignment here on any other criminal charges.

MUST SERVE OLD SENTENCE NOW

Harvey Lake Jumped From Moving Train A Year Ago

About a year ago Harvey Lake was convicted at Bancroft of a theft charge and was sentenced to one year in the reformatory. Yesterday he was brought down to Belleville by Jumped and of the train somewhere between Bancroft and Trenton and disappeared.

This morning an unkempt looking "bobo" appeared in Police Court on a charge of theft from George Wallace of Belleville and was remanded. The "bobo" turned out to be the long lost Lake. He will have to serve the year that he so cleverly avoided. will have a charge of escape laid against him. and next he will face the old theft charge. Lake stole a ladies wrist watch, a man's watch, a suit of clothes and some postage stamps. Provincial Police investigated the affair and yesterday arrested Lake at Stirling, bringing him to Belleville last night.

TODAY'S THOUGHT

It is a thing almost impracticable to have all men your friends, it is enough if you have no enemies. .

SENECA.

A WIDESPREAD PLEA

No subject is at the present time being given more attention in the editorial columns of newspapers all over Ontario and Quebec than that of the ever-growing toll of fatal accidents on the highways of the country. From all sides come opinions as to the drastic methods which should be taken to reduce the number of fatalities and other accidents which are daily occurring as the result of the growth of motor traffic on the roads of these two provinces, and the general summing-up of all the opinions is that something must be done to check this wastage of human life. It is true that motor accidents seem to be on the increase, for every day brings its list of mishaps, many of them serious, to drivers of cars and their other occupants.

It is a good sign that newspapers generally are demanding that abuses of the highway traffic laws be punished in a drastic manner, for this reflects a public opinion which is being thoroughly aroused on the subject. Most of the accidents which occur are due to carelessness or recklessness on the part of at least one of the parties involved, and in this province there are supposed to be strong laws against this sort of driving. The imposition of laws alone, however, is not sufficient to put an end to accidents. Their rigid enforcement is also necessary, and this is the task with which the minister of highways is faced. To police the highways so as to catch all of fenders would be a stupendous task, for it would mean a greatly augmented force of traffic officers, but the minister can have the assurance that he has the solid backing of public opinion in any efforts he may make to curb recklessness and careless driving practices.

In the final analysis, however the responsibility lies on the individual motorist and it is apparent that education in safety is a vital essential to automobile driving in these days of rapid transit. There is too great a tendency on the part of motorists, on a smooth and open road to forget the principles of safety and the regulations for motor vehicles. This tendency is responsible for the great bulk of the accidents which occur daily, and it would be well if the necessity for their observances could be more strongly impressed on the minds of drivers. The uncertainty of the human element in driving is the greatest cause of accidents, and this element needs to be thoroughly trained in the obedience of ordinary common-sense in the use of the highways of the province.

MR. FORKE PEEVED

One suspects the estimable Mr. Forke, fresh from his tour of Britain and Europe, is beginning to take himself seriously as a statesman. Mr. Forke has been one of our happiest and most grateful politicians, perhaps somewhat uncertain and diffident as a Cabinet Minister but hardly no quarrel whatever with the fate which converted the reevship of Pipestone, Man., into a Federal portfolio. Then, when Parliament prorogued, he went abroad to give personal attention to the question of immigration. We fear he has come home a changed man.

The Quebec Chronicle-Telegraph reports in a lengthy editorial that a representative who interviewed Mr. Forke on his arrival at this port "was unfortunate enough to find . . . the Minister of Immigration in a rather disgruntled mood." "In fact," continues the Quebec newspaper, "the Minister made no bones about his suspicion that this newspaper finds a malicious pleasure in baiting his department; apparently going out of its way to create annoyances for himself and his subordinates." Eventually his displeasure became so pronounced that, in the words of the Chronicle-Telegraph, "the light of his countenance was withdrawn from our representative." To think that benign countenance, which viewed without shame the decline and fall of the Progressive party, should take on wrath and severity in the presence of an humble reporter!

The Chronicle-Telegraph, it appears had presumed to publish some criticism of the methods in effect at Quebec for the handling of Mr. Forke's immigrants, hence his indignation. That newspaper hastens to disavow any animosity towards the Minister and declares it is "not by any means the only nor the most flagrant offender against the peace and majesty of Mr. Forke." Thereupon it nominates a Moncton paper as due to be impaled. Mr. Forke's admirers will be grieved and disappointed at his new concern for his official dignity and prestige. If the Minister will page to mental review the train of circumstances which led to his present lofty perch we believe his sense of humor will reassert itself and he will make peace with the Chronicle-Telegraph. Frankly, Mr. Forke is not at his best in a "disgruntled" mood.

OTHER MEN'S THOUGHTS

Rebecca Latimer Felton, 92, only woman who ever sat in the United States senate, says modern girls are as sweet as their mothers, and if that is so, bless them, they are certainly sweet. She says concerning smokes for women: "Their great-grandmothers smoked why can't they if they want to?" Darn it, they do.—Los Angeles Times.

Bootleggers posing as sleeping car porters are accused of having sold cases of rubbish to a smart New York business man as smuggled whiskey. Not long since an American paid good money for bottles of water, in the belief that he was getting hard liquor. And, again, the liquor-smuggling fraternity are suspected of being responsible for the circulation of raised American banknotes. All of which is sad. Even bootleggers are not to be trusted these days.—Montreal Gazette.

Many a married man no doubt bewares a sigh of relief when he finds that among the host of questions he has to answer on the application form for a motor driver's permit this one does not find a place: "What is your wife's opinion of your driving ability?"—Shelbourne Economist.

YOUNG FELLOWMAN

If you should see a fellow-man with trouble's flag unfuried,
An' lookin' like he didn't have a friend in all the world—
Go up and slap him on the back, and holler, "How d'you do?"
And grasp his hand so warm he'll know he has a friend in you;
Then ax him what's a-hurtin' him, an' laugh his cares away;
An' tell him that the darkest night is just before the day.
Don't talk graveyard palaver, but say it right out loud
That God will sprinkle sunshine in the train of every cloud.

—James Whitcomber Riley.

CHARACTER

The sun set, but set not his hope;
Stars rose; his faith was earlier up;
Fixed on the enormous galaxy.
Deeper and older seemed his eye;
And matched his sufferance sublime
The tactlurnity of time.
He spoke few words more soft than rain,
Brought the Age of Gold again;
His action won such sergrance sweet
As hid all measures of the feat.

—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

THE PASSING YEARS

(From The Intelligencer of this day 20 years ago.)

Messrs. James H. Mills and Charles Bulman were fishing at Consecon yesterday.

Dennis Ryan, who resides on the 7th Concession of Tyendinaga, was brutally beaten up and had a sum of money taken from his pockets last evening. Several teeth were knocked out and both eyes were blinded.

Angus Pringle, son of Henry Pringle, is the winner of the Governor-General's Medal for having obtained the highest number of marks at the entrance examinations. Mr. W. D. Northrup's son obtained a higher mark but he is too old to be eligible for the medal.

The I.O.O.F. installation of officers took place this morning at the convention.

Postmaster Taylor has left for Winnipeg.

Miss May Price left for Winnipeg yesterday.

HAVE YOU HEARD THESE?

"I tell you I won't have this room," protested the lady from the country to the bellboy. "I ain't going to pay my good money for such a small room. You think just because I'm from a small town—"

The boy interrupted: "Step in, ma'am. This ain't your room. This is the elevator."

Lady (to tramp)—But surely you are the man I gave some pie to a fortnight ago?

Tramp—Yes lidy, I thought perhaps you'd like to know I'm able to get about again.

An inspector was examining a class in grammar and trying to explain the complex relations of adjectives and nouns by a telling example.

"Now for instance," he said, "what am I?"

That was an easy question, and the children shouted in chorus: "A man!"

"Yes, but what else?" said the inspector.

This was not so easy, but after a pause a boy ventured to suggest: "A little man."

"Yes, but there is something more than that!"

This was a poser, but at last an infant phenomenon almost leaped from his seat in his earnestness and cried: "Please, sir, I know, sir—an ugly little man."

LIFE SOUGHT BY KING AND MOB

John Pym Had Unique Distinction Both Wanted Him

On August, 9, 1643, a mob, rabid against the Royalists, surrounded the House of Commons and screamed hatred for Mr. Pym's destruction. The police had great difficulty in dispersing the mob amid no little bloodshed.

This British statesman had the unique distinction of having had two near escapes from violence at the hands of both mob and monarch. It was in the previous year, on January 3 that King Charles I, with an armed band burst into the House, demanding the arrest of the five members of the opposition party. Many British papers are represented in what is the most comprehensive and representative group of newspapermen ever to visit this country. Many of the party have accompanied by their wives and daughters. After visiting almost every part of the Dominion the party will leave Canada on the Montclare, sailing from Montreal on September 9.

The Civil suit started by Horace Yateman taximan to recover $104 damages from John Lafferty livery proprietor was tried this morning before Judge Deroche at the County Court; House and His Honor after considering the case dismissed it with costs to the defendant. The counter claim was also dismissed.

The case arose out of a motor accident at the corner of Station and Pinnacle Streets on the 3rd of March, 1927. The Yateman car was driven by Nelson Hannah who was going north on Station Street and Mr Lafferty who was in charge of the mail truck, was returning from the depot. The two cars crashed at the intersection and as a result Yateman entered a civil suit.

J. D. Brennan acted for the defendant and E. J. Butler appeared on Mr. Lafferty's behalf.

MARKET UNSETTLED

New York, N.Y. Aug. 12.—Collapse of several pool specialties, following the announcement of a stock exchange failure as the result of yesterday's sensational decline in Manhattan Electrical Supply unsettled today's stock market, which had opened with a display of strength. Extreme declines in a dozen issues reported to be under pool sponsorship ran from 8 to 72 points although supporting orders were quickly forthcoming for a few by 11:05a.m. interval.

Outside news was again forgotten as the market tried to correct weak spots revealed in the day's trading. Heavy liquidation took place for both accounts, with the leading commission houses urging their customers to get out of the volatile issues and restrict commitments to seasoned dividend payers until the corrective process showed signs of being completed. Call money was in plentiful supply at the renewal rate of 3-4 percent.

COSGRAVE SURE

With a total of 77 votes for the continued opposition as against a possible 97 for the government, it was believed Mr. Cosgrave would resign immediately without asking for a division. The alternative is to ask for a dissolution of the Dail, making an immediate general election.

Dublin, Aug. 12.—Following the decision unanimously reached Eamon de Valera and Kevin O'Higgins members of the Fianna Fail party took the oath yesterday, and entered the Dail Eireann at today's sitting.

The step is the most momentous since the setting up of the Free State Government, and is bound to have grave repercussions, particularly with regard to the Cosgrave Ministry. President Cosgrave himself is not perturbed, in fact, he smiles.

"I am pleased that they are coming in. I think it is the best thing for the country that has happened for five years."

The position when the Dail meets tomorrow will be that 144 of the total 153 seats in the Dail will be occupied. Six Mac Entee Labor Republicans absolutely refuse to come in. There are two vacancies by deaths, and the Speaker is not calculated in divisions. The new combination will include 44 Fianna Fail, 22 Labor, 7 National League and 3 Independents. These 76 can defeat the Government and remaining parties, who can muster 68 at the most.

It was rumored today that President Cosgrave would resign, but this is denied. It is more in conformity with his policy to put the matter to a test and register on a division lists of his friends and foes.

The test will come a soon as Mr. Johnson, Labor leader, has given notice to move a vote of no confidence in the Government, but tuis cannot be taken for four days.

Fate In Store

President Cosgrave's plan was to adjourn at once for the summer holidays, but it is believed he will agree to adjourn until Tuesday next, and then meet Mr. Johnson's indictment and the fate in store for him.

There is much criticism today on Mr. De Valera's final acceptance of the oath, which was described in his official statement as "Nothing more than an empty formula." The critics say it is something that he reached that decision, even after five years, but how much blood and treasure would have been saved the country if he had reach ed the decision earlier.

Oath of Allegiance

The oath of allegiance, to which the Republicans have directed their long-standing opposition, is: "I do solemnly swear true and faithful allegiance to the Constitution of the Irish Free State as by law established, and that I will be faithful to his Majesty King George V., his heirs and successors by the law of the constitution of the membership of the group of nations forming the British Commonwealth of Nations."

lity of Holland Landing today they found that a number of cattle were wandering in the district and nobody seemed to own them. The police will seek the owner and if none is found they will see if the cattle have been stolen and turned loose since the cattle rustling has been exposed.

There are 13 cattle in the herd found grazing near the farm of John Crawford, Holland Landing. According to Mr. Crawford they have been in the vicinity for a week.

Edward Stickland upon whose property stolen property was found, and at the rear of whose farm a herd of stolen cattle were pasturing, was taken from Barrie Jail last evening and asked in John in another treasure hunt. The Provincial Police believe there is more stolen property hidden, and they want it restored to the homes and stores of the owners. Richland from the day of his arrest has assisted the police in their investigations, and, while he has not been promised immunity, representations will be made to the court on his behalf.

FAITHLESS HUSBANDS AND THEIR CHILDREN

By ELSIE MARLOWE

A faithless husband—A heart-broken wife—and helpless little children. That is Mary's problem. "What can I do?" she cries in desperation.

DEAR ELSIE:

I am at the end of the rope, beaten, confused, discouraged. Can you help me? I've been married for eight years and have three children—seven, four and, two. My husband's married life, I come to find out now, has been a succession of other women. He has always been more or less indifferent to the children and lately has grown completely so. I have tried to talk to him, but he tells me so many lies, it's impossible to get anywhere with him.

I am wondering if it wouldn't be better to leave? I could work again. I worked before I married and had a good position then.

What shall I do?

MARY.

Things don't look very promising Mary and I can see how the heartbreak of it all is making you down. But I cannot tell you what to do. Only you, who knows the pitiful details of this tragedy can decide what is best. But think well before you make your decision.

Of course, you can leave if you want to. Your husband can be made to support the children. You can get a job and support yourself. But if you do this you will have to turn your three babies over to the care of another. AND IS IT WORTH WHILE?

Sometimes we have to content ourselves with half portions in this life in order to keep something else which we really want and need. Isn't it better to accept the half portion now and keep your babies with you, than to try to find peace without them? Isn't it better to sacrifice something for them than to give them up? Think of the long days away from them. Can you stand the thought of it?

There's much in life for you—three babies—babies inestimable. Make your children fill your whole life. Think of the happiness of living for them and in them—serving them—loving them. Being with them always. Can't you sacrifice something for this great joy, large? Is the price too much for you to pay?

Think it over, my dear. Your child ren with you always. With the discomfort and annoyance of your present life, or your children away from you, and an empty freedom that will be a grave to your hungry heart. Which will you choose?

It's the mother-in-law problem again.

DEAR ELSIE:

I'm just at the end of the rope—and here's the reason. I am a young married woman. I married an only son and it seems I committed a terrible crime by doing so in the eyes of his mother My mother-in-law simply torments me with her unkindness. Everything I do or say, the way I dress, the way I keep my house, everything is wrong. If I don't invite the whole family in to dinner, I'm stingy and lazy. If I do ask them I bought too much food—I'm extravagant.

My mother-in-law is always say ing mean things about me to my husband. He's the finest man in the world. He loves me and I love him, but he also loves his mother. So what can I do? Sometimes I think I'll get love—take back my old job and forget I was ever married.

MRS. K.

Dry those tears, Mrs. K. Step before a doormat, Straighten up your shoulders and start in straighten out your relations with your mother-in-law.

You are married to the "finest man" in the world, you say. Don't give up. That's silly and cowardly. You love your husband and he loves you. So he's perfectly satisfied. Then, what more do you want?

It isn't necessary to quarrel with your mother-in-law or leave your husband to straighten it out. If you were in the business world you wouldn't have to quarrel with your business associates or call your lawyer to help you see your affairs for you. You would expect to make your own adjustments and establish your own policies.

In a way, your mother-in-law is your business partner. She has put at least twenty years of her life into this "going business" which you have married. Her interest in him still per sists. You can't fairly shove her out. Then proceed to do with her as you would with any other partner.

Establish a definite policy of non-action and co-operation. You have your rights. She has hers . Try to look at both sides sensibly and unselfishly.

Be firm about the management of your home and your affairs. Take your stand and let nothing budge you. Be friendly, but let her understand you cannot permit another to run your home for you. She must be a little hurt at first, but that will pass. And I shouldn't be surprised if, before long you wouldn't find that you have a new friend.

Advice to Girls
By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am an unhappy, perplexed girl of twenty-five. Seven years ago I met a man whom I learned to love. As I had a sick father and he was a doctor he naturally came to our house. For one year I was happy. I introduced him to one of my best girl friends. Soon after this I went out West. He even wrote to me, saying how very glad he was that I introduced him to my friend, Mary. Mary wrote saying he sometimes took her out.

I was gone one year. When I came back they were married. They said they wanted to surprise me and so they did not tell me before. If I had known it I would never have come back. They have a son now and are happy but me. Mary often asks me to visit her, but I always refuse when I can without being rude.

I love him dearly, but I would not try to ruin Mary's married life.

Am I doing right in refusing invitations to their home? I am trying to forget him, but every time I see him my love comes back tenfold. He often asks me why I don't go over more, as he says Mary and I are such good friends.

Can you give me any advice?

OUT WEST.

OUT WEST: My dear girl, if it is possible, I think the best thing for you to do is to leave the town, at least temporarily, until the deep wound in your heart has had time to heal. Of course, there is nothing for you to do but forget him, and that can be more quickly and effectively done when you are far away and continually meeting new people, cultivating new friends and forming new interests. If the man and your friend Mary should find out how much you really care and how intense is your suffering you will also cause them much unhappiness. And they really are quite innocent of all wrong, you know. They should not be involved in your tragedy. If it is out of the question for you to leave your home then you must bear the consequences as bravely as possible. You must not refuse their invitations to the home of your friend and you must not try to avoid seeing the young man if you do you only create a false and secret resentment in your heart, and sooner or later you may become hard and bitter. Try to be genuinely sociable with them, and constant contact with the man may in time be a more effective cure than estrangement. How ever I advise the trip if it it at all possible. But whatever you do you must form new interests right away—some meticulous kind of hobby perhaps—and keep your mind occupied.

Some Helpful Hints For Busy Housewives

Lumps of flour in mixing batter can be avoided by putting the salt in the flour before sifting. By pouring flour in the liquid, instead of the liquid in the flour, and beating it with a fork, lumps will not form.

Instead of greasing the pancake griddle, rub it when hot with a cut raw potato and there will be no sticking or unpleasant odor.

To ripen tomatoes or green bananas put them in a pare bay and lay them away in a dark place for a few days. Never put bananas in the refrigerator To prevent sliced bananas from turning black, sprinkle them with lemon juice.

When the sweetness of the cream is doubtful and there is no more on hand, and it must be used, a dash of soda, stirred in, keeps it from curdling, even in hot coffee.

200 men and 100 women were arrested on Sunday in Chicago when police raided 70 disorderly houses and beer joints.

Two were killed at Rochester, N.Y., when an auto turned over three times when the brakes were applied suddenly to avoid hitting a dog.

WHAT'S NEW
(From a Woman's Standpoint)

There is a vogue for finishing gray costumes with hats and shoes of gaily contrasting tints such as green or red.

Handbags in medium-sizes are preferred in New York to the larger models of last summer, and alligator leathers and calf or suede leathers are those most popular, while neutral colors rule above more colorful types since the handbag should harmonize with the shoes this year.

A magnificent quilt seen in London had as its centre a basket of fruit in silk laidwork, copied from the eighteenth century original and of Italian design also were the panels of a hand some broadcloth screen, the flowers being worked in satin stitch on grey silk.

Among the autumn dress tendencies that are certain to attain an authoritative vogue are first the flared outline flare again in some novel forms, the sleeveless bonnline, which will attain a wider pressie this autumn than ever before, and the uneven neckline, a new note which has already attracted a smart following.

The metal influence has become more dominant in fall dresses and all the latest inspired metal brocade is combined with woollen fabrics while metal embroidery is applied to satin or velvet and sheer metal brocades are used in combination with velvet or chiffon for evening.

SINCLAIR'S

CURSE OF LOVE
By Mildred Barbour

Philip hung up the receiver resignedly. He too had Carmen's bank address, but what good would it do? Carmen was already gone. He might be headed for the Yellowstone, Denver, Chicago, New York, Savannah, New Orleans—where not? He had avowed his intention of seeing America first, and then travelling on to Asia, Africa, Europe, South America. Like finding a needle in the proverbial haystack.

Spiritedly, a prey to melancholy doubts, Kendall made his way back through the dark, silent streets to the hideous pink Venetian palace. The house was dark, for which he was thankful, except for a faint in his father-in-law's sanctum. He knew, as well as if he had been told, that old J. P. had gone there directly after his supper to nurse his grudge.

He made his way up-stairs and past the pink portals of his wife's door. He felt that he could not sleep without seeing her for a moment, at least—a moment in which, leaning into her candid blue eyes, he could forget the doubts that beset him.

He knocked, but there was no answer. He laid his hand on the knob. The door opened easily.

"Normal" he said softly.

There was no answer. He reached out and turned on the light. The carnal-shaded lamps flooded softly in the disordered room. The bed had not been slept in. The wardrobe and the dresser drawers gaped; there was no sign of disorder, as though some one had packed hurriedly. Her dressing table was innocent of toilet articles; even the jewel-case was gone.

Norma had left him!

CHAPTER XXXVII
THE FLIGHT

When Philip had come out, directly after dinner, and her father had dutifully praised his own secret and favorite little, Norma went slowly upstairs to her own room, ever-lookant the master fluent fashion garden.

She knew quite well what her friend had to do. During dinner, while she had chatted about inconsequentials things, her subconscious mind had been busy with what was to happen afterward. She felt, somehow, that her father, in a moment of desperation—or, perhaps, of reckless gratitude. Ever since then, he had repented his decision he accounted for his curious behavior during their honeymoon.

His subsequent happiness dis counted completely. No doubt he had decided that, in the end, it was better to make the best of a evil bargain. Perhaps his friend, King Curzon, mocking, irresponsible, had helped him into see the futility of regret.

Norma's footsteps were leaden; her heart was like a stone weight in her breast. Happiness and Lancaster were over for her, she thought. She had only one thing left—her pride. She would try to save that one pitiful scrap out of the wreckage. And, in doing so, he would put everything right again. Philip would be rid of her.

And for herself—Well, it didn't she would leave the moment of her present luncheon before the servants and departed for New Eden.

With steady hands she packed a few belongings and, slipping off her evening frock, put on a dark tailored suit and crammed a small hat over her golden hair. She wrote no father a brief note:

"I am going down to Lancaster for a few days. Don't worry. I shall be all right."

She left no message for Philip. He would understand, she told herself, and there was nothing she could say to him without saying too much.

At the last moment, she thrust her modest little travel-case into her bag and, thoughtfully ready at the door, gave one last look around her few trinkets.

"Ah, you've failed me!" she said wistfully. "You're not my talisman—but I love you too much to leave you behind."

Then, as Cynthia his dog, she slipped out to the garage and took her own car.

A few minutes later, she was speeding toward the beach, the night, resented and monolis swallowing her up in its dark embrace.

It was late when she arrived at the beach. She could hear the waves that washed its sandy stretch. The sound deepened the sadness and depression of her mood, and yet, in a curious way, it comforted her.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation to your hair in fading, streaked or gray!

Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. For only 75 cents. This is the oldtime recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to recover that youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hair have disappeared, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

DETAILS OF NEW FORD GIVEN OUT

Driven For Several Hours At Average Speed Of 55 Miles

Ford, Ont., Aug. 12.—"All the problems concerning design and manufacture of the new Ford car have been solved," declared W. R. Campbell, vice-president and treasurer of the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, in the course of an interview given here today. It was the first pronouncement that has been forthcoming since, in May last, brief announcement of a new model was made, and is taken here to mean that the new model will soon be placed upon the market.

"The design of the new car has been carefully tested and we are now completely satisfied with it. The design of the tools and machines for its production also has been completed. Many of these tools and machines are now ready for use. However, the task of changing over the thousands of machines is an enormous one and there is the further necessity of increasing our productive capacity. A great deal of progress has been made in this work and we are losing no time to complete it."

Questions asked Mr. Campbell about specifications of the new car elicited little information. He did, however, give the interviewer the first data that has been available from a company official. In reply to a query concerning rumors that the new car is capable of very high speed Mr. Campbell said that it has been driven at 65 miles per hour and that recently it maintained an average of 55 miles over a period of several consecutive hours. The latter test, he said, was on average roads, with turns and hills to contend with. "Speed alone," he added, "is not a criterion of a car's value. There is nothing difficult about building a fast car. What had to be considered above speed was adaptability to road and climatic conditions throughout the Empire and in the foreign countries where we find our export markets. Then, of course, there were the widely divergent conditions in Canada to take into account. We had, also, to consider passenger and driver comfort, economical operation with maintenance, appearance, getaway and acceleration. All these problems have been carefully worked out and we believe the public will approve our solution of them."

Asked to describe the appearance of the new car, Mr. Campbell merely said that "it will be all that could be desired."

Mr. Campbell's announcement that the Ford Motor Company of Canada is entering upon a scale of production even more extensive than when Model T activities were at their peak presages a great impetus to industry in the Border Cities and in Canadian business generally. Since the work of revealing the factory began, production has been conducted on a short-time basis and material purchases have been curtailed. Under normal operating conditions the factory employs over 6,000 men and expends more than $30,000,000 annually in the Dominion. Production on a greater scale than ever means more employment and heavy purchases from Canadian supply sources. The new car, Mr. Campbell said, will be entirely manufactured in Canada, and the raw materials entering into its construction will be purchased from Canadian sources, wherever possible, in accordance to the policy of the company since production of Model T was begun here in 1913.

Mr. King was foreman of the linemen of the Canada Cement Company, and had been in Lakefield for about nine months. Before that, he had been with the Bell Telephone Company, and he worked at electrical wiring of various kinds for nineteen years. Last night he was doing some overtime work helping Mr. Leggett, superintendent for the Lakefield Power Commission. The accident occurred about 7.30 and the village was without light for about an hour.

CROPS GOOD

Marmora, Aug. 11.—Generally speaking, the crops this year in the Marmora district give little cause for complaint. Rain has interfered with the storage of hay in many cases and on nearly every farm, a quantity has een spoilt. The crop, however is abundant.

Wheat, oats, and fall grain look good on every hand. Potatoes show signs of rot in some cases. The year's record crop of alfalfa looks exceeding-ly promising.

RARE BIRDS ARE HATCHED IN ZOO

St. Thomas, Aug. 12.—Two fluffy awkward-looking cygnets hatched at Pinafore park this week-end as a Buy reminded Joseph Clark now has ten swans under his care, with the prospect of another addition before long. The cygnets were hatched in the nest of the royal swans behind the old pavilion, these two engraving been left by the party which robbed the nest, and not the entire five taken as first reported.

In another nest away up at the head of the lake are other cygs, but how many Superintendent Clerk does not know, because he has not come near the nest and refuses to allow any boat to approach it. This young pair of swans have built their nest in the center of the lake, choosing a bar upon which to lay a foundation of heavy sticks and boards, the nest proper being built on top of that. The nest is a fine affair. One marvels at the ability of the birds to have constructed it.

This is the first setting of this pair, which was raised at the park, swans not breeding until they reach the age of six or seven years. Superintendent Clark hopes that next year all will follow the example of the young swans and nest in the upper end of the lake, where they are practically immune from molestation.

PREMIER BALDWIN LEARNS TO DRIVE LARGEST LOCOMOTIVE IN BRITISH EMPIRE

The Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, the British Premier, took a short course in engine driving at Pickering, Ontario, on the new Canadian National locomotive, number 6120, the largest and most powerful railway engine in the British Empire. Mr. Baldwin, when visiting Kingston, Ont., heard that this titan of the steel rails was an all-Canadian product, designed by Canadian National Railway engineers and built at the Kingston shops. Early on Saturday morning No. 6120 was stirred to the Royal Train to haul it into Toronto to mark the opening of the new Union Station. Mr. Baldwin, although busily engaged in the preparation of his speeches, halted in his work to make an inspection of the engine, eventually climbing into the cab with the engineer. He showed the keenest interest in the manner in which the big locomotive was handled when travelling at high speed, and worked the various levers controlling the engine. "It is a wonderful piece of machinery and should be a source of pride to the Canadian designers and builders," said the Premier on leaving the locomotive. No. 6120 is one of forty engines of similar type that are being turned out this season for the fast passenger and freight service of the National System. When in regular service they will run 513 miles without change—the longest locomotive runs in the Dominion.

FRANKFORD NOSE OUT LOCAL TEAM

Intelligencer Softballers Receive Set-Back At Village

The Intelligencer softballers journeyed to Frankford last evening and an exhibition game of the popular past time was played. The Northern town lads emerged victors on the long end of a 10 to 8 score after seven full innings had been played.

The game was called in the eighth on account of darkness. Up until the fifth innings O'Donohue on the mound for the locals was turning back the Paper Mill boys ease with and not a single man got as far as second base, but in Frankford's half of the fifth the homsters went to work with a vengence and when the smoke had cleared away six runs had been shoved across the plate to tie the score.

O'Donohue pitched masterly ball until that fatal inning but weakened in the fifth, and again in the seventh the the boys from the north clouted for 4 more runs to the printers two and safely cleared away the old ball game in the last bag.

The Intelligencer boys started early to score when thrown the first man to singled and came home on a single a little later by Cook. In the second O'Brien and Cook both singled in succession and Jack Rooney came through with a lusty two bagger that sent them both home. Again in the fifth Dan O'Donohue, Cook and Rooney all scored in the fifth, O'Donohue in this frame, the first man up smacked out a home run t odeep left field Cook walked and Rooney singled him home Curry singled and Rooney scored.

The printers added two more in the seventh when Doyle and McPherson crossed the pan.

But for the lapse o fthe printers in the fifth they looked all over the best team and are rapidly rounding into a nice soft ball aggregation.

Glenal O'Brien at short held for the printers stood out head and shoulders over any one else on either team and hit two running catches with his back to the ball, brought even applause from the Frankford fans. Bernie Brown in right field also turned in another nice game although he had one of the hard est pieces of ground to cover of any one

Babcock caught a lovely game for Frankford and but for him the scoring might of been a different story, as he backed up his pitcher in fine style besides catching a fine game he had three lusty clouts. McCreidia had third also played a bang up game, and Price at second stabbed a hard line drive for a nice catch.

The umpiring was all the could be desired

The printers have been invited back again for another game to play at the lawn social which is to be held soon by Manager Whitelaw. Frankford will be the guests of the Printers here in the near future.

A large crowd was on hand to cheer for the homesters and they did in a healthy way.

Diamonds struck out five batters for Hainds' one.

ERRORS PAVED WAY FOR LOSS

Philanthropic Dodgers Present Giants Enough Runs To Win

New York, August 12 — If it is human terror, then the Brooklyn Dodgers are undoubtedly the most human team in either league. The Robins, in fact, are just overflowing with humanity, not to say kindliness and generosity.

The occasion for this moral discourse was yesterday's ball game at the Polo Grounds. The Robins were full of good intentions and mistakes. They handed the Giants one run on a silver platter in the seventh and one more on the same dish in the ninth, and these were enough to beat Dazzy Vance 2 to 1.

The game really should have been a tie, with the teams batting it out as the well known gray shadows fell over Coogan's Bluff, for Al Devormer presented the Dodgers with a run in the first inning. Substracting all the misplays, the score would have been a draw.

Cliff Heathcote's triple in the third inning with English and Root on base pvabled the Chicago native out fielder cimnal 2 to 0 in the first game of the series at Chicago yesterday, and pecmit Charlie Root to mark up his twenty-first victory of the season.

The game was a great pitching duel between Root and the Cuban Adolfo Luque. The Cubs gleaned only five hits off Luque's delivery, three of which, however, came in the third inning.

Root was touched for six hits, but was given sensational support by his mates, two snappy double-plays breaking up Cincinnati rallies Allen of the Reds made three of their six hits, two doubles and a single.

At St. Louis, Grover Cleveland Alexander allowed only four hits and the Cubs gained the verdict in the ninth, Reading rallied for the winning counter and nosed out the Leafs, 7 to 6, at Reading yesterday to even the series. Quelch covered the inning with a single and Trexler sent him to second with a sacrifice. Wike singled to centre to score Quelch with the winning run.

At Jersey City a supreme play by Gilhooley and Lavvy in the tenth inning gave Rochester a 1 to 0 victory over the Skeeters.

Buffalo smashed its way to victory over the Orioles today at Baltimore with four home runs—Bissonette's two giving him a tally of 22 for the season to lead Porter of the locals who has 21 to his credit. The score was 7 to 4. Fisher and Anderson also hit for the circuit.

At Newark, Mamaux's fine pitching gave the Bears their fifth straight victory over the Syracuse Stars by the score of 2 to 1.

St. Louis Cardinals gained on the second place, Pittsburgh Pirates by winning, 1 to 1. Aldridge allowed only one hit prior to the seventh inning in which Prich doubled and Bottomley hit the circuit. Miljus replaced him and The Pirates' only run was on L. Waner's homer in the sixth.

At Rochester, the Braves and Phillies staged an up and down ball game with the Tribe finally emerging victorious by a score of 5 to 4. What proved to be the winning run was pushed across in the sixth when Fitzsimmons who earlier had effectively relieved Decatur passed three men and was sacked for a single by Brown, forcing the lone tally. Heavy hitting by Spalding and Mokan accounted fo rthree Philly runs.

Capt. F. T. Courtney was to start his flight to Newfoundland from Ireland early this morning.

Fairure of Geneva Conference will likely develop into a mis naval building programme by the U.S.

SportOgramS

By "The Observer"

Tomorrow will see the first game in the play-off for the Bay of Quinte League championship at Deseronto. Interest in baseball locally was never so keen this year as it is right now and Wednesday will see a big crowd out if the Nationals give the Sportsters any kind of a battle tomorrow. Gibson is rocked and primed with both batteries and feels confident that he can subdue the champions. Manager Elliott has a first-class pitching staff which includes Ralph the south-paw, Frank Lott the veteran right-hander and "Inky" Woods the youthful dreamer from Petethers Besides these three who are all reliable moundsman Von Jack can take a turn on the mound if necessary.

The first game of the City League girls finals takes place tonight with the Deseron Shirt and the Frontenac basics hooking up. These two have been running neck and neck all season and the argument will be settled for sure in the pre-season series. Pearl Tuttle is slated to do the hurling for the Deseron team with Miss Smith performing in a similar role for the bot factory club.

Cliff Howard who has been in the city all summer will leave in a few weeks for Queen's to commence training for the football campaign. Howard will captain the Tricolor this year and is very enthusiastic over the prospects. He looks to see the Presbyterians regain the laurels lost to Varsity last year. Several of the leading players at the Kingston Institution have graduated including Skelton and Chandler and Coach Hughes will be faced with the task of rebuilding his machine. However Batstone the brainy backfield man will return in the Autumn as will Monahan the plunging lineman from Ottawa. Hughes who has been at West Point during the summer months has already issued instructions to players looking for a place to be on deck early in September to commence the annual Fall grind.

Speculation concerning the scrap between Dempsey and the champion Tunney is already noted and opinions on the outcome are divided. Many critics herald Dempsey to gain the crown and he will if he maintains his strict training resolutions and goes after Tunney in the first three or four rounds.

SENATORS CLING TO SLIGHT HOPE

Took Another Game From Sliding Yanks—Indians Beat Chicago

Washington, August 12.—There are exactly seven American League cities, including New York, which are willing to concede the Yanks the engant and roll it a-hazzah, but Washington isn't one of them. In fact, the natives of the Capital still think they have a good team and a good chance of participating in the next world's series.

The first is conceded, the second is not. Even though the Redbirds recovered through a 3-2 victory yesterday after an eleven-inning struggle (even George Pipgras and Liz Hornsby, there's still a little matter of six games to be considered. Think them over and lavish, or remember them and weep, according to where your mail is addressed.

The Senators and their cohorts, however, refuse to see that slight drawback to their high hopes. They played yesterday as though their hearts were really in their work, and especially the aforementioned Mr. Lisenbee, who pitched a neat, though not gaudy ball game. He let the Yanks down with a total of eight hits, half of which were the product of Earl Combs' bat alone. Besides that Liz started the rally that led to the Senators' first two runs. Someone has perhaps remarked these fact much to Liz, but what there is, is.

At Detroit, the Tigers bunched hits off Walter Stewart and defeated St Louis 6 to 2 in the second game of the series. Marty McManus, former infielder of the Browns, had an important part in the victory over his ex-team mates. His three hits not only gave him a perfect batting average for the day but also figured in four Detroit runs.

The Athletics and the Boston Red Sox exchanged shut-outs in a double-header at Philadelphia. The Mackmen won the first game by a 4 to 0 score, and the Red Sox took the second 2 to 0.

Howard Ehmke gained the distinction of being the first Athletic hurler to pitch a shut-out game this season in winning the opening game. Four double-plays helped "Slim" Harriss shut-out his old team mates in the final contest.

The Indians opened the series with Chicago at Cleveland by defeating the White Sox 2 to 1 in a ten-inning game, which was a pitchers' battle with Thomas and Miller each allowing seven hits. Grimes put four in to seal previous three.

ARKANSAS FLOOD DANGER LESS

Little Rock, Ark., August 12.—Revised predictions by the United States Wether Bureau today for the Arkansas River virtually removed the danger of a serious flood in southwest Arkansas. Forecasts of crest stages were lowered nearly two feet both at Little Rock and Pine Bluff.

Make your farm pay bigger profits this year

The big problem on the farm today is to produce more at less cost. Farm surveys in Canada show that the largest item in the cost of producing a field crop is the labor of man and horse, amounting in some cases as high as 50%.

The most effective means of reducing labor costs to a minimum is the adoption of economical, light weight tractor power and modern machinery which will result in the doubling or trebling of present crop production—with greater ease and timeliness.

In Canada today, over 17,000 Fordson owners can plow 5 to 8 acres daily, double disc 15 to 25 acres, cultivate 15 to 25 acres, harrow up to 50 acres, cut 20 to 35 acres of grain and thresh 700 to 1100 bushels of wheat.

Reduce your labor costs the Fordson way and make your farm pay bigger profits this year.

Small Bits Of Literary Talk

What is the busiest letter in the alphabet? The compilers of the English Historical Dictionary give the palm for obliquity to S. Of the 400,000 words in this enormous dictionary, 57,428 begin with this letter. The letter X has to take the lowest place with only 286 words to its credit. Another letter that enjoys a good deal of leisure compared with the over-worked S, is Z, which begins a little more than 1,000 words. Nor are Q and J very hard worked, for they have not many more than 2,000 each.

It seems likely that the last work on this monumental dictionary will be completed before the close of the present year. At least this is the latest news from the directors of the Oxford Press. Although the pages comprising X to Z were published six years ago, the last word being "Zyxt," an obsolete form of what would now be called "Thou zayest," there are some instalments belonging to W not yet completed. Words beginning with W have bothered the editors very much, for many of them belong to the old Germanic stock and have long and complicated histories. The final difficulty words in our language to deal with historically, were "of" and "to." They troubled Dr. J. A. H. Murray, the general editor of the dictionary, much more than any verb. It is a matter of history that Sir James Murray, who in 1879 signed the contract to produce the dictionary, did not live to see it completed. He died in 1915 before the U section was published. He has read every proof for more than thirty-five years. What a learned man he must have been!

Proof readers have to take their pleasures slowly. They can never do any skimming or skipping in their reading. This according to Mr. Robert Lynd, the well-known English essayist, is what every lover of books should learn to do. He says that most of us are speedthrift readers who waste from ten to thirty minutes of each hour of reading. He contends that we can accelerate our reading speed by ngoking as few stops or eye-fixations in each line as possible. Read not by syllables but groups or words, phrases and sentences. Establish a regular rhythm of eye-movements adapted to the length of the line and subject-matter of each book you read, that is to say let your eye progress across the lines with a rhythmic swing and never look backward to refixate the eye on a word not clearly recognized. Never pronounce the words as you read or allow your lips to move silently.

FOUR PASS TEST TO QUALIFY FOR AERIAL CONTEST

Undismayed By Death Of Rogers, Others Are Anxious To Go

SEVERE TRIALS

Aviators Complain Of Stiff Examination Imposed By Authorities

Oakland, Calif., Aug. 12.—Navigation tests remained today as the main hurdle between five aeroplane entered in James Dole's $25,000 prize flight and official approval as starters in the 2632-mile aerial derby to the Island of Oahu, scheduled to start on Tuesday noon. Four of the nine entrants who have planes here have qualified thus far. Death crowned another entry from the list of starters yesterday, when Capt. A. V. Rogers, former Naval Air Force flier, flying his tandem engined monoplane was killed on a trial flight at his home hangar near Los Angeles. He hopped 1000 ft. a parachute after his engine stopped but the parachute failed to open.

Four Pass Stiff Tests

With the spectre of death facing them the remaining pilots and navigators showed no inclination to quit the race. Instead, they completed about the severest of the tests imposed by the Department of Commerce inspectors who were insisting that pilots display more than ordinary skill before being certified. Four have passed the test. They are:

1—Traveler Monoplane "Oklahoma," Bennett H. Griffin, pilot, and Al Hennessy, navigator.

2—Monoplane "El Encio" of San Diego, Norman Goodhard, pilot, and Lieut. J. Hawkins, navigator.

3—Bronze monoplane "Pacific Flier" in which Livingston Irving of Berkeley, will hop off without navigator.

WILD BILL AGAIN ON THE RAMPAGE

Chicago's Notorious Mayor Says U. S. Leaders On Canada's Payroll

Chicago, Ills., Aug. 13.—Because he planned to speak on Chicago's side of the lake water diversion controversy the Syracuse Chamber of Commerce has cancelled its invitation to him to be the guest of honor at the opening of the New York State Fair, Aug. 29 Mayor William Hale Thompson said to-day The Mayor said he was not perturbed however, as he had received an invitation to speak in Washington.

"It is about time to tell the truth about lake levels and the reason for the slackts on Chicago" he said. "Men in high office are using this to cover up the fact that they are on the Canadian water power interests payroll. While betraying their own "countrymen and their interest in prosperity, they are enriching themselves."

UNITED STATES WILL HAVE TO SPEND MORE

Rapid City, S/D., Aug. 12.—Increased government expenditures for next year above the $3,500,000,000 mark, but up to President Coolidge today by the director of budget, who came into the Black Hills last night with a fanciful budget. Various special items have conspired to swell the treasury estimates one hundred and twenty-five million dollars above the limit of three billions two hundred million set by the President last June for government expenditure in the coming year.

MARKET CRASH CONTINUED ON THE NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE TODAY

Millions In Paper Profits Wiped Out In Speculators' Panic

New York, August 13.—The stock market crashed from 5 to 25 points yesterday, wiping out millions of paper profits accumulated by bull traders over a long period of rising markets. Thoroughly frightened by the suspension of the Stock Exchange house of A. L. Fuller and Company in connection with the collapse of the stock of the Manhattan Electrical Supply Company, thousands of the little sharks into the market during the afternoon session and they would bring. Every where was the fear the market was honey-combed with stocks that have been manipulated by bull pools, and in which there existed a situation similar to that in Manhattan Electrical Supply yesterday.

The market was confused at the close, with many stocks at their lowest for the day and small rallies in others. The volume of trading today exceeded 2,000,000 shares, at the previous high record to rise or slightly over. The ticker at the close was about 72 min utes behind the market.

Wild excitement prevailed on the floor of the Exchange, where the bulls and the bears were locked in a grim free-for-all struggle. The struggle was waged around almost every post on the floor as the selling, which at first was confined to a few specialties, spread through the whole list.

Banks Confess Calls

Banks which refused to lend money on Manhattan Electrical Supply thus precipitating the crash yesterday, continued to call loans today. Best brokers who have been held in control for months, carefully battered the market numerically, adding to the general confusion by swift raids. Many of the trading ears on the floor are said to have cleaned up millions in the last two days. With the announcement of the suspension of the Fuller firm calls

A TEN YEAR OLD VISITOR GETS A FIVE POUND BASS

There is something peculiarly attractive about the fish in the Bay of Quinte, Ontario, that is, that if they must be caught, they seem to prefer falling victims to the ladies. Yesterday, Miss Margaret Dewar, a charming young ten, year old miss from Toronto, landed a five pound small mouth black bass right off the Massassaga Dock.

No angler would expect to catch a five pound bass off any dock, and it is a long while since any kind of game fish has been landed at the Massassaga Dock, so that this career beauty must have deliberately sulked in and set himself caught in order to give the little Toronto visitor a thrill.

Miss Margaret is a grandchild of Mrs. C. F. Payne of Burnham Street, and is on a visit to her grandparents. No doubt, as long as she lives she will remember the day when she caught the five pound bass, when she was but ten years old.

TANNERY BLAZE TOOK RICH TOLL IN LONDON FIRE

Hyman's Loss Will Be Over Four Hundred Thousand Dollars

HARD TO FIGHT

Inflammable Material Made Firemen's Task a Difficult One

London, Aug. 13.— Damage estimated at approximately four hundred thousand dollars was caused by a fire which swept the dry loft of C. S. Hyman Company's tannery last night at midnight, and for a considerable time threatened other tannery buildings containing stocks. The fire, raged for more than two hours before the firemen had the blaze under control

Both night and day firemen were called to aid in the fight and every apparatus available was used in subduing the flames. The loss will be partly covered by insurance.

The blaze was the most costly to occur in London in a decade and one of the most difficult for the firemen to fight because of the inflammable nature of the contents of the building

RUSSIANS SETTLED ON WRANGELL ISL

Everett, Wash., Aug. 13.—The yacht "Northern Light," bearing John Borden, Chicago millionaire and his field museum expedition through the Arctic on a scientific expedition, arrived at Wrangell Island late last night, according to a radio message received here from the party. Expedition reported the Island had been inhabited by Russians who had erected five large and several small houses near Rogers Bay. (Wrangell Island has been claimed at different times by American, British and Russian colonies).

TROTZKY WARNED

Further Offences Will Mean Complet Severance of Relations

Moscow, Russia, August 13.—The Moscow Communist Party finds the assurances given by Trotzky and Zinoviff as to their adherence to the party principles to be insufficient without additional assurance that the factional struggle will be stopped.

The party has adopted a resolution warning them that it is their last chance. Further offences, it says, will mean a complete break, and they will be ousted, together with all elements of an oppositionist character.

REAL CHAMPIONS

World's Best Horse Shoe Throwers Match Skill In National Contest

Duluth, Minn., Aug. 13 — The world's champion horseshoe throwers, C. G. Davis of Columbus, Ohio, to-day was out in front in the National Horseshoe Pitchers Tournament. Two world records for women were broken yesterday by Mrs. C. A. Lanham, of Bloomington, Illinois. Mrs. Lanham, former world's champion, pitched six consecutive double ringers, beating her former mark of five and she made an average of .833 in one game, overshooting the mark of .800.

SACCO'S HUNGER STRIKE STILL ON

Has Refused Food For 28 Days And May Be Forcibly Fed

Boston, Mass. Aug. 13.— The first lull in the Sacco-Vanzetti case in many weeks found both counsels apparently better spirited in cells at Charlestown State Prison to-day, although Sacco continued refusal of food has alarmed some of his friends, who are asking Warden Hendry to frighten him into eating with the threat of forcible feeding.

Sacco will have fasted twenty-eight days to-day, but has yet to show any signs of weakness. His exercise in the corridor and a visit from counsel Ossoi before he attempted a hunger strike while in Dedham Jail. He refused food for a month but when the authorities resorted to stronger methods than persuasion his strike came to a quick end.

Vanzetti was cheered by the news that his sister, who has been detained a week in France through passport difficulties, was finally to sail. Shortly before his scheduled execution last Thursday he expressed regret that he could not see her before he died, even after the respite declared his joy at the prospect of a reunion.

Vanzetti Will Eat

Boston, Aug. 13.—The hunger strike of Nicola Sacco, which today had become the centre of attention in the case, was unbroken today when breakfast was served prisoners in the cells. Bartolomeo Vanzetti, strengthened and prepared by liquid foods taken yesterday after his fast, ate two Frankfurters, bread, milk and coffee and suffered none of the ill effects felt previously when he suddenly broke his fast.

NO MORE COUNTS AGAINST RAYNOR

"There is nothing for publication at the present time," said Crown Attorney Donnan and Chief Kidd when asked if any more counts would be added to the charges laid against R. H. Raynor who was arrested at Picton early yesterday morning for embezzlement of funds.

In the meantime Raynor is "living the life of Riley" in Picton jail. At last reports he was reposing in a ham mock on the verandah of the police station smoking a cigar and reading a newspaper containing the accounts of his arrest and subsequent arraignment. He will remain in the custody of the authorities at Picton until next Saturday when he will face trial before Mr. James Lee Williams, His Honor F. L. Ward has made no application for bail.

JUDGE PROVIDES FARE BACK HOME

Cancels Conviction Of Pretty Seventeen Year Old Bandit

New Cork, August 13.—Ellen Blandi, seventeen, of Cleveland, was arraigned before County Judge Taylor in Brooklyn today to be sentenced on her conviction last April for highway robbery.

Former Senator William M. Cauger was sitting with Judge Taylor in conversation when she was brought before the Bench.

The girl was arrested with three men who held up Anthony Zelinsky, in a north Fifth street cash water stand. One of the men was sentenced to prison for life and the others for long terms. Miss Blandi was taken ill after her conviction and has just been discharged from hospital care.

"Ellen," said Judge Taylor, "I am going to set aside the verdict in your case. I do not believe you had a part in the robbery. I have learned of your home and the conduct of the parents which led you to run away fro mthem. You are to go home with your brothers, who are here to take you. Stay with them and keep away from bad companions and you will not be in such trouble again."

Ellen blinked a little. Her brothers went to her side and reminded her to thank the Judge. She did, stammering Judge Taylor called the brothers and said he would like to pay their sister's fare to Cleveland. Senator Calder insisted on helping. The two made up $35 between them and Miss Blandi left court with her brothers all smiling.

TRUCK EXPLOSION SPECTACULAR

Oakville, Ont., August 13.—A load of assorted merchandise was hurled near by 150 feet into the tir when a large acetylene welding tank exploded following a fire which started on the truck carrying the goods, on the highway just east of here today. No one was injured but it is estimated that $4,000 worth of merchandise was destroyed.

ABANDON PLAN TO PEDAL "CARRIE" ACROSS ATLANTIC

Dover, Eng., Aug. 12.—Confessing that the idea of "pedal propelling" across the Atlantic is a failure, Edward Tierney had Dick Hayman, of Lancashire, are understood to have definitely abandoned their plan to make such a crossing and to be ready to sell their strange craft.

"Tierney tested the boat, called "Carrie" in the harbor here yesterday and was dismayed to find she refused to function. "Carrie" is a twelve foot steel boat built like a submarine. She was designed to obtain power mainly through the force of wind against a small windmill which drives a screw propeller. In calm weather the navigators were to use muscle power to drive the propeller by means of foot or hand pedals.

Will Probably Take Oath And Sit In Northern Ireland Body

STRAIGHT FIGHTS

By-Elections In Free State To Be Between Government and Republicans

Dublin, Aug. 13.—Eamon De Valera who with his Fianna Fail deputies entered the Dail Eireann after taking the oath of allegiance, may soon also become a active member of the Northern Irish Arliament.

There have been six abstentions from the North Parliament, which sits at Belfast consisting of four Nationalists, including De Valera, and two Sinn Feiners. It is considered likely that they will follow the course taken in the case of the Dail and cease their boycott of the Ulster body. De Valera was elected to the Northern Parliament from County Down and to the Dail Eireann from County Clare.

Leave Field Clear

Dublin, Aug. 13.—The Labor party has decided to give a clear field to Eamond De Valera's Fianna Fail party in the Dublin by-elections to fill the vacancies in the Dail Eireann caused by the assassination of Kevin O'Higgins and the death of Countess Markievicz. Thus, unless the Sinn Fein party noon nominate candidates, there will be straight electoral fights between the Government and Fianna Fail.

PROF. HEATON SEES NO ECONOMIC UNION

Williamstown, Mass, Aug. 13.—The idea of an Empire as a potential self-sufficing economic unit is impossible, Prof. Robt. Heaton of Queen's University, Ont., declared at the Institute of Politics today. British Dominions are dependent on British manufacturers while seeking a larger share of the British market, he declared and the Imperial sentiment can induce change.

SIR ROBT. HORNE ON A LONG TOUR

From Montreal To Burmah And Back Through Canada

London, August 13.—It is learned here that Sir Robert Horne, after delivering his address as President of the Empire Mining and Metallurgical Institute at Montreal, proposes to go to Burmah on business engagements. From there he hopes to pay a first visit to Australia and New Zealand, where he has many friends, including the Premiers of these two Dominions. The return journey will be made by way of Canada. The tour will involve Sir Robert's absence from the Parliamentary scene till early next year, but the comment made here is that no British statesman has ever made a tour of the world which enables him to become better acquainted with the Empire overseas.

FRENCH FLIERS ARE GETTING IMPATIENT

Paris, Aug. 13 (C.P.)—The Paris press reveals today for the first this morning while there was a slight hope that the French pilots champion at the bit at Le Bourget might take off Sunday on their trans-Atlantic expedition, French weather experts insist there is little chance of proper flying weather, until the beginning of next week.

Competitors for the trans-Atlantic flights are filling their hours by testing machine everything double ship-shape and poring over maps and charts.

CANCER RESEARCH

Twenty-two years ago a gifted hum
...rist, the late Robb Russell, be ...gan to publish a series of small vol
...umes on cancer, or, as he called it, the ...disease of civilization. These publi
...cations were ignored at the time by all
...good everyone, but he continued to
...write on the cancer.

The Annual Report of the British ...Empire Cancer Campaign just issued
...is proof that Russell did not write in
...vain. The cancer problem has not ...yet been solved, but knowledge about
...cancer is increasing—perhaps more
...rapidly than individuals or even
...other human institutions. This fact,
...which deserves emphasis, helps to jus-
...tify the view of Lord Cave, the chair...man of the campaign, that an eventual
...solution of the mystery of cancer is ...likely to be attained.

...Criticism is encouragement in the re-
...port, for while its authors breathe into
...it a spirit of optimism, their statements
...are always tempered by reason. It
...would be difficult to overestimate the ...value of facts and statistics. Many wild
...scientific ideas, which have been ...made in recent years, by enthusiasts
...who have refused to look facts in the ...face, which later disappointment has
...fully exposed by statements of "cures,"
...which have later proved to be without
...foundation.

...As indicated in the report, there are
...today a large number of theories about
...the disease of which complete proof
...has not been deduced. Many of these ...theories may in time be discounted,
...others may be substantiated. The Bri
...tish Empire Cancer Campaign invests
...alike all views and ideas that are plac
...ed before it, in which work it is assist
...ed by researches on the disease not ...only in the Empire itself but over the ...world.

...Certain facts about cancer are now
...established. On the first place it is ...to be found among civilized nations. It
...is practically unknown in primitive
...races. It therefore has some connec-
...tion with our mode of living and with
...our eating. It is one authority on
...disease is a safety result against un-
...natural modes of life. Prevention then
...as well as cure would depend upon a
...more rational method of living.

...Much of the general fear about can...cer is, scientists state, quite unwarrant-
...ed. Cancer is not inheritable in the ...ordinary sense of the word. No, one
...should suppose that because the father
...or mother died of cancer that he is ...more likely to have it. Life insurance
...companies do not discriminate against
...such applicants. Neither is cancer
...contagious. There is not a single re-
...corded instance of a physician or nurse
...having contracted it, unless through
...abrasion upon a patient.

...Cancer gives warning, and if the ...warning is heeded in time it is cur-
...able. While it is true that many
...thousands die of cancer every year,
...many hundreds of these could be saved,
...even with our present incomplete
...knowledge of the disease, if the warn-
...ings are heeded and remedial action
...taken before it is too late.

PLENTY OF FUEL

An English fuel expert makes the ...prediction that within seven years Can-
...ada will be independent of both Amer-
...ican and British coal because of a pa-
...tented process which will turn Canad-
...ian coal dust, lignite and peat into
...into fuel fit for domestic and indus...trial purposes. The coal dust is to be ...screening, whether or not the boiler ex-
...pressed are wholly or partly realized
...in the time mentioned or longer. In ...any event, Canada is better off as re-
...gards fuel supplies than ever before.
...In industry the "white coal" from the ...great water sources that are being
...harnessed is being put to more use ev-
...ery day, and additional waterfalls and
...rapids are being studied and their
...potentialities estimated in terms of ...demands. A vast supply of steam
...coal is being mined and the coking in...dustry is being enlarged and its pro-
...ducts advertised. As for household
...fuel, the people in Canada's cities
...and towns are in an enviable position
...for they have the domestic fuel
...source and both American and British
...supplies at their service. When there
...was a strike in the American mines
...Canada was supplied with Welsh and
...Scotch coal, and some Dutch and Ger-
...man fuel as well. When the British
...miners quit their labors, there was
...hard American coal to fill the bin
...and feed stoves and furnaces. Prior to
...the great strike in the United States
...anthracite field in 1902, very little, if
...any, British coal entered the Canadian
...market, but since then the importa-
...tions of coal have grown, and the last
...year of a full fiscal year has seen a trend
...does increase in the use of Welsh and
...Scotch coal in Eastern Canada. Mon
...treal being a particularly heavy user
...of British hard coal. American anth
...racite is still the most used fuel here
...but the making market proves that
...plenty for his home if he prefers it.
...With domestic, American and British ...hard coal available, and coke into the
...bargain, there is less likelihood than
...ever of a fuel famine in Montreal as ...competition should keep prices at a
...reasonable level. The fuel situation
...to that extent may be considered sat-
...isfactory.

PROGRESS

A century ago the first power news
...paper press was put in operation. Prior
...to then, newspapers were printed on
...hand presses, slowly and laboriously.
...The first power press was run by ...steam. The hand press had an output
...of 250 copies an hour. The steam
...press increased the output to 1100 cop-
...ies an hour. When this first power
...press was placed in operation in the ...office of The London Times the pres
...men opposed it. Their defended ob-
...jection was that it violated the Bibli-
...cal injunction that man should earn
...his bread by the sweat of his brow.
...Their obvious and real objection was ...that one man could operate the power
...press whereas four men were neces-
...sary to run the hand press.

...Today labor welcomes labor-saving
...devices. Modern production could not ...be maintained by the hands of all the
...labor in the world and yet with mach
...ines doing the work of hundreds of
...men there is no surplus of labor. In
...civilized countries virtually everything
...is done by machine, but unemployment
...is local and temporary. Long exper-
...ed, by labor, the machine has furnish-
...ed more work and better pay for labor.

...Thus does man, actuated by selfish
...motives, often oppose his own treas-
...ure. Labor can not, on the one hand, be
...obstructing mechanical development
...at a time when every mechanical im...provement served to increase, already
...general unemployment.

...Industrialism presents an extreme
...and paradoxical picture when divided
...into the two stages of handcraft and
...machine manufacture. When every...thing was made by hand there was
...over-production and unemployment.
...Now that everything is made by mach
...ine there is under-production and
...work for all.

OTHER MEN'S THOUGHTS

We would be the more pleased if Premier Baldwin could remain for a longer period in Canada than he has planned to do, as it would permit him to further inculcate in a certain num-ber of Canadians his acute and true conception of liberty and tolerance and thereby increase mutual respect between the two great races of the Dominion."—La Patrie.

Drowning used to be the main fac-tor in raising the mortality rate in the holiday season. But where one per-son is drowned now ten are killed in motor accidents, mostly preventable. —London Advertiser.

The proportions of the wharf a Port Resolution, on the south shore of Great Slave Lake, which is now nearing completion, are an indication of the development that the transpor-tation along the Mackenzie water-ways has undergone. The Government expects to be able to recover the ex-penditure that it has made from the wharfage dues that it will charge. The need for such landing facilities at that point has been urged for several years past and they will prove a great help to northern navigation. We are apt to forget that Great Slave is a larger lake than Erie and much large than Ontario.—Edmonton Journal.

In spite of claims that Christianity is upon the down grade and that athe-ism is making marked progress, the Bible still has the largest circulation of any book in the world. At the re-cent annual meeting of the American Bible Society it was announced that the circulation in 1926 was 9,917,261 copies an increase of more than half a million over the preceding year, mak-ing a total circulation under the aus-pices of this one society alone of 184,-038,200 volumes. And the British and Foreign Bible Society recently cel-ebrated the purchase in China alone for last year of well over 4,000,000 vol-umes and its own publication in all of 30,128,087 copies of the Bible in n fewer than 682 languages.

VACATION

I'd like to go to Timbuctoo,
And also Tientsin,
And then across the desert sands
To ride a caravan.
Upon the ocean's briny deep
I'd like to sail afar,
With not a thing to guide me
But a shining northern star.
I'm hunt big game would be rare sport,
(Cannot shoot a gun).
But then, I've seen the movies,
So I know just how it's done).
I might step off to see King George
In clear old London town,
And if I'm nice, the Prince of Wales
Might let me try his crown.
In China for a week or two,
Then onward to Japan,
If need some China dishes,
So I'll get them, if I can.)
There's one thing that I mustn't miss
A trip to Mandalay,
To see if Kipling told the truth:
Do flying fishes play?
I've got my plans all finished,
Then the voice of reason speaks:
It's nice to go and day-dream, but
Can you do it in two weeks?"

Mr. George Cook, the young bridegroom from Buffalo, who was forced to undergo an operation in the Belleville Hospital for appendicitis, is recovering nicely and in due time will be able to resume his interrupted honeymoon. Miss Meldon, Superintendent of the Hospital, pointed out to the Intelligencer this morning that while every kindness and consideration was shown to the young bride, Mrs. Cook, the ladies of the hospital would not permit her sleeping-out to be her husband's guest. She was, however, accommodated in another room in the hospital, and was thus able to keep in closest touch with her husband.

GREATED DISTURBANCE

The police received a hurried call to the residence of Mrs. Sidney Twining, Bleecker Avenue, last evening, where it was said that a man was acting queerly. On arriving, Officers Sloth and Evans found J. J. Fraser, a boarder, acting in a boisterous manner in his room. He was pounding on the walls and bed and created a disturbance that was annoying all the officers. He was placed under arrest and taken to the hospital and Dr. Crook was called and ordered the man's removal to the hospital. The physician stated that he had originally been called to attend Fraser, who resulted in his condition. Officer Sloth went to the hospital with the man but Fraser was unsatisfied with his surrounding and proceeded to engage in a brawl with the police. He was taken back to the police station where he was placed behind the bars. This morning he appeared in normal attitude and was very much composed and calm after his escapade

WEARY THESPIAN DISROBES IN CAR

Slept Peacefully Until Lady's Shrieks Disturbed Slumbers

New York, Aug. 13.—Comfort in repose means more than anything else to Robert Maitland, twenty-four, who has a minor role in "Rio Rita." Therefore, when at the height of a trek along Broadway he felt drowsy as he reached 34th street early today, he decided a glistening coupe standing at the curb in the latter thoroughfare would provide comfortable and adequate sleeping quarters.

But gentlemen, particularly members of the theatrical profession, do not woo Morpheus in street attire—especially when the woolen piece is a bit stuffy, such as the interior of a limousine. So Maitland, being both a gentleman and a member of the theatrical profession, disrobed partially in proper character for his slumber.

Sleeping peacefully, he was unaware that the owner of the car, whose name was not learned, emerged with his fiancee from a restaurant in 34th street, and gallantly offered her his hand to help her into the car.

As the young woman stepped into the care she became aware of a strange presence. A shriek, followed by screams, ensued, and she was running toward Broadway shouting for the police. Her screams were heard by Patrolman Albert Miller, who—as he—shrill them—sleeping man.

Grabbing at his disordered clothing Maitland made a feeble attempt to get to a doorway, or some place—he wasn't sure which—to get his street clothes since he was again on the street. But his fumbling with his garments delayed his speed, and Patrolman Heins caught him.

When arraigned before Magistrate John V. Head in Jefferson Market Court later this morning, Maitland pleaded guilty to a disorderly conduct charge. He was warned never to do it again and sentence was suspended.

Market Men's Normal

New York, N.Y., Aug. 13.—Stock prices rebounded briskly today after the drastic reaction of the two preceding sessions. Extreme gains ran from 2 to 10 points in many active issues, and these were not fully diminished in a few new week spots cropped out but there were no sharp reversals such as took place earlier in the week.

Encouraging week end trade reviews reflecting industrial activities and satisfactory money conditions, acted as a sustaining influence. Year's range of the solid stock freely on the big break, covered part of their commitments, buying from that source being further swelled by the investment and speculative demand created by low prices of some of the seasoned dividend paying issues.

Commercial solvents 73 and Houston Oil sold through 70 with gains of 5 points, respectively, were prominent in the recovery. At least a score of others sold 3 or more points above yesterdays final quotations.

WOMEN WILL BE JUST AS MANY

Leeds, Eng., August 13.—"If the meeting is to be of scientific utility the people must be there," declared Sir Arthur Keith in 1833 by Canon William Holland, when he was president of the British Association for the Advancement of Science.

When the British Association gathers at Leeds on August 31 for the 97th time, Professor Keith says he is less than one woman to every man in an attendance, which it is estimated, will number 2,000. The number of women taking part in the programmes of the Association is undoubtedly increasing by the secretary the "B. A." is always. "It is especially noticeable in sections such as education, psychology and botany."

Despite Canon Buckland's opinion, there has been some variety and the records of the Association show that even those attending the meeting of zoology on account of the nature of some of the papers."

Today there is no sphere of the "B. A." to which women are forbidden entirely. At the Leeds meeting no fewer than 31 women will read papers, while the Duchess of Atholl (Parliamentary Representative Board of Education) will preside over the education section.

A new departure will be the holding of special session of various sections interested in industry, when the Right Textile Institute of Manchester is cooperating with the "B. A." in these sessions.

WORST FIELD OF DEAD IS YPRES

Ypres, August 13.—The deadliest battlefield of the whole war is that terrain, now smiling and peaceful, which rolls away from the Menin Memorial Gate. The gate has just been dedicated by Field Marshal Lord Plumer to the memory of the 54,000 British dead who lie in nameless graves in "the salient."

The gate now stands in massive simplicity at the Menin Road as it crosses the moat and enters Ypres. It is surrounded by a stone line that faces Menin, even as the British faced for four years, the battering of the German hosts. As the dead sleep in their trenches' places through and under are carved in alphabetical order the names of the 54,000, among them more than 7,000 Canadians.

The long columns of names in black are most significant evidence of the years' battle for Ypres. Four years, in the sodden wastes of the Salient. Many are not all the dead whose graves cannot be located; many thousands more are commemorated at Tyne Cot, for instance, a quarter of a million soldiers who fought in the 12 miles of battle line for four years in the Germans who, only through, would have had an almost unobstructed pathway to the Channel ports.

For four years the battle raged before the gate—a phantom gateway then. Through this gateway the Canadians went to St. Julien, there in April, 1915, to make their famed stand against the first gas attack. The enemy, never more than five miles from the gate, approached within less than a mile in the spring of 1918. Only the desperate resistance of September 1918, removed the relentless pressure. It is said that the millions of Empire soldiers who fought in the Salient went through the gate to face the German hordes. Actually, in the daytime it was a place to be shunned, even in the night, it was used sparingly. Now, every hour of the day and night throughout those four years the gate is within range of and under fire from the enemy's guns.

From this gate you look out on a farmland stretching to distant ridges. From outside, you look to the old town that is new, ever the ruined Cloth Hall loses some of its antiquity in the mass of scaffolding that surrounds and supports it.

During the war, you would have looked out on a gray waste bordered by shell craters; holding 10,000 men of whom not one could be seen; marked by burning shell and, at night, ringed in flame. You would have looked inside on a wrecked town dominated by the ruined Cloth Hall tower.

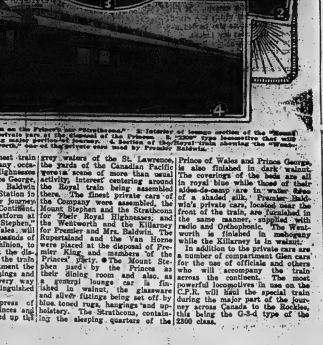

From the gate stretched the Menin Road, a ghastly highway. Pock-marked with shell,n't a square yard but had its tale of death; not a square yard that ridded with stamped and rifle bullets; reeking as sapbystanding gas, had not cost, of British and German legions, more lives—than there were stones in its make-up.

Royal Train Is Canadian Pacific's Finest

2. The car in the Prince of Wales' "Royal Train" is the Canadian Pacific "Drawing-room" 3. Interior of lounge section of the "Royal Standard," one of the private cars of the Prince of Wales' "Royal Train" 4. Interior of the Royal train showing the "Royal Standard," one of the private cars of the Prince of Wales' "Royal Train"

UNDOUBTEDLY the finest train ever operated in Canada will soon bore their Royal Highnesses The Prince of Wales, Prince George and Prince and Mrs. Baldwin from the Windsor Street Station in Montreal recently on their journey to the west across the Dominion. From their observation platform at the rear of the "Royal Train," where the Prince of Wales will smile his greetings to thousands of Canadians across the Dominion, to the private cars placed at the disposal of Premier Baldwin, the train resembled more in appointment the most exclusive club, finishings and appointments being in every way fitting for such distinguished guests of Canada.

Days before the Empress of Australia, bearing the Princes and Premier to Quebec, steamed up the grey waters of the St. Lawrence, the yards of the Canadian Pacific were a scene of more than usual activity. Interest centering around the Royal train being assembled there. The finest private cars of the Company were assembled, the Drawing-room car Stratheona for their Royal Highnesses, and Westerwald and the Killarney for Premier and Mrs. Baldwin. The Dominion and the Van Horne were placed at the disposal of Premier King and members of the Princes' party. The Mount Stephen was paid by the Princes as their dining room and also, as lounge car is finished in walnut, the panelwork and silver fittings being set off by blue tapestry hangings and upholstery. The Strathcona, containing the sleeping quarters of the Prince of Wales and Prince George, is also finished in dark walnut. The coverings of the beds are all in blue and gold. The Van Horne, a sides-de-camp are in water blue and shaded gold. Premier Baldwin's private cars, located in the rear of the train, are furnished in green and gold and equipped with radio and Orthophonic. The Westerwald is finished in mahogany while the Killarney is in walnut.

In addition to the private cars are a number of compartment Glen cars for the use of officials and others who will accompany the train across the continent. The most powerful locomotives in use on the C.P.R. will haul the special train during the major part of the journey across Canada to Montreal, this being the G-3-d type of the 2300 class.

Women's News and Views

DAUGHTERS ALWAYS JUST LITTLE GIRLS

Mamma and Ethel are having it hot and heavy these days. Ethel is twenty-two. She has a fine job and she's earning a good salary.

"And believe me, I'm no boob," writes Ethel. "But you'd think I was five the way mother hands out free advice—advice that might have gone when I was wearing bibs and sleeping in a crib, but it's sure moss-grown now.

"I've been going with a fine young man for seven months and now we're engaged. He comes from another State and of course I don't know his people. But I know him and I know how fine he is. But to hear mother rave, you'd think I was going to commit suicide.

"He cared!" sighs mother. "After all you're nothing but a child. Are you sure he's the right one for you? And really you don't know a thing about him. And how much does he make? And what about his people? Are they refined and cultured and educated? After all, don't forget that there's blue blood in your veins, etc.

"But I know him and I love him, and I know my own mind, too," storms Ethel.

"But, but," gloams mother. "You're only a child. Why not listen to the words of an older person. Why not listen to someone who knows more than you do?"

So Ethel writes today. "Now in the name of goodness can a girl be free from the much advice and from the questions of meddling parents? Is there any way to stop people from handing out free and unsolicited advice?

"So you're twenty-two, Ethel. Twenty-two means independence for you, but to your mother it means simply the twenty-second year of her service. Have you ever thought of a mother's service? Have you ever thought how a woman must give up her own individuality and sacrifice her own ambitions when she becomes a mother? Your mother has loved you with all her heart. But in spite of this love she has had to suffer and endure and sacrifice more than you will ever understand until you, yourself, are a mother.

"For many years your very life depended on her loyalty to you. For many years that advice, which you now scorn, was as necessary to your well-being as food and water and air. Now you forget this. You think you can do without it. But how do you think she can forget when the habit of service has become so ingrained in her?

Of course, the fussing irritates you. But when it does, put yourself in mother's place. Try to realize how you will feel when your daughter's "twenty and independent." Try to understand how she will still be your "little girl," needing your tender service and love even though she may have already made you a grandmother. If you remember all these things of loyal, earnest service and tender love, a mother has something of a right to question and advise her twenty-two year old daughter.

No, I'm not forgetting to mention the "meddling person" of which you speak—the person who hands out advice, free, gratis and for nothing with she has absolutely no right. The words are filled with "don'ts," people. They are always telling you "for your own good" just what your friends do despite the fact that you have never confided in them, or asked their opinion, or given them the right to assume an intimacy which has never existed. There's only one way to deal with those persons.

LET 'EM RAVE!

Listen to them as you'd listen to the rain on the roof. Displeasure notes arent grand opera selections, but we don't have to encourage ourselves adfronted because we are compelled to listen to them. And, after all, why let those spoil the atmosphere for us? The air is free. So let 'em rave! When they find no response to their ado they'll tak the vocal efforts elsewhere.

Some Helpful Hints For Busy Housewives

Remember that moths are at work during the summer. When blankets are to be stored in drawers or chests after the spring cleaning, wash the wood over with a solution of turpentine—one tablespoonful of turpentine to one pint of hot water. This is always avoided by moths. Use any moth preventive in the folds of the blankets. Wrap them up in old sheets or newspaper, to keep them free from dust.

Smocked Frocks for the Smart Little Girl

SUTTERICK 1574

Recently the new baby plants were set out yesterday, and now Susanne can pick mother's bunch of flowers in appreciation of this pretty new gown. Surely nothing could be sweeter than a smocked frock with yoke and sleeves in one, and with little bloomers to match. For size six months, you, of a yard of material are needed to make both frock and panties. With it, yet of contrasting color for the stitched collar and cuffs.

BUTTERICK 1576

As autumn years and months, Suzette has only six of one and half a dozen of the other, but already she has learned how devastating a smart smocked gown can be. This style places the smocking around the shoulder line of the yoke, in effect embracing both the frock itself and the raglan sleeves. A dainty bit of stitching enhances collar, cuffs and pockets. 134 yds. of a 35-inch material makes the frock in the year size.

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIER:

I am a man fifty-five years old, and I'm in love with a girl thirty years old.

Do you think we could be happy together? She says she loves me and is willing to marry me.

HEARTBROKEN.

HHEARTBROKEN: If you share each other's tastes and interests and your love is mutual there is no reason why you should not be happy together.

Try deeply in love with a young man five years its senior. I'm eighteen.

He claims he loves me as much as it is possible for anyone to love. I don't really doubt him and yet I am not absolutely certain.

He does not live in the city and does not see me often. When he leaves he promises to write. He does write once in a while. But don't you think, if he really loved me, he would always answer my letters and keep up a steady correspondence with me?

ANXIOUS MARY.

ANXIOUS MARY: Perhaps if you wrote less frequently, it might have the desired effect of increasing his interest in the correspondence. Of course, it is just possible that he is too pressed for time to carry on a steady correspondence.

In the meantime, cultivate other friendships. Don't tie yourself to the young man. You may find that another and deeper love may supplant your affection for him.

SINCLAIR'S

CURSE OF LOVE

By Mildred Barbour

She opened the door of the bungalow and struck a light. But, before she stepped over the threshold, she glanced up and down the deserted beach. There were no friendly lights in the other cottages, scattered up and down the beach. Except for the monotonous sound of the water, she was alone in a world of darkness and silence.

She shivered unaccountably. For the first time, it occurred to her that she was a woman, alone and unprotected save for the moonlit beach many, many miles from the nearest occupied habitation.

All the more reason why there's nothing to fear," she told herself, with a firm nod, going into the living room busied herself with laying a fire from the wood that Ah Poo had brought in before closing the bungalow at the end of the honeymoon.

The cheerful blaze on the hearth hastened her. The warmth was comforting, and the room began to be more homey. She made tea and found a box of biscuits on a shelf in the pantry.

She was sitting in front of the fire sipping her tea, and wondering how she was to get through the days of despair that she knew were to be her lot, when her quick ear caught a sound outside.

She listened, holding her breath. Some one was stumbling down the path from the cliff to the beach. Presently wounded on the veranda of the bungalow. A man's footsteps!

CHAPTER 28.

THE MIDNIGHT VISITOR

At the sound of a man's footsteps on the veranda outside the lonely bungalow, Norma sprang to her feet. Her heart began to beat violently from agitation that she was alone in a house at a deserted beach in the late hours of the night swept over her and engulfed her with terror.

Her gaze roamed around the living-room in search of a weapon. It fell upon the fire-tongs, which she seized in nervous fingers as she backed against the wall near the hearth.

There was a peremptory knock at the door that opened upon the veranda. Norma moistened her dry lips and, with an effort to hold her voice steady, called:

"Who is there?"

"Sydney," was the muffled reply. "Sydney Stokes. Let me in, Norma."

Relief flooded her whole being. For a moment, the significance of his presence failed to register with her. She was only thankful that it was he, instead of some sulking criminal.

When she opened the door to him and he stepped into the room, Norma's room, shivering, she said:

"Heavens, how you frightened me! I thought you were a burglar—as if any burglar would be wasting his time at a deserted resort." She laughed in a shaky laugh.

"You never can tell," he shrugged. "There ought to be pretty good pickings in some of these closed cottages. You millionaires are so careless about your silver," he added, with mocking significance.

She looked at him sharply. There was a bright red spot in the centre of each hollow cheek, and his green eyes shone dangerously.

Had he been drinking? she wondered. If so, she must get rid of him at once.

"What brought you here?" she asked sharply.

"You," he told her, with a reckless light in his eyes. "I say, aren't you going to offer me a drink, after my long, chilly ride?"

She motioned abruptly toward the table, singing temptingly above the flame of a spirit-lamp. He made a mirthless laugh.

"How did you know I was here?" he demanded. Recovered from her fright, she was beginning to be angry.

"My sixth sense," he answered mockingly. "I rather thought you'd bolt, after what I told you this afternoon. You see, my dear Norma, I know you a well, if not better, than you know yourself. That's why we should have married, we two."

She ignored the remark, and said:

"How did you know I had come here?"

"I watched and waited, my dear one cross the street from your parental abode. I saw you drive away. I followed, but alas, what could my humble car do against such a plutocratic bus as yours. It looked once as though I'd never arrive at all."

"I wish you hadn't," she said shortly. "Sydney you've got to leave at once."

"Why?" He looked at her with a reticence at pained surprise. "I've only just arrived. And besides, how am I to get you alone in the middle of the night, down here at land's end?"

"That's the very reason you must leave me," she insisted. "Don't you realize how awful it would look, if any one ever found out about your being here?"

"Yes, I do," he laughed imperturbably. "Well, if you're not going to offer me a drink from your father's excellent cellar, I dare say I'll have to fall back on my own poison." He dragged a silver flask from his pocket.

Norma took a step forward.

"You can't drink that here!" she protested emphatically. "Sydney, you won't have it."

He laughed again, indulgently, as one laughs at a child.

"Nonsense, I'm chilled, I tell you. And you're going to have a snifter with me." He went with lofty unconcern for her flashing blue eyes, to the dining-room secured two tall glasses, and poured some of the liquor from his flask into them. Then he found a siphon of carbonated water and proceeded to shoot it into the glasses.

"Here's in your health, Norma," he said, as he lifted his glass, "and to marriage."

She turned her scornful gaze from him and stared at the fire that crackled on the hearth. The drink he had poured for her remained untouched.

"When you've finished that drink, I want you to go, Sydney."

"Ah, but I've two—if you don't drink yours," he reminded her.

For answer, she lifted the glass and tossed its contents into the fire.

"Oh, well," he shrugged away his disappointment, "there's still plenty more in my flask."

Desperation seized her.

"Sydney I ask you to go—now."

AVOIDED AN OPERATION

Mrs. Dayman Gives Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound the Credit

Colborne, Ontario.—"When I was first married I was very thin and weak. The doctor said I was weak and would never be strong enough for a child, but I did, and from the time my baby came I started all the time and doctored for a long time. Life became a burden, and doctors said an operation was necessary for me, but my husband was opposed to that; I had seen Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine advertised, so I told my husband that I thought I would try it, that I might get some relief. I had not taken one bottle when I could feel it helping me. I took five bottles and had better health. Now I have three girls and a boy and have done my work up to confinement. I am now at the Change of Life and owe my good health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I take a bottle when I think I need it."—Mrs. Susan Dayman, R. R. No. 4, Colborne, Ontario.

DAUDED CASE IS REPEATED BY A POLISH GENERAL

Zagurski Opposed Pilsudski In Revolution Last Year

WARSAW, August 13.—The Daudet case which startled Paris short time ago has been repeated in Poland. General Zagurski, who with his brother of the same rank led troops in opposing Pilsudski in the May revolution last year, was released from the Vilna jail on forged papers and has disappeared without a trace. Whether he is the victim of gunmen or has escaped the country is not known. A puzzled Government refuses to confirm or deny any of the numerous reports concerning the General's fate or whereabouts.

Zagurski had been confined in Vilna jail since Pilsudski's return to political power more than a year ago. Charges of defending his Government, which the aged marshal and former President Pilsudski was trying to overthrow, had been brought against him, but he remained in power. Later he was accused of "corrupting bribes in the purchase of military airplanes from France and the date for his trial for this offence was often set. However, it was repeatedly postponed. Pilsudski suppressing all criticism in the matter with an iron hand.

At the end of last week three men dressed in military uniforms appeared at Vilna prison and presented papers from a military court ordering the General delivered to the officers for transport to Warsaw for trial. On arrival at the Polish capital the supposed officers left their charge and he took a taxi for his home. He made he told the driver to take his baggage on while he visited a public bath. Since then he never has been seen. A reactionary paper printed the story that the murdered body of Zagurski was found in the woods near Warsaw. The Government immediately confiscated the entire issue of the paper and ordered it suppressed. Through some of its spokesmen the Government also pretends the officers who went to Vilna were under orders from Pilsudski and that he was released in Warsaw before giving his word of honor that he would appear at Pilsudski's office Tuesday for discussion of the case. This view is discredited by friends of the General who shake their heads and pretend to know he was freed by a clever trick.

LOWER RATES IN INFANT DEATHS

Dr. S. Boucher, director of the Health Department, supplied statistics yesterday from his 1926 report on the vital statistics of Montreal. One of the interesting points as disclosed by these figures is the gradual decline in the infantile death rate. Worth in the report shows that Montreal's high birth rate is decreasing, and that the death rate is also lower.

The number of births, said Dr. Boucher, is a little less than last year. The birth rate is -high, but is it is decreasing. The report gives the number of births for 1926 as 29,298 which on an estimated population of 684,500 gives a proportion of 42.8 for each 1,000 inhabitants.

For the five years between 1916-20 the average number of births was 29,187 and the proportion for each 1,000 inhabitants was 35.44. For the ten year period between 1921-25 the proportion of births for each 1,000 population was but 32.46; for the ten year period of 1916-25 the average number of births was 29,078 and the average proportion for each 1,000 people was 34.09 he number of marriages in 1926 was 8,133 as compared with 6,781 in 1925 and the proportion for each 1,000 of population was 9.95 in 1926, whereas in 1925 the number of marriages was 8,103 and the proportion for each 1000 people was 9.11.

The death rate, said Dr. Boucher, is decreasing regularly, which declaration is confirmed by the official figures. For example for the five year period of 1916-20 the average number of deaths a year was 11,481 and the proportion for each 1000 people of population was 20.16. For the next five year period of 1921-25 the average number of deaths a year was 9,812 and the proportion for each 1000 people was 15.25.

For the ten years between 1916-25 the average number of deaths was 10,646 and the proportion for each 1000 persons was 18.55. The number of deaths in 1926 was 9,650(which on an estimated population of 684,500 was by 13 for each 1,000 persons.

THREE CHINKS ARE KILLED IN VANCOUVER FEUD

VANCOUVER, B.C., Aug. 11—A political feud which started in Vancouver's Chinatown a few days ago claimed the lives of three Chinamen, two of whom were prominent among their countrymen in the city.

The dead are: Louie Man Hs, President and Editor of the Morning News city Chinese daily newspaper and special commissioner of the Vancouver Branch of the Chinese National League Wong Park typesetter and writer for the News, and a Chinese believed to be Wong Sang Suey of Kamloops, B.C.

The three died following a shooting affray in the offices of the News, issued in the Chinese National League headquarters. *Police stated after investigation that they believed the affair was a direct result of the recent split in the ranks of the Nationalist party. The authorities said they were informed that Leule Man Ha was seated in his office on the mezzanine floor when Wong Sang Suey entered and requested to see the editor.

Wong Park, one of the dead men was seated in the front office with reporter and Mak Ys Shee, a subeditor. Sang Suey was told to go up stairs, which he did.

Violent argument between the editor and his visitor was heard by the three men in the business office, but paid little attention until they heard a shouting out and looked up to see San Suey taking aim with a revolver above the railing of the mezzanine floor.

As Wong Park rose and turned to flee a bullet from the assassin's gun struck him in the back.

What transpired after, in the editorial room, is a matter of police deduction and conjecture, as both parties to the shooting are dead.

TEACHERS MUST BE MARTYRS TO DO ONE THING

TORONTO, August 13.—"If teacher: are prepared to teach the only type of morality worth while they must also be prepared to be martyrs," was the rather startling statement made by Rev. S. G. Bland, of Toronto, in addressing the committee on character moral and religious education, at the world's Federation of Education Associations here today.

An animated discussion on what more als should be taught in the schools and how best to teach them developed. One delegate declared that morals could not be taught through text books. The lives of the teachers were better lessons.

Dr. Bland, in concluding the session, said: "The children should be taught not merely what negative things as to refrain from robbery and violence, but the teaching should carry the morality of land speculation and the general competitive policy. Trying to make this present anti-Christian system of ours respected as a moral one is like flogging a dead horse or trying to galvanize a dead horse into life."

DUTCH OLYMPIAD OPEN JULY 28TH

Amsterdam, August 13.—The Olympiad at Amsterdam next year opens officially on July 28, with the track and field events commencing the day after. The closing ceremony and distribution of prizes takes place August 12. The ice-hockey and winter games of course are separate, and will be staged late this winter. Field hockey takes place in May while association football is scheduled from May 27 onward. The demonstration of lacrosse takes place July 7. Another peculiarly Canadian sport, paddling, is not on the programme but followers of the sport expect to have it recognized in 1932.

USE FORCE OF CURIOSITY FOR TEACHING YOUNG

London, August 13.—There are many kinds of schools for the young in this world. But a "different" one is the Malting House school at Cambridge. There the main idea is to use the force of curiosity for the development of thought and knowledge. The children within invisible limits are allowed to do what they like. There is a multitude of things which the child loves to play or work with—things which would be forbidden elsewhere. There are work-rooms, carpenter's shop and garden. And there is a pond—which can be flooded; also a climbing apparatus in which the children can be as agile as monkeys.

Above all this school has animals. The children pet them and look after them. One of the animals died and they wanted to know why. Quite naturally the children cut up and looked inside the dead creature; and this became the first of a series of cuttings up in which the children discovered that some animals have bones and some have not.

Another instance of the way this school works is the tee-saw. Two children are necessary, for beneath it are books on which weights can be hung. The child experiments with the effect of the weights at different distances from the centre, and does not know it is at the beginning of problems in mathematics and physics. From the seesaw it is the ordinary weights and scales in a simple transition.

The school's store of pupils are unusually intelligent children, the offspring of professional people in Cambridge. Some of the pupils remain in the school through lunch time and connect their own means. Hence they must write a list for a cook and may add to the joy of learning to read and write by using the typewriter which the necessity of keeping within the financial allowance per head entails the use of arithmetic. Certain pupils started quite young, before they were three years of age, in fact.

The success of the experiment natur ally depends on the skill with which the force of curiosity is guided, especially through that period when the child's curiosity changes from "what is happening" to "what will happen next?" Hence the directors provide varied equipment to keep acquisitive ities with a fast at the moment of its interest.

There are teachers of course. A good deal of interest was roused when the school recently advertised for another teacher, because it was set forth there was need of a teacher who should be a scientist of the first order; and also should not so much teach, as introduce children to science and scientific method. Environment is made the main factor in teachings. It is sought to restrict it however, so that the education of the child shall follow well-defined paths.

The method has aroused a good deal of interest in Britain and educationalists are eagerly waiting for definite results.

TAX RATES SET FOR TISDALE TP.

Timmins, Aug. 12.—The tax rate for the township of Tisdale embracing South Porcupine, the Dome and Schumacher was fixed by the township council last night. EXPECT RESURRECTION OF LONG HAIR STYLE

Paris, Aug. 10.—Paris is having some success in its determined campaign to foist long hair upon its short haired customers.

Some ladies who said they would never wear bobbie skirts, and wear them, or trouser skirts, and are wearing them declared they would not give up their short hair. Yet the least trained observer in the smart restaurants and dancing places of Paris notes the growing number of fashionably dressed women with long hair.

Hair dressers are confident long hair is due for a revival that they are laying in large supplies of detachable transformations to tide their clients over the transition period. Even hair pins are in readiness for the renaissance of women's crowning beauty.

FORT LENNOX, ILE AUX NOIX

Among the historic memorials of Canada that have been from time to time gathered under the care of the Canadian National Parks Branch of the Department of the Interior there is none richer in historic interest or more charmingly situated than the massive old fortress, Fort Lennox, that stands inshalrybuWI DmnRLwvdo tP-HOan in quiet dignity on the southern end of the Ile aux Noix in the Richelieu river, in the Province of Quebec. This fort area was erected by the British military authorities in the early part of the nineteenth century and since its abandonment as a military post in 1869 has been visited by increasing numbers of tourists each year.

BRITISH SHIP SEIZED BY N. Y.

New York, August 13.—Technically classified as a pirate ship on the ground that it had changed its name without authority at sea, the British trawler Schastopol was seized off the Narrows today with a load of 3000 cases of liquor valued at $300,000 at bootleg prices.

The name "West Moreland" had been painted over the original name on the ship although the ship's papers showed her to be the Schastopol. The capture was made by a coastguard cutter which escorted the trawler to anchorage off the Statue of Liberty, where it was held under guard pending turning over to customs authorities.

Lloyds' register states that Ufa Sebastopol was formerly the property of the Newfoundland Government. No present owner was not announced by the coastguard. The trawler, was built in 1913 by the Canadian Car & Foundry Company at Fort William, Ont. Her home port is St. John's Newfoundland and her dimensions are 135.6 feet in length, 22.6 feet beam, 13 feet depth and 1200 tons.

7 Rules for Safety

You must obey them if you wish to be safe on the Highways

Traffic has increased so much on the highways that motor car drivers must become "traffic conscious". They must realize that safety for all motor traffic is largely in the hands of the operators of cars. Some do not yet understand this, while a small minority are perfectly confident quality of sense, decency and the law. Both these classes of drivers are a menace.

The co-operation of all intelligent and right-minded motorists is desired in giving caution and advice to the careless. In cases of flagrant breach of the law or rules of the road, other motorists should take license numbers and send them to the local authorities or to this Department with particulars.

These are the simple Rules of Driving It is necessary to observe each one scrupulously all the time.

1. Get your Motor Vehicle Operator's License.
Have it whenever you drive a car. If you get into an accident, or are stopped by a traffic officer or policeman, the absence of your Operator's License in itself will be considered a breach of the law and subject to fine.

2. Have your car in perfect mechanical shape.
Glaring Headlights—See that your lights are of one of the types authorized by the Department, and that your bulbs are in focus. Write the Department for a free folder telling how to focus your lights.
Brakes—Get your brakes tested frequently so that your car will obey when you want to stop.
Steering Gear—No part of the car is so vital. Take care against breakage by frequent inspection.
Four Wheel Brake Signs—Put one on the rear of your car if you have four-wheel brakes.

3. Don't "loaf" on main highways when traffic is heavy.
If you are just "out for an airing" go where the traffic is light. County and township roads are in good shape. Slow moving traffic is the cause of many accidents, because the motors behind must pass. Don't be selfish with the road by holding up traffic which has a right to proceed at a reasonable speed.

4. In passing traffic—Be careful.
When you overtake and pass another car, see that the road ahead is clear. Be sure there is a place in the traffic line which you can reach before you meet a vehicle coming the other way. Keep to your right on curves. Don't try to pass near the top of a Hill. There may be a vehicle approaching which you cannot see. Always indicate what you intend to do either by the horn or signal with the hand.

5. When other cars try to pass you—Let them pass.
The law is very definite in providing that when a vehicle overtakes another and attempts to pass, the second vehicle shall pull over to the right and let the first vehicle go by. Some drivers still think it clever to speed up when overtaken. That is against the law.

6. In entering Main Highways—Stop and Look.
Don't try to cut into traffic. Wait a minute and it will pass.

7. Don't stop on the Highway—Don't park.
It is dangerous to yourself and to others to park on the highway. If you wish to stop, move on to the first turn-out, and get your car entirely off the pavement.

USE COMMON SENSE—BE COURTEOUS
Think of the danger you create for yourself and others by careless, thoughtless driving.
It is better for you to let the other driver have the road, if it helps you to avoid an accident or a lawsuit.

TORONTO GIRL WILL PARACHUTE

Jump Thirteen Times At Canadian National Exhibition

Miss Caroline Sykes, Toronto girl, has contracted with the Jack V. Elliott all-Star Air Circus at Hamilton to make 13 parachute jumps at the Canadian National Exhibition. A novel performance has been arranged whereby Miss Sykes and a Hamilton man will jump from the plane at the same time, landing separately in the lake and being brought ashore in life boats.

Mr. Elliott has the contract for the aerial display at the Exhibition and has engaged Miss Sykes and George Bennett of the Hamilton Fire Department, who will also give a wing walking exhibition.

Two Hamilton girls were considered in place of Miss Sykes but after one contestant landed in Hamilton Bay and lost her parachute she dropped from the contest for appointment.

When Miss Sykes made her first jump at Hamilton, thereby establishing the record of being the first Canadian girl to make a jump, Mr. Elliott offered her the Exhibition contract which has just been completed.

Four prisoners dug through wall and escaped from county jail at Marion, Ill.

GIANTS STAGED TERRIFIC FINISH

Cardinals Tie Pirates For Second Place In National

New York, August 13.—At the stage of yesterday's ball game at the Polo Grounds the Giants were six runs behind. In fact, as late as the start of the eighth frame the Brooklyn Robins had scored six runs and the Giants had scored none, yet the McGrawmen made five in the eighth, one in the ninth and one standing out in the tenth.

It was a ding-dong finish, with the Giants swinging along at a terrific pace and batting up the ground. They caught the Robins like a gigantic sweep and passed them in another, to win their second game of the Interborough series, 7 to 6.

The Giants' late and fast finish was aided by back-to-back home runs. Hornsby rewarded a homer into the upper right field stands with the bases full in the eighth. One run had come in before this and the score, therefore, became 5 to 2.

It was then the Giants entered the fray. Jumbo Jim Elliott batted and held them runless in seven straight frames. Travis Jackson opened the throbbing session with a double to left centre. Leslie Mann struck out, but Jack Cummings, batting for Elliott, also had started the trouble in the eighth, reaching it's two-bagger to left centre and Jackson stuck with the tying run.

George Harper swung for Dutch Henry and popped to Hemline, and Bill Ott was then withdrawn in favor of Norman Plitt, the bespectacled right-hander, who acquitted Reese on a grounded to Barrett.

Meanwhile the Cardinals scored a 7 to 1 eleven inning victory over the skid ding Pirates at St. Louis, and went in to a tie for second place with the Pittsburg team. Bottomley's homer in the eleventh broke up a pitching duel between Hill and Haines.

At Boston the Braves won a slugging match from the Philadelphia team. The score was 12 to 6, and the victory gave the Braves the series 13-to games to one.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

New York, August 13.—Detroit and Philadelphia won the only games scheduled in the American League. The Tigers scored their third successive victory over the Browns, the score being 7 to 3, while the Athletics entertained 10,000 boys' day guests with a 7 to 1 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

At Philadelphia, two veterans on the Athletics' roster, Ty Cobb and Zach Wheat, contributed much to their team's victory by slamming out hits between them.

With the score tied at 3-all, Detroit staged a four-run rally in the eighth to eat the Browns.

While being held by police for stealing an automobile, a negro breaks jail escaping in a police car, at Quincy, Ill.

SportOgramS

By "The Observer"

Jack Johnson, former heavyweight champion of the world, who lost his title to Jess Willard in a bout at Havana, Cuba, has written a book in which he claims that the bout which cost him the title was a fake and that he "layed down" to big Jess.

Johnson was a fugitive from justice in the United States at the time, and claims that he was persuaded reinstatement as a good citizen if he would relinquish the title. Even in jail-in Leavenworth, which the ebony-hued person makes his home.

"I did not tell Mrs. Johnson that I was going to lose the fight until a few months before I entered the ring.——— had paid me my fight percentage before I left home. No one knew that the money was there and I employed four policemen to guard it. Nevertheless, although they did not know that it was because of the money, and with the understanding that they merely were to watch the premises,

"I marched Mrs. Johnson to sit at the ringside and watch the fight; that they was more money on me and until that money was paid to me I would not let the fight take the course agreed upon. Doing it by paying the money was due to the in complete count of fast receipts, which was under way when the fight started. Mrs. Johnson was to signal me when she had counted the additional money and I was to signal her so that she might leave the ringside.

"The fight was originally intended to end in the tenth round, but when that record arrived the money had not been paid. It was nearing the fifteenth round when the money was turned over to Mrs. Johnson. I had specified that it should be in $500 bills in order that the package should be small and the amount quickly counted. After examining it she gave me the signal that every thing was O. K. by a prearranged sign and she departed.

"In the 26th round I let the fight end as it did. I felt very sorry to have to relinquish the belt, but, I was not sorry that I had lost the championship, or, rather permitted another to attain it. On the contrary, I was happy because I hopefully looked forward to my speedy return to the United States, where I would be with my old friends and above all, with my mother.

Attention is called to the vast improvement of the Cincinnati Reds and the Boston Red Sox. The Reds buried in last place six weeks ago, have been pulled together by Manager Jack Hendricks and now are strongly entrenched in fifth position. Jack has overcome many obstacles, including discouraging criticism at home. Deprived of two great pitchers—Donahue and Mayer—he has developed a star left-hander in Jake May to work in rotation with Luque, Ring, Lucas and Nehf.

Lucas also has been "made" by Hendricks just at the right time. The loss of Ed Roush has been offset by the steady improvement of Allen, which has made possible the release of Christensen to Columbus. Hendricks is grooming Rukstorb, a young catcher, to replace the ailing Hargrave.

Carrigan is accomplishing a more difficult task. He has made numerous experiments until today the Red Sox are threatening to overhaul the St. Louis Browns and Cleveland Indians. Starting with what seemed hopeless material, Carrigan has produced a fine pitching staff, a fast infield and outfield and a fairly strong batting order.

In these days of long-distance batting and the "lively ball" the absence of .400 hitters is noteworthy in view of the fact that major league history discloses only 32 players who reached or surpassed that average. Six players turned the trick twice and three of them thrice.

Jesse Burkett averaged .422 in 1895, .410 in 1896 and .402 in 1899. Ty Cobb batted .420 in 1911 .410 in 1912 and .401 in 1922. Rogers Hornsby's marks were .401 in 1922, .424 in 1924 and .403 in the following year.

Ross Barnes, Chicago's second baseman in 1876, was the first National league player to average .400 his percentage being .403. Ed Delahanty, Charley Ferguson and Turner Jones with the Phillies, were in the .400 class. George Sisler reached .400 in 1922 and Walter Johnson enjoyed the charmed circle in 1925.

Tip O'Neill, who played briefly for Charley Comiskey's St. Louis Browns in 1887, established the American Association's record of .492, but that year bases on balls were scored on sale hits.

RUTH'S PITCHING EASY FOR ORIOLES

Baltimore, M.D., Aug. 13.—The Baltimore Orioles feathered their nest off the pitching of Babe Ruth, and came out on top by 8 to 7 in an exhibition game with the Yankees here yesterday. Ruth had slammed a home run to entertain some 7,000 fans, and in the ninth he shifted from first base to the pitcher's box, handing the Orioles four runs to win the contest. Miller and Cland had preceded the Babe on the slab, Guy Cantrell went the distance for Baltimore, and struck out ten batters.

DRAINAGE DEMANDS FROM GOVERNMENT

Winnipeg August 13.—With demands for drainage pouring in upon the government from all quarters indications are that the country districts prepare to force the government's hand this winter on a widespread drainage improvement scheme.

Since the election excitement has died down the Hon. W. R. Clubb, minister of public works, and other officials of the department have been besieged constantly by deputations from different districts seeking either new drainage work or the improvement of the present drainage scheme.

During the week-end there were representatives from Rockwood, from the Brokenhead valley and several other districts seeking a promise of drainage improvements before next spring.

This morning a big deputation from the municipality of Dufferin waited upon Mr. Clubb with a similar request.

This group included Reeve F. Armstrong, Dr. John Munn, newly elected member for Dufferin, Councillors David Stewart and John Murray and several others.

Rev. E. C. Pearce, of Cambridge, has been appointed first Bishop of Derby.

M'CARTHY HOPES TO WIN PENNANT

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 13.—Joe McCarthy, except manager of the Cubs, who are beating the National league flag race, is not claiming the championship.

"I'm not saying we will win the pennant," said Joe the other afternoon as he sat in the Cubs' dugout watching the Dodgers go through their batting drill. "I never have predicted we will win and I do not like to talk about the pennant at this time. Of course, we have a wonderful chance to win. If we haven't, what team has? I going to keep the boys fighting and hustling to win every game they start, taking each game as it comes along... If we win enough of them the pennant will take care of itself.- We're after ball games now.

"I think we have a pretty good team. There is not a bad actor among the team are a few veterans, are young fellows hustling to establish themselves as major league stars, and I must say they are making a good job of it. Scarcely among the team are a few veterans, just the right kind of players need ed to help out the younger ones. There's Charlie Grimm, for instance. He's a great help to the young infielders. He has done much to make out infield a steady one.

"Gabby Hartnett is one of the best catchers in the business. He's got a lot of ginger and when we are on the field every player is facing him, and his live-wire tactics keep the men their toes. He knows how to handle the pitchers and he also knows all that is to be known about the hitters on other teams.

"I have nothing but praise for our pitchers. When a relief pitcher is necessary I don't have to ask one fellow twice to get into the game. Every one is willing to pitch as a relief man. Carlson is the only pitcher who can't call upon for relief work. He is the kind of pitcher that needs unbroken rest between starts, but if I ever ask him to relieve another man I know he will respond as willingly as the others do. Charley out had no idea that he would get into Sunday's game. When I call upon him he was right on the job. He has more ability than most people think.

"I have a good team to manage and I have an able assistant in Jimmy Wilson. He knows what the game is was hurled alive.

Pantlike with Train's Record

McCarthy was remembering the result of practically every game his hustling Cubs have played, and without hesitating a moment he is able to recite their exact record against each of the seven other National League teams.

"WWe hold an edge on every team except the Cardinals," went on McCarthy. "They have won seven of the thirteen games we've played with them, but well win most of the remaining contests. Our best record has been made against the Dodgers. We have won thirteen out of fifteen from them, and we're not through with them yet."

Here McCarthy smiled. He did not say so, nil his smile gave one the impression that he would like to have his team play the Dodgers for the remainder of the season.

"That follow" resumed McCarthy, pointing to Elwood English, who was batting up with Charley Grimm infielder. He's just arriving now. Watch him next year. If he isn't one of the best shortstops in the major league a year from now I'll miss my guess.

The Dodgers concluded their batting practice at this stage of the interview, and the boss of the Cubs excused himself as he took his players on the field for their preliminary fielding workout. Hal Carlson was left on the bench.

"He's a real big league pitcher," said Hal, as McCarthy went on the field with his men.

GOODRICH PLANS LARGE ADDITION

Increased Business Makes Additional Space Necessary

Immediate steps are to be taken to erect a large addition to the present factory buildings of the B. F. Goodrich, Company of Kitchener, according to a statement made by T. H. Tomlinson, vice-president and general manager of the company. The approximate cost of the addition will be $150,000 or more. While Mr. Tomlinson did not give any definite date when operations will begin, he stated that building will commence as soon as plans and tenders are completed, so that the new structure will be ready for occupancy before cold weather sets in.

The contemplated addition, which is to be three stories high, is made necessary by a marked increase in demand for the company's products, mainly, Silvertown tires and Hipress Rubber footwear. It will be located between the boiler house and other buildings and will extend 150 feet from the east wall of the present factory toward King street. Its width will be approximately 125 feet.

"No definite space has been given as to the number of additional employes that will be required through the increased facilities," declared Mr. Tomlinson, "but it is a fact that operations of the company since January 1, of this year have made necessary over 50 per cent. more employes in the mills than there were a year ago. Future prospects of the company's business indicate that more employes will be needed as soon as the additional floor space is made available. At present the Canadian Goodrich Company employs from 1,900 people by its offices and plant in Kitchener."

The new building will displace the temporary structures which were erected in the past year to provide necessary space until a suitable and permanent addition would be built.

The fact that the Goodrich Company is expanding its Kitchener plant is further evidence of the confidence and faith held by business men in the soundness and future of Canada and the importance of Kitchener as a manufacturing and commercial centre.

Canadian Goodrich Company is part of a world-wide organization. In addition to the Kitchener plant, the company has large factories in England, France and Germany and is now planning the construction of a large unit in Los Angeles, California. Its head offices are at Akron, Ohio.

KNOCKED OFF BIKE

Port Hope, Aug. 12.—Norman Dean, Francis street west knocked from his bicycle on Walton street Thursday afternoon about five o'clock by a U.S. tourist car but escaped injury. The wheel was badly smashed, the car running over it. Dean was crossing from the north side to the south and apparently did not see the car approaching. The driver had little chance to avoid an accident but applied his brakes quickly so that when he struck the bicycle, he was not travelling fast.

ONE - EYED DRIVERS

Whitby, Ont., Aug. 13. — Motorists with only one headlight are warned to avoid Whitby. Highway Constable Reid said today that he is going to make a determined effort to end the menace from such drivers on the Kingston highway in this district. The "one-eyed" driver has long been recognized as a prolific source of accidents and every week has had its quota of offenders but the penalty has usually been light.

Police Magistrate Willis is considering inflicting the maximum fine for the offense. The observant motorist knows whether his lights are functioning properly or not. The careful motorist carries a spare bulb or two.

PETERBORO PEOPLE HURT

Peterboro, Aug. 13. — Three local people, Miss May Pollock, Stanley Willis, and Jessie Hill, are in Nichols Hospital as a result of a head-on collision occurring on the Provincial Highway about eight o'clock Thursday night. Donald Hill and Mrs. Stanley Willis were also injured, but were able to go home. Miss Pollock is the worst injured, having her leg badly broken and bruised, while the others are cut about the head and body.

All are members of the Knox Church Choir, and had been attending the annual choir picnic at Cobourg. Stanley Willis, driver of the car, attempted to take another automobile at a point between Fraserville and Springville, and failed to see a car coming in the opposite direction which was too late to swing back into his former position. The impact was so hard that the two cars locked together, smashing both the machines beyond repair. The front seat of the Willis automobile was completely broken off.

SAILOR INJURED

Kingston, Aug. 13. — Peter Smith, a member of the crew of the steamer City City of Kingston of the Canada Steamship Lines, was admitted to the Kingston General Hospital on Thursday on the arrival of his vessel in the city suffering from painful and more or less serious injuries to his back.

The injuries were sustained on the trip from Toronto to Kingston when the unfortunate man slipped and fell down the ladder leading to the foc'sasle of the steamer, word being sent on to Kingston by wireless telegraphy so that an ambulance was awaiting the arrival of the vessel and there was the least possible delay in conveying him to the hospital.

After eight years of idleness, Toronto's palatial new Union Station has public. Above is shown the imposing front of the big structure.

MONKEY ACCOMPANIES AVIATOR ON JOURNEY

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 10. — When Paul S. Redfern, Savannah, Ga., aviator, sets out from Brunswick, Ga., in an attempt to reach Rio de Janiero in a non stop flight, he will have as his companion one of the jungle wards an Amazon flying monkey, if presents plans materialize.

The monkey just returned from a 4,000 mile air voyage with the National Reliability tour as official mascot. It may prove of use should the plane be forced down in jungles, George Lowe, Redfern's Brunswick representative and manager, believes.

Lowe is negotiating to borrow the monkey for the long flight, which will start soon.

Redfern is spending most of his time in the Stinson Airplane factory superintending the building of the plane, which will be used for the flight. The gas tank will hold 480 gallons of fuel.

CHATHAM SURE JINX FOR HIM

Any Town By That Name Bad Medicine For Wynne

Chatham, Aug. 11.—The name of Chatham, while a lucky one for most people, seems to prove unlucky for Robert Wynne, of Detroit. Years ago, when he was a student in Chatham, Ont., a dramatic explosion nearly cost him his life. Last Christmas, while motoring in Missouri, he entered a place called Chatham and met with a serious automobile accident, which nearly claimed his life.

As he was passing through this city on his way to Niagara Falls with his wife, the latter asked him if the name of Chatham meant anything to him. His light-hearted reply was that it certainly did, but he thought the jinx was killed. After successfully passing over the sirets, however, and while he was proceeding along the highway about a mile east of Chatham, he met with an automobile accident in which both he and his wife had narrow escapes.

The car ahead of his, driven by John McGregor, of this city, suddenly turned left at a crossroads and the two machines came together and headed into the ditch. All of the occupants of the cars were cut and bruised, but not seriously. The cars were badly wrecked.

BIG GATHERING OF BUSINESS MEN IN VANCOUVER

Second Annual Convention Of Canadian Chamber Of Commerce

Vancouver, B.C., Aug. 12.—One of the most influential gatherings of business men ever held in Canada will be the second annual convention of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce in Vancouver from Sept. 9 to 14. From all over Canada leaders men will come to discuss the fundamental problems of Canada's development and the work for the newly-formed Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

Trade, tariffs, imports and foreign trade; development of provincial trade developments of national resources and immigration—these are the paramount topics of the convention.

The Chamber's motto of further the Canadian unity is well considered in the activities of the convention. Delegates from the Maritimes, Eastern Canada will make a proper cross-Can ada tour travelling west by the Canadian Pacific and returning by the Canadian National. At the chief Canadian centres the delegates will meet the local boards of trade and chambers. All told more than 200 representatives of Canada's agriculture, industry, commerce, finance and transportation will be in attendance. Winnipeg, Brandon, Moose Jaw, Regina, Saskatoon, Edmonton and Calgary are some of the western centres where representatives will meet Eastern Canada's business men.

Outstanding leaders in Canada's economic activities such as S. B. Gundy, President of Toronto; Colonel J. W. Mitchell, of Toronto; William Birks and A. O. Dawson of Montreal; L. J. Rhine of Saint John; J. A. Paul son of Quebec; R. G. Perse of Winnipeg; C. G. Smith of Calgary and A. H. Ross of Vancouver, are among the chairmen in charge of the convention sessions.

The Canadian Chamber of Commerce was conceived at Winnipeg in 1925 and was finally organized at Saint John last year.

The itinerary of the cross-Canada tour is to be made of interest as the visit of representative business leaders to the many different centres of Canada will have a stimulating effect on inter-Dominion trade. After leaving Montreal Aug. 30, it is as follows:

Toronto 7.55 a.m., Aug. 31; Port Mulgrave 4.30 p.m., Aug. 31; Sault Ste. Marie 12 a.m., Sept. 1; Port William 7.30 a.m., Sept. 2; Kenora 8.40 a.m., Sept. 3; Winnipeg 1 p.m. Sept. 3; Reston 10 a.m. Sept. 5; Moose Jaw 8.15 p.m., Sept. 5; Calgary 8 a.m., Sept. 6; Banff 5 a.m. Sept. 7; Lake of Louise, 9.45 a.m. Sept 8; Field B.C., 4 p.m., Sept. 8; Shuswap B.C. 8 a.m. Sept. 10; Vancouver 8.30 p.m. Sept. 11.

MYSTERY PLANE ONLY A DRAWING

Bellanca No. 31 Ready To Build Super-Air Machine

New York, August 10.—G. M. Bellanca, designer of the monoplane Columbia which Chamberlain flew to Germany and with which the flier broke two world's records this year," denied today at his Staten Island factory that he was at work on a "mystery plane" to be powered by a single motor with a wing-spread of more than eighty feet and of cruising radius of 5,000 miles, which would be ready for the air by the first week in October.

"I suppose some sport has referred," Mr. Bellanca said, "to a ship I have designed for long flight, possibly an attempt at the distance record. This project has not gone beyond the stage of drawings yet."

Following the flight of the Columbia to Germany, Mr. Bellanca announced with other plans a project for a monoplane similar in designe to the Columbia, but powered by a 600-horsepower Pratt and Whitney engine instead of the Wright Whirlwind. The ship, according to estimates, ought to have a cruising radius of 8,000 miles. It would be built to carry a load of 1,000 gallons of gasoline, besides hundreds of pounds of freight. At that time Mr Bellanca said that he would not make public the name of the person or group of persons for whom he was to build the ship nor its proposed destination and today he smilingly refused the safe! information.

"I am now at work getting my factory in shape for the production of ten planes," he said, "the first of which will be ready for delivery late in the fall. I also contemplate building a plane similar to my monoplane that broke the endurance record last April to bring the record back to America again."

A week ago the Junkers monoplane Europe broke the Bellanca's endurance record by a little more than an hour. Queen, the Duke and Duchess of York, Princess Mary and Viscount Lascelles.

SAYS OUTLOOK IS ENCOURAGING ON MAN. CROPS

Nothing To Cause Alarm In Growing Situation, Says Cora Hind

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 11.—There is nothing in the growing crop situation to cause alarm. Neither frost, rust, nor saw fly have done any damage, to speak of. This is the information published today by a local paper from Cora Hind, the crop expert, now in southern Manitoba and Saskatchewan she is covering two or three hundred miles daily examining in fields minutely. In her dispatch this paper from Arcola, Sask., she says:

"Made 160 miles Sunday working north from Estevan to Stoughton; then on the south side of track through Heward to Creelman, back from Creelman four miles and east and south into Stroughton, then north and east into Carnduff, south to Arcola, ten miles, east between four and five and one-half again into Arcola day covered the whole round of possible crop conditions, except of the being dry enough to cut. For the first fifteen miles out of Estevan on the route followed crops were poor with evidence of soil damage, then they began to improve and it rolls north and east and south to the finest heavy stand of the morning.

"This field was in self, dough with no rust on stems, fine six-rowed but with few sawfly. Ten miles south of Stroughton were some heavy fields of Durum wheat, fine stands, long, well-formed heads, but wheat had not yet blossomed, a few stems of sawfly, but not many.

"Six miles west of Stoughton and five south of Heward was the first trace of frost so far seen. Potatoes and corn both badly nipped, even a very small patch. But wheat on slightly higher land a few rods away show no trace of it. The finest crop good bet late with a good deal of sawfly and little or no signs of rust. Oats and barley not fully headed and some fields of rye cut covered general conditions right into Creelman rather surprised to find some of the people there very apprehensive of rust. One man claimed that one man a few miles south and one four miles north had cut their wheat because it was badly rusted. This farm was apparently not on the route from the south over which we had driven and though we drove the four miles north as directed, the other fields did not materialize either. Possibly we did not get the right direction.

"It is a little difficult to understand why people are so much alarmed about the rust as there is very little on the sheath straw and practically none on the straw under the sheath."

PREVENT CRIME NOT PUNISH IT

New York, Aug. 11.—Europe is dealing with crime through prevention rather than punishment, Dr. Louis N. Robinson, secretary of the sub-committee on penal laws and methods of conviction of the national crime commission, reported today after a study of penal institutions in England, Belgium Holland and Germany.

"While we Americans seem to think that crime can be held in check by punishing severely an insignificant fraction of our criminals," he wrote in his preliminary report to the sub-committee, "Europeans believe that it is far more effective to impose reasonably mild penalties on a large proportion of those who offend."

Europeans rely upon their police rather than their prisons to keep down crime, Dr. Robinson found. Pointing to a recent report showing that "in two of the leading cities of Missouri" only three per cent. of persons against whom information concerning major felonies was laid before the police, were punished, he declared, that allow ing 97 per cent. of our offenders to go scot free "would scarcely appeal to a European as an example of our boast efficiency."

SEARCH PARTY OUT FOR MISSING MEN

Again Sharing with Canada the Savings of Greater Production

IN the year of Confederation the founders of this institution were supplying Canada and Canadians with transportation. And ever since, the paramount purpose of this organization has been to provide better transportation at lower costs.

Year by year public confidence in its aims and policies has shown a steady increase. Year by year the number of General Motors cars has increased . . . until 1927 has been the greatest year of all with sales during the past six months exceeding by 70% those of the corresponding period last year.

The constant endeavor of General Motors has always been to improve the quality and value of its products. To that end are used all the resources of the great General Motors Corporation . . . the matchless facilities of General Motors Research Laboratory and of the great General Motors International Proving Grounds. These discoveries and developments have been enhanced by the priceless experience of General Motors in building cars of every type. And combined purchasing power has made possible undreamed of economies.

Due to the vastly increased demand for General Motors cars, an extensive program of expansion has been for months, and still is, in progress at the Oshawa Plant. This includes a new stamping plant, and additions to the machine shops, the body building, radiator and assembly plants.

As a result of increased volume production in larger and more efficient plants, economies in manufacture have been effected and so, in keeping with its policy of sharing with Canada the savings of success, General Motors again announces price reductions on the following General Motors cars . . .

GOOD ICE CREAM MAKES AN IDEAL SUMMER FOOD

Is Nourishing Food Relished By Young And Old

Those well known dog days are with us once again, and among other problems they present to the housewife is the problem of finding something in the food line that the family will really enjoy.

Suitable hot weather foods are to many people a real problem, but as a matter of fact, there is one food which above all others satisfies every member of the family in the warm weather and that one is good ice cream.

Pure ice cream made of good rich cream and true fruit flavors, is really one of the most nourishing of foods, and one which the children especially are always ready for. Then again the housewife is saved hours over a hot stove, which she would otherwise spend perhaps in the preparation of a dessert which half the family may reject when it is ready for them.

And Belleville made ice cream—some of it at least—is away above the average in purity. The ideal combination of highest quality ice cream made of pure cream and true fruit flavors, and selling at a price that is lower than inferior grades is found in the product of Moores, in the Anglo-American Block. For several years Moores Ice Cream has been building up an enviable reputation for purity and quality, comparing with the best obtainable anywhere.

Under the circumstances, it may appear surprising that Moores can sell ice cream at a lower price than others for bricks of all flavors may be had at twenty-five cents. But the volume sold makes this low price possible.

Just try a brick or two of Moores Ice Cream for dessert tomorrow. You'll be back at the store for more before very long, and you'll agree that it's the ideal summer dessert.

A FEW TIMELY WARM WEATHER TIPS FOR YOU

These May Help You Ward Off "Old Sol's" Attack

Another hot weather suggestion that you'll find beneficial. No longer are wise women spending long hot hours over a stove making their pies, cakes cookies, doughnuts, and other pastry. It simply isn't done any more especially in this hot summer weather What are they doing? They're wisely buying Modern Bakeries, employing expert cooks, produce for them a variety of really delicious pastry that fills every need. Nor is Belleville behind her sister cities in the matter of up-to-date bake shops for in Tarlington's may be found one to compare favorably with the rest. An honest effort on the part of the management to produce highest quality pastry using only the purest of ingredients and made and sold in spick and span surroundings, has resulted in an extraordinary reputation being built up by this firm as makers of the best doughnuts, pies cakes, etc. in the city.

Belleville is fortunate in having such progressive up to the minute stores as Tarlington and such a firm it especially appreciated in the summer months.

NEW ELECTRIC FIRM DOES EXPERT WORK

Next time you have a wiring job in your house, store, or service station or anything electrical, get in touch with W. H. Oliphant at 29 Bridge street east and you'll be assured of a good job by Belleville's newest Electrical Wiring firm.

Oliphant's since their establishment here a very few months ago, have acquired a reputation for thorough and expert wiring work, and have lately been extending their activities outside of the city. Wiring work and the installation of some of the famous McClary's Electric Ranges is being done in Pontoro and Trenton and other surrounding towns.

As well as McClary Ranges, Oliphants are local agents for the Mary Washer, the Apex Vacuum and Fryidaire Electric Refrigerator. A complete line of high-grade fixtures is carried as well, by the Bridge Street store.

PARENTS SHOULD CLOSELY WATCH CHILD'S VISION

Before School Opens Is Time To Have Eyes Examined

Many parents who consider no sacrifice too great to make in order that their children may have a good education, forget the child's imperative need of good eyesight.

Now is the time when children with weak eyes or defective vision should have their eyes examined. School starts next month and for hours every day and often under artificial light during the evenings, they will have to pore over their studies.

The child with defective vision is under a severe handicap in school work. The constant strain on the eyes is particularly telling and makes the child nervous and irritable.

Even a slight weakness of the eyes develops under strain into something far more serious. Such children need glasses. You may not like the idea but consider the child's future.

If cared for in time defects in child rens eyes may be frequently be overcome by wearing proteclve or rest glasses during their school days.

If your child was backward at school last year how consolidate of frequent headaches, or smarting or stinging sensations in the eyes, the time to have an eye examination made is now before school opens.

Ward's, Eyesight Specialists, in their new location at 283 Front street can readily determine the condition of your child's sight and advise you accordingly.

NEW CLEANING RATES ARE APPRECIATED

About six months ago Sprague's Local Cleaners and Dyers, lowered the Dry Cleaning rates in this city. They decided that if patrons realized that they appreciated the reduced rate it would be continued indefinitely.

Well, that was six months ago, and Spragues are still cleaning ladies and gents suits and coats for the same low rate of just $1.00. Therefore you can draw your own conclusion. The low rate has proven immensely popular and repeat orders time and again show the absolute satisfaction of patrons with the quality of the work done.

So you can save money at Sprague's satisfied that you will get your money's worth in cleaning that is up-to-the mark in every way. A phone call to 383 will bring a driver to your door

BAD WEATHER FORCES TWO JUNKER PLANES TO QUIT

Wet Pavements Caused Series Of Bad Motor Accidents Over Week End---No Fatalities Here

SKIDDED ON WET ROAD IN TRYING TO PASS A CAR

'Automobile Turned Over In Ditch Two Miles From Picton

BADLY WRECKED

James Morey Of Belleville Lying Seriously Hurt In The Hospital

James Morey, an employee of the Canadian National Railway residing at 421 Bleecker Avenue, is lying in the Belleville General Hospital with serious internal injuries and a compound fracture of the right hip following a motor accident on the highway five miles from Picton last evening at eight o'clock when the car which he was driving turned over on the slippery road. Morey's two companions Maurice McMahon, an Inspector at the plant of the American Optical, 11 Strachan Street, and Miss L. Ryan, of Wellington sustained minor hurts and suffered from shock but were able to be taken to their homes following the accident.

Morey was driving a new car purchased only on Saturday. On a road made slippery by the recent showers, he attempted to pass another car and his automobile skidded, rolling over on the left side of the road. The occupants managed to crawl out from beneath the wrecked car but Morey complained of severe pains. Dr. Walmsley of Picton was immediately called and ordered his removed to the Belleville hospital. The O.N.R. ambulance was rushed to the scene, and the victim brought back. An operation was performed during the night and Morey was reported to be resting much easier this morning.

The accident occurred at what is known as Waring's corner and the other two occupants of the car were taken into the home of Mr. L. Hager who was where they had their injuries treated by Dr. Walmsley.

The top of the car was crushed and also hinged but it is to be brought to a Belleville garage for repairs.

LARGE FIELD IN PACIFIC DERBY

$35,000 In Prizes For Air Pilots In Latest Classic

Oakland, Calif., Aug. 15.—The first long distance aerial derby, over the trans-Oceanic course twenty-four hours real miles in the Pacific will get under way at noon tomorrow when nine planes will swing into airways from Oakland, Main Island in Hawaiian group.

Seventeen men and one woman, Miss Mildred Doran, 24 year old Oakland school teacher, will travel towards Wheelerdale Field on Honolulu for the $25,000 first, prize and $10,000 second award, the gifts of James Dole of Hawaii.

Planes will carry nine ton of gasoline, averaging ten an hour to each plane. They will dash down the runway permitting only one plane to get into the air at a time. The difference between the first starter and last was originally figured at sixteen minutes, but a post time announced it was estimated that at least ten minutes would elapse between take offs.

Gets The Jump

Senia Ancion, Canton, Aug. 15.—Frank Clark, Dole flight pilot, rumored in various quarters to have made a premature hop to Hawaii, came here shortly after six o'clock last night from Oakland. When the plane took wing from Oakland, it immediately soared out to sea. Clark's rather evasive answers on being questioned prior to the take off gave rise to the belief in several quarters that he had jumped the gun on his fellow Dole prize bidders and had set out for Honolulu.

GERMAN PLANES FORCED DOWN BY STORMS, FOG AND ENGINE TROUBLE

Both Junker Airships Returned To Their Base At Breman

Dessau, Germany, Aug. 15.—German trans-Atlantic plane Bremen returned here this afternoon, landing at 4.30 o'clock. Bremen came down safely and unscathed at Dessau airdrome. Pilots stated that they were compelled to return because of bad weather.

Germany's first bid for trans-Atlantic aerial honors had failed. The special monoplane Bremen, which left Dessau last night returned to the airdrome this afternoon, forced back by stormy conditions over the Atlantic. Her sister ship, Europa, the second in aerial argosy of Junker Planes, had already landed, being forced to turn about by engine trouble and dense fog over the North Sea. The Europa in landing at Bremen last night, was badly damaged, but Herman Koehl and Friedrich Loose brought their ship Bremen down unharmed at Dessau this afternoon. After examination of the Europa, experts said it was so badly damaged to preclude all hope of continuing the trans-Atlantic flight. They expressed the opinion that it would take week, to repair the machine.

Synopsis From New York

New York, Aug. 15.—General review felt by civil and military officials and members of German societies here because the Junkers plane Bremen had been forced to return to Dessau. Officials at Mitchell Field, Long Island where it had been expected the plane would land tomorrow, suspended preparations for the arrival but said the field would be ready in the event of another attempt.

May Be Returning

London, Aug. 15.—A report indicating that the German trans-Atlantic plane "Bremen" might have turned back from her ocean flight was received at the Air Ministry shortly afternoon

TWO METHODS

There were demonstrations of sympathy for Sacco and Vanzetti, the convicted Boston anarchists, in London and Chicago the other day, and it is a conspicuous lesson in national psychology to compare the scenes.

The Chicago mob was led by a good girl of 18 and those whom the reporter calls "the more rumbustrous" of her following sang the "Internationale," the marching song of the "Reds" Then the police charged. Police swords rained down on the coats that had held the sword and gun; bombs were thrown into the now panic-stricken ranks of the marchers. The officers used clubs also, and one roller of steel was fired, apparently from the hands of the police. Men and women were trampled, windows shattered, doors broken down, automobiles damaged, and forty-one persons arrested.

In London ten thousand persons gathered in Hyde Park, heard numerous speeches from fiery individuals, and then, conveyed by police mounted and on foot, marched to the United States embassy where they were dispersed. The police, it is noted by the reporter, had no clubs, no revolvers were discharged nor tear bombs thrown. The mounted men rode their horse at a canter into the crowd, "which retired shouting in the various streets as the frightened horses of them and ordered them to 'come along'." There is no record of that any arrests were made and one was injured seriously in the mob.

The demonstrators, we are told, were "cheerful but earnest," and "for the most part the thousands of people apparently were not looking for trouble."

They were loyal and amiable citizens out for a good time and willing to share in any excitement which might be provided. Furthermore they did not leave at home their sense of humor. After the blatherskite, A. J. Cook, had harangued the crowd at Hyde Park and had declared, in the issue of an impeachable rate, that "we shall reply and we shall repay," if the United States "kills them two men," Cook started to sing "The Red Flag." "One section of the crowd joined him," we read, "in another section started the British National Anthem and for a time the British Anthem and the Communist battle song were being lustily voiced simultaneously."

The incident is so perfect it is better without comment.

EMPIRE TRADE

Trade figures for the last fiscal year show the steady expansion of Canada's trade with Britain. In 1896, the year before the Canadian preferential tariff was introduced, the total trade between the two countries amounted to $65,541,966. In the last fiscal year it was $618,571,371. The expansion has been impressive, and no doubt it is to be attributed in part to the preferential tariff—but not, probably, so much so as is claimed in some quarters.

Our imports from Britain were $22,-$28,506 in 1896, and $103,988,192 in the last fiscal year—an increase of about 460 per cent. But in 1896 our exports to Britain amounted in value to only 717,441, while last year they had grown to $452,923,305 an increase of 833 per cent. It is not to be supposed that our preferential tariff in favor of British products could result in a greater stimulus to our export trade than to our import trade with the mother country.

Whatever effect the preferential tariff may have had on the growth trade, the great increase in our export trade has been due to natural causes far more than to any artificial cause, and the other cause has been the Great Canada's needed, increasing production of the foodstuffs that British needs coupled with the elimination of Russia as a source of supply. This fact is indicated by the falling off in our exports to Britain last year. In the fiscal year 1921 British, South, Canadian products to the value of $608,-227,850, while in the fiscal year 1922 the total value of our exports to Britain were $435,923,105 — a decrease of $172,904,000. The decrease will probably due to the shrinking in the purchasing power of the British people caused by the long coal strike and the general strike last year.

CANADIAN HOMES

"Providin' a home" in Canada has become something more than a house some something more—in fact the average home of today boasts of more conveniences, more luxuriant furnishing and more modern equipment than the homes in the smaller cities and towns of a score of years ago.

A bungalow or a "parlor bedroom and bath" meant one thing with the last generation but means quite another with the present. That and in keeping more for contrast than comparison.

How dazzled would our ancestors be upon entering a middle-class home of today with over-stuffed furniture, rugs, tasteful mural furnishings, piano and phonographs, perhaps a radio, fine table service, relatively large libraries and with a garage and automobile in the back-yard. Surely not without just cause that for the moment folks of today to be dazzled by the luxuriance of a millionaire's mansion or a king's palace.

There seems little foundation for the oft-repeated lamentation that the Canadian home is losing its attraction. On the other hand there are very today who can see where homes of the nineties or the early twentieth century possessed any attraction other than as the traditional place to hang one's hat, but then the home-detractions have undoubtedly progressed step by step with the home-attractions.

Why shouldn't the Canadian people be the most contented the most peaceful, the most ambitious and the most enlightened people in the world with such home surroundings?

SUCCESS

Are you successful? Are you a "go-getter?"

These two questions do you mean one and the same thing. The writer of books on "How to Succeed" think they do; but they don't.

It is possible for a "go-getter" to be successful. It is also possible to be successful without being a "go-getter."

The "go-getter" is the individual who starts out to make as much money as he can, or to climb as high as he can. The Roman Emperor Maximin was a "go-getter" in his youth he was a Thracian shepherd; but being ambitious and stout sight feet tall he joined the army and secured rapid promotion. He one idea was to get ahead. And he was not particular as to the means he employed to secure the end. Emperor Alexander Severus, and repaid him by having Alexander put to death in Maximin's own tent. Maximin was then acclaimed emperor. The "go-getter" had succeeded. But he was not a success. After three bloody years he was assassinated by his own army.

While Maximin was having his ups and downs, there were a few million Romans not mentioned by Gibbon who were marrying and raising families and educating their children and keeping their promises and trying to be decent, self-respecting citizens. In the opinion of Maximin and the makers of books on "Success," they were probably no-account failures But in the long history of the human race they were the successes. Maximin and his like the failures.

THE TRUTH

Friend, though thy soul should burn thee, yet be still.
Thoughts were not made for strife nor tongues for swords,
He that sees clear is genlest of his words,
And that's the truth that hath the heart to kill.
The whole world's thought shall not one truth fulfil.
Dull in our age, and passionate in youth,
No mind of man hath found the perfect truth,
Nor shalt thou find it; therefore, friend be still.

Watch and be still, not harken to the fool,
The babbler of consistency and rule;
Wisest is he who, never quite secure,
Changes his thoughts for better day by day.
Tomorrow some new light will shine, be sure,
And thou shalt see thy thought another way.—Archibald Lampman.

OTHER MEN'S THOUGHTS

On the night of July 29 an aged woman was struck down by an automobile on a Hamilton street and so seriously injured that she died a week later At the coroner's inquest on Wednesday evening there was evidence sufficient to warrant the jury in finding that the driver of the automobile was intoxicated when the fatal accident took place In fact the driver is now serving a jail sentence for driving a car while intoxicated Probably he will not have to face a graver charge.

If road abusers should be enforced in any case, is in the case of a person who drives a motor car Such a person incurs a very large risk when he undertakes to drive after drinking He may be confident of his ability to "carry his liquor" without showing any effects from it, but he is liable to be mistaken, and a mistake of that sort is not unlikely to be extremely serious for him. Even if he does not risk his own life, he exposes the lives of others to danger, and in the event of such a terrible result as the death of Mrs. March he may earn for himself a long term of imprisonment.

Those who have taken a drink or two are not reliable judges of their competence to drive a car safely. How much wiser to be on the safe side and quit out the house!—Hamilton Herald.

VATICAN'S IDEA OF EDUCATIONAL MOTION PICTURE

Rom, Aug. 11.—A warning to Europeans to defend themselves against the influence of educational moving pictures from the United States has been sounded by an editorial in the Osservatore Romano, official organ of the Vatican.

The editorial says that these pictures are spreading ideas constituting a "deadly poison" capable of having a "truly deleterious effect upon European civilization.

"Watch out for these so-called educational films by which the United States presumes NOT only to sense but to instruct us," the editorial "America is a very great country when uncontrolled dollar superiority has made it thing it possesses also spiritual superiority. Certain American movies furnished with exceptional gifts of practicality, which consider force as a philosophy and aphorisms of history as criticisms of pure reason, can be adaptable to certain tooschematic mentalities, but for our part we find them very defective.

"Americans have built monstrous cities of iron and store stories which scrape the skies, but when America was yet unknown we built our cathedrals. This old Europe, whose soil is made of the glorious remains of ten civilizations, can easily renounce its past to accept blindly an improvised civilization beyond the sea."

So she has mastered her shyness and is tempting him with a few candies. The little Chief is nothing loath to be tempted and meets her more than halfway. This quaint little incident occurred during the great Indian Day Celebrations at the Banff Springs Hotel recently and was duly registered by a C.P.R. photographer.

FURNITURE REFLECTS NEW STYLES
Ensemble Effect Now Sought In All Rooms—Accessories Harmonize

Once again we approach the season of the year when fashion, so far as our wardrobe is concerned, is at the crossroads. And while fashion is making up her mind which road she will take, we are free to consider the many things that have nothing to do with her whimsicalities.

Take the house, like its mistress, must have a wardrobe, and there are points of resemblance between the two. There are fashions in home furnishments as in coats and dresses, and the accessories of the house wardrobe change as do those of the costume.

There is the same fine relation between furniture and the setting things of the room that there is between the costume and the accessories of apparel, and handbag that complete is and make it a costume.

"Don't overdress" is the cry of our apparel, in the past century they have had an aim to be arranged in their wardrobe accessories, which will arouse no controversy, for it is obvious. But there still remains one thing that neither time nor effort are able to change —the lack of harmony in the atmosphere of many houses—in name only are they "homes." Fine furniture and beautiful pictures cannot make them livable, if they are not livable, they are not lovable.

Since it is the time of the year when the provident housewife casts critical eyes over her rooms, with the very excellent idea of replacing worn things or "sprucing something up," one wonders if it is sale time in the shops—it behooves us to consider present day fashions for the home wardrobe. And this with a view to creating the desired atmosphere of comfort, ease and livableharm. How best can this be accomplished—that is the question.

Nearly every different housekeeper has a preference for some special type of furniture, for certain woods, for certain colors in drapes and curtains. But the will do well to avoid stiffness and the "new" appearance that results from too much matching.

Consider the ensemble of present day clothes fashions. Its parts are harmonious, but they do not match with exactness, and the result is much better than this is so. It is the same in the home furnishings. The well furnished room is an ensemble like the costume it is composed of ensembles within ensembles, all together resulting in perfection. Accessories may be subordinate to fundamentals, to a certain extent, but they do not lose their identity nor even in the smallest detail. Contrasts are often very fine, but, many times, innovative, that hidden beauties are revealed and sameness or monotony be eliminated.

In the dining and breakfast rooms and in bedrooms as well, we find matching pieces. Table, chairs, server, buffet or bed, sofa, chiffonier, dressing and night table and chairs are really major ensembles.

Against them, as a background, the lesser units build up the room to which they become. Rugs, curtains, drapes and small bits of decoration are chosen in relation to the one and the other, and all with the furniture.

In what we may discover in the latter room they may be ensemble—a davenport, wing chair, and a thing their, oftentimes, they may be a little easy chair with a matching foot stool, or there may be a love seat and a chair. Each room is an ensemble, all these groups may be used in the same room if it is large enough and fit nicely into the general scheme. Such small pieces as the background and other pieces both supplement and complete.

With these pieces chosen, at least a start has been made. Other remain the matter of tables—different sizes and small the latter of the "wandering" type that can be moved to suit one's convenience. There are the lamps and the floor coverings and the fireplace accessories and these are bagatelles are curtains and potteries to consider. There is the mantelpiece to dress and if the walls demand them, pictures if so chosen and correctly hung.

Incidentally, many of the walls of modern homes are so decorative, in the finish that has been used, that pictures "run out of place." A tapestry, perhaps, but not always that, if the room is not to look fussed up. There is both satisfaction and difference between the room that is livable and the room that is over-crowded—spaciousness, or at appearance of it, is as necessary as the lived-in-look that does not exist, if the room has a bare look—one sees it in many modern rooms.

An easy chair with footstool and side table—book-laden—and a lamp, are just right for the occupant of the chair that is a homey sort of ensemble and toward it the visitor gravitates naturally.

Study the value of lamps in relation to the room—they be when dark corners, they invite leisury chairs and book, they are supremely decorative. Study the value of mirrors—they increase space and open up vistas of charm in dull corners—study them!

The modern idea of the casement window, which swings either in or out—the former greatly to be preferred—is delightful. It seems to accept the fact that we are living in the open-air and should be treated as though this were the case.

It leads the charming ideas in curtaining—draw cords reveal the opening in its entirety, and if there is panelling above the window, over-drapes and valances are unnecessary. Indeed, if the rods are chosen to harmonize with the walls, there is no need of curtains other than the ones that open —there is nothing lovlier for this Bir-

VISITING SOLOIST

Miss Stanley of Stirling contributed two vocal numbers at the United Services in Bellevue and Adam St. Churches yesterday. She sang at John St. in the morning and render ed an especially lovely number at Bellevue in the evening. Miss Valere Wrightmyer acted as accompanist. The Rev. E. S. Wight preached at both Churches as Mr. Ramsay is on his holidays.

ANOTHER MONSTER

Percy Pitney, a local postman, who has been attracting considerable attention lately, owing to his luck in landing big fishes, added to his laurels on Saturday when he landed another monster beauty which tipped the scales at exactly 35 pounds. Mr. Pitney was in company with Robert Andrews, another employee of the Post Office when the catch was made. The fish put up a great fight before being landed. The two were trolling in Moscuito Bay on Saturday after noon when the fish took the spoon with tremendous force and it required over half an hour before he finally gave way to his captors.

BLAZE EXTINGUISHED

The fire department were called out on Saturday evening at eleven o'clock to extinguish a slight blaze that had originated in some straw beneath the grating in front of the N. Allen coal office. A hasty call was made, the burning material pulled out and the excitement was over.

Albert Milton, a young lad 16 years of age, employed by the Wexler Construction Company, escaped by a miracle the new coal chute at the Canadian National yards, was taken to the hospital in the police ambulance on Saturday afternoon when he was injured on the knee while turning over a heavy plate. He was said to be resting much easier when The Intelligencer called this afternoon. It is expected that the new chute will be ready for operation within two months. The contractors are rapidly cleaned up with their work and already the scaffolding is being torn down. Mr. Foster Campbell is also installing the electric apparatus and the elevator. By the new system the large engine to be re-used in five minutes and no charge will be made between Montreal and Toronto.

Police Court

John McCutcheon of Toronto, charged with driving an automobile while in an intoxicated condition was again remanded in the local police court this morning. His case will come up in a week.

Yakob Lesarick, charged with stealing two fishing rods from R. E. Smith, Shannonville, pleaded not guilty to the charge and his case was held over until Tuesday.

F. L. Bryces, charged with failing to return to the scene of an accident was remanded for a week by Magistrate Mikel.

David Wilson on a charge of vagrancy was sentenced to six months in jail by the magistrate this morning.

LARGE LUNGE

Mr. Tiney Gilbert of the John Lewis Hardware, Limited is to-day proudly exhibiting a twenty-seven pound lunge which he caught early this morning in the Bay of Quinte, near the Belleville Cemetery. The "catch" was on display in the Lewis Hardware window early this afternoon and was the object of much interest. Mr. Gilbert is a member of the Belleville Rod and Gun Club and is one of the most enthusiastic fishermen in the district. He has been fishing for the past twenty years and has caught many large fish, but never one to equal the present specimen. Mr. Gilbert was using a minnow for bait when he landed the lunge.

QUEBEC ROADS MUCH IMPROVED

Quebec, Que., Aug. 15.—(By Canadian Press)—"The province of Quebec has lifted itself to nobility" "It's an old proverb, heads through the mountains sections of the Province of Quebec have been improved to such an extent of late that farmers who previously gained a healthy income by hauling autos over impassable patches of highway are now deprived of this source of extra revenue. In order to make the best of a bad bargain, some of the ruralites are to a certain degree making good their loss by getting jobs on the government road-making gangs. But many of them have only hard words for the Hon. J. L. Perron, father of Quebec's good roads.

In the good old days a motorist who became bogged on the highway between Montreal and Ste. Agathe, one of the most popular of the Laurentian highways, had no recourse but to call in a farmer and his team of dobbins. The farmer was always on hand, will ing to open for business. He always had two dollars for a job which seldom took more than five minutes of his time. Today the bad spots have vanished, graded away into oblivion, and the last word on any slow pleasure jaunt, former tarriers, out Ste. Adele and Ste. Agathe, are now crowded points —to such an extent that the Province of Quebec is now in receipt of a handsome revenue from the gasoline tax.

But they don't bowl along at too high a rate of speed. The department of roads takes care of that. Furious drivers are accorded scant considera tion, when the department of roads and its minister are jealous of their beautiful new highways upon which so much money has been expended and are determined that they are not going to be torn to bits for the amusement of the mile-a-minute fiends.

To this end Mr. Perron is cancelling auto licenses right and left. No 219 fine and warning on the provincial roads. Over 219 motorists have been deprived of the right to sit behind the steering-wheel during a single period of twenty-four hours.

"Drive slow, or don't drive at all!" is the ultimatum issued to the motorist by the "good roads" minister who is the founder of old French Canada.

Besides the war against the speeder is not primarily humanitarian in its object, the general public appreciates its benefits and the Minister of Roads has gained greatly in popularity since its inception.

The roads himself inexorably sets a good example when he conducts an inaugural four mile trip over a length way. He car, heading a string of others which carry government officials, newspapermen and such like dignitaries, proceeds at a stately rate of 15 miles an hour.

"Is this a funeral march?"—What's holding up the procession ahead?"—are words not infrequently heard unbended. The minister is out to demonstrate to drivers the tender treatment which his roads require.

The warmer the weather the more one appreciates a vacuum bottle that keeps things properly. Right now Don Bleecker is selling them at an unusually low price. He has the well-known "Lark" Vacuum Bottle on display and clearing out present supply at the rid iculously low price of forty-five cents each. Here is a real opportunity to get a good vacuum bottle at a low price.

DECORATION DAY WELL ATTENDED

Those Who Died In Flanders Fields Remembered By Oddfellows

On Sunday afternoon Campbellford Lodge No. 248 I.O.O.F. held their annual decoration service. Meeting at the lodge room the parade to the cemetery was led by the Northumberland Regimental Band of Campbellford by Canton Belleville No. 3 and members from Peterboro, Lindsay, Midland, Frankford, Springbrook, Canaanoque and Belleville. The ceremony concluded by the band playing "Onto the Hills Around do I Lift up My Loosing Eyes", an appropriate selection. The band stood surrounded by the Hills of North umberland County.

The marshal of the service and also of the parade was P.D.D.G.M. Bro. H. A. Dunk.

The Department Council of the Patriarchs Militant of Canada was represented by Lieut. Col. O. O. Way, the Grand Encampment of Ontario by Grand Sentinel W. Ralls and the Grand Lodge Ontario by D. D. G. M. Bro. W. McInroy, of Bonar Law.

The parade and service was watched by a large number of people.

Stocks Show Strength

New York, Aug. 15.—The stock market, having undergone a drastic downward readjustment of prices last week rallied briskly today after a temporary sinking spell on the announcement of the death of chairman R. S. Gary, of the United States Steel Corporation. The recovery, which embraced practically all groups of stocks was led by the rails, several of which advanced three points or more and the high priced specialties. The rally was not associated with any thing in the days news. Funds resumed operations on a large scale on the theory that easy money conditions were likely to continue for some time to come, that normal quickening of business was due and that the market's weakened technical position had been sufficiently corrected by the violent decline of last week. Some speculative uneasiness was also expressed over the failure of Dupont Directors to make a special dividend distribution, but the stock quickly recovered its three point loss and converted it into gain of four points. Sales Threshing Machine which had sold down to 963 in the early trading, rallied to 254 1-2, a week end gain of more than nine points. Commercial Solvents "it" extended its rain to seven points and Delaware and Hudson Atlantic Refining, Peerls and Eastern, Great Northern Preferred "Soo" common, Pittsburgh and West Virginia and United fruit sold ahead to five points higher. Northern Pacific at 96 3-4 and Radio Corporation at 61 1-2 established new high records for the year. United States Steel Common opened at 141 3-4, sold down to 139 1-4 and then rallied to around 133.

Corn starting unchanged to 3-4 cent up and quickly receding all around.

Port Churchill will be recommended by Frederick Palmer, engineer investigating the Hudson Bay port situation for the dominion government, as the best terminus for the Hudson Bay railway. He describes it as boasting a natural harbor, in which practically unlimited shipping accomodations can be provided. Above map indicates completed portion of railway, the earlier proposed route to Port Nelson, and the new route to Port Churchill. he change involves 70 additional miles of railway, which will cost about $5,000,000. The economies effected on harbor improvements and aids to navigation, will however cancel this. Already six million dollars have been spent on harbor improvements at Port Nelson. Mr. Palmer was so impressed with the excellent holtom at Port Churchill that he had no hesitation in recommending the change, despite this expenditure.

TOO LATE TO MEND A BROKEN ROMANCE

By ELSIE MARLOWE

"Too late!"

They are the bitterest words the tongue can say. They ring a knell in many a haunted heart.

"I found that I loved him when it was too late." wails Desperate.

DEAR ELSIE:

I'm a married woman, been married twice. I am living with my second husband, but I do not love him. Now you wonder why I married him. I loved my first husband with all my heart. I would readily die for him any time. But he didn't seem to care for me like he should. He wouldn't stay home at night and he never came home until eleven o'clock.

I was left alone and was expecting a child. We got in a quarrel one night and he left me. I wasn't able to work and was worn myself and my child a living. So I got a divorce.

Two years later I met the man I am married to now. He thinks lots of me and I respect him. But I still love the other man. My thoughts are always of him and my heart is nearly broken. I thought I would get over it, but it has been four years now and still feel the same. I believe he sees his mistake, too but it is too late for him also as he is married again.

We can't undo the past, poor dear. But sometimes I think the present bravely and nobly, the future will solve the problem in some way of which we have never dreamed.

It won't do you any good now to look back or weep or wonder what might have been. All your tears will not wash away one particle of that past unhappiness. But you CAN build happiness into the present. Suppose you start today and say to yourself — "Maybe, some day, Pete will straighten things out, but I surely can't hasten that day by this terrible brooding. I'll only make myself bitter and ill and spoil my youth and all my chances of happiness. So I'll just stop grieving for the present and try to get everything out of life as it goes along.

If we married a good man I'll make him as happy as I can. We're both young yet. We can have lots of fun together, even if we haven't romance. I'll begin to make more friends and pay more attention to my appearance. Perhaps if we try hard we can buy a little car and get around more. And there's my baby girl. I can have a wonderful time with my baby if I can keep my mind away from the black past.

"Yes, there's really a lot that I can do with my life, even if I have had this terrible hurt. So here's where I start."

Say that to yourself, my dear. Then powder your nose and put on your prettiest dress and go out and find the sun shine again. Perhaps the greatest hap piness of all your life is waiting for you, right on your own doorstep.

Have you a good reliable recipe for a Visitor Eradicator?

Something that will remove Unwelcome Visitors quickly, painlessly and permanently? Bonnie Bell wants it.

DEAR ELSIE:

I am happily married to a fine man and we both work to get ahead and establish a nice home. I have for many years corresponded with a relative who became like a fine, lovely, woman, although I had not seen her since I was a small child. Some time ago she expressed a desire to visit us. This seemed like a wonderful idea to us. We planned and planned on how we were going to make her happy, and how she would enjoy sharing our home and enjoying the conveniences of city life.

What a shock when she arrived! We discovered the meanest woman imaginable. She tried to make trouble for us among our friends, and how much fault she found with everything.

When I taxed her with it, she would have hysterics and say she should pity her because she had no home and was unmarried and had no one to love her.

Now my problem is how to get rid of her. She finally left our home to visit elsewhere, but wants to return. I don't want to seem unkind I don't like to tell her that her presence in our home is unbearable. She seems to regard herself as a martyr because she performed some simple household duties such as having dishes ready in the evening. If you can tell me how to tactfully and kindly rid ourselves of this disagreeable and unwelcome-in-law, we will certainly be grateful to you.

BONNIE BELL

You can't. The lady has obviously a mind to stay You have have given her every proof that she's both unpopular and unwelcome, but she isn't going to let a little matter like your preferences stand in the way of her comfort. Under such conditions tact would be wasted Write to her and tell her politely but firmly, that it is more sensible to keep your home for yourselves. There is no wrong in saying this. It is simply common sense and leaves her no ground for argument.

Here is certainly a happy season for the young woman who has difficulty in making up her mind. No longer need she be torn between lovely brocade and velvet for her new fall frock, nor between satin and light weight wool, nor yet between the dull and shiny side of crepe satin. For she can now choose both materials, in harmonizing shades, and combine them to make one very smart costume. Here two fabrics, or two tones of one fabric, are combined in an unusual curved and pointed outline which gives an air of studied distinction and an individual form of trimming to a very simple made slip-over frock. Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I'm a young girl in my teens and live home with a young man for about three years. He goes with other girls and I go with other boys. The other day I told him I was going to invite a certain young man over to see me. He said if I did he would never come to see me again.

I value his friendship very highly, but I also like the other boy too. What shall I do?

BLUE BROWN EYES.

BLUE BROWN EYES: If you are not engaged to this young man there is no reason under the sun why you should not go out with other boys. It would be very foolish for you to give up all your friends now. If this one friendship were suddenly broken off it would be very lonely, and it would be difficult for you to make new friends. So continue to go about with all your acquaintances and impress upon a jealous suitor the wisdom of this course. If he still feels that you are wrong he will have to forfeit your friendship—but I don't think he will do this if he is really interested in you.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

We are two girls in our teens. We have been going with two young men the same age.

We were out riding one day when they became jealous just because we spoke to a friend of ours and left them.

They came to see us every evening to ask us to forgive them. They admit they were wrong.

Please advise us what to do! We love them, but want to do the right thing.

MONK AND BECKIE.

MONK AND BECKIE: The young men have shown their resentment unprovokedly asked you to forgive them. What more can you ask? By all means forget the incident, if you value their friendship. They have been taught a lesson and probably won't pick a needed quarrel on the same score.

WHAT'S NEW

(From a Woman's Standpoint)

Careers in the field of dress-making still continue to be a lure to the English society girl. The latest recruit to the profession is Miss Peggy Baring, daughter of Sir Godfrey Baring, who, it is stated, is joining Paris Trades in Berkeley street this fall in the capacity of sales-woman.

Pet dogs have developed their own special fashions, and ensembles of dog-collars, leashes and handbags are seen in London. One set of emerald enamel and the collar edged on both sides with long-haired wiry fur. This mistress' handbag, is green to match the collar and has a centre motif of plaited hair. The whip is plain green leather.

Massive jewelry in the day-time appears to be unquestionably fashionable and women wearing sports jumper suits of fine stockinette or the more formal charmeuse show a distinct preference for big chains in either gold or silver fastened with large matching clasps. Instead of chains flat discs of metal cut in diamond or oval shapes with flat and heavy clasps of some semi-precious stones are sometimes noted.

A salad of left-over lamb or mutton combined with celery and asparagus with a garnish of mint jelly is a good summer main dish.

CURSE OF LOVE

CHAPTER 29

The Husband in Pursuit

When Sydney Stokes reached out to grasp Norma's arm, as she retreated against the wall, she uttered a single cry, sharp, poignant.

His outstretched arms dropped to his sides and the glare left his green eyes. With a shrug he returned to the hearth. Picking up his glass, he drained it to its dregs.

"I didn't come here to frighten you, Norma," he said slowly. "I love you more than ever, I didn't know it was possible for me to love a woman as I love you. I came here tonight to ask you to accept my love."

She came back slowly into the radius of the firelight.

"I love my husband," she said steadily.

"No doubt, you think you love him," he admitted, with a wry smile. "But I know you, my dear Norma. You're proud as Lucifer, for all your sweetness and softness and gentleness. You will never live with him again, after what I told you today."

"I will live with him again, after what I told you today."

"Then you're a fool!" he said coolly. "What I may do—or may not do—is no concern of yours," she informed him with a spark of spirit. "And since I ask it?"

"You'd rather be down here at a deserted beach, in an empty bungalow, alone—than have me about?"

"Yes."

He stood staring moodily into the flickering firelight, his hands thrust deep in his pockets. He seemed to have become suddenly sober.

After a few minutes, he turned to her, a twisted smile on his lips.

"Well, I guess that lets me out—for good."

"What do you intend doing—if I may ask?"

"I don't know," Nor did she. She

Alpine Climbing In Rockies

Thirty-seven difficult climbs qualifying for badges were made by members of the Alpine Club of Canada during the first ten days of their annual camp in the upper Yoho Valley in the Canadian Rockies recently. About one-third of the party were ladies. These was no attempt to make spectacular climbs, the intention of the camp being to provide a good qualifying school for the younger members in a territory well adapted for such work. The Canadian Pacific Railway and were supplemented by experienced volunteer guides qualified for that purpose. N. E. Odell, who played a prominent part in the Mount Everest expedition, was among the party making the climbs. The photograph shows a long line of climbers headed by a guide ascending the edge of a moraine at Mount Freshfield.

KOTEX is the new hygiene that has largely ended the use of old-time "pads" among women. A scientific creation, it offers an end to three girl's embarrassments of old methods.

Filled with Cellucotton wadding — the world's super-absorbent—it is 5 times more absorbent than ordinary cotton pads.

Scientifically treated, it deodorizes. Made of a special material, it disposes easily as tissue. No laundry. No embarrassment. 5 in 10 better stores women now employ it. Doctors and nurses urge it.

Get Kotex for protection you know is real. See that box you buy is marked "Kotex." If it isn't, it is not genuine Kotex.

Some Helpful Hints For Busy Housewives

Javelle water should never be used on wool or silk.

If you keep rubber bands in a well covered tin box they will last much longer.

You can extinguish a kerosene fire immediately by pouring milk over the flames.

Sandwiches can be made the night before a picnic and will keep fresh if wrapped in a damp cloth, then folded into a towel wrung out of cold water and kept in a cool place.

Safety matches will readily ignite if struck on the window or any piece of glass.

You can clean your white felt hats by applying a somewhat stiff paste of magnesia and water with a brush, and leaving it on until dry. When thoroughly dry remove powder with a brush.

CURSE OF LOVE

By Mildred Barlow

the opal from the case, and handed it to Stokes. He glanced at it and whistled.

"Where the deuce did you get it? Why, it must be worth a fortune!"

She nodded and evaded his question.

"I was foolish to bring it with me. When I packed, I never thought about thieves. Will you take it back to town with you and put it in the vault at the bank for me?"

"Sure!" He thrust it into his vest pocket, staring at her curiously. "Say, look-ye, Sydney." She offered her hand.

He accepted it silently, held it for a moment, and then, snatching her suddenly, attempted to kiss her. She shrank back, averting her face swiftly, but, for an instant, she was in his arms.

It was at that instant that the door opened, and Philip Kendall stood upon the threshold, watching the little scene with inscrutable eyes.

CAPTEN 30.

Philip Kendall's gaze traveled from his wife to Sydney Stokes, who had released her hastily and stood staring defiantly at him, and then to the small table by the fireplace, with the two empty glasses, the siphon, and Stokes's flask.

Kendall's glance was cool and measured. He accepted the evidence before him at its face value.

Norma took a step toward him, her hands extended, but a sob rose in her throat, and she was unable to speak.

"I seem to be intruding," remarked Kendall lightly.

Stokes glared at him, but answered suavely enough.

"Not at all. I was just leaving."

"Pray don't go on my account," said Kendall. "I only drove down to assure myself that Norma was well and safe. She seems to be quite well." His gaze went back to the glasses, "but I should not care to answer for her safety. However, that is for her to say."

"Philip!" Norma's voice was low, pleading. "I drove down alone in my car."

"No doubt," he answered politely—he even made her an ironic little bow. "But your presence in motor-cars does have lost little time in joining you."

Stokes threw him an infuriated glance and turned abruptly to Norma.

"Do you want me to go or stay?"

"Oh, go, go!" she moaned

He bowed to her, ignored Kendall completely, and strode out into the darkness.

The two, left alone in the bungalow stared at each other in silence Norma felt that she couldn't have looked more guilty If his circumstances actually had been what her husband thought they were. Philip was deadly white and dangerously calm.

"How did you find me?" she asked at last, breaking the painful silence and realizing, even as she spoke, that it was not the most tactful question to have put at that moment.

POKER FEVER IS LONDON'S RAGE

Four Hundred Poker Clubs Sprung Up Almost Overnight

London, Aug. 16.—A deck of cards containing a king and a queen but no ambassador. That is a serious omission for cards just at the moment, are performing a unique service in cementing Anglo-American relations.

London has "poker fever." Four hundred poker clubs have sprung up almost overnight. The West End is sprinkled with them, and the fineprint pages of the newspapers are sprinkled with announcements of new clubs opening.

The Beachcomb Club (pronounce it beech-em), at Beauchamp place, S. W., for instance, advertises that Mrs. Wanda Hale "Regular games of straight poker daily at 3 and 9 p.m."

At this typical club, with forty expelled members the players start a session with £25 worth of chips, and the game has a deuce and trey clubs run's faster pace, with a $10 limit or more. The rule is that after 3 o'clock in the morning each player pays the house a fine of 60 cents for the first hour and £1.25 for each subsequent hour. Not deterred by this many players stay on till 4 or 5 in the morning only to start in again the next afternoon.

Poker is not merely a fad of the smart West End. Professional men, lawyers and physicians business men and writers have paid their fees to join poker clubs. The game has captured the West End. Before long it will invade the East End, and it promises to become a national craze.

It is no mere pleasantry to assert that poker is performing a unique service in cementing Anglo-American relations. What is it that differentiates Americans from the English? The old vested classes read see the same novels buy the same poetry, see the same plays, hear the same music; the two peoples have the same ideals of government and the same common law.

Where they differ chiefly is in their amusements. But remarkable progress has been made. In every ballroom they now dance to American jazz. Both nations are addicted to bridge. Both play golf and tennis The distinctions are dwindling.

Col. L. R. L. La Fleche, D.S.O., of Ottawa, acting president of the Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League. Col. La Fleche gave outstanding service in the war in the fam cas 22nd French-Canadian battalion and was severely wounded. He has also been a leader in securing unity among ex-service men. It was he who made personal representations to the Prince of Wales, asking him to be at Toronto on August 30 for the dominion-wide review of war veterans.

It would be delightful to be able to say that poker had been introduced into London by the strategy board of the English-speaking union, after a preparatory series of articles in the Spectator. But it hasn't Obviously providence knows more about the technique of mating friendships than all the political propagandists that ever lived.

Some day a grave minister, knowing his poker, will stand up to announce in the ancient house of commons that his majesty's government is "standing pat"—and will use just those words. And by that time more will have been done for Anglo-American friendship than by all the after-dinner speakers in Christendom.

HARVESTING NEAR MOOSE JAW

Moose Jaw, August 15.—The first wheat to be cut in the Moose Jaw district in 1927 was reported today by Robert Hare, four miles south of Bohaem. Mr. Hare has his binders in a 100-acre field of wheat and he reports the grain to b a very good sample.

AGNES HITS AT THE QUEEN CITY

Toronto, Ont. Aug. 15.—(By Canadian Press).—Miss Agnes Macphail, M.P., presided at a luncheon given by the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom and welcomed the delegates to the World Federation of Education Association.

"Of all the places in Canada which needed the education conference, Toronto did," Miss Macphail said. "It is a beautiful city as you know, but it has an odd mentality and the official banners of thought are at at variance with the ideals and thoughts of most of the people that it seems a most excellent and kindly thing that this conference be held here to create a better understanding."

Miss Macphail went on to tell the delegates that in her opinion it was impossible to take any steps for the prevention of war in this country, without incurring the charge of lack of patriotism. If not disloyalty. A reference was made by her to her famous 'Chinese' letter.

As a consequence of that letter,' said Miss Macphail, "the federation of Women Teachers Association of Ontario cancelled my invitation to their banquet. The fact is that they allowed themselves to be dominated from a higher source, I have no doubt about that."

SUFFRAGIST THINKS CANADA PATRIOTIC

Montreal, Que., Aug. 15 (By Canadian Press).—"General" Flora Drummond, former militant suffragist leader, expresses herself as greatly impressed by the evidence of patriotism in Canada. "The further we went, the more patriotic the people seemed," she declared: "I noticed that one little two-room shack we passed on the journey was flying a Union Jack as large as itself."

"I don't think I have yet realized fully the bigness of Canada, and I am eagerly looking forward to my trip to the Pacific coast to get the idea of the immensity of the country." Mrs. Drummond found the landscape very like that of the Old Country.

COOL DRINKS FOR HOT DAYS

Tinkle of Ice Refreshing Sound—Many Delicious

The sound of ice tinkling in a delicious drink is refreshing on a warm day, and how much more so when the drink is served in a sparkling glass that brings a sense of coolness to the eye as well as to the ear.

When afternoon tea is served on the piazza on summer days it need not be tea—unless iced—but fills the amber crackled glass or the tall green tumbler. Lemonade, fruitade, ginger punch, sherbets of all flavors, iced coffee or cocoa may replace the hot beverage of the cosy indoor gathering.

The very best iced coffee is served hot. This may seem a contradiction but coffee freshly made and poured hot and golden-clear over the lumps of ice in the tall glass cools rapidly in remains clear and has none of the settled taste of coffee allowed to stand until cool and then iced.

Ice cream soda can be made at home with little trouble and can be served with the guests at luncheon or with the little cakes at tea time. The desired amount of flavorings is placed in the glass and to this is added a small serving of ice cream. Beat well and add carbonated water and stir with a fork or already used. Ginger ale, root beer lime and cream sodas or any other carbonated drinks are good.

Milk shakes also can be made at home as well as at the soda fountain and are nourishing drinks on the days when it is too hot to eat. To make the one glass of ice-cold milk add sugar or flavor and shake well in shaker or from glass to glass. Add desired amount of nutmeg if no other flavoring is used. For a chocolate milk shake one heaping teaspoonful o fcocoa or one-half square of chocolate, melted, is used.

A lemon and orange punch is made from the juice of these fruits combined with cold tea. The same amount of lemons is used as for a small quantity of lemonade. To this add the juice of two oranges and mix with equal parts of cold tea. Add sugar and water to taste.

For a fruit punch slices of lemon and banana are added to the fruit juices or strawberries if they are in season. Grapejuice and ginger ale are also combined with each other or with the fruit punches. Crushed ice is often served in these in place of the large lumps.

For those who like ginger there is the ginger cobbler, which requires 3 lemons, sliced; 2 oranges sliced; 1 cucumber sliced; 1 cup of powdered sugar, 1 1-2 cups of ginger syrup, 1 cup medium sugar syrup and 2 quarts of ginger ale. Add sugar and syrup to the sliced fruits and cucumber and chill for two hours. Strain and add ginger ale and sugar syrup. Serve ice cold.

ONLY WOMAN REP FROM U. S. PRESS

Toronto, Ont., Aug. 15 (By Canadian Press).—On the Princes' Eastern tour Isabel Ross was the only woman press representative from the United States. She was writing for the New York Herald-Tribune. Miss Ross, who is Scottish born, was at one time on the Toronto News under Sir John Willison. During the war she was associated with the food board in Ottawa.

A Calgary writer describes the present bungalow in the E. P. Ranch. Much larger than the old homestead it is bordered with beds of old-fashioned flowers—phlox, candytuft, forget-me-nots, petunia and canterbury bells. Trim lawns gird it and gravelled walks lead to its entrances. The farm buildings are beautifully white.

The old log house has been incorporated as a dining room, and on its cream colored interior walls the sole adornment is a livestock calendar and a "motto" beside the text. As for me and my house we will serve the Lord. —Joshua 24:23. Hard by is the Prince's private sitting room with its buff-colored walls hung with pictures, its low wicker chairs, generous fireplace, davenport and buffalo rug.

The bedroom of the Prince is just large enough to accommodate a double brass bed, a walnut writing desk, a mahogany dresser, a chest of drawers and a small bedside table. The walls are papered blue and white and a small iron stove, serves in cold weather. There are four other bedrooms, and since the Prince's last visit, a commodious lounge has been added with hardwood floors and seven French windows.

DEATHS & FUNERALS

GEORGE VANCE

The funeral of the late George Vance was held Saturday, Aug. 6th at the United Church of Thomasburg. Although the church is a good sized one the seating room was taxed to its utmost capacity showing the high esteem in which deceased was held. Orange men of four different lodges attended in a body Moneymore 5th, line, St-mett's and Thomasburg. The minister, Rev. Mr. McDonald preached a very comforting sermon remarking in the course of his discourse how much the deceased was appreciated in the community. The beautiful casket was covered with floral offerings conspicuous among them being one contributed by Moneymore Orange Lodge of which deceased was an honored member.

Interment took place in the beautiful well kept cemetery at Thomasburg the same minister officiating at the graveside, also the impressive rites of the Orange Order conducted by brother Harry Burtle chaplain of the lodge at Moneymore.

The sympathy of the whole community goes out to the heart-broken young widow in her sad and sudden bereavement also to the only son Percy upon whose young shoulders now fall the responsibility of the home and the management of a 150 acre farm.

Two brothers John and James also survive and a sister Mrs. Matilda Coulter and three nephews Ray and Donald Vance and Frank Coulter, all of Roslin. His father the late Samuel Vance predeceased him two years ago last Easter.

To-night the stars are gleaming,
Upon a lonely grave
There sleeps it without dreaming
One we loved but could not save.

We shall meet him some bright morning
Resting by the river fair,
He is waiting for our coming,
In the Master's garden there.

MISS EMMA B. WHITE

The funeral of the late Miss Emma B. White was held from her late home Roslin, on Saturday afternoon to Roslin Presbyterian Church, where the interment was made in the family plot. The services at the house and grave, were conducted by Rev. A. S. Duncan.

The many in attendance at the obsequies and the beautiful floral tributes bore mute testimony of sorrow from friends and the friends.

The bearers were Messrs! W. Weir,

D. Leslie, W. Gillespie, J. Conller, D. Miller and J. Hart.

SCULLING RACE ON PACIFIC COAST; 1ST TIME

Vancouver, B. C., Aug. 15 (C.P.)—For the first time since the world famous Diamond Sculling and Canadian championships were held 26 years ago, the race will take place on the Pacific Coast. The site chosen by Major Good will, Australian holder of the title, is a magnificent stretch of water in Burrard Inlet, Vancouver arbor. It has a straight 7 of five miles, varying in width from a quarter of a mile to two miles, and protected on either side and at the starting point by breakwaters.

The race between Major Goodsell and Bert Barry of Putney, Eng., the challenger, will take place on Sept. 5. Barry is a nephew of the great Ernest Barry, former world champion, and is being trained by Goodsell himself.

The course is interrupted by little traffic, for the eastern terminal runs to a dead end near Port Moody, the first terminus of the Canadian Pacific Railway, while to the south is the City of Vancouver as the famous "Paramania" lies within the city of Sydney, Australia. There is a very slight tide, and just enough movement in the prevailing northeasterly breeze to create the ideal ripple on the water. These conditions are unusual in inland or tidal water that help the scull along better than dead "millpond" water.

Barry has had the first challenger to be accepted by Goodsell since he set out to win the city of Sydney, Australia for a match. Major Goodsell's outstanding career started after the war, and his first victory of note was in the amateur championship of New South Wales. Then he turned professional and set up a record of five minutes for the mile, which still stands. He challenged Peddon when the New South Wales giant had successfully defended his title of Australian champion. Peddon was "all out of his shell into the Parramatta, climbed in seven and was only 10 seconds behind Peddon at the finish when Peddon surrendered the title to Goodsell. Goodsell challenged McDevitt and won easily.

Paddy Hannan, Australasian champion, was first to challenge Goodsell's championship. Goodsell beat him easily on the Parramatta before a quarter of a million people and before the same crowd later beat Peddon. The champion later crossed to Perth and did some coaching in California, where he met Barry. He rowed in the Catalina rowboat invasion of New Jersey and was second to Hagney, Australian.

Jacob Kunkle, aged 2, was run down and badly injured by an auto at Kreesville, Pa.

It doesn't require a detective to find fault.

BELLE THEATRE

Marie Prevost Star of Comedies in the beauty spots fad In "Man Bait" her current Metropolitan star production, the schoolgirl complexioned wears a heart-shaped piece of court plaster on her cheek' which she classifies as her "man bait" It succeeded the diaphanous gown and the rolled hose as an allurement for enmeshing the unwary male.

Since Miss Prevost has thus popularized the itsy bitsy of plaster there has been a rush in the ranks of the pretty "extras" to follow the star's lead Where a speck of dust may have rested unsung a few days before the symbol of "man bait" now shrieks for attention.

Supporting Miss Prevost in "Man Bait," which comes to the Belle Theatre today, are Kenneth Thomson, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Eddie Gribbon, Adda Gleason, Louis Natheaux, Betty Francisco, Sally Rand and Fritzi Ridge way. 2 features

The charm of Europe plus the thrill of wild gallops and wilder action on the plains of the American West, is the unusual story combination offered by Peter B. Kyne in "The Three Godsquerce," a superb Metropolitan picture which comes to the Belle theatre today.

Mr. Kyne's story with William Boyd and Elinor Fair featured, starts in Italy where the boy and girl, wealthy young travelers, meet. Then the scene shifts and with the punch of melodrama we find the potential lovers both sighed beneath an Italian moon suddenly turned into enemies, Boyd at the head of a faction of sheepmen, Miss Fair, the leader, by accident, of the cowboys of her uncle.

BELLEVILLE WINS FIRST GAME OF QUINTE CHAMPIONSHIP PLAY-OFFS

Locals Defeat Deloro On Own Diamond By Large Score

HERE WEDNESDAY

Nationals On Long End 9-2 Count In Fine Game

After six straight defeats at the hands of the Deloro Club the Belleville team came back on Saturday and gave the Smelters a real-honest-to-goodness trimming by a score of 9-2. It was simply all Belleville on Saturday and the homesters were never in the limit from the face-offs. As a result of this game the locals get off on the right foot for the championship and they have set in motion the ball rolling on Wednesday in order to write "Finis" on the Bay of Quinte League for 1927. It was a great victory for the Nationals and now they are solidly convinced that Deloro is not the best team by any stretch of imagination. They have been trying since the 1st of June to drive that impression home but have had little success in winning their point. But on Saturday they added right in on all four and before the Deloro supporters realized it their team was ill, very ill with slight hopes of recovery and the only thing they could do the rest of the afternoon was to sit and see their pets swallow the bitterest pill that has been forced on them this year.

To think that they could go through the season and defeat Belleville every time out and then have to bow to the Nationals in the play-off was more than the Deloro supporters and team could rest fathom and, when the game was over they just sat there trying to figure what the whole thing was all about or only did the boys in blazer on a defeat but they soaked it, on double-dick and Deloro boys have not experienced such a beetle afternoon in many a moon. The railroaders were not merry-land and after carrying the lid by scoring one more.

The Mills crew proved their batting class and pilot "Penney" advised his cohorts to hit all and sundry and no sooner were the boys on the diamond than they proceeded to carry out his orders.

"Inky" Woods who has been piling up quite a reputation for himself around these parts saw the whole structure come tumbling down on Saturday. He handed exactly two and one third innings before Manager Elliot noted that his boy pretzel was not the man of the hour after all and he was sent to second base where he fared much better and one old friend Paddy Quinn found himself a place on the bench and Mr. Ralph saw a little baseball knowledge up Renfrew way was handed a four run deficit and a glove and took a seat in a box next to the Nationals. The visitors did not treat him any too kindly off the slab and he chalked up two more before the side was out. However they were quite placid for the next few innings but again in the ninth their wrath broke loose and they ended Mr. Ralph's unhappy holiday by hanging up another trio.

Ruth Unearned

The best that Mr. Elliott's boys could do was to score one in the sixth and another in the eighth and sad to relate both of these were unearned. Other than that they were as meek as lambs and just sailed along contented to hold up the rear.

But Deloro are not through yet, not by a big-full and anything is liable to happen on Wednesday but the Nationals have recovered their batting eye and by trimming the Smelters on Saturday they have upset their morale but the visitors fighting with their backs in the wall are sure to put up a great battle.

"Hoyt" Gibson had the Deloro crowd lashed in the mast all the way and Gibson established himself as one of the leading pitchers in these parts by his fine performance. He only fanned two but he limited them to eight hits and three of these were of the scratch variety. The Belleville team played like fiends behind Gibson and knocked down speeding line drives and hot grass cutters a la big league style.

Lionel Harper was the slugging ace with four fine hits, one of them a long three-bagger which was the nearest clout o the spatline. He turned in a marvellous game in the field and was on top of his form at short-stop all afternoon.

The umpiring of Kay and Courtney left nothing to be desired and there was not a whimper from either team all afternoon even the gabby "Baldy" Quinn being as silent as a mouse. The same pair will be back here on Wednesday for which we hope will be the final game of the season in the Quinte League.

YANKS SPLASHED TO ANOTHER WIN

Tigers Hang Up 5th Consecutive Victory Over St. Louis

Washington, August 15.—There may be a few lingering doubts about the Yankees being the best baseball club in the American League although we can't imagine where they're hiding, but there can't be any discounting voices if the Yanks should claim the league swimming championship also. Not after yesterday.

The ball maulers of Manhattan almost convinced 20,000 Washington fans that they are supreme not only on the land, but also on the sea when they splashed knee-deep in mud and submerged the Senators, 8 to 2.

Waity took to the watery way like a submarine. He didn't mind the sprinkling dicta. His good right arm kept him afloat very nicely. It also sank five Senators on strikes, which wouldn't have been so noticeable perhaps if four of them hadn't fallen in a row. In the fifth Bluege, Reeves and Lacky all went down swinging and Rice, the first man up in the sixth, did likewise.

The Yanks' hitting off Garland Braxton and Bob Burke, who pitched and paddled through the last five innings, wasn't anything worth mentioning, but thy found the left-handed Mr. Zachary no mystery despite Washington's support.

At Detroit the Tigers scored their fifth successive victory over St. Louis by winning the closing game of the series. The score was 6 to 5. Milton Gaston, although he was outpitched by Stoner, suffered his second defeat of the series. Melillo contributed three errors to the downfall of the former, and each of them figured in the scoring.

Chicago broke its losing streak yesterday when it won from the Indians at Cleveland, 7 to 2. Sloane held the White Sox to one hit for five innings and then weakened. Nels, former Indian, allowed the bases with double in the sixth. Cleveland error were costly.

GIANTS STRETCH WINNING STREAK

Ray Kremer In Tip-Top Form—Brooklyn Whitewashed

New York, Aug. 15.—The Giants swept the Phillies in one game yesterday and probably would have beaten them in another if the weather man had not intervened mercifully with a rainstorm that saved the apathetic Claker Phillies. William F. Baker. Afterering hopfully of a sellout day for forty-one minutes, the umpires decided that it wasn't just a heavy fog but a real, honest-to-goodness shower and the second game was called off.

Thirty thousand customers—a good by throng considering the weather was what it was, and the Phillies were what they were—saw the McGrawmen stretch their winning streak to five straight. Also, if you are interested, the Giants have won fourteen out of their last eighteen games.

Larry Benton, the late inmate of Boston, had the Phillies to four hits, and won what might be called a pitching battle from our old friend, Jimmy Ferguson, who is still on a tour of both leagues. The score was 3 to 1.

The Cubs made a clean sweep of the three-game series at Chicago with the Reds today when they drove Red Lucas off the hill in the seventh inning and defeated Cincinnati, 7 to 2, behind the sterling pitching of Percy Jones.

The visitors landed hard on Jones

...they lead their league by a good margin. As everybody knows it costs money to bring teams from outside the City and finances must be raised to defray expenses.

SportOgramS By "The Observer"

The Belleville ball team boosters' their stock five hundred per cent following their win over Deloro on Saturday afternoon. There were many who doubted their ability to do the trick but the Nationals surprised all and now after a season of ups and downs they are riding on top of the world with one hand on the championship. If they can stop the Deloro team on Wednesday they can celebrate the success of the Bay Valley League who should be easier picking than any club in this loop. The Management are tickled pink over the latest victory and with nice weather on Wednesday the big end crowd of the season should turn out. The locals had to fight the weather all year but the fans are behind the team to a man now that they have redeemed themselves for any mistakes in the past six weeks. The boys were on their metal on Saturday and nothing can stop them now.

There was only a handful of Belleville fans present but they had a heap of fun at the expense of the Deloro supporters. There wasn't a chirp out of the headliners after Deloro spotted the visitors six runs.

Boudreau who has been the fear of opposing pitchers all season was not present on Saturday, at least one would have doubted it after look at the box scores as the French-man was a minus quantity as far as base hits were concerned.

The second game of the "city" League finals takes place tonight with Deacon Shirt who have already copped one tilt and the Frontenacs who are entitled to the argument by virtue of the arrangements last. Sivis Barrett's crew have taken the first of the series by 12-6 scores les say they were not up to their usual form on that occasion and tonight's game will be a thriller. Don't miss it.

Alan Meagher's Beavers will play in Napanee on Wednesday evening for the championship of the Bay of Quinte League. After a hot session between the officials at the Y. M.C.A. on Friday night a verdict was finally reached whereby the Beavers will play off with the Leafs. Mr. Meagher has arranged a game with the Cubs the latest entry in soft-ball circles for an exhibition game tomorrow night. On Saturday, afternoon the Flanley Foundry team a fast Industrial tie in Toronto, will be here for a double-header, afternoon and evening. With four games on the schedule for this week the Beavers will be kept pretty busy.

Another fast work out will be given the "Cubs" the new addition to softball in Belleville tonight.

Tomorrow night at 8.30 they will shake their initial appearance on the armouries lawn against the Belleville Beavers to prepare them for their important game with Napanee on Wednesday.

On Thursday evening at 6.30 the "Cubs" will play the Trenton Beaver on the armouries lawn.

The Beavers of Trenton one the fastest team of girls in Trenton, so

Mayfair as said to be greatly exercised over the fact that the Prince of Wales and his brother, Prince George, have been wearing the common variety of "straw" on their Canadian trip.

Illicit Traffic In Opium Continues On Big Scale

London, August 13—That the illicit traffic in opium and other drugs continues on a large scale all over the world is shown in the report of the control of the traffic by the British Government, which the Home Office this year has for the first time made public. The report proves however, that the revenue and police officials of the British Empire are alert in detection and quick to confiscate. It demonstrates, also, that reliable information is instantly conveyed to any foreign country that may be concerned and to the league of nations, which it testifies to the efficiency of the methods always advocated by the British delegates at Geneva.

It is not possible at present to contain the growth of a plant which has cultivated freely in China, Persia and Turkey, and in restricted quantities in India, but it is possible to strictly regulate its preparation for medicinal use and the complicated process by which raw opium is transmuted into morphine, heroin and other derivatives, and to supervise its distribution.

The British government has controlled the traffic since 1920, and although a new international instrument was signed in 1925 the international control secured which is fruitful to the view the traffic has not yet been established. The report is interesting as showing how the British government's methods have largely been embodied in the new instrument, which is not yet fully ratified.

Half-seen beneath the surface of official reticence in this report lies the romance of criminal stealth foiled by the alertness of revenue detectives. A certain box on board a steamship plying between Amsterdam, and Blenfields, Nicaragua, was, for instance, held up at Kingston, Jamaica. After communication with the Government of Nicaragua, it was found that the consignee was not the owner of a leading merchant establishment for the sale of drugs and that the consignment addressed to him contained more opium than medical practitioners in all of Nicaragua would have consumed in the ordinary course in 15 years.

A particularly interesting seizure was made at Southampton. A shipment of a mixture labeled "chinkoline" excited suspicion. On analysis this was found to be morphia mixed with some unctuous substance from which it could later easily be recovered by chemical process. A new article of the drug traffickers was thus revealed. The shipment was from France to the Far East through Canada.

Full particulars were communicated to the League, which already has records of many ingenious tricks—of the drug being passed from place to place in the lining of hats, in hollow walking-sticks, in the stuffing of chairs, in chocolates, and so on. The Advisory Committee on Opium should, indeed, in time, collect a record of crime to which Dr. Watson might turn for material now that Sherlock Holmes has really made his final bow.

Here and There

The west will receive 20,000 men from Eastern Canada to assist in gathering the grain crop this year in all about 67,000 men will be required to complete the work. Arrangements have been made by both railroads to handle the harvesters.

T. D. F. Hersey, manager of the Canada Colonization Association, states that this organization has placed 400 Old Country families in the Prairie Provinces this year and that 800 other families will arrive before the end of the year.

The fourth annual ride of the Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies, an organization with a membership including many prominent artists, writers and society leaders in all parts of Canada, U.S. and Europe, left recently from Banff on a new trail for Mount Assiniboine.

A shipment of 1,400 horses purchased in the Prairie Provinces for the Russian Government moved to Montreal recently in charge of officials of the Canadian Pacific regarding needed changes and improvements in the harbor facilities of Saint John. Several suggestions were made and the railway company will be acted upon before the winter sailings take place, according to the Hon. W. E. Foster, president of the Commission.

Interest taken by American Railway officials in the latest achievement of science in the way of Canadian locomotive construction is emphasized by the fact that the Canadian Pacific Railway Company has been invited to send their latest and most powerful passenger engine to be placed on exhibit at the Centenary Exhibition and Pageant being held by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad at Baltimore, September 24 to October 1. The C.P.R. "2300" engine, their latest and finest passenger type, will be sent to Baltimore.

The first ticket issued from the new Union Station at Toronto over the Canadian Pacific lines was purchased in a special leather folder, upon which appeared the name of H.R.H. Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. The three tickets following were issued to Mr. and Mrs. George, Premier Stanley Baldwin and to Mrs. Baldwin. The new railway station was formally opened by the Prince of Wales on July 31, the first being the first to steam into the station.

A cable received at Ottawa by the Department of Trade and Commerce from Harrison Watson, Trade Commissioner for Canada in London, indicates that Great Britain will offer an attractive market for the Dominion's considerable surplus of timothy and clover during the present year. The cable reads as follows: "English hay crop turning out so badly that imported hay will be required. Prospects are that there will be a fair demand for Canadian timothy and clover mixture.

GEOGRAPHY IS NEEDFUL STUDY

Toronto, August 13.—Geography as a study of growing importance for progressive world understanding and an appreciation of world inter-dependence was emphasized by Dr. Ernest Ebbels of Clark University, Worcester, Mass., before the geographical section of the World Federation of Education Associations here today.

The radio, he said, had resulted in a great awakening of the geographic sense. Lindbergh's flight alone, he said, will from the United States had been listened to by 35,000,000 over the radio in Europe.

"In the lowlands of China," said Dr. Ebbels, "there are more people than in the plains of Indian." 300 million people. Europe 400 million and America 110 millions. Study and appreciation of geographical environments of these people would lessen the force of an appeal to arms."

Mrs. Flowd Shearer, missing for ten days at Perdix, Pa., was found in an old barn near here.

CLERKS BLAMED FOR HOOLIGANISM

Accountants And Bookkeepers Charged With Acts Of Silliness

Moscow, Aug. 10.—The amazing fact that bookkeepers and accountants, as a class, are the principal offenders among Soviet employees, in the matter of petty crookedness, is laid under the head of "hooliganism," is stated in a report prepared by an official of the State Statistical Department. Thirty-three percent of all such loans are charged to them.

The extermination of hooliganism, next to the "berspienost," or homeless waifs problem, is the most pressing police question of the day. While the number of waifs is apparently steadily growing and their daring increasing every day, hooliganism, according to official figures, is on a comparative decline. The number of cases recorded during the last month was 676 against double that figure for the corresponding month in 1926.

The report shows that fifty-three percent of hooligans are married. Their age ranges from 20 to 29. Women offenders represent only ten percent of the total; but, it is pointed out their offenses are characterized by extraordinary cruelness and daring. While during the last year only one man appeared naked in the streets, similar cases involving women were quite frequent. Preferred places for commission of acts of hooliganism are said to be public squares and boulevards, and the time from nine in the evening to midnight.

MILLIONAIRE IS HOST TO KIDS

Winnipeg, Aug. 13.—Did you ever sit at a circus in the midst of about 120 children who had never seen a circus before? Did you ever watch them wide-eyed, amazed yet deliciously happy as they chewed popcorn, peanuts and candy and watched the wonders of the big tops? Did you ever see them in the menagerie watching the animals? If not you have never really lived.

Just 120 little folks were the guests of Dr. and Mrs. Warren Macdeck. New York millionaire (working through a deputy as they were on a Sunday Rest) on Saturday afternoon. Sixty of these were from the Children's Home; 21 from Point Douglas, one of the poorest districts in Winnipeg, and the others were gathered together by Palmer Hoyden and Ryan and a Tribune representative, on the circus grounds.

"Just Like in My Book"

How these little folks, who would have had no chance to see the circus at for Dr. and Mrs. Sandheck's generosity, did watch. Their enthusiasm with trunks just like "in my book at home"; the giraffes, with horns and necks "a mile long"; those that roared and made one shiver; seals that played and cavorted; tigers, crouching and hundred of pretty horses that danced, jumped and galloped at great speed around the rings—all of it.

And the clowns—oh, boy, the clowns! We took a drink of ice out of a bottle and his nose lit up. Another had whits for ear-rings. Still another was almost as big as a house.

And the acrobats and contortionists! How the children thrilled as they watched the ladies under the big top and the stunts of catching each other with nothing but a big net to catch anybody who was off by the fraction of a second in timing.

A Day of Dream

Joy, joy! It was a wonderful afternoon. One to be remembered or spoken of for many moons to come. But the candies gone, the last shell carefully discarded, the last popcorn box from the bottom of the deeper recesses.

A special car provided through the courtesy of A. W. Mackenzie of the Winnipeg Electric, was waiting, and he tired, deliriously, happy little folks were soon at home, fast on pillow, telling each other for the umpteenth time, of the joys of the day. And now the children also called down blessings on the heads of their hosts, Dr. and Mrs. Sandheck.

COSGRAVE GOV'T SAVED BY SPEAKER'S DECIDING VOTE

After Deserting Her Only Child Six Years Ago, Mother Returns To Kidnap Him Yesterday

MOTHER SEIZED CHILD TO TAKE BACK TO STATES

Returns After Six Years To Secure Custody Of Her Son

FATHER DISTRACTED

Left Alone With Boy, Mrs. Smith Ran Away With Him

Thomas Smith, aged ten years, son of Mr. John Smith, an employee of N. Allen, this city was kidnapped by his mother, yesterday from the home of Mrs. William Wood, South John Street with whom he has been living since his maternal parent deserted him about six years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith (nee Owna Aselline), were married in this city about eleven years ago and lived together for about six years when Mrs. Smith left for Detroit, Michigan, where she has since been residing. It is rumored that she obtained a Michigan State divorce three years ago. Then there were two children born to Mr. and Mrs. Smith, one dying before the parents separated and Thomas whom Mr. Smith placed in the care of Mrs. Wood after Mrs. Smith left the city.

About a week ago the mother came to Belleville for a visit and from the information secured by the Intelligencer today she made one or two visits to Mrs. Wood's residence to see her child and during the hurried visit yesterday while Mrs. Woods was out of the room, the mother grabbed the child and fled.

Father Wrote Child Back

Yesterday Mrs. Lubbe is distracted with grief at the loss of his son whom he has tenderly cared for since the mother's desertion and the kidnapping has created a lit gatir in the district where the child had been living and in his has created a big stir in the district where Mr. Smith resides with his father. He has received much sympathy in his trouble.

When the Intelligencer this afternoon visited the two districts, kindly disposed neighbors displayed eagerness to inquire to the reasonableness of the story of the father's solicitude for his son since it was deserted by the mother and all were demonstrative in their sympathy for the father.

The boy was ten years old February 27th last and friends of Mrs. Wood state that she was a second mother to the little lad.

SELECT PORT AS TERMINAL POINT OF GREAT LAKES

Kingston, Brockville And Prescott Compete For Honor And Profit

READY BY 1930

Necessary To Provide Storage For Grain Traffic Down Lakes

Ottawa, Aug. 16.—The port of terminal for the Hudson Bay Railway having been decided on, Hon. C. J. Dunning, Minister of Railways and Canals must soon deal with the question of the new Great Lakes terminals and with Kingston, Brockville and Prescott all vitally interested in the selection which the Federal Government must make, the choice presents some difficulties. It will be made only after committee composed of representatives of the Department of Railways and Canals and Hydraulic Works and the Canadian National Railways, which has been investigating the possible locations, reports to the Minister.

This report will, it is expected, be made within a month. It will be submitted by Mr. Dunning to the cabinet. This morning, Mr. Dunning pointed out that there is no great hurry about selecting the terminal port. The important thing, he said, is to choose the best place. The Welland Ship Canal will not be open for navigation of large grain carriers until 1930, so there will be no need for the terminal facilities until then. On the other hand, the minister said, the terminal equipment must be ready to handle business when the new ship canal opens. This means that the selections must be made quite a long time before the new Welland canal is completed in order that the necessary buildings can be provided.

LIGHTS WORK

New Traffic Signal At Bridge And Front Seems Satisfactory

"People seem to be obeying the new traffic signal at the corner of Front and Bridge streets pretty well," stated the officer on duty at that point to the Intelligencer today. "We have not had much trouble."

The signal is suspended from the centre of the street and every 30 seconds the lights change their colour. The lights, of which there are three on four sides flash red for the halt and green for traffic to proceed. They are regulated by electricity and work for a traffic proceeding at 30 miles an hour.

Cosgrave Government Saved By The Closest Possible Margin

Dublin, Aug. 16.—Capt. William Redmond, leader of the National Blueshirts Fe Deputies in the Dail Eireann announced at today's sation that his party would vote for the Labor motion of non-confidence in the Cosgrave Government. ST. LAWRENCE DEVELOPMENT MORE IMPORTANT THAN PANAMA CANAL

Ex-Governor Of Kansas Favors Plan Of International Route

Charlotte, Ville Virginia, Aug. 16—Endorsement of the St. Lawrence waterway proposal as a means to bring the Middle West and the Atlantic coast inland through the St. Lawrence and the Great Lakes, with a by-product of Hydro Electric Power, by the state of was voiced to-day by Henry J. Allen, former Governor of Kansas and editor of the Wichita Beacon at the University of Virginia's Institute of Public Affairs. Supporting the international route as opposed to an "All American" plan, Mr. Allan said engineers declare the waterway would be of greater importance to forty-three million people of the middle west than the building of the Panama Canal. Once the St. Lawrence course, he said, would have the advantage of 625 miles in trade with Europe, as well as providing tremendous water power.

International waterways, he said, had estimated that the 32 mile lock proposed to equalize the rapids of the river would produce more than two million horse-power, which would be shared by Canada and the United States. Sale of power, he contends, would pay for all construction and relieve both countries of the necessity of appropriating the money of the tax payers."

PROFANE GOLF

Officials of the Barnsley Golf Club in England see no reason why players should be permitted to use on the golf course language which would not be permitted elsewhere in decent society. The golfers have been warned that a fourth or a first and possibly expulsion will be the penalty for using bad language.

The drive on "langwidge" is not new in England. The first official act to restrain was the Profane Oaths Act of 1746, which inflicted a stiffing sense of fines for the use of profane language according to the rank of the offender. The penalty was one shilling for a common laborer, soldier or seaman; two shillings for everyone below the rank of gentleman, and five shillings for those of or above that rank. No specific provision was made for golfers.

The Town Police Act of 1847 made the use of profane language an offence punishable by heavy fine or imprisonment not exceeding 14 days. The offence, however, had to be committed in a street, and the act was confined to "urban sanitary districts." In the monastery districts it was considered, presumably, that a foul word more or less was of little consequence.

Psychopathists, it may be observed, are rather hard on the use of strong language. Swearing, they maintain, is not indication of early temper; and temper is a sign of mental and moral weakness akin to insanity. Swearing, if taken in time, may be cured; but if the patient persists in his addiction no appreciable psychopathist would dare to answer for the consequences. From which it may be gathered that swearing accompanied by golf—or golf accompanied by swearing, whichever came first—will lead inevitably to fatal results.

But admitting for the sake of argument that the psycho-analyst is wrong, there is much to be said against the habit of swearing, particularly on the golf course. Though, as Shakespeare said, one may "seek to smephere the stars with oaths," the rubbered sphere with which the golfer is primarily concerned remains stolidly unaffected by the subtlest epithets and pungent asseverations of metal inferiority which the exasperated owner may heap upon it.

Anyway, as Quinillan has said, "To swear, except when necessary, is unbecoming to an honorable man." But even in this statement there is an avenue of escape. One has to consider the pleasure of others. A swearless golf course would be very dull for the caddies.

THE LAW WORKS

Magistrates in various parts of Ontario are showing little tendency to be lenient with offenders against the new Liquor Control Act. In Port William a day or two ago a man was fined $400 and sent to jail for making and selling liquor, while one day last week three men were given jail terms and one was deprived of a brand new car in which liquor was found. In other places, equally severe sentences are being imposed on violators of the act, and the provision of jail penalties for various offences is being strongly adhered to by those on the bench.

In showing no mercy to those who break the new law, the magistrates will probably have the hearty support of all right-thinking citizens. It was openly stated that one of the chief aims of the Liquor Control Act was to curb bootlegging and the illegal sale of liquor. The act was framed in such a way as to provide heavy penalties for those offences, and these penalties were meant to be enforced. Now that there has been made easily obtainable by those who desire to secure it, and generous conditions on to supply have been allowed, there can be no excuse for those who openly break the law. So far, the act has been a success, in that it has not brought any noticeable increase in drunkenness or drinking. It is accomplishing its purpose in that it is complying with the expressed desire of the people. The attitude of the magistrates towards it is helping to make it effective, and so long as that attitude continues, there will be an ever-decreasing tendency to commit violations of its provisions.

RADIO GROWS

Statistics just published show that there is one radio set in Canada to every thirty persons of the population of the Dominion, this country taking second place in the ratings of the world in the per capita ownership of these educational and entertaining machines. There are no less than 200,000 of these sets in Canadian homes, and, for a comparatively new invention, it must be said that their growth in popularity has been rapid. In the total of these sets, Ontario, as might be expected, leads the way, but it is significant to note that next in line come the prairie provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

The fact that the people on the prairies are so keenly interested in radio shows the value of the invention to people in the sparsely settled districts. It is a great boon to these settlers because it affords them a means of keeping in close touch with the doings of the outside world, not only in the field of entertainment, but also with its markets and current events. The information which is broadcast over the radio, now covers a wide field, and does much to banish the traditional isolation of farm life in the pioneer areas in the far west.

Talk happiness every chance
You get—and
Talk it good and strong!

That you and happiness

AEROPLANE IS PLAYING A BIG PART IN CANADA

Used For Mapping Wilderness Regions For Airman's Use

Winnipeg, Man. Aug. 16. (C.P.)—Such an important part is the aeroplane now playing in the development of Canada's natural resources that it has become necessary to prepare special maps of certain wilderness regions for the use of the runners of the upper air. After a lengthy period of exacting survey work the Topographical Survey, Department of Interior, Ottawa, recently issued the Winnipeg District Aeronautical Map, covering the area from Winnipeg to the point where the Manitoba-Ontario boundary line turns in its course from north to northeasterly. The map is printed in colors on the scale of eight miles to an inch.

It is a vital to the airman that all water features which it is possible to show on the scale mentioned be mapped in order that he may at all times now his location from the ground features below. As the most striking feature of the district is the intricate maze of waterways in the vicinity of the Ontario-Manitoba boundary, the result is that the map displays a mad tangle of lakes and rivers which could not fail to confuse the layman were not special means taken to simplify their indentation. To this end the regularly traveled water routes and the most important waterways are shown in a different color from their minor companions.

Less than a decade ago this region was an unexplored wilderness, known even by repute to few citizens of civilized Canada, but today the limelight of public attention is playing upon it, having been directed thence by the widely-heralded discoveries in the vicinity of Red Lake and other districts of Western Ontario north of the transcontinental railway lines. To meet the consequent demand for maps, the Topographical Survey, working in cooperation with the Canadian Air Force has carried out successfully a considerable amount of aerial photographic covering various portions of the region have been issued, including the Red Lake map itself.

Though prepared specially for the skyrunners, this latest wilderness chart will, if is believed, be in great demand with all whom the lust for riches or the pursuit of sport draw into the district. As it shows the ground features in much greater detail than is usual with the scale employed, those who travel by dog team in winter or by canoe in summer will find it of much greater value than the many previously issued.

This the northward moving tide of civilization is inundating another strip of the fast-retreating Canadian wilderness. Hard on the heels of the prospector follows the surveyor and the map-maker. In their footsteps will in reliable march the developer, the colonist and the merchant. And the aeroplane, typical of twentieth century speed, is playing a major role in the conquest of the unknown lands.

GOV'T SHIP TO BE EXPENSIVE

London, August 13.—One of the two airships now being constructed in England is in the hands of a private firm, while the other, the same type, is being built by the Government. The statement that the ship being built by the ministry will cost at least $750 000 more than the one being built under contract, is made by the select committee on estimates in a special report.

The committee report, "The R 100 is being built under contract for £150,000 for delivery by September 30, this year. The R 101 is being built by the Ministry at Cardington. In 1924 this station was valued at $1,510,000 and was therefore a place of some substance. It was stated in evidence that the construction of the ship would cost something like $2,000,000."

To this last sum the committee points out must be added $500,000 for the enlargement of the old shed at Cardington and $250,000 for construction of a mooring mast. This means that even when the mooring mast's cost and also a sum of $725,000 for new construction of a new shed are excluded from consideration, the cost of the government airship will be about $2,500,000. The two ships are of the same size.

A Golf Course in the Rough

Looking at this picture, you might think it was a section of a forest that had been struck by a tornado, or the first beginnings of a settlement in the heart of the wilds. But it will eventually be one of the fairways in the new golf course that is now under construction at Banff by the Canadian Pacific Railway. Decided by some of the finest scenery in existence, it will be the last word in wonder golf courses anywhere in the world. Immense difficulties will have been overcome in building the course, hills levelled, water courses bridged, soil brought by the car load, forests cut through, and the like. It will be a course that will be available for expert and for average players since there will be two routes that can be used over the 18-hole course, while the keen mountain air and the background variegated by glacier lakes, rivers and snow-capped peaks will be unrivalled by any golf course anywhere. It is anticipated that it will be opened in time for the beginning of the golf season next year.

Peacock, Pontiac had the Orvena's automobile blocked in. After vainly endeavouring to back out, a policeman on duty was on the scene by standers ignited the woman's car by the rear and enough so she could drive out. A badly damaged rear gave some indication to the fact that when two cars are scrapping and pushing something's going to break.

MORE TOURISTS THIS YEAR

So far this year there has been many more tourist registered at the "Quinte Park" Tourist Camp than for the whole of last year, including the month of September. Sixty care and two busses bedecked with banners of all descriptions and loaded with happy freight passed through the city today bound for Ottawa on a sight-seeing tour which is an annual affair is sponsored by the Department of Agriculture and supervised by W. D. Strachan the local representative.

A different route is taken each year by the caravan, last August they travel led to the State of Kentucky and next year some other spot will be chosen.

The party assembled at Chatham yesterday morning and remained in Toronto over night and set out early this morning with Belleville as their destination. After having lunch there the tourists gathered in the Market Square and pushed on to Kingston where they stop to camp for the night. Some of the parties carry camping outfits while others prefer the more comfortable lodgings provided in hotels. The speaker's first sentence was "What Means ye by this gathering" and then gave a brief historical sketch of the great defence of Derry with the heroic bravery, fabrial and sickness of the defenders until relief arrived from England, the speaker also spoke of the loyoalty of our Indian Brethren who showed their great lovalty to King and Flag, when the attempt was made to take Canada from the British Empire. The testing, fertility and climate of this section was touched upon and all were urged by their lives to continue in the desirable spot in the World's greatest Empire. A few words were spoken by the County Secretary, W. Bro. Hall and the True Blue organizer. There was a ball game between the girls of Point Anne and Bridgewater, no race for the fat and thin the girls and boys.

A GOOD BURNS STORY

Robert Burns, the poet of Scotland, was a lucky lad with his farm for many years and to gain money he obtained the post of exciseman. The job was not to his liking, it is probably because of modern times. He had charge of certain districts where he had to suppress bootlegging. He hailed the work, but he needed the $250 a year that it brought.

The smugglers and distillers on a big scale learned to fear him, for he was always on their heels and interfering in his pursuit. But to the poor man and woman of the country-side, who sold liquor illicitly, he was not so severe. The story is told that he went to the door of a poor woman who was selling liquor illicitly and exclaimed, "Kate, are you mad? Don't you know the supervisor and I will be upon you in 40 minutes!" But in time they arrived there was no sign of the sale.

BRIDE WAS ONCE SHIPPED TO B. C.

No Shortage Today, However, In British Columbia Capital

Victoria, B.C., Aug. 16 (C.P.)—While there does not seem to be any shortage of wives in the British Columbia capital today, less than 70 years ago the people was so far beneath the demand that brides were imported by the shipload from England and auctioned to the lonely bachelors of the Island by the local authorities.

Speaking recently before the Canadian Club on some of the odd aspects of pioneer life in the Province, Justice Denis Murphy described the arrival of the first of those "marriage boats," in 1862. The little port town was all agog as the boat swalled day. Women were there and far, between the mainland coast and the prospect of seeing them in mass caused many a husky male heart to throb.

Farmers and miners deserted their labors and hastened to the town. Long before the ship appeared in the harbor the quays were lined with eager, if somewhat sheepish, citizens.

It is not reported whether the venturesome ladies who dared an unknown country and unknown husbands on this occasion were overcome with bashfulness as they first beheld a group of wild hunters. Probably they were sufficiently coy to make the matter interesting to their cheeks, even if these did not come naturally. While many of the imported wives were just the first flush of youth and many more would have been mere infants in any beauty contest, they all looked good to the lonely island bachelors and when the great business of wooing was over they should marry who was settled, not one old maid was left to mourn her fate.

Since that day Victoria has been the scene of many society weddings which have been widely chronicled and received columns in the press, but the great day when the first Indian sandpiper's docking of this vessel still holds the record as an event of local interest. The city Victoria padres were overworked and rings were at a premium. As the story settlers

HAVING AND HOLDING ANOTHER'S HUSBAND

"I love you!" he whispers. "I adore you!—I shall go mad without you. All my life I have waited for you. Now at last I have found you and you must be mine. Yes, it is true that there may be another lady hearing my name. But what of it? What have you or I to do with man-made laws, my darling? Are we not husband and wife in the eyes of God?"

It's the old, old story—they've never changed a word of it since the Devil made the first record. This time it is Dora listening to it, her foolish eyes dazzled by love; her young feet fast straying nearer and nearer to the black abyss that will swallow up all her life's peace and pride and happiness.

DEAR ELSIE:

You have helped so many people I am in hopes you may help me. This is my trouble. A few months ago I met my ideal man. I fell deeply in love with him, and felt no sacrifice was too great to make for him. Now, that I feel I cannot give him up, I heard he was married. When I asked him, he vowed up and down he wasn't. My heart tells me what he says is true, although the gossip is gradually breaking me down. There is constantly a weight on my heart. But Elsie, I cannot give him up. I feel if his wife, if he has one, can't hold him, that I am entitled to receive his love and give him mine.

I have reached the stage where I am ready to cast my caution to the winds. We love each other. Only last night he begged me to elope with him. I didn't give him an answer, for although every fiber of my being yearned to say yes, my conscience held me back. Should I give him up? I feel as if I do, I will kill me. He is the first man I have really loved, and I have gone with many. Anxiously awaiting your advice and trying to do as you say.

DORA.

Sounds lovely, doesn't it, Dora?

If he is a free and honest gentleman, as he says he is, there's no need for all this deep, dark secrecy. Ten minutes with the License Clerk and the Justice of the Peace will make you his forever.

And even if he isn't quite as free and honest as he claims to be, there are divorces in this land. It is possible for him to be off with the old love before he is on with the new. Any hero with the railing should surely be willing to tidy up a little matter like that.

Don't you see, little girl, how easy it is to prove his falsity? I know that every throb of your heart cries out to him, but what will you have when this brief madness is past, if you go with him? A man who will assert his sovereignty and tell you that if you didn't care enough for your safety to protect yourself he "should worry". A man who will cast you aside as cruelly and casually as he is now casting aside his present wife.

You say now: "Well, if she couldn't hold him I have a right to him." WILL YOU SAY THAT WHEN HIS NEXT SWEETHEART TAKES HIM AWAY FROM YOU?

And how will you feel when he tells you that you were only a mistake, that he and the new love are "man and wife in the eyes of God"?

There Are No Last Roses This Summer

BUTTERICK 1549

Various cognition debates have been held on the subject, it has never been definitely decided which is less inspiring: one's sister wardrobe before spring cleaning or one's summer clothes just before the season ends. One thing, however, is certain: the last glorious days of summer are definitely happier for a fresh new frock, and that same fresh can very well be the one lasting the fall. The proof of this point is sketched above. With or without the head or neckline beautifications at the square neck and cuffs, this style requires very little time, skill or material to make; a monogram applied between pocket and belt heightens the individuality of this smartly simple frock.

Advice to Girls
By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl in my early teens and I love to whistle. I take piano lessons which I dislike, and I want to play them and take up whistling. However, my mother wants me to keep up my piano playing and forget whistling, but I just can't. Please advise me what to do.

BLUE EYES.

BLUE EYES: Your mother is wise and right in wanting you to keep up with your piano lessons. Can't you realize that it will help you greatly in developing your whistling if you understand music thoroughly? And a combination of both accomplishments will carry you much further than if you develop one to the detriment of the other. So practice, and study and combine the two, my dear, and I am sure you will find in the years to come that you will never regret your hours of practice

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a young girl in my teens and I love a young man to say "hello" to, but I would like to get acquainted with him in a better way. I like this young man very much, but I don't seem to attract him much, although he is very beautiful. I would like to have him come home friendly and take me to shows; and as I have read your answers I thought you probably could help me out.

A LONELY GIRL.

Please tell me how I can get acquainted with him.

A LONELY GIRL:

A LONELY GIRL: The next time you see the young man, as long as you know him well enough to say "hello" and don't you stop and have a chat with him? He may be waiting for this friendly gesture on your part, and then you could invite him to call, if you so desire. Or, you could have several chats with him before inviting him, which would be a better way, for it never does to let a young man think that you are really anxious for his company.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I have a friendship with a young man who seems to care a great deal for me. In former "affairs" he has not been known to be serious.

How can I know that he is serious.

BROWN EYES.

BROWN EYES: You can't! And I see no reason why you should want to. Brown Eyes. If you enjoy the company of this young man and his friend ship is a source of amusement and entertainment to you, why worry about the future. Accept his invitations, go about with your other friends, too, and don't spent your time brooding about "intentions."

WHAT'S NEW
(From a Woman's Standpoint)

What the clever woman wears is something that will bring a touch of color to otherwise drab surroundings.

With her sleeveless tennis frock, Mlle. Lenglen, the famous French player wears a glittering diamond arrow in her bandeau.

Women are tiring of fur-trimmed coats outside of the sports models, and that this fall will see a decided trend toward plain cloth coats

Drecoll, famous French designer, has contrary to age-old custom, just made a woman, Madame Besancon de Wagner, his art director.

The business women in Vienna have won their case and be allowed to dress as men even to stop hats and frock coats, should they feel this way inclined.

The conventional orange blossoms has come was disposed with and orange blossoms were worn in bracelet garlands about the wrists of the Princess Natalie Paley, who was married this week in Paris to M. Lucien Lelong, the Paris couturier

Knee bracelets, to be worn from two to three inches below the knee, are among the jewelry novelties for the autumn. The bracelets consist of circlets of elastic and gold, some plain and some set with sparkling stones.

SINCLAIR'S

CURSE OF LOVE
By Mildred Harbour

"I read the note you left for your father," he answered calmly. "That was a rather indirect step, Norma. "It was the truth," she answered, in a low voice.

"But not all the truth," he reminded her, with a stern smile. "How long has this been going on, may I ask?"

"How long has what been going on?" "Why quibble about the obvious?" he shrugged. "Your affair with Stokes, of course."

Crimson rushed to the very roots of her hair.

"How dare you say such a thing, Phil Hall? How dare you think such a thing?"

"If you'll tell me what other conservation a man could put upon his wife's presence after midnight in a bungalow on a deserted beach with an amorously devoted former suitor is more than she has given the afternoon," he laughed harshly.

"What do you mean?" she asked, puzzled. In the exciting events of the night, she had completely forgotten her interview with Stokes that afternoon. Then had he been there? Phillip had passed by while Stokes was telling her the thing that destroyed her happiness.

"No matter," Kendall shrugged. "Oh, what a fool, what a deluded fool I've been!" he added bitterly.

"Phillip!" Norma's voice trembled with anguish. "Phillip!"

"Why did you marry me?" she choked. "Why not have taken Stokes, in the first place?"

A sob escaped Norma then:

"Why did you marry her?" she choked, her knowledge of the real reason, as crudely revealed by Stokes, filling her anew with despair.

He shrugged.

"It's too late to discuss that now." And his own deep and terrible hurt made him add savagely: "Heaven knows I have reason to regret it!"

She recoiled, as if he had struck her a blow. Her last hope died. There was now, she told herself no possibility that the whole affair had been a fabrication on Stokes' part. Phillip himself had as good as admitted it. She didn't suspect that he spoke so only because he was frantic with jealousy; that he believed his love for her had been trampled upon and tossed lightly aside, as if it were of no moment.

"Oh!" She clenched her slim hands and struck them frenetically together. "It's all so terrible — so terrible!"

"But so simply adjusted," he said, with a short laugh.

She turned at him, tearful, tense.

CHAPTER XI
MISUNDERSTANDING

When Sydney Stokes left Norma and her husband alone in the bungalow and went out into the night, his face was set and grim. He knew that the impending interview would be the most decisive. Either Norma would declare her intention of leaving her husband—in which case, Stokes confidently believed, despite her emphatic words to the contrary, that there would be a chance for him—or else there would be a speedy reconciliation.

He scrambled up the path to the place where his car was parked under a single light that he had turned on at the garage door upon his arrival. The night was very dark, and twice, before he gained the top of the cliff, he fell.

When he reached his car, he felt in his vest pocket for the switch-key and his fingers encountered the tiny chamois bag containing the black opal that Norma had given him for safekeeping. He couldn't resist taking out the jewel and examining it again. He had never seen anything quite so lovely. It glowed with all the beauty of its slumbering fires. Though not particularly imaginative, he felt, as had Norma, and Cynthia before her, that the thing lived. With something approaching a shudder, he returned it to the tiny chamois bag.

At that moment, a dark something that he had taken for a shadow projected itself swiftly, noiselessly, in front of him. The muzzle of a revolver was pressed against his stomach, and a husky voice ordered:

"Put 'em up, bo!"

In his first shock of amusement that there was actually a holdup man in this deserted world of closed summer cottages, he almost obeyed.

The next minute he made a lunge at the indistinct figure, that uttered the challenge, knocking the revolver aside as he did so. There was a brief struggle. He rallied exultantly that his opponent was a small man and not too keen for a fight.

But suddenly, just as he thought he was getting the upper hand, there was a blinding flash. Something seared his chest. He knew in an instant of agony. And, after that, darkness.

In the bungalow, Norma and Phillip Kendall were staring at each other, momentarily speechless. Then:

"That was a shot!" muttered Kendall and plunged out into the night. Norma followed, followed close at his heels. But she had hard work in keeping up with him as he took the cliff path at a run.

When she had clambered panting to the top, she was vaguely aware of a shadow, deeper than the night, that dodged and swiftly disappeared along the cliff. She ran to the front of the garage, where Kendall was bending over something dark that lay sprawled on the sand.

"It's Stokes!" Kendall looked up at her briefly. "He's been shot."

Norma began to tremble violently.

"It's he—he is dead?" she whispered fearfully, her teeth chattering with terror.

"Not yet," Phlip stood up and threw the rays of his flashlight about him. "He can't be dead! He is himself at any rate. There's no gun about, and there are traces of other footsteps than ours and his."

He bent over the wounded man and slipped his arms carefully under his shoulders.

"Help me get him to the house," he ordered Norma. "Take his feet."

She obeyed, and slowly, carefully, they got him down the steep path and into the house and laid him on a couch.

Kendall removed Stoke's coat, waistcoat, and shirt, and found a wound just below the shoulder. Norma, controlling her impulse to faint or scream, hurried to her sister and took and such aid as supplied as the bungalow contained.

"The bullet seems to have pierced a lung," said Phlip. "He has lost a fre mendous amount of blood."

"Will he die?" quavered Norma.

"Don't know. Probably." Phlip's own hurt made him curt.

"Oh!" It was a wail which he later prized to mean Norma's acquiah at the thought of losing the man she loved.

"I'll go for a doctor." He rose to his feet and reached for his coat.

She stopped him with a imperative gesture. Suddenly, she was strangely calm.

"Listen, Phlip, you must do as I say. Everything depends upon it. There is a doctor, Dr. Merrivale—an old acquaintance of Dad's, who lives about five miles from here on the way to town. But you must not stop there. You must go on to town as quickly as you can and phone back to Dr. Merrivale. Don't give your name—merely say that a man has been wounded and is here at the cottage. He will not ask questions, and he will come quickly, because—he likes us, you see."

"Nonsense," Kendall was drawing on his gloves. "Why all that subterfuge while Stokes probably is dying! You're out of your head, Norma."

She looked at him steadily. She no longer trembled.

"You must do it, Phlip!" she said quietly. "I suppose it gets out that you were here when the—the accident happened? Every one will say you did it. Holding on earth could save you—and Sydney may die."

Suddenly her calm deserted her.

"Phlip!" she cried hysterically. "You must go. Go. Leave me alone with him! Oh, Sydney's sake! And for mine!"

She didn't know why she uttered that last sentence, except that, in her deeper ation, she wanted to save him, to get him away, in case Stokes died. She had a horrible vision of her husband standing in the dock, while a prejudiced jury would see it that way—the night, the deserted bungalow, the husband standing upon his wife and her former suitor there.

An Indian Foursome at Banff

They weren't so strong on playing when they started, but when they arrived at the 18th hole at the Banff Springs Hotel golf course, this foursome of Indian Chiefs and their wives needed lots of persuasion before they would abandon their expressed intention of making another round. It was during the recent Indian Day Celebrations at Banff, an affair that is now in its 20th sensful renewal. Left to right, they are Mrs. Sitting Eagle, Chief Sitting Eagle, Chief Black Buffalo and Mrs. Black Buffalo. The latter is getting ready to putt. They made a gorgeous picture in all their war paint, feathers and finery, but whether their costumes were as suited to golf as plus fours and sport shirts is another question. When Mrs. Black Buffalo hit her tee in a drive, she talked to herself in Stony Indian language but we need not go into that, especially since she and her husband eventually won the match. There is no need to detract from the glory of this success by mentioning the number of strokes it took to go round. And now, the Indians are talking of substituting the Royal and Ancient for the usually-played-at Scots and Sun Dance at the next celebration.

YOUNG GIRLS A GREAT PROBLEM

Want Money, Insist Upon Going To Work—Crave Cosmetics

Toronto, Ont., Aug. 16.—(By C.P.)—The problem of the flighty-minded adolescent girl and the importance of the Junior High School in reformation of this type was the subject of an address at one of the meetings of the World Federation of Education Associations meeting here by Miss Jessie B. Oldham, junior High School principal of New York City.

"The problem to be faced," said Miss Oldham, "is a girl whose budding womanhood is expressed in an agressive by expanding age, and intense vanity and love of dress and excessive use of cosmetics." She wants money, so insists on going to work. If the mother refuses or the law intervenes, she is apt to become a truant. When returned to school she is rather apt to lay hands on whatever money she can find at home—in her room, euphemism or phrasing, "borrows" it and tries running away.

Miss Oldham stated that the sex instinct which was being minimized by some authorities on child psychology could not be ignored by the teacher. It created a most dangerous situation resulting very often in "an over-fateful ence in the ability to take care one own self."

Miss Edna Hood, of Racine, Wis., supervisor of art in Kenosha, is a busy secretary, who is all on fire with her own work and ready to talk about it. A graduate of Chicago and Columbia and a post-graduate of Oxford, Miss Hood wants to see the principle of creative work permeating every grade of education, from kindergarten to the university. Self-expression, self-realization is the keynote of all we do and we try to surround the child with the influences that will bring out his talent girls. We believe that every child is born with some artistic power and we seek to have him develop it through to many mediums—clay, sand, bone—we are strong on clay modeling ...that is ready to his hand."

Some of the perplexities of this great meeting of world educationists are described:

There was Miss Mary Tweedie for one—she's a charming woman, who is head of the Leather College, Edinburgh, perhaps the oldest girls school in the United Kingdom, as it was founded in 1864, and has as Miss Tweedie said, lots and lots and lots of old girls all over the world."...Miss MacKenzie of Governors' House, British Columbia, is an ex-pupil, Dr. Ogilvie Gordon is an old.

Miss Tweedie is an honor graduate of Edinburgh, a past president of the Educational Institute of Scotland, one of the two women members of the Advisory Council to the Scottish Education Department—a swell council of 20; and the president of the Scottish Education Institute of Scotland when the World Federation met in Edinburgh, and had the honor of conferring degrees on five notable men.

Perhaps for Scotland also, there was Miss Closser, whose first question was "Do you know Miss Cora Bind of Winnipeg? She's a wonderful woman." Miss Closser, who is head mistress of Trevelyn College, Durham, has been out in the coast and back on a personally-conducted tour with our immigration department as "a very complacent"—For she is deeply interested in agriculture, courses in gardening, hitherto-school and poultry-raising are given in her school, under the aegis of the agricultural college, to the daughters of the 2,000 family settlements placed through the Rural Credits and Immigration Board. "I have seen a land of promise," said Miss lessor, "and I would like to Come—to my boys and girls at home.

RAILWAY WILL BE COMPLETED IN YEAR 1929

C. S. Gzowski, C. N. R., Speaks Of Hudson Bay Railroad

End of Steel, Hudson Bay Railway, mile 224.—It is expected that the railway to Port Churchill will be completed towards the close of 1929, said C. S. Gzowski, chief engineer construction department, Canadian National Railways, who has been charged by the railway Commission with rehabilitation and further prosecution of the Hudson Bay Railway.

"At Churchill there will be no difficulty establishing railroad terminals for any reasonable facilities required at relatively small cost, and being generally flat for a considerable width giving a wide choice for detailed location," Mr. Gzowski said. "There are 150 miles of railroad construction to complete. Soundings indicate muskeg to depth and conditions of front to be overcome. Work on the railway during summer of 1928 will be employed clearing and grading ready for track laying and bridging and culverts. During 1928. Proximity to various streams and rivers assure proper drainage to roadbed."

Wireless communication opened with Hudson Straits air patrol when Nelson, Tuesday last, report excellent on base established and observation reports are expected soon.

VETERANS DON'T LIKE THE LAW

Woodstock, Ont., Aug. 16.—On behalf of a number of local disabled war veterans, the Woodstock post of the Canadian Legion is making a protest against the regulation whereby these disabled must pay to pass a medical examination and pay an extra dollar before being allowed a motor driving permit.

Some veterans claim that they should not be subject to such examination and extra expense an account of having been disabled while serving their country in the war, while others are allowed to secure license without examination. They say some of the disabled veterans in Woodstock who drive cars have every bad an accident of any kind since starting to drive.

"Mummy," said Sylvia, seriously, "I want to marry Peter."

"Do you darling? Why?" replied the child's mother.

"Cos his uncle's given him half a dollar."

A NARROW ESCAPE

Peterboro, Aug. 16.—Quick action by a ready-willed insurance agent saved Mrs. Elmer Trotter, a widow living with her two daughters at 648 1-2 George Street, from death by asphyxiation on Sunday morning, shortly after 9 o'clock.

When the collector, John Hoyland, got no response to his knocking and at the same time became aware of a strong smell of gas issuing from the house, he instantly realized that something was wrong. Assisted by Harry Bennewith, employed in a store nearby, he broke in the door, and found Mrs. Trotter lying unconscious in the bathroom and the house filled with gas proceeding from the unlighted stove. The two men carried Mrs. Trotter out of the house into the store of Nathan Stalker, which is situated immediately below Mrs. Trotter's residence, and the first inspirations of the men was that the old lady was dead and a search for other victims of asphyxiation was made.

Vincent Lopez Lists New Conquest for American Music

New York City.—A new strong hold for jazz is reported by Vincent Lopez, famous jazz band leader, also known as the sheik of the radio, who has just come back from Spain.

"In Spain," declares Mr. Lopez, "the government has abolished gambling, and Americans are here in place to take its place. In all the Spanish casinos are roulette tables and wheels of fortune have been supplanted by the saxophone and banjo.

"At first it was assumed that the casinos would have to close. What good would they be since gambling was forbidden? Some of the casino owners were quick to ready to face the inevitable and adapt.

"Then, one of their number, as a sort of desperate last measure, without much hope, I think, that it would amount to anything, hired a group of American jazz boys through Europe by playing for dancers. Sometimes they played in the public squares of the cities to which they came. Always they were able to draw a good audience and an enthusiastic one.

"The proprietor of the casino at once placed a little, in spite of himself. After he had brought them into his casino, he quickly grew more and more cheerful for he began to draw back the old patrons. Incredible as it seemed to him, those who had once come to gamble now arrived to dance and wind their canes and parasols as customers.

"Pretty soon, Spain not only had the jazz band craze hard, but began to originate jazz bands of her own and "Valencia" and "Barcelona," sent by Spain to America, have become the most trustworthy staples in the American orchestra leaders' repertoire of hits."

Mr. Lopez, who is of Spanish descent, brought back from Spain the number of musical instruments and several native dances which he has introduced in his Casa Lopez night club, the Casa Lopez Cafe.

FINE RECORD OF TWO YANK COWS

Dairymen everywhere are interested in the outstanding records of two cows, offering entirely different examples of boring breeding, both of which have just completed tests which show them to be unusual milk producers.

The unusual circumstances come from the fact that one of the animals in question is a thoroughbred, while the other has no pedigree whatever.

Eight-Year-Old

Bronnie, an eight-year-old cow of the Ayrshire strain, owned by Ralph Cripps of Camden, Me., is one of the animals in question. The other is Lion's Lilac, a pure-bred Jersey, registered with the Jersey Association of America, and both animals are of the highest standards of that organization. She's in Oregon.

Lion's Lilac has just completed a 301-day test, which was begun when the animal was but one year and five months old. In this time the yearling gave 10,752 pounds of milk, and 742.46 pounds of butter fat.

Record For Yearlings

Lilac's best month was the tenth of the test, during which period she produced 91 pounds of butter fat. Over the entire test, her milk aver aged 35.7 per cent. fat. Lion's Lilac is the property of Harry D. Lilly of Independence, Ore., who bred and tested her.

Brownie is in a different category altogether. Without any pedigree to the bovine world, and with no pedigree, she has produced 1,000 pounds of butter fat in a year, according to the records.

Leigh Miller, of Halifax, outstanding Olympic prospect of the swimmers who has been sent to the Canadian championships and Olympic trials at Toronto, August 20. He is training under Bobby Kerr and Billy Sherring, famous Canadian runners. Miller, who has run the "century" several times in ten seconds, is expected to equal that mark on the fast Toronto track and win a place on the Canadian Olympic team.

BELLE THEATRE

Johnny Ricket, one of the most daring western riders identified with the movies, can draw a gasp from even the most blase motion picture director. While working on location in Arizona with the "Jim the Conqueror" company, Johnny had the entire company constantly worried for fear he would break his neck in his wild dashes astride his cayuse. Director George B. Seitz finally had to warn his "wild horseman" to ease up a little and not take so many chance with life and limb.

William Boyd, Elinor Fair, Tom Santschi, Tully Marshall, Walter Long and Marcelle Corday are in the cast of "Jim the Conqueror," a Metropolitan production which is drawing great audiences to the Belle theatre as every showing. Don't miss this thrilling photoplay. It's worth while.

Because of the masterful manner in which he handled the role of Tom Kirby in "The Last Moment" William Boyd was selected by Director George B. Seitz to play the main lead in the latters new Metropolitan production "Jim the Conqueror." The story is adapted from the novel by Peter B. Kyne.

"Jim the Conqueror," which has made a big hit at the Belle theatre, is a story centring around the bitter feud that once existed between cattle barons and sheep men in the west. Kyne has developed this theme into a gripping tale. Seitz, whose fame as a director of outdoor spectacles was established by "The Thundering Herd," "Desert Gold," and "The Last Frontier" has done excellent work in his latest screen bit.

BIG CROWD FOR THE FINAL GAME

Deloro Will Attempt To Tie-Up Series At Exhibition Park

Baseball is the sole topic of conversation of the town these days and in the main it centres around the possibilities of the Bellville team in the second of the play-off series with Deloro to-morrow afternoon. The Diamonds gained the verdict in the first game on the fireflers own diamond on Saturday and now they are out to make it two straight over the villagers. Tomorrow's game will tell the tale and even if the locals lose they stand a thin chance but every man-jack is anxious to end the whole thing and toss Deloro into the discard tomorrow. The boys are all hitting the apple with a vengeance right now and if they continue their good work should come out on the right side of the ledger. But the Deloro club had previously won six straight and the locals will sail in early and get the ball rolling, as they did last Saturday and attempt to gain an early lead.

"Rocket" Gibson is feeling fit and fine after his last triumph and is ready to repeat. Manager Elliott will probably send his last hose the veteran Frank Leal to the mound.

Messrs. Kay and Courtney of Peterboro will be here to umpire and if they handle the indicators as well as they did last Saturday there will be no kick from the crowd. The game will get under way at 3.15 sharp at the Exhibition Park.

BOTH PUGILISTS MAY QUIT RING

New York, Aug. 16.—The second episode of the Dempsey-Tunney battle for the world's heavyweight championship may be the last ring engagement for both principals, startling as this idea may seem in an era of million-dollar purses.

So far as Tex Richard is concerned the thought may perish here and now, for Tex has an understanding with both by which the winner would appear in another heavyweight extravaganza in 1928, but the promise persists, nevertheless, that neither Tunney nor Dempsey is anxious to prolong his ring career.

Tunney, whose tastes run counter to the blare and glare that goes with the heavyweight title, frequently has told friends that he intended to hang up his gloves "when he made his million." He will just about have it when he collects around $750,000 for defending the crown in Chicago. With one million in hand, of course, Tunney may decide another will be useful, providing he again defeats Dempsey. If he loses, Tunney might be more in a mood to retire than otherwise, perhaps to take up the political career that has interested him at times.

Dempsey is more likely to quit the ring, win or lose, than Tunney, most observers believe, in spite of his professional agreement to fight again in 1928.

Dempsey's prime object in returning to action was to win back the crown he were and gathered an highly for seven years. He might have retired last fall had he successfully defended it against Tunney. Well fixed financially, the erstwhile Manassa Mauler, if victorious at Chicago, probably would decide he had had enough of the flatic life and retire on his laurels, but if he is defectively beaten as he was last year, there is small doubt it will be Dempsey's last fight. Defeat would leave little basis on which to erect another comeback effort.

BRAVES WON OUT IN TENTH INNING

New York, Aug. 16.—Boston and Philadelphia, cellar rivals, waged stubborn warfare yesterday at Philadelphia and the seventh place Braves won out in the tenth by 5 to 11 over the last place Phillies. The game was the only one carded in the National League for the day, and enough hits were made for several ball games. Boston made 17 and Philadelphia 14.

Jacques Fournier, Boston first-baseman, and Jimmy Wilson, Philadelphia catcher, batched home runs while Richbourg and Urban of the Braves, and Sand and Wrightstone, of the Phillies, each assembled two hits apiece for three hits. Making four runs in the eighth the visitors tied the score and won in the tenth on a pinch-hit by Jack Smith which scored Billy Andy Hitt. Philadelphia used three pitchers including Jack Scott, who pitched one ball, saw it driven to centre-field and was replaced.

A. V. Rogers, ex-British pilot, was killed while testing his Dole plane for the Honolulu sky marathon.

SportOgramS

By "The Observer"

All roads lead to the ball park tomorrow where the Deloro Club will attempt to redeem themselves following their ignominious defeat at the hands of the Nationals on Saturday last. It's a cinch that Manager Elliott will not trust to "Tinky" Woods the ex-Peterboro alsikman to bring home the bacon. Woods failed lief ly on Saturday and had to be relieved shortly after the start of the third round. Frankie Leal who had good success against the Richardson's is likely to be the selection and with the manner in which the Nationals are clouting the old apple Frankie will have to be in fine form. The locals demonstrated that Ralph is no mystery to them on Saturday. Gibson is a sure starter for the Mills clan. Good weather is promised and fans will no doubt turn out in large numbers for the play off tilt. The locals won on their merits on Saturday and if they dish up the same brand of ball tomorrow they'll win in a walk. But a ball game, like an election and a horse race is never won until the last man is out and the Deloro crowd are sore all over after the result of the last game and the team correctly is condemned of College lads who don't know the meaning of the word quit.

Twig Woodley and his cubs in latest entry in girls soft-ball will be conclusive with Alan Meagher's Beavers in a friendly tilt on the armouries lawn tonight. Mr. Woodley who has been watching the others all summer went out and selected a team for himself and from all accounts they are a real aggregation. It was thought that every girl who could wield a bat was picked up by some team or another but Twig uncovered some dark horses whom he says are the real goods.

The Beavers play-off with Napanee for the Bay of Quinte League tomorrow night in Napanee and although past records show the Leaf to be the best of the two, the locals are hoping to put their best foot forward.

Babe Vincent's team the Supremes are playing off with the Parkrides for the Sunnyside championship. The Supremes won the first game but Parkrides came back in the second and now the two are knotted up. Alan Meagher says after seeing the two in action that Parkrides are the best and if Supremes win it will be due to Miss Vincent's pitching.

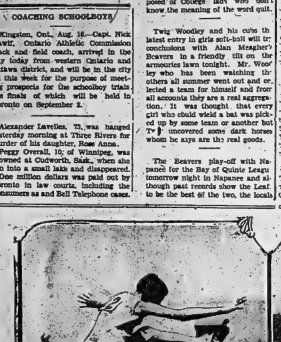

WARM DEBATE IN PLAYER AWARDS

New York, N.Y., Aug. 16.—It promises to be a warm debate when the newspaper experts assigned to the 50 vote on the awards of the major leagues' most valuable player's trophies this year.

It's possible to narrow the field down pretty well, but the argument will be heated when it comes to deciding, for instance, whether the youthful batting star, Lefty Wasser, or the veteran Joe Harris, at first base, has been more valuable to the Pirates, or whether "Gabby" Hartnett, brilliant catcher, or Charley Root, pitching ace, has been the biggest asset to the Chicago Cubs.

Hughie Critz, who was runner-up to he National League star player contest last year to Bob O'Farrell, also has many boosters, especially since his first real return to form in the last few weeks, when the Reds climbed out of the cellar to top the second division. Likewise, Frankie Frisch, erstwhile New York Giant, has proved himself one of the most valuable cogs in the Cardinal machine.

In the American League it may be equally as difficult to decide whether Joe Gehrig or Tony Lazzeri has been the most vital aid to the Yankees. Gehrig has supplied the bigger punch

EXPECT TO SEAT 160,000 PEOPLE

Rickard Will Easily Sell All Tickets He May Print

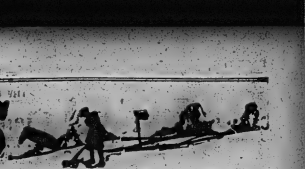

Chicago, Ills., Aug. 16.—The Illinois State Athletic Commission took up the public's side in the forthcoming heavyweight championship battle between Gene Tunney, present title holder and Jack Dempsey, former champion. The Commission scanned blue prints which show how Tex Rickard proposes to seat one hundred and sixty thousand in the great Soldier Field Stadium on September 22. Whatever the commissioners say today on the number of seats and the price the public will pay for them, will define the limits of Rickard's records in flight crowds and gate receipts. Nearly a million and a quarter dollars already has been placed in tickets orders, with the demand increasing. Apparently Rickard will easily be able to sell all the tickets the commission will give him permission to print.

SIXTY-FOUR ENTERED FOR TENNIS TITLE

New York, N.Y., Aug. 16.— Miss Helen Wills, Wimbledon Champion, heads upper half of draw for the woman's national tennis championship starting next Monday at Forest Hills, N.Y., and Mrs. Molla Mallory defend ing title holder, heads the lower division. Sixty-four players, comprising the finest array of talent that ever has been attracted to tournament, will compete.

Prices of securities on the New York Stock Exchange crashed badly under heavy selling of liquidation since the severe reaction in 1929.

But Lazerri has been the club's big defensive star, besides wielding a potent bat. Babe Ruth, of course, barred won the honor before, is out of the running.

IMMIGRATION ON UPWARD TREND

Toronto, Aug. 16.—According to the latest available statistical figures issued by the department of Immigration and colonization at Ottawa and received here last night, immigration to the Dominion of Canada during the first three months of the present fiscal year shows an increase over the immigration for the same period of last year of 60 per cent.

While in April, May and June, 1926 only 48,304 immigrants arrived to settle in Canada, the figures for the same quarter of this year show 77,434. Immigrants from Britain for the period increased from 21,833 in 1926 to 37,453 in 1927 during the quarter. Immigrants from other than British and the States have increased more than 100 per cent. from 20,234 to 43,288.

COUNTESS WILL BE PRESENT AT CONS. MEETING

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 16.—A countess will mark her ballot in the selection of a permanent party leader at the Conservative convention to be held in Winnipeg on October 11.

An announcement made by the national committee organizing for the meeting, stated that the Countess of Ashburnham, of Ashburnham, NB., will be one of the fully accredited delegates at the Winnipeg gathering from the constituency of Kent-Sunbury.

Lady Ashburnham is Canadian born and the daughter of W. H. Anderson, of Fredericton, N.B. In 1902, she married Hon. Thomas Ashburnham, who succeeded his brother in 1913 as sixth Earl of Ashburnham. Lord Ashburnham, who died in 1924, without an heir, was the last earl of this line. Lady Ashburnham returned to Canada from England subsequently.

BABE'S HOMER FUTILE

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 16.—Babe Ruth made a home run here today, but the Yanks dropped an exhibition game to the Indianapolis club by a score of 8 to 5. The combination of a great swat by the Babe and a victory for the home club pleased the overflow crowd of about 9,000.

Father Fails To Trace His Lost Son---Gang Of Beeton Thieves Relieved Miss Smart Of Bonds

FAILS TO TRACE LOST SON TAKEN AWAY BY MOTHER

Mrs. Woods Permitted The Woman To Take Child Out To Dinner

PROMISED TO RETURN

Little Lad Was Well Cared For And Doing Well At School

Up until going to press this afternoon no word was heard of Thomas Smith, ten-year-old son of Mr. John Smith of this city, who was kidnapped by his mother on Monday of this week. Mrs. Smith had not seen her child since deserting it over five years ago.

As stated in yesterday's Intelligencer, Mr. and Mrs. Smith had not been living together for over five years, when the wife deserted her child and husband and went to Detroit, where she has since obtained a Michigan State divorce and remarried. At the time of the desertion the father placed the youngster in the care of Mrs. William Woods, South John Street who has since lavished a mother's care on the little lad and treated him as her own son and today feels his loss as keenly as though he were her own child.

Refused First Request

About one week ago the mother returned to Belleville and has been visiting at the home of her brother, Mr. Ameliaon. On Wednesday, August 10th she called at Mrs. Wood's residence and asked permission to take the boy to St. Michael's Picnic, which request Mrs. Woods refused. On Monday morning, the mother again came to Mrs. Wood's house and asked to be allowed to take the child over to her brother's residence for dinner promising to return him in the afternoon. Mrs. Woods decided to this request and the mother took the child and neither have been seen or heard of since.

Today when The Intelligencer was in conversation with Mr. Smith he had nothing but the most sincere compliments for the kind attention which Mrs. Woods has showered upon his little son since placing him in her care. Mrs. Woods, when interviewed at the newspaper office this morning displayed sincere sorrow at the loss of her foster son and stated that he was a bright, cheerful little fellow, being in the Junior Second Class at Queen Alexandra School.

The former Mr. Smith is now married to the son of a well known Belleville family and left for Detroit at about the same time as she went to the United States.

DEPUTY FAILED TO RECORD VOTE

John Jinks Was Not Kidnapped; Just Changed His Mind

London, Aug. 17.—The Dublin correspondent of the Evening Star today makes a mystery of the failure of Deputy John Jinks to vote in yesterday's division in the Dail Eireann in which the Free State government was victorious only by a margin of the vote of the Speaker of the House.

"Was Mr. John Jinks kidnapped? is the caption over the Star's article. The correspondent says that Jinks, who is a member of Capt. Redmond's National League party, supported the motion to vote against the Government which was passed at a party caucus yesterday afternoon and was in his place in the Dail Eireann an hour before the vote was taken. After that, no one can recall seeing him.

Changed His Mind

Dublin, Tuesday, Aug. 17.—Deputy John Jinks of Sligo who shot into fame through his unexpected failure to vote in yesterday's division in the Dail Eireann, with the result that the Cosgrave Government was retained in power, was declared by a government informant today to have left the Chamber in consequence of a last moment change of mind.

TOURIST CAMP HAS DOUBLED THE REGISTRATIONS OF LAST SEASON

Local Grounds Are Highly Praised By Visitors Who Use Them

Registrations at Belleville's Tourist Camp on Dundas Street this year show that over double the number have stopped this year as compared with the whole of last season.

A photo of the camp appeared in the Toronto Mail and Empire yesterday which depicts a lovely scene with the tents pitched in every corner of the spacious grounds.

Tourists from every state of the Union and every Province in the Dominion have remained over night and openly declare that better accommodations are furnished for the visitors than any other city along the line.

Mr. Sidney Weston, supervisor, is directly in charge of the grounds and offers every facility to the travellers. Additional accommodations in the form of lighting and water were arranged this year and equipment is provided for motorists who wish to change tires etc.

Alderman Walker's department had charge of the camp last year and Alderman Russell Wallen, chairman of the Tourist and Publicity Committee, is the man at the helm this year. Early this spring Alderman Wotten began laying for improvements this year.

There were sixteen privies to take at present of the grounds last evening but this has surpassed that figure. Twenty-four additional showers are to be installed and the members of the city Council will make an observation within a few days to determine the permanent requirements. At the present time the sign is working twenty-four hours a day but it is believed that it is not necessary to have it lighted after the traffic subsides in the evening.

It has been noticed that tourists pay more attention to the change of lights than do local motorists and accidents are bound to happen if drivers do not adhere to the signals.

HUSBAND CHEERFUL AS HE PAYS FOR HIS WIFE'S PRANK

Crashing through the gates the barred the way across the railway tracks on Pinnacle Street about 9 o'clock last night, Mrs. C. Coynes, a visitor in the city, drove on over the tracks, and instead of making her getaway while she had the chance, turned her car around and drove back with pieces of the gate still clinging to the front of the car, only to be promptly arrested by the local police.

This morning she appeared in police court charged with a breach of the Highway Traffic Act and was fined $50.00 and costs by Magistrate Millet. The fine was cheerfully paid by her husband.

FAIL TO ALWAYS OBEY THE LIGHT

Many motorists are complaining that the traffic sign at the corner of Front and Bridge Streets is too high and they are forced to crain their heads out of the side of the car in order to get a clear view. Chas. Campbell city engineer states that observations were taken in other cities and the height of Belleville's sign corresponds with those at intersections in other places. The regulating of the sign as regards the time limit for the "GO" "STOP" and "WARNING" lights has not been definitely settled and the members of the city Council will make an observation within a few days to determine the permanent regulations. At the present time the sign is working twenty-four hours a day but it is believed that it is not necessary to have it lighted after the traffic subsides in the evening.

It has been noticed that tourists pay more attention to the change of lights than do local motorists and accidents are bound to happen if drivers do not adhere to the signals.

Art Goebel Appears To Hold His "Woolaroo" Well In Lead

LAND ABOUT 4 P. M.

Mildred Doran, Teacher, Rides Biplane Bearing Her Name

San Francisco, Calif., Aug 17.—Trans-Pacific air-racers soared on through clouds today in the first great aviation derby over a twenty-four hundred mile course between the Mainland and Honolulu. Law'dan is thousand miles of the long journey was in front of, at least one of the pilots. Art Goebel, early today. Two other contestants were sighted beyond the half way mark by steamers. They were thought to be the plane Aloha, piloted by Mardriven by Jack Frost. Official observers believed the fourth racer, the Miss Doran, in which Mildred Doran is a passenger was following the Goebel's pace seekers after losing an hour and a half through a forced landing after the take-off yesterday.

Within 200 Miles

Honolulu, Aug. 17.—The Radio Club from Art Goebel in the Woolaroo; giving the monoplane's position as eight hundred miles from Honolulu. "All well aboard", the message said.

Honolulu time is two and half hours earlier than San Francisco time. Four planes, if they make the 2400 mile course in the time the winners said they expected, would arrive about 7.30 Francisco time.

A later message picked up from Goebel gave his position as approximately three Honolulu. The plane reported everything running on schedule. Three other planes were reported in sight by steamers passed the halway mark. None of the three carried radio trailing antennae apparatus and it could not be stated with assurance which was leading in the race.

Two Past Half-Way

Honolulu, Aug. 17.—Two planes of the four dashing westward in the $25,000 Dole flight passed over the steamer City of Los Angeles just before midnight, Honolulu time (2.30 a.m. Pacific Standard time).

The Los Angeles, at eight p.m. was 1250 miles from San Francisco. Her message, received at Port Shafter here, was taken by army officers to mean that two, at least of the planes had passed the half mark in their long hop.

Radio operator of the listener-in aided Arthur Goebel, Woolaroo's pilot and Martin Jensen, pilot of the Aloha, but no further information was given.

"Let there be liberty in things essential, charity in things not essential—charity in all."

WEEK'S THOUGHT

What is remote and difficult of access we are apt to over-rate; what is really best for us lies always within our reach, though often overlooked. —LONGFELLOW.

A GREAT PURPOSE

As we follow the series of speeches which Premier Baldwin is delivering during the course of his journey across Canada, we cannot but be impressed by two features which they suggest—first that these speeches are not casual offerings, but are the result of much thoughtful preparation; secondly, that Premier Baldwin has come and in view other than that of making agreeable and appropriate remarks during a vacation in the Dominion.

Perhaps a sentence which he dropped in the course of the admirably-conceived speech which he delivered in Calgary last Friday may indicate the real purpose behind his visit to this country. "Canada," he said, "is capable of supporting tens of millions of population. In the Old Country there are willing hands, and I want to bring the empty spaces and the willing hands together."

The phrasing of this remark is significant. He did not offer an abstract proposition as to the desirability of bringing empty spaces and willing hands together, but somewhat in a positive purpose. "I want to bring the empty spaces and the willing hands together."

When Premier Baldwin left England for this country, press despatches stated that the party accompanying him was selected with great care and comprised experts in agricultural, industrial, commercial and financial problems, who were qualified to examine into the possibilities of the Dominion. Here again we have a hint of underlying purpose. What is that purpose?

We believe that Premier Baldwin clearly perceives that a turning point has been reached in world affairs and that he is convinced that the future strength of Great Britain, in trade as in politics, lies within and not without the British Empire. The development of the United States has had more influence on the course of Britain's destiny during the past one hundred years than any other factor. Industrially the United States was built up with British capital. Its great railway system and public works, and many of its basic industries, were developed through British investment and today there are no two nations which trade so much together as the Americans and the British.

Premier Baldwin doubtless sees in Canada the possibility of a duplication of that development, with all the benefits to Britain and to Canada which would result, and with the added advantage that this development will proceed in an atmosphere of mutual restraint and reciprocal responsibility rather than in an attempt show of antagonism and conflicting interests.

And an even greater vision may underlie his purpose. He doubtless believes, as we believe, that the future peace of the world lies in the keeping of the British Empire and the United States of America, and with that in view, he may be working to this end that Canada, in seeking immigrants wherewith to make her soil productive, shall build on the firm basis of a predominately British stock and thus form a closer and even more representative binding link between the United States and Great Britain. How influential Canada can be in this respect has been indicated by Premier Baldwin's presence at the opening of "the Peace Bridge" between Canada and the United States, when the references by himself and by Canadian and American statesmen to the project as a symbol of international good will and brotherhood and another step upon the century-old policy of amity and good neighborliness more than offset the failure of the Geneva Convention.

Canada, through Premier Baldwin's presence, has been emphasizing as the vital link, the key-stone in the arch of a League of Nations having its permanent seat like that at Geneva, but in process of building on the last, big foundation of the convictions and common aspirations of the English speaking nations of the world.

GROPING TO LIGHT

To Occidentals the most important, as it is also the most puzzling, question in China is the true nature of the nationalistic movement. It would ease the foreign mind to know whether it bodes good or evil for China.

The movement seems to have spread its doctrines through most of the educated minority—its influence among the masses of the treaty ports south and central China is great. The outside world is told that it represents a great national awakening and uprising that fills thirty centers of the country and that its military victories represent something new, something fundamentally better and other than the dreary personal wars which have soaked the last fifteen years of Chinese history in suffering and blood.

But are these the facts in the case? The answer seems to be, as the answer always is with China, both yes and no. The nationalist party was organized after the Boxer rebellion, adopted Western revolutionary technique and recruited those Chinese who had brought back from foreign countries badly digested ideas of progress and Western culture. It professes a desire to see China self-governing, independent of other nations, progressive according to Occidental standards and a united, peaceful country.

How and when the vague principles of the movement can be translated into a practical program of governmental reform is beyond prediction. No one way or another order will emerge but not until after the nationalists have learned that anything attainable by force and violence is possible without them.

Also will the Chinese learn as the years pass that there can be no improvement in the economic, political and social condition of their people until there is universal education and less class slavery.

OTHER MEN'S THOUGHTS

If they continue increasing the size of these touring buses, locomotives will have to approach crossings cautiously.—Winnipeg Tribune.

Let England have her 600,000 tons of cruisers. They'll come in handy to convey American troops next time.—Buffalo News.

One highly important feature of the supervisory work of the state board of public roads is the prevention of the use of unfit motor vehicles on the highways and the imposition of penalties for improper use. The menace of improper operation is equaled by that of cars which are unfit and unsafe for use. The peril of a defective car is no less than that of defective driving skill. One might as well encounter a drunken driver as one who is operating a car with defective brakes.—Providence Journal.

AUGUST

(By Alix Thorn)

Out of the ripened woodland slow she stepped,
Clad in a rippling gown, with flower-crowned hair;
Calm were her musing eyes and parted lips;
Companioned by sweet winds, a figure fair.
And following a brook that murmuring ran
She spied a splendid maple reaching high.
A scarlet leaf upon one sturdy branch
Was it a breeze, or did I hear her sigh?

Second Movie Actor: "Oh, I wouldn't have minded it so much, but the director yelled, 'That isn't the way to fall. Make your stock-ing pay.'"

When Ike was over at the children's party the hostess asked the smallest boy if he would say grace. "What's that?" asked the honored guest.

"Why, don't you know?" said the surprised hostess. "What does your father say when he has had a good dinner?"

The small boy searched his memory, then replied:

"He rubs his stomach and says: 'Richard is himself again.'"

Doctor—Do your husband talks in his sleep—it will be difficult to prevent that.

BEACON VISIBLE FOR ABOUT 1000 MILES

Charlottesville, Virginia, Aug. 17.—While it's always playing on Alpha Cecilo, the home of Thomas Jefferson and illuminating the surrounding country with day time brilliance, the Jefferson searchlight, said to be the world's most powerful beacon was dedicated last night to its task of bathing in brightness the mansion of the author of the Declaration of Independence. The cacon is of 1,360,000,000 candle power. It is claimed that, directly in the path of its ray, it can be seen at a distance of one thousand miles.

STATISTICS OF AUTO BUSINESS

In considering the future of the automobile business it is well to remember that this great industry begins each year with an assured basic market of from 2,500,000 to 3,000,000 cars which represent replacement sales, says the New York Sun. Nearly 50 percent of the automobiles sold in this country today replace old ones. This replacement business is expected to reach 70 percent within the next five years.' It is a sound part of the business manufacturers believing it easier to sell the owner of a car than to sell to the beginner his first automobile, just as it is easier to sell shoes to shoe-wearing people than to sell them to Hottentots.

Opportunities for the expansion of so-called new business will be developed automatically by the normal increase in population, by increasing family requirements which necessitate the purchase of two or more cars, by the development of suburban life, by increasing wealth and by foreign trade which is just getting under way.

The National Automobile Chamber of Commerce estimates the average life of an automobile at eight years. Within the next two years this average may be reduced to five years, due to the harder service to which cars are now put and to the attitude of the farmer, who no longer is satisfied to buy second-hand cars of the higher priced cars and keep it running five years after it has been retired from city use. The exhibition farmer now must have a new car as often as the city man does.

Automobile manufacturers look for a substantial increase in the replacement business in the next five years because the big-volume production years began only in 1922. Cars built in 1922 should not begin to be retired until 11929. Then replacements should go on by leaps and bounds. In 1921 there were 10,463,231 cars in use. In 1922 the output was 3,864,371; in 1924, 3,242,305; in 1925, 3,839,302; in 1926 it reached 3,800,000.

Those economists who in the early days of automobile manufacturing thought the ultimate number of cars produced—as, for instance, the jump from 190,319 cars in 1911 to 356,000 in 1912—would be their peculiar business by forcing the industry quickly to the saturation point have revised their opinions. They simply overlooked the fact that all material things wear out.

LUNATICS WILL BE SET LOOSE

Toronto, Aug. 16.—All Ontario municipalities, it is understood, have been notified by the Provincial Secretary's Department under Hon. Lincoln Goldie, of contemplated reductions in the number of inmates in the various provincial mental hospitals.

These reductions come, it is learned, as the result of the new policy of inspection inaugurated by Mr. Goldie when he appointed Dr. Edward Ryan, of Kingston in the capacity of directorial supervisor of the institutions and started him out on a tour of observation which is now rapidly nearing completion. They will go into effect as speedily as possible, it is learned.

ONTARIO

The Weed Scourge

Is it fair to your neighbor if your weed-infested fields, fence rows and idle places are scattering weed seeds over his land?

Is it fair to yourself if your own weeds are scattering their seeds all over your land?

The weed scourge is costing Ontario $5,000,000 a year. A share of this money should be in your pocket! Instead, this money is wasted. And the waste is increasing!

The time has come for united action! The weed scourge should not be merely 'fought'—it should be exterminated! Weeds can be exterminated, but only by determined and united action! The help of every man, woman, boy and girl is needed.

WARNING

Under the provisions of The Weed Control Act 1927, now in force, the destruction of noxious weeds is no longer optional. The destruction of noxious weeds is now compulsory.

Every occupant of land and every owner of unoccupied land is required to destroy all noxious weeds before their seeds ripen. Municipal councils are required to destroy all noxious weeds growing upon the highways. Let everyone co-operate to end the weed nuisance.

A Lady Wins Long Service Emblem

Long service records in modern industrial life are usually held by men. But Miss M. L. Phillips of Quebec City is not far behind the service record-holders of the telephone business. When the first long distance line was completed between Quebec and Montreal, Miss Phillips was the operator who "set-up" the first call. For close upon forty years she has been at the service of the telephone users of the ancient Capital, and has seen the whole system grow from less than 500 subscribers to the present 22,000. Quebec's telephone using public now served from two imposing exchange buildings—one of them housing "Automatic" equipment—appreciate the kindly, helpful service which it has been the life-work of Miss Phillips to provide. She was recently the recipient of a Service Emblem from her company symbolising her long and exemplary record.

received no response. Ship's officers thought the plane was either Jensen's or Jack Frost's. Eagle, in the aircraft as Ciselet was believed to be a considerable distance north of that point.

Hoosiers Stays Up

Wheeler Field, Aug. 17.—Through rain squalls decending intermittently along the 25 miles road between here and Honolulu, scores of automobiles loaded with aviation enthusiasts began to gather soon after midnight to witness the arrival of the lanes in the Dole race from San Francisco. The rain made ample preparations for feeding the multitude expected as the field was floodlighted by generator trucks, field kitchens had been placed at strategic positions and were doing a land office business.

After theatre crowds in Honolulu journeyed virtually en-masse to the aviation field, dinner jackets mingling with overalls and evening gowns with cotton dresses in the gathering throngs.

Only Four Got Away

Municipal Air Port, Oakland, Calif. August 17.—Four aeroplanes, one carrying a woman, were racing out over the Pacific Ocean toward Honolulu late today in quest of fame and $35,000 in prize money offered by James D. Dole of Honolulu, for the first transpacific air derby in the history of aviation.

Miss Mildred Dorn, the "flying school teacher" of Flint, Mich., in the plane named for her, braved the 2,400-mile ocean stretch on a late starter after her plane had been forced to return to the air port due to engine trouble.

Replacement of spark plugs and other hasty repairs delayed the plane more than an hour, but the school teacher, her pilot, J. "Augy" Pedlar, and Navigator Vincent Dora, climbed into their seats and took the air safely on the second attempt.

Beautiful Start

The other three planes in the air, with a load of about one hour and a half, were blessed with the good luck of beautiful take-offs.

They were the Golden Eagle, piloted by Jack Frost, of New York, and navigated by Clarence Ball, of Honolulu; the Aloha, piloted by Martin Jensen, the only Honolulu entrant, navigated by Paul Schluter, of San Francisco, and Hollywood, Cal., at the stick and Wilbert Davis, San Diego naval air officer, navigating.

The planes were sent crashing to the earth because their wings would not fit the heavy cargo of gasoline on the take off. They were the Dallas Spirit, a home-built monoplane of Lieutenant Norman A. Goddard, of San Diego, navigated by Lieut. R. O. Hawkins, of San Diego, and the Pabco Flyer, the only civilian and land monoplane piloted and navigated by Major Livingston Irvine, of Berkeley, Cal.

The fact that these three necessary to return to the field both Ketwir and Griffin announced they hoped to get away later after making repairs.

The pilot early in the derby, the Aloha from Peors, Ill., was dismantled by the starting committee after the contestant's mechanic declared that it did not have sufficient gasoline capacity to complete the trip.

HUSBAND'S SISTER IN NEWLYWED HOME

She's twenty-one, a bride of six months, and having a Perfectly Wonderful Time with her brand-new husband. And sixty comes his seventeen-year-old sister and spoils everything. DEAR ELSIE:—

My problem is entirely new to me, but you may be able to help me out. I am twenty-one, have been married for six months to the very dearest man in all the world, and we have been extremely happy. I have a good position in an office and am helping pay for our little bungalow, so you can see I have my hands full.

Well, my husband's sister invited herself to pay us a visit, has been here over a week and has no intention of going home. She's causing trouble between my husband and me. Because she is his sister and he seems to think a lot of her, I have of course, gone out of my way to be nice to her. She is just seventeen so I try to excuse her not helping me, but it's getting on my nerves, working, cooking for her and having her trying to "run" the town on.

I'm dreadfully afraid that I even have to admit that I am jealous of the way she acts, and just simply monopolizes my man. Do you think I am a crazy little fool to resent her always dashing ahead and grabbing him arm when we are walking, and then I can't walk beside her? Do you think I shouldn't mind her demanding my place at the table beside my husband? There and so many other things are hurting me so. Last night Bob and I quarreled; I just got the point where I had to tell him about all the things that were hurting me and ask for me mad. He said I was silly and jealous. Do you think so, Elsie? We were so happy, why did she have to come and cause trouble?

Do you think I should let her just "visit on"—and then let her get away with almost insults in my own home?

Please let me have your opinion and I will appreciate it very much.

TROUBLED.

Foolish little girl, why should you care who has a place by his side as long as you hold your place secure in his heart? Yes, I know it hurts to share this precious new gift of yours she thinks! But you'll have to share him in a thousand other ways. Money—and unless you learn to do that sharing gracefully you are going to wreck his happiness and your own. He laughs at your small jealousy now, but pretty soon he won't laugh if you can time to indulge it. Presently his brief impatience will turn to cold anger and his trust and adoration to suspicion and scorn.

Of course, the seventeen-year-old sister is trying. Weren't you trying at seventeen? But do you think it is wise to begin your married life by making an enemy of the girl your husband loves? It would be so easy to win her love and loyalty to the new big sister. And wouldn't it make all your future life richer and easier if you had her love and your husband's admiration?

After all, you see, it isn't a question of a trying youngster. It's more serious than that. It's your first problem of adjustment. Are you going to start married life with a failure?

"Just HOW much affection can one show the boy friend?" asks Gene.

DEAR ELSIE:—

Here is my problem—it is about petting.

I'm a senior in High School, Until last term I never went out with a boy more than twice because they all regarded petting above everything else. They didn't care much who the girl was, if never let me alone. Some silly boy kiss me because I have some self-respect.

Last Easter I was asked out by a boy from school. He was new at the school and when he asked me out I was thrilled. Although he was only a new comer he was getting very popular and was well liked. I went out with him and though he tried to kiss me "good-night" I refused to let him. The next time I did let him kiss me because he wanted to do it. Then, we started going around "steady". But we pranked each other that if either of us stopped caring we'd honestly tell the other.

Elsie, here's my problem. Is it wrong for me to allow him to kiss me I do care for him. And how much affection can I show him? My sister went out a lot before she finally married but she never kissed any of her boy friends until she went "steady" with them. And she never went "steady" with more than one. She was very careful about that.

Well, Elsie, I'll repeat my question at the end—Is it wrong for me to allow my boy friend to kiss me since I like him and how much affection shall I show him?

GENE.

Your own heart must be your guide as to how much affection you shall show your boy friend, Gene. But remember this, little sister, every girl has a dowry which she may bring to her wedding day, no matter how poor she may be. It is not a dowry of lands or cattle, houses or money. It is some thing much more precious than these things—it is the dowry of her purity and sweetness—her own rarity and her maiden dreams. These are more precious than diamonds or pearls. They establish a girl's worth in the great adventure of marriage. And remember that though you're living today, the value of a girl has not changed. Solid things establish your value just as they establish the value of the girl of your grandmother's day.

The girl who has kept this dowry comes to her marriage like a queen, bearing rich gifts and commanding consideration and respect. The girl who has lost this dowry must come to her wedding like a wanderer who will have to take what she can discover to give her.

Every time you give your kisses or experiment with the strange magic of love you are giving away a little bit of your dowry, my dear. You are making "ove yourself a little poorer. Emotions can be squandered just like money. Love thrills wear out just like a battery. Are you wasting your treasure or saving it, Gene?

A Rich Costume for Town Wear

How would you like to look dashing, tripping and just a bit dressed in the fall mad wilds? You never know what fascinating things may happen when you wear a smart coat like this. The slight flare below the hips is decidedly new, and the small high fur collar combining a lissing bead of fur down the front has an allurement hard to withstand. The collar may, of course be worn open. A large back, deep pointed fur cuffs and fur trimming at the pocket further increase the richness and individuality of this costume. Hat, bag, shoes and buckle may be one another in color and harmonize with the coat material.

Advice to Girls
By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a young man of twenty-three, full of hope and bubbling over with life. Nothing ever saps my pep and spirits, but I am only acting a part.

In childhood I had a sweet, heart. Then high school, then separation while she went away to finishing school.

Then she returned. She did not care for society. She grew ill up almost immediately upon her return.

Social life thrilled me. Pep, personality and such things that go to make success I had. I soon found I was rather popular. I don't see as much of my onetime sweetheart now, as she has given up all of this for what she considered a higher calling. No quarrel, no words. None the less, we drifted apart because she did not care for the things I did.

Two years of this. I thought of her always, remembered her on her birthdays, etc.

Then came the announcement of my engagement to another girl. I thought I loved her, but later found out it was just an infatuation that passed.

I was told by friends that the announcement of my engagement hurt the former sweetheart very much. But she was among the first to congratulate me. It was wonderful the way she did it. No actress could have done better. She was acting and I knew it. I had not grown up in her neighborhood not to be able to read between her words.

Then something in me snapped. I realized she was the only girl I loved, but too late. I knew I wasn't playing fair with my fiance.

I wanted to break the engagement. I began to give her cause, but she would attribute everything I did to the sowing of wild oats. My "last fling" she would express it. I could stand things no longer, so I went away to another city. There I tried to forget both. But could not forget my childhood sweetheart. One night, on the impulse, I called her on the long distance at 3 a.m. She said she knew I would call her some time. Six months later I returned home.

My engagement is broken and the engagement of the only girl I have ever loved is about to be announced. I know I am the one she loves, but am going to deceive herself, but I know better.

I was ill in a hospital a few weeks ago. She was very sweet and kind. She sent flowers and paid calls all the time.

Now I can well again, but have stayed in my place—nothing beyond friendship.

The man she is to marry is five years older than I. He has everything to offer her, while I have nothing but a salary—enough to live on—and no old name that I am proud of. Some day, however, both of us will inherit quite a bit. These are facts. What am I to do? Shall I go back and try to win her back from this man? He will make her a position to give her everything.

If she loves him best then I would be the biggest fool imaginable if my love is so great that I want her happiness above everything. But I want her to be sure.

Won't you please help me?

MISERABLE PEP.

MISERABLE PEP: If you are quite sure that the girl you love is on the verge of making a grave error by marrying a man she does not care for you must go to her and tell her of your own unchanged affection. You must not let material considerations stand in the way of taking such a step while there is still time—particularly since your salary is enough to live on.

However, you may be misjudging the situation. There is no certainty that your assumption is correct. It is quite possible that she has outgrown her attraction for you, though possible that she may be deeply in love with her fiance. You must be prepared for that contingency. But if you really are thinking only of her happiness you must go to her ready to accept any decision that she might make.

Tell her that above all you want her to be happy. Point out that you felt that you owed it to her to tell her that your love for her is unchanged, that you thought it best to tell her before she embarked upon a step she she might not consider taking in the light of your affection. Tell her that you ask nothing for yourself, that you are sorry for the events that parted you and that you merely wish her to decide according to the dictates of her heart. In short, make a clean breast of it. Tell her what you have told me. And good luck!

CURSE OF LOVE
by Mildred Barbour

"Oh, gol" she cried frantically. "Oo quickly!"

He stared at her, interpreting her frantic plea as he had interpreted all her previous pleas that night. She wanted to be alone with Stokes, he told himself. He, her husband, had no place there.

With one last look, as though he were trying to impress for ever upon his memory the vision of her as she stood there; in the attitude of unconscious grace he turned, without a word, and plunged out into the darkness.

She heard him start his car and make off at top speed.

CHAPTER XI.

A TOSS IN THE DARK

It seemed to Norma, keeping watch beside the unconscious form of Sydney Stokes, that years went by while she waited, listening for the sound of the doctor's car.

She sat tense, chilled, her hands clenched in her lap.

Would her husband do as she had begged and save himself from the peril she anticipated? Or would he stubbornly insist on routing Dr. Merrivale out of bed and driving him back to the bungalow, thus bringing trouble and scandal upon them all. If he did that, and if Stokes died—she caught her breath and was ashamed of her own callousness in thinking only of Phillip's safety, despite the suffering of Stokes—he would be accused of murder. The circumstantial evidence was black against him. The old, old triangle, as the world would judge it, with its inevitable ending!

Even if Phillip hadn't a weapon in his possession a jury would believe that he had discussed of such damaging evidence by tossing it into a field as he drove along.

No, she decided, desperately, there was only one hope—that the telephone Dr. Merrivale without giving his name, and that he would hasten him to do. She alone would bear the brunt of the scandal, and, if the situation were properly handled there might be no scandal. She might even yet be able to account truthfully for her own and Sydney Stokes' presence at the bungalow that night. At least, there would not be the frightful complication of a supposedly enraged husband to bring upon himself and direct the full suspicion of the law.

In her excitement and terror at finding Stokes, shot and probably dying in front of the garage, she had given little thought to her words when she pleaded with Kendall and begged him to go. Not for an instant did it occur to her that he had put a totally mistaken interpretation upon her frantic plea, because she had been concerned only for his safety.

It seemed to her, as she watched the injured man on the couch, that a pallor was creeping over his gaunt face, that his lips were turning a bluish color. In terror she sprang up, and, seizing his flask, forced some of its contents between his lips.

He stirred slightly. His eyelids fluttered. She bent over him.

"Sydney, can you hear me? It's Norma. Are you in pain?"

His eyes opened. He looked at her blankly. Then realization dawned.

"I got cracked up, eh?" he said weakly, with an attempt at a smile. "No, I don't feel much pain—numb, sort of. Where'd we get you?"

"Phil! He hurried off for a doctor who'll be here any minute now."

He shook his head slowly.

"Not Phil. The chap that tried to bump me off. Told me to hold up my hands, and, like a fool, I wouldn't do it." He tried unsuccessfully to smile. To Norma's intense relief, she heard the sound of a car on the road above the cliff.

A few minutes later, Dr. Merrivale an old practioner who had, many a time, swaggled yarns with Norma's father during long summer evenings at the ungalow, entered. He greeted her kindly and made straight for the man on the couch.

Without asking questions, he made a brief examination, and directed Norma to bring him water.

"The bullet passed clear through the shoulder," he told her, as he finished cleaning the wound and egan to band age it. "A nice clean hole—ought to heal without much trouble."

Norma clasped her trembling hands thankfully. Stokes had told the physician about the holdup man, the struggle, and the discharge al the revolver.

A little while later, when the patient had fallen into a doze as a result of a hypodermic Dr. Merrivale had given him, the physician said to Norma:

"Put on your wrap and come out to the veranda. I want to talk to you."

When the door into the bungalow closed behind them, the old man laid both hands on her shoulders and look ed down at her kindly.

"I've lived in this world a lot longer than you, my child, and I hope you'll take an old man's advice. I don't know just what happened here tonight, and I don't ask. But I do know that things are a little queer, and I think you're living desperately hard to shield somebody. Take my advice and don't let yourself get mixed up in this affair. You know, as well as I do, how the world talks; how it judges women, regardless of the circumstances. The young man in there is sure to be all right—it's not a very serious wound. I'll stay here with him tonight, and have him moved to town tomorrow, if he's well enough; if not, I'll get a good nurse to look after him where he is. As far as the public's concerned, I'll give out that I found him by the road side after a highway man had finished with him, and I'll take upon myself the consequences of voluntary house-break ing and say that I didn't do more than I did. You, my father will back me up, if I know J. P., Now you run and get into your car and drive yourself home just as quickly as you can. I'll give you my sun, if you haven't one. When you reach home, go up to your little bed and don't talk to a soul. Do you understand?"

SAILORS THOUGHT THEY WERE ON A HAUNTED SHIP

Superstitious Terror Reigned On Board During Voyage

UNCANNY HAPPENINGS

Story Of Nerve-Racking Trip Unfolding In New York Murder Trial

New York, Aug. 17.—Terror and the superstition of the sea were aboard the Kingsway during that unlucky schooner's voyage to the African Gold Coast in the Gulf of Guinea, according to testimony today in federal court at the trial of the ship's cook for the murder of his wife on the trip. The dread, seized on the veteran salts after the cook, a wiry little negro, had twice slipped the knife that held his wrists. He had used a rusty razor with terrible effect on his wife and with that vivid memory the crew scanned the shadows of decks at night fearful of another carnage and another crime.

Many things stimulated the imaginations and the uneasiness of the able seamen. The flap of a loose rope, the ghostly fight of a piece of white paper along the rusty companionways, the screeching timbers in the hulk, heads complaining under the buffet of a wave, these quickened the fears of the seventh of timbers in the bulk footed for an rope-soled shoes, often startling each other by unexpected encounters in dark corners.

Arousing the superstition, bred by wild nights amid the desolation of the restless wastes, were other events that seldom come to proper craft. First, the mate, a quiet spoken old man, who had been as mild as a lamb after he had got too old to keep on being a lion, curled up in bunk and died. There had been a funeral at sea, with the skipper reading a prayer, and all hands on deck, and a splash as the weighted canvas went over the side.

Then Karl Baticz, the cook, had stabbed his wife and her groans had sounded on the ship for seven days and nights when there had been another splash alongside. Dad at all these had been for the nerves of men who had signed on merely for a peaceful venture; involving lumber and cocoa beans, there had been other happenings and persons. There had been an emotional Spanish girl with a knife in the pocket of her skirt—it could wasn't carried there, but she had it and it was out of sight—who had whipped out the weapon and lunged to be killed when the cook's plan to ship her instead of his lawful spouse went astray.

Another knife there had been, a keen edged affair, which the cook plaintiffed in the mattress of his berth. And screams at night over the waters of the harbor of San Juan, Porto Rico, a woman's angry outburst heard by the wondering skipper, and the two men rowing him from shore to ship. None of this had been in the articles signed by the crew, nor had they expected to see the master waving a clinched fist under the nose of the donkey engine man, and there had been no appreciation of the grim humor of the cook's threat to drown himself the Captain, curbed his appetite for cake, when the makings of such dainties were not to be had.

The narrative of the chapters of the story indicated in the foregoing was told in a heavy German accent by two members of the complement of the Kingsway as witnesses for the prosecution. They were Waldemar Karl Badke, the donkey engineer and Friedrich Klein, a 19-year-old product of seafaring Hamburg. United States Attorney Charles H. Tuttle, reinforced by his aides, Kenneth Simpson and George J. Minter, conducted the direct examination, and the thrusts of cross examination were delivered by Carruthers Ewing who, with Fraiter McDonald, was assigned by the Court to defend Baticz.

Badke, a thin langed individual had admitted on Monday that he had been the lover of the cook's mulatto wife. Baticz's defense is the "unwritten law", while Badke contended that the role of cavalier to the cook's wife had been assigned at the invitation of Baticz and as a favor to him. The government contends that Baticz slew his wife to clear the way to marriage with the Spanish girl, Emily Zamel, who is to testify tomorrow.

During the testimony of the captain of the Kingsway, Fred Lawry, the engineer, had been pictured as a roystering bully who had sought to dominate the vessel. Badke on the stand today failed to act to the character assigned him. He was nervous to the point of fidgetting, he dabbed with a handkerchief at his dry lips and he seemed at times unable to speak.

RED TAPE A JOY FOR FRENCHMEN

Amused By Demand That Eliers Bring Along Bill Of Health

Paris, August, 17 — Into the somewhat strained atmosphere of Le Bourget air field, where everyone is waiting and scanning the weather, official red tape introduced today a welcome note of comedy. In due and proper form the United States Consul General in Paris has informed the commander of Le Bourget airport that all captain and crews of airplanes arriving in the United States must be provided with a duly made out bill of health, certifying that there is no disease on board.

Such pageantries to have the law fully complied with, has roused inside amusement in Frenchmen's minds. Drouhin and Oliven have already been supplied with the necessary papers, but when Coolen today heard of the recommendation, he answered Fraiter: "Ah the same the fact that one can fly the Atlantic ought to be proof enough that our health is not too bad."

Neither Lindbergh nor Byrd and his companions were ever asked for passports.

EMPIRE TRADE

Australian And Canadian Ministers Conferred At Ottawa

Ottawa, Aug. 17.—Trade matters of mutual concern were dealt with this morning at a conference between Hon. James Malcolm, Minister of Trade and Commerce for Canada, and Hon. H. E. Pratten, Minister of Trade and Customs for Australia. Questions relating to the determination of definable value and to copying of trade were discussed and amicably adjusted, according to Mr. Malcolm. Mr. Pratten paid a short visit to the capital on his way home from London, England.

No reports or any other credentials and no preliminary precautions on the part of American officials are regarded as more a subject for laughter than attention.

Clouds, winds and rain again today prevented any outside work at Le Bourget, and precluded any possibility of starting for some days to come. Drouhin, Levine's pilot, this morning got rousted out of bed at dawn, and at first thought that by some dramatic change the weather was going to make a start possible. His summons, was, however, to greet a little daughter who had been born to him in the night. Between the French pilot and the owner of the Columbia there still remains a wide gulf of misunderstanding, which many people from different motives seem eager to develop even wider. The damage done two days ago to the propeller of his plane, which is now being repaired, nearly moved Levine to cancel the whole undertaking and return by the first boat as his wife desires, or get another pilot. Friends have, however, persuaded him that if he flies back home he must fly with Drouhin. On his side Drouhin would be best content if Mr. Levine did go back by boat and he could take another passenger.

Failing of the two German planes has shown clearly how absurd it will be for any one to make an attempt before there is a radical change for the better in the weather, and the wind and clouds abate. No immediate improvement is, however, likely and it may be many days and even weeks before any one of three planes which are now ready can take the air From the delay, Tarascon is the only one who is benefitting Every day's delay gives him a better chance of catching up with the others, and it may well be that the Yellow Bird will be in the race with the others.

PUSS IN PRISON TURNS IN ALARM

Protective Agency Squad With Drawn Guns Find a Cat

New York, August 17.—Louis Marshall's cat called out a detail of special police this morning to save it from an entirely end The process involved sending abroad a first class burglar scare, but extreme measures were justified, for the cat was nearing its final snow.

Sunday evening the pet disappeared from the lawyer's home at 47 East 72nd street, an incident that was considered of no special importance until breakfast time yesterday morning. Then the cat still being away, members of the household decided this was no ordinary absence. The housekeeper informed Gilbert M. Spence, private watchman over the houses in the block but searching had no result. The cat apparently was making an issue of staying away, although it had no fear of walking its home where treatment was most gentle and food most plentiful.

At midnight a light began to flicker in the office of the Holmes Protective Agency at 147 East 86th street This phenomenon indicated that some thing was amiss at the residence of Dr. Alexander Lambert, 43 East 72nd street.It The Lamberts are out of the city and their home is boarded up. It looked like one of those summer-time robberies.

Patrick Ryan and a detail of men were dispatched to investigate. Reentering every they, entered the deserted house. There was no noise, but that of their own footsteps. Throughout the upper floors they searched, encountering no evidence of felony.

On their way downstairs to the servants' quarters, a sound transfixed the searchers. It was a cat's mewing, a weak, complaining mew.

Mr. Marshall's cat was caught between an outer door and an iron grill. Apparently it had leaped over the grill but once within it found no foot room for a spring back to freedom And it was impossible to climb out. In this predicament, the cat had scratched away at burglar alarm wires.

When the grill door was opened, the imprisoned cat ran between the legs of its rescuers and streaked for the Marshall's home and food.

General Chiang Kai Shek, commander-in-chief of the Chinese Nationalists armies, has resigned.

BELLE THEATRE

Madge Bellamy in the audacious heroine of Warner Fabian's candid novel, "Summer Bachelors," in the screen version produced by Allan Dwan for Fox Films, coming to the Belle Theatre tomorrow for three days only. Following Miss Bellamy's brilliant portrayal of the flapper bride in "Mandy," another vivid characterization is to be expected. Derry Thomas, Miss Bellamy's role in "Summer Bachelors," is a pretty girl of good family who earns her own living. Disillusioned about marriage, she determines never to wed. Despite her dare-devil air, she is instinctively prudent. Derry is a companion fleure to Pal in Fabian's "Flaming Youth" but more rebellious, clearer in self-video, less the creature of convention and accidental adventure.

Here is definitely cut out for the art of the camera. With the advantage of an exhilarating story, Director Dwan chose an excellent cast. Allan Forrest, who is starring in the Helen and Warner two-reel comedies for Fox, has the leading part opposite Miss Bellamy. Matt Moore, fresh from his success in "Early to Wed," is the absent-minded professor, Lotta Hyams and Clifford Holland, a decidedly attractive couple, are in the secondary leads.

Mrs. M. A Morell is nursing at Mrs P Casey's.

Master Garnet Sinfield has returned home after spending a few days with his sister Mrs. S. Hazard.

Mr. and Mrs. P Sargent, Mrs. E. Parry and son of Consecon visited on Sunday with Mr and Mrs. McKibbon, Plainfield.

Mrs. Harris, spent a couple of days with her friend Mrs. P. Creeper.

Root Turns in 22nd Victory Of Season—Cards Trim Braves

New York, August 17.—In the seven the inning yesterday with two men on base and the Giants one run behind, Mr. Rogers Hornsby had a hap py thought. "What better time could there be for a homer?" inquired Mr. Hornsby. "What indeed?" echoed Mr. Will Terry, and there you have the sole reason why the Giants beat the Pirates, 3 to 4, in the first game of the so-called "crosstalk" series, making it incidentally, six straight triumphs for the house of McGraw.

The Chicago Cubs added to their lead in the National League yesterday by triumphing over the Robins at Brooklyn, 3 to 0.

Charley Root pitched for the Cubs and turned in his 22nd victory of the season, a mark which gives him a long lead over twirlers of both leagues. Root with his "pitchable ball" allowed the Robins but five hits and fanned nine batters.

Doug. McWeeny started for the Robins and the three Chicago runs were scored off his delivery. It was the Robins' fifth straight defeat.

Breaking a 3 to 3 tie score in the 11th with two runs the St. Louis Cardinals downed the Braves, 5 to 3, at Boston in the opening game of the series. Hohn's double, Toporcer's bunt Frisch's single, two passes by Bob Smith and a sacrifice fly gave the champions their deciding tallies. Frisch's brilliant all-round play in the field and at bat featured the game.

At Philadelphia, the Phillies took the opener of a four-game series from Cincinnati by 8 to 5. Lester Bell outpitching a trio of Red twirlers. Hilsey started for Cincinnati and was knocked out in the fourth. Kolp and Donohue succeeded him.

TRENTON HERE TOMORROW

On Thursday, Aug. 18th, the much talked of Trenton Beavers will pay a visit to Bellevue and play on the armouries lawn at 4.30 p.m. against the "Clubs."

They are a real smart ball club and "A" GOOD fast game is assured for the fans.

The Management of the Clubs have a team materially strengthened for the game, as Trenton have some real ball players on their team.

81 YEARS IN BASEBALL

Chicago, Ills., Aug. 17.—Charles A. Comiskey, owner of the Chicago White Sox, who will be the only founder of the American League in the game when President Ban Johnson retires at the end of this season, started his 70th year today, and his 51st year in league baseball.

Geo. McFarland rescued Mrs. M. Dubrison from the Niagara, into which she had jumped intent on suicide.

Portugese Government has again our vired a crisis, this time by army officers incensed over a military appointment.

ACIDS CAUSE BAD KIDNEYS AND BLADDER

Too much rich food forms acids which excite and irritate the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Flush the kidneys occasionally to relieve them like you relieve the bowels, removing acids, waste and poison, else you may feel dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, the stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get irritated, obliging one to get up two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids and clean off the body's refuse waste, begin drinking water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine and bladder disorders disappear.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help prevent serious kidney and bladder disorders. Try all means drink lots of good wafer every day.

RUTH LEADING THE BIG PARADE

Bambino Tusses Columbia Lou As Yankees Trounce White Sox

Chicago, August, 17. — At the end of a rather dull and dreary afternoon at Comiskey Park, yesterday the scores read: Yankees 8, White Sox 1; Ruth 37, Cichrig 36, and there was probably more interest in the individual than the team battle. Twin thrillers than there was in the cut-and-dried contest between the teams.

As a close follower of statistics may have concluded already that Babe picked up a lead on Big Bunter. In the great American home run handicap, which has been rather neglected of late in the fifth inning with none on he crashed into one of Alphonse Thomas' fast balls and made it faster.

Such a count must have been very satisfactory even to the Babe, but the afternoon was a bit irritating. When the game was over and Hirbie Pennock had conquered the Sox with little effort, and an allowance of nine scattered hits, 8,000 representatives of American baseball surrounded the Babe and left him black and blue from heavy slaps on the back. It took him fully five minutes to get off the field and then he had to fave the aid of a police escort.

What with one thing and another the Yanks had a rather boisterous afternoon at the expense of Mr. Thomas and Bert Cole, who succeeded him without any visible success. They collected thirteen hits off the pair of assorted pitchers, one being righthanded and the other left. Besides the homer, the Babe contributed a double and walked twice. Gehrig's best effort was a double and Bob Meusel took the honors of the day with four hits in four times up. The Babe's homer affected the result of the game only to the extent of increasing the Yankees' total. Long before he staged his recent parade around the bases, the Yanks had driven in four runs, which were sufficient

At Cleveland, the Philadelphia Athletics opened their western invasion by taking both ends of a double bill from the Indians. The scores were 6 to 5, and 8 to 3. Howard Ehmke was a mystery to the Indians in the first game, which errors aided in their downfall in the second.

The Tigers continued their winning streak and opposed a series at Detroit with the Boston Red Sox by winning, 10 to 7. It was the sixth straight victory for the Tigers

WHERE HAY FEVER IS UNKNOWN AND HEALTH REIGNS SUPREME

In Timagami nature has outdone science in conquering Hay Fever. Any vacationist who knows this glorious summerland of everywhere hills and sky blue waters will tell you that in Timagami there is perfect immunity from Hay Fever.

Timagami is more than 1,000 feet above sea level. Latitude and altitude unite in giving a clear, dry, rarified atmosphere with warm days and cool nights. It is easy to get to but hard to come away from for there is there a fisherman who would willingly leave lakes that teem with gamey fish? Or who could but regret leaving such spiles! did summer vacation territory as Timagami. Its hotels, cottages, camps, tents: its fine sandy bathing beaches and joyous days of swimming, boating, hiking and fishing all help to make it a summer home of health and happiness.

"SHORTY" GREEN GIVEN PROMOTION

Ottawa, August 17.—Announcement was made here yesterday afternoon that Shorty Green had been appointed bench manager of the New York Americans in the National Hockey League, and will take charge of the layers at once. He will have complete charge of the players, while Tommy Gorman has been reappointed business manager and secretary. A position he has filled since the organization of the club when New York was first admitted to the National Hockey League.

The announcement of Green's appointment was made here today by Walter C. Anderson, of Bridgeport, Conn., millionaire business man who now has control of the club and franchise, which will again be operated in Madison Square Garden. Mr. Anderson came to Ottawa this afternoon accompanied by Shorty Green to confer with Tommy Gorman regarding plans for the season. He visited Connaught Park, and after witnessing the running of the feature made his announcement. He stated that the Americans' outlook for the season was optimistically of the characteristic of last winter. The club has all of the players of a year ago on the reserve list, and contracts will be sent to them within the regulation time. A number of new players have been lined up, and with this in view Mr. Anderson spoke optimistically o fthe chances of the Americans. The club will open its season at the Garden on November 15 with a match against the Canadiens of Montreal.

The players will start active training much earlier than last season. Shorty Green will remain here for a few days while Mr. Anderson will return to his home tomorrow morning. Tommy Gorman will resume his work with the hoc

MAY BE FINAL BATTLE OF TWO GREAT HEAVIES

Tunney And Dempsey May Hang Up Gloves After Combat

New York, N.Y., Tug. 17.—The second episode of the Dempsey-Tunney battle for the world's heavyweight championship may be the last, reta.. gagement for both principals, startlin, as this idea may seem in an era of.mi lion-dollar purses.

So far as Tex Rickard is concerned the thought may perish here and now for Tex has an understanding with both by which the winner would appear in another heavyweight extravaganz in 1928, but the notion persists, nevertheless, that neither Tunney nor Dempsey is anxious to prolong his ring career.

Tunney, whose tastes run counter to the blare and glare that goes with the heavyweight title, frequently has told friends that he intended to hang up his gloves "when he made his million." It will just about have it when he collects around $750,000 for defending the crown in Chicago. With one million in hand, of course, Tunney may decide further, will be useful, provided he avoids defeats, Dempsey. If he loses, Tunney might be more in a mood to retire than altogether, perhaps to take up the political career that has interested him at times.

Dempsey is quite likely to quit trying, win or lose, than Tunney, movt observers believe, for he's in debt and agreement to fight again in 1928.

Dempsey's prime object in returning to action was to win back the crown he wore and prized so highly for seven years. He might have retired last fall had he successfully defended it against Tunney. Well fixed financially, the erstwhile Manassa Mauler, if victorious at Chicago, probably would decide he had had enough of the fists' life and retire on his laurels. If he is as decisive in beaten as he was last year, there is small doubt it will be Dempsey's last fight. Defeat would leave little heart on which to erect another come-back effort.

TWO WOMEN ARE SHOT TO DEATH

Murdered In House In Residential District Of St. Paul

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 16.—Two young women were found shot to death in a house in one of the better residential sections of the city Saturday. Police declared they had been murdered.

Apparently about 20 and 30 years old, the two women had been dead more than 24 hours when found early this afternoon. They lay across a bed dressed in night attire and between a sibling crouched as though on guard.

One of the victims was believed by police to be Mrs. Ruth Harrell, wife of James Harrell, officer of a finance corporation here, and the other was thought to be her sister. Her name has not been ascertained.

Shot Once.

Each woman had been shot once, one through the head and the other in the neck. One lay behind the bed, as though she had been asleep, the other lay across the foot of the bed. There was no evidence of a struggle.

Police expressed the belief that the murders resulted from gang warfare between bootlegging factions which has been under way here for the past seven or eight months.

LEAGUE CHAMPIONS

Kingston, Aug. 17.—Circle Six are champions of the Kingston Baseball League for 1927 by virtue of their clean cut victory over the Victorias on Monday evening in the playoff for the second half title, by the score of 6-2. The Circle Six by winning Monday, won the championship without the necessity of a playoff series, they having won the first half of the schedule. The Victorias were defeated easily one of the best of the season, and it was witnessed by the largest and most interested crowd that has turned out to a game of ball here all summer. Anything was apt to happen right up until the time the last man was out. It was a real ball game and there is no doubt that the better team won.

It is of interest to note that Miss Mackenzie has held all four titles, Canadian open, Canadian closed, Ontario and Ontario district. This year she did not defend the Toronto district. Prof. Frank Day will be Miss. Mackenzie's opponent.

BELIEVE THAT THERE SHOULD BE SOME CENTER

Vancouver, B.C, Aug. 15.—(Canadian Press) — The vexed question of large subdivisions of the highest tpremiums away from a drug store or grocery, has been the cause of much plain-speaking here. be Point Grey Town Planning Association, believes there should be facilities for a small shopping centre in each half-mile radius. Complete units are suggested with a school some where near the centre, a church or two and on the main highway, stirring in an opportunity for the croner drug store and other small shops

In the United States, it had been found by large subdivision companies in distances where residences were of the highest type, that they had made a mistake in not providing for a small business section. PREDICTS THAT COOLIDGE WILL RUN ONCE MORE

Custer, South Dakota, August 13.—A prediction that President Coolidge will be nominated again in 1928 by the Republican party in spite of his announcements that he did not choose to run, was made here today by Representative W. E. Hull, Republican Illinois, who came to the summer White House for a visit.

Mr. Hull said that the President was gaining in popularity and that his statement was being accepted as sincere by the people generally. He said the Republican party has several men available for the presidency, including Vice-president Dawes, Frank O. Lowden, Senator Deneen, of Illinois; Senator Watson, of Indiana; Speaker Longworth, Charles Evans Hughes, James W. Wadsworth, former Senator from New York, and Secretary Hoover.

"But it is likely," Mr. Hull said that Coolidge will be nominated for President in 1928, just as he was nominated for vice-president in 1920"

A FUNERAL IN PERU

(From the London Daily Mail) ..

My last remembrance of Peru is of a funeral procession winding its way through the square in Lima in which Pizarro, the Spanish conqueror, met his doom. Behind the flower decked bier trudged a solemn procession of reverent mourners. In front a band played lugubriously an unusual funeral march, which I recognized as "Yes, Sir, She's My Baby."

It Rid the System of Rheumatism

Lasting relief was obtained when the uric acid poisons were cleansed from the system by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

After all there is nothing like Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to get rid of the poisons in the system which cause pains, aches, lumbago and rheumatism. Dr. Chase's Liniment affords relief from the pain but to get rid of the cause it is necessary to go deeper and regulate the action of kidneys, liver and bowels.

Mrs. Ada Kincade, Drayton, Ont., writes:—

"For years my husband suffered from rheumatism. He tried treatment from many doctors, but received little relief. He also tried several remedies recommended, without avail. Two years ago after he had been unable to move or turn in bed for several weeks, a neighbor came in and recommended Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I went down and purchased a box of these, which seem to have entirely relieved him, for he has never had an attack since. I take great pleasure in recommending these pills to anyone suffering from rheumatism."

Premier Baldwin Bids Canada Good-Bye—Chinese Capitulate And Ease Tension With Britain

TALES OF FIFTY YEARS AGO TOLD BY OLD TIMERS

Lived In Belleville When Front Street Was All Frame Shacks

LOTS OF HOTELS

River Drivers Made Things Lively Spending Their Earnings

Mr. Fred Martin, who was employed with The Intelligencer over fifty years ago, when the plant occupied but a couple of rooms, was a visitor in town today and spent half an hour reminiscing and renewing acquaintances in the present establishment and inspecting the equipment and marvelling at the many changes in a modern newspaper office as compared with half a century ago. Mr. Martin is engaged in the hardware business at the present time in Picton. Mr. George Warham, the oldest employee of The Intelligencer, is the only remaining member of the staff, who worked under the late Mr. Mackenzie Bowell when The Intelligencer was published on Front street near the present site occupied by the Dominion Bank.

At that time John Moore was foreman and "Dick" Bell reporter, and W. H. Shepherd, editor. These men are either deceased or have long since departed for the larger American centres. Other members of the staff were "Joe" Miller, Alex. Baker, Jim Ford and "Porter" Draycott.

Belleville was a thriving village and had wooden buildings, which prospered the shops and floated down the river for shipment to foreign parts. The harbor was a hive of industry lined with boats bound for Oswego, Rochester and other lake ports.

Front street consisted of a long line of one-storey frame buildings which have long since passed out of the picture. The lumber industry was right at its height and river drivers made Belleville their headquarters in the Spring of the year when the logs came down in booms a mile in length. Prohibition was unknown and a dozen or more hotels graced Front and Bridge streets from the harbor northward. Hamblys, Pattings, the Western and the Rowells are all familiar names in those days and old-timers will well remember them. Deeters Hotel at the Canadian National depot is the only one remaining of Belleville's saloons in the early sixties.

Mr. Martin said he well remembered when the bridges were swept away by a flood and Pat Lawler, a well-known character at that time, charged a fee of 2 cents to ferry the passengers across until a new bridge was erected.

Rathbun's Mill which was located on the present site of Victoria Park, together with Sager and Wade's lumber yards were transformed into lumber for prospective builders.

The building of the Grand Junction Railway which ran down Pinnacle street was a new era in Belleville's history and provided means of transportation to and from the wharf. It was no uncommon sight to see a line of waggons extending from Flint's grist mill, near the present location of Allen's coal yard to West Bridge street. Farmers were forced to draw their grain from the farming districts to the city by the faithful horse and waggon.

Lewis' Mill, near the Pump House, and Buck's Mill, on the Bay shore, a mile east of the city, were kept going fifty years ago, and provided employment for many.

Mr. Martin makes an annual visit to the scenes of his childhood and each time he finds the ranks of old friends and chums gradually growing depleted.

Three Rivers, Que., Aug. 18.—Failing to secure the necessary majority for the dismissal of several heads of departments, Mayor Bettes last night proposed at a meeting of the city council a measure reducing the salaries of the officials concerned to fifty dollars a year. INCREASE GAS TAX AND CUT THE MOTOR LICENSE FEES FOR 1928

Premier Ferguson Outlines Policy Of Government At Kingston

Kingston, Aug. 18.—Premier Ferguson, speaking yesterday at the big barbecue and picnic given on the shores of Long Lake in honor of Hon W. D. Black, Speaker of the Legislature, and Mrs. Black, by the people of the Riding of Frontenac-Addington declared that in his personal opinion there should be a further increase in the tax on gasoline in the Province and also a further reduction in the license fee payable for automobiles.

Mr. Ferguson stated that it was the policy of the Ontario Government to have those who used the public services, such as the Provincial system of highways, pay for such services. "I have a strong personal feeling (the Premier said with a laugh) that the Government is working toward the improvement of the rural school acreage so that you can eventually have secondary and high schools in every rural district, and the Premier, said the problem is to push the policy until Ontario is dotted with high schools."

MOTOR CRASH AT TRENTON TODAY

John Wilson, Springfield, Mass., Held By The Authorities

Mrs. Joseph White of Hamilton, is suffering from a fractured shoulder and her nine-year-old daughter, Margaret, a wounded right eye, as the result of a motor accident which occurred around 1.30 this afternoon on the Provincial Highway about a mile west of Trenton where it is alleged that Nash Sedan from Springfield, Mass., owned and driven by John Wilson and in which were his wife and 21-year-old son, Douglas Wilson, crashed in them, causing their car to go into the ditch.

Speaking with Chief Bain of Trenton over the telephone this afternoon, he stated that after investigating the matter he found that it is alleged that the Nash car was headed for Kingston and tried to cut in on the Ford sedan also going in the same direction and as a result, the White car turned over in the ditch, resulting in two of the occupants receiving the above injuries. Dr. Farley of Trenton rendered medical treatment to the two sufferers after which they were put on the International train for their home in Hamilton.

The occupants of the Springfield motor were held at the Trenton Police Station, where a charge of reckless driving will likely be made.

Gives Message Of Gratitude As He Sails For England

BUSY TRIP

Says He Is Going Home To Get a Rest After Holiday

North Sydney, N.S., Aug. 18.—Premier Baldwin of Great Britain issued his following farewell message to the Canadian people before sailing for home on the Empress of England today.

"The time has come for me to say au revoir to Canada, but I cannot go without sending a farewell message to the people—new and all—who have from the day we landed shown Mrs. Baldwin and myself such wonderful hospitality."

Hurried farewells crowded wharves and Sydney harbor blue in the noon sunshine made up the setting for Premier Baldwin's farewell to the Dominion.

There was a last minute civic address and presentation of an enormous cherry wood pipe, with a two foot stem and a bowl like a coffee pot. Every one was in high spirits and as the crowds cheered again and again as the Premier caught the mammoth pipe in his jaws and waved adieu.

As the tender pulled away the local band played 'Auld Lang Syne' and the Prime Minister of Great Britain was obviously moved by the scenes of the moment. Mrs. Baldwin stood beside her husband and waved to those who were on the pier.

Last Night At Halifax

Halifax, Aug. 18.—"We have loved every minute of our time. We are tired, of course, because we have worked hard," Premier Baldwin told the citizens of Halifax last night, "I have given every minute of the time I could spare to Canada, and when I ran through with the duties of my present post I will come again," he added.

The 32-knot clip, H.M.S. Capetown rushed the Premier and his party from Charlottetown to Pictou yesterday morning. A train carried the party to Halifax and at midnight Mr. Baldwin on his way to North Sydney, where he will sail for England on the Empress of Scotland, complete his Canadian tour of travel in Canada.

NO ADVANCE

Bread Stays Same Price Yet Despite Flour Increase

Due to the advance of 20 cents a barrel in the price of flour, bread has gone up one cent a loaf at Windsor. So far there has been no rise in Belleville. The policy of local bakers is reported to be to keep bread prices as steady as possible. An ordinary change in the price of flour does not affect bread prices in Belleville, according to local concerns.

"Of course," said one bakery manager, "if the wheat market keeps going up, we might have to ask our customers to pay more, but at present we are not expecting any change."

Doubt Cast On Story Of Chinese Capitulation To Demands

London, Aug. 18.—Reuter's Shanghai correspondent states that that Chinese authorities at 7.20 o'clock tonight returned to the British the unsealed wings seized when a machine made a forced landing outside the International Settlement.

London, Aug. 18.—Chinese authorities in Shanghai Reuter's News Agency says are handing over today wings of British military aeroplane which they seized after the plane was forced to descend outside the International Settlement. After delivery of wings, the correspondent says, the British will immediately repair the break in the rail way which they cut yesterday and with draw to the Settlement.

Report Is Contradicted

This report settlement of a dangerous situation is denied in a dispatch from Shanghai which says.

British Consul and British officials to day denied the report that the Chinese had returned the wings of the British military plane seized after the plane had made a forced landing outside the International Settlement here.

BIG GAME HERE 4.30 TOMORROW

Request Made That Stores And Factories Let Fans Away Early

Mayor Eardley Wilmot and Charles Hanna, President of the Retail Merchants Association have issued an appeal through the press to all employers of labor both in the stores and industrial concerns in Belleville, to arrange an early closing tomorrow afternoon, if possible, in connection with the finals for the championship of the Bay of Quinte Baseball League.

The business men especially at 4.30 and if the stores and factories are closed at four o'clock the employees will have ample time to reach the grounds before the opening innings. Most of the merchants and representatives are falling in line with the suggestion.

This will be the final game of the year if Belleville does not win and the town needs all the encouragement and support possible. Belleville won the first game but Deloro came back stronger yesterday and as a result of Belleville winning the toss the third and deciding game is to be played here. Ray of Peterboro, and Nicholson of Kingston, will umpire.

STARTING TODAY TO SEARCH SEAS

Captain Erwin, Out Of The Race, To Look For Lost Airplanes

San Francisco, Aug. 18.—Capt. William P. Edwin, of Dallas, Texas, who failed to get started in the Lisle Air Race Tuesday, announced he would take-off today for the Hawaiian Islands following a 48-gun course in an effort to sight one of the two missing planes.

Capt. Erwin had a radio sending set installed in his plane last night and expected to start on the plane hunt late in the day. His decision was taken following receipt of a telegram from Col. William Easterwood, of Dallas, offering him a $25,000 prize if he continued his flight to Hong Kong.

If Erwin sights the planes floating on the sea he will broadcast the news by radio and continue on his way course. Damage to Erwin's plane, the Dallas Spirit", in the attempted take-off Tuesday has been repaired and he intends to take a 36 hour supply of gasoline which he believes will give him a ten hour margin in which to search for the missing planes.

WORRIED OVER 5 MILLION LEGACY

Telegraph Operator Goes On With His Regular Job

Toronto, Aug. 18.—Mrs. I. H. Smith, who inherits possibly five million dollars from her brother, the late Arthur T. Walker, so far from showing any elation at her fortune is "worried to death" about it. This is the statement of her husband "Ike" Smith, a telegraph operator.

Smith today was at his key as usual He warned newspaper reporters not to go near his house. "I can stand some of the staring but my wife is really worried to death," he said. They had received no official confirmation, Mr. Smith said, but did not doubt they would receive their share. They had made no plans for the future and meanwhile he was going on with his work. His wife, at home, refuses to see anyone.

No Sign Or Trace Of Ill-Fated Fliers 36 Hours After Start

San Francisco, Cal., August 18 — Forty destroyers, merchant vessels and air craft joined in the hunt today for the two aeroplanes, the Golden Eagle and the Miss Doran, which sail ed into the air from Oakland, Tuesday with high hopes of reaching Hon olulu in the competition for the James Dole $25,000 prize for a non-stop flight to Honolulu.

While interest in the flight revived in the mainland here the fliers, who had safely in hangars at Wheeler Field, Hawaii, were the companies Wrackar oo and Aloha which landed at the fishing point late yesterday.

Reports that the missing planes had been out more than 36 hours, and that the time when their gasoline supply would have kept them on the wing. One carried Miss Mildred Doran, 19-year-old Oakland high school teacher, with J. A. Pedlar, pilot and Lt. V. Knope, navigator. The other was the plane-shaped monoplane piloted by Jack Frost, New York, and financed by Gordon Scott, of Santa Monica.

Airplanes Aid Search

Airplanes were scouting out from the shores of Hawaii and California scanning the broad expanses of the Pacific where the fliers may be battling the elements hoping to sight a passing ship in their plight, or in rubber-inflated life boats which they took just for such an eventuality. The fate of Miss Doran was the cause for the greatest anxiety owing to the fact that it may have been forced down soon after it left the starting point and dumped into the sea with a loss of gasoline, it is said.

The Golden Eagle presented a more hopeful prospect, for it was said that the race equipped for just such an emergency. Its navigator was considered one of the most skilful and Pilot Frost had the machine performing perfectly at the take-off. It forced into the open sea, the landing gear could be dropped after the plane reached level water and the three extremities of the craft, wing ends and rear of fuselage, it is believed, inflated with air carried in the body of the navigator's cabin.

Scrambling the greatest fleet of vessels at its command in the Pacific the Navy Department today had 36 ships in various sections under orders to search for the missing planes.

May Have Used Gasoline

San Francisco, Aug. 18.—The Radio Corporation of America and the Federal Telegraph Company broadcasted to all ships in the Pacific the request that they keep a sharp lookout for the missing planes and that the message was repeated at frequent intervals throughout the night. Gasoline appeal was directed not only to merchants vessels between here and Honolulu but to those that have passed the Hawaiian Islands for it was considered likely that either or both of the lost planes might have strayed far from their course and flown past their goal before they were compelled to alight.

TODAY'S THOUGHT

Self-love is the instrument of our preservation; it resembles the providence for the perpetuity of mankind; it is necessary, it is dear to us, it gives us pleasure, and we must consent to it.

VOLTAIRE.

GREATNESS

"Self-made" is "self-reliant" grown up. Confidence is the father of achievement while independence and initiative are achievement's hand, brother. Never was a self-made man made by reliance on others, but only self. Remember is good that.

Every man is the creator of his own destiny. He is provided with certain physical talents at birth, environment may add or detract from them talents during the period of his growth, but once out in the world it is "every man for himself." Self-reliance is the ever-available and omnipotent weapon of the white-collared or dirty fingered.

Great achievements come from great talents, great talents from great thoughts, and great thoughts from a true respect for one's own ability.

THE DIM VISTAS

An extinct species of whale 5,000,000 years old has been discovered by a party of American scientists in the Santa Cruz islands of Queen Harlotte, Vancouver Island, near Victoria. As a matter of fact, the fossilized remains were discovered by Prof. H. P. Little, head of the department of geology of Clark University, Mass., and by him the age is estimated, and placed as belonging to the Miocene period. It is added that this is a species of whale new to science, which is another way of saying that it is the oldest new thing in the way of whales or most other things.

"It is millions of years older than the Neanderthal man, the Java man or the Cro-Magnan men. The last named is supposed to have populated the lost continent of Atlantis, and that his descendants were the Egyptians, while there was still land connection, not earlier than ten thousand years ago, the tradition of the submerged continent being still alive in the days of Solon. Those and subsequent incursions peopled northern Africa, the countries adjacent to the Mediterranean, the Iberian peninsula, including Spain, France, Ireland and Scotland.

We are not vouching for these astronological or pre-historic facts, but as the matured conclusions of some of our most modern scientific investigators in the fields of archaeology and geology, as well as paleontology and other branches of those allied sciences. The whale, even 5,000,000 years ago, is a comparatively modern animal, and if Prof. Little and the other scientist referred to are correct it gives us a somewhat incomprehensible way an idea of the vast expanse of time that has elapsed between the advent of man and the earliest forms of life.

SEVEN RULES

The Ontario Department of Highways, in its laudable efforts to make the roads safe for the public, puts emphasis on these simple rules of driving:

Get your motor vehicle operator's license.

Have your car in perfect mechanical shape.

Don't "cut" on main highways when traffic is heavy.

In passing traffic—be careful.

When other cars try to pass you—let them pass.

In entering main highways stop and look.

Don't stop on the highway—don't park.

And for good measure the Department advertisement gives the inclusive and most important rule of safety: Use common sense—be courteous.

"Motor car drivers must become 'traffic conscious'," the Department reminds us. "They must realize that safety for all motor traffic is largely in the hands of the operators of cars. Roads do not yet understand this, while a small minority are perpetual offenders against common sense, decency and the law. Both these classes of drivers are a menace. The temporary operation of all intelligent and right-minded motorists is desired in giving caution and advice to the careless."

Those who are merely thoughtless should profit by study of these elementary rules of safety. The other class, the "small minority" of perpetual offenders, are more likely to be impressed by stiff fines and the suspension of permits for long periods.

MAN A BUILDER

Man is the builder of his own fortune. The marks he sets is the plan by which he will work and the blocks with which he will build are the hours of today. An hour misspent today is a block misbuilt which must be torn out tomorrow and replaced. On the other hand, an hour improved today is the block laid trim and true that may be forgotten but that will stand the ravages of the storm and leave the tomorrow for other blocks.

The time allotted to man in which to complete his building is short; old age is the taskmaster sweeping down upon the wasted hour with misshaped blocks. Men who misuse their hours of youth will spend old age tearing down and rebuilding in feverish bellfuls haste to spread a protecting roof over their declining years. Men are with the man who makes every hour count in his building plan. His walls shall defy the chill blasts of old age.

HAVE YOU HEARD THESE?

Willie—Pa, what is a parasite?

His Pa—A parasite, son, is a man who walks through a revolving door without doing his share of pushing!

Mrs. Owens—I wonder if the doctor's wife meant anything personal just now.

Owens—What did she say?

Mrs. Owens—She said we might at least pay them a visit.

Her Father—Can you give my daughter all the luxuries to which she is accustomed?

Her Lover—Not much longer. I've been doing it for over a year now, you know.

In a certain South American town the local judge was also the cashier at the bank. One day a man came in and presented a cheque which he wanted cashed. The judge was not satisfied as to the visitor's identity and refused to hand over the money.

"But, Judge, I've known you to hang men on no better evidence than this," said the man heatedly.

"Very likely," retored the judge; "but when it comes to a matter of money we've got to be careful."

OTHER MEN'S THOUGHTS

In India a native must drink a pint of his own brew before selling it to a neighbor, says the Calcutta despatch.

We suspect India has a well-developed sense of humor hitherto unsuspected.

—Ottawa Journal.

In a Sunday speech in the French town of Orchies a well-known statesman speaking for France declared that "none of us think of condemning the whole German people for the war or the support which the German people gave to the war. In respect to the question of guilt, he said, it is proper to distinguish between the German people and their rulers.

This speaker was M. Raymond Poincare, Prime Minister of France, President of the French Republic while the war was being fought and spokesman par excellence of that body of international opinion which flayed Woodrow Wilson mercilessly for making the same comment about German people and their rulers just about ten years ago. Times change. It is a good thing they do.

MY MIND A KINGDOM

My mind to me a kingdom is.
Such present joys therein I find,
That it excels all other bliss
That earth affords or grows by kind:
Though much I want which most would have,
Yet still my mind forbids to crave.

I see how plenty surfeits oft,
And hasty climbers soon do fall;
I see that those which are aloft
Mishap doth threaten most of all:
They get with toil, they keep with fear:
Such cares my mind could never bear.

Some have too much, yet still do crave;
I little have and seek no more.
They are but poor, though much they have,
And I am rich with little store;
They poor, I rich; they beg, I give;
They lack, I leave; they pine, I live.

Some weigh their pleasures by their lust,
Their treasure is their only trust.
A cloak-ed craft their store of skill,
But all the pleasure that I find
Is to maintain a quiet mind.

YOUNG CHANGES CAMP TO FINISH

Will Complete Training At Oakville—Guests At Queen's Today

After a few weeks stay at their training quarters on Glen Island, George Young and party of twelve including the O'Byrne sisters, Henry and Mrs. O'Byrne and Mabel Burke broke camp this morning and headed for Oakville, where George will complete his training in the water sports of Lake Ontario.

On the invitation of Mr. Theo. Bywer, the party stopped in the city at noon today, and were luncheon guests at the New Queen's Hotel. Magistrate Mikel and Charles Hanna were present at the luncheon party, and extended a royal welcome on the good wisher of the Belleville people to George Young and party in the coming leg of the swim.

Magistrate Mikel suggested to Mr. Young that he come to Belleville and finish up his studies at Albert College where he could not only keep up his swimming activities in Bay Ward gymnasium of Albert College—said to be the finest in Canada—but the swimming champion could also take an educational course—which is really George's ambition. The presence of the swimming marvel in the city would, Magistrate Mikel declared, greatly stimulate interest in water sports in Belleville and at Albert College.

The party expressed appreciation of the treatment accorded them during their brief stay in the city, and assured that host, Tom Power, as well as Magistrate Mikel and Charlie Hanna that they would carry away with them happy memories of Belleville and its hospitality.

Mr. Cecil Kerr

This afternoon Magistrate Mikel, Mayor Wilmot and party accompanied Young on the latter portion of Albert College. The conqueror of Catalina Channel and favorite for the Canadian National Exhibition swim marathon sponsored jointly by the C.N.E and William Wrigley Jr., opened Albert College this Autumn following the Toronto swim and is a bidding to possibility that he may enroll Lake Albert College. Young was favorably impressed with the local institution and spent some time inspecting the huge swimming pool and the gymnasium. The College officials were conferred with and some may have charge of some form of athletic training for swimmers. The Principal of Albert College, Dr. Bishop expects a much larger enrollment than last year.

BALDWIN

Mr. Baldwin, "stooped in the history of the world's progress and used the language to warm the heart of an Englishman." The Prime Minister took occasion to refer to the situation in Nova Scotia had called his visit a holiday and Halifax called it recreation. He felt as though he might have to go back to England to work in order to get a little rest.

On the chain of office worn by the Mayor was the date 1749. "I can assure you gentlemen that far back," said Mr. Baldwin, "as I do remember that those were as gloomy and as depressed years as Great Britain ever passed through, and through those years this city stood as a sentinel. It was the same spirit that was there that never wavered, and it is the spot where it has been handed on so long as the flag flies anywhere."

CHATHAM THINKS THE WORST IS OVER NOW

Chatham, Ont., Aug. 18.—That the peak of the local typhoid epidemic is passing was the opinion today of local and provincial health authorities. Only one new case was reported today and investigations, however, are not being relaxed. As it is only a week since the dairy from which fifty-five cases traced was closed down and it normally takes two weeks for infection to develop, the true extent of the epidemic will not be determined for some days yet.

ANNUAL SHOW IS ON IN ARMOURIES

Horticultural Society Opens Display With Unsurpassed Exhibits

The blooms and vegetables on display at the annual flower show which open ed in the local armouries today and continuing tomorrow under the auspices of the Horticultural Society have never been surpassed on numbers and the quality of the different entries.

The tables on the large floor of the armouries are artistically arranged and the various types of produce and blooms are grouped together. Displays of special interest are those of Messrs. Gives, Potter and Armitage. Again, as in former years, Mrs. Bonnister, has a large showing of rare species of gladioli from "Bon Garden". These are all either very rare types or new species which are being produced at this garden by Curtis. Another interesting worthy of special mention is that from the Canadian National Garden at the Upper Duke school is Mr. J. D. McMillan's, the Superintendent, hobby and pride. A few years ago, Mr. McMillan had an unsightly spot reclaimed with flowers and bushes and to day it is one of the best spots of the city.

The judging of the flowers began this afternoon and will be completed tonight. The show will continue to-morrow and the public are cordially invited to come and see the beautiful showing produced by amateurs in this city.

Further advances developed in the oil group. WINNIPEG BLACKSMITHS ELECTED

Buffalo, August 18.— H. Levis, of Winnipeg, was named chairman of the committee on "Draw Bars and Draw Bar Pins" at the convention of the International Railroad Master Blacksmiths' Association here today.

THE GIRL OF 33 IS JUST IN HER PRIME

"Disgusted" is sorry that she has my dear. Thirty-three is a grand been a "goody-good" girl. She's marrying age and you can be picking almost sure that a few well-placed out your wedding bouquet before you wild oats would have saved her from being an old maid at thirty-three.

DEAR ELSIE:

If I had my life to live over again, I wouldn't be the goody-goody girl I've always been. I never allowed men to kiss me and this love-dovey stuff in the theatres and on the streets I simply loathe.

But men don't like refined women, consequently I'm a lonesome old maid of thirty-three. I always said I'd never marry until I found the right man but he never showed up.

When people say—"Tell me why a good-looking girl like you never married," it makes me want to take "any old thing" even though I had to leave him the next day. I need to feel different, but how I think anything is better than being an old maid.

DISGUSTED.

Old maid? What d'you mean "old maid" at thirty-three? Why it's just the cream of the morning for you, but they don't voluntarily take on their perpetual support, lady.

You will be desired for those qualities too, if you will develop them. You do want to be loved—your hunger for love cries out in every line you have written. Then stop sneering at love and marriage, begin to study men and the things men like. Laugh more. Play more. Be friendlier. Take up some new interests—some new sports. Stop thinking of some impossible Ideal Male who shall be worthy of you; begin to discover how much beauty and courage and honesty there is in even the commonest man you may meet.

Sow love and you'll reap it, sister. Sow hate and you'll have a harvest of nettles.

Here's an oft-told tale.

DEAR ELSIE:

My husband is a good worker but makes very small wages. We can just about break even if we are careful. But my husband spends money for pool and quite often gambles. He wins one time and then loses twice as much as he has won. He doesn't seem to care about it, either. I just have a few cents a week to buy my baby what he needs. I have asked him to stop gambling but it's no use, he always says he has to have some "pleasures." I am willing to go to work but my husband won't hear of it. My baby is three now so could be left with others. Oh, Elsie, I just don't know what to do.

WILMA.

The first thing to do, my dear, is to stop fussing and worrying. Then wipe your eyes and straighten your backbone and do something constructive. Have a frank and firm talk with your husband. Make an itemized account of your household expenses and go over it with him. Figures are truthful and he can see what it is costing you to run your house. Perhaps he hasn't realized just how much housekeeping does cost.

Make a budget for yourself. By this arrangement he will have to give you a certain amount each week, AND DON'T FORGET TO REMIND HIM OF IT EVERY PAY-DAY.

As for the "gambling." Since it's passtime he's after, why don't YOU help him to get it? After a long, hard day at work a man craves diversion. If he doesn't get it at home he'll go elsewhere. But why don't you let him find it at home? WHY NOT BEAT HIM POOL TABLE AT ITS OWN GAME?

Why not let him buy a cheap radio set and listen with it? What about a friendly home game of poker with the boys once in a while? You don't have to stay up to amuse them. Leave a pot of coffee and a plate of doughnuts handy and they'll accomplish you. Take a car ride out to the country these nice evenings. You can take baby along as long as you're not out late. Hop to it, Pal. Start to rebuild your home tonight.

WHAT'S NEW

(From a Woman's Standpoint)

Flares have gained in favor for evening and are usually achieved through the medium of godets and tiers.

One of the most novel and attractive evening gows was worn by Mrs. Vincent Astor recently of lustrous white crepe satin, trimmed with oblique lines of rhinestones. The skirt was flared.

There is a fashion at Deauville for wearing a colored chiffon handkerchief with each real lace corners, wound about the right wrist and knotted carelessly, but arranged so that the lace corners fall softly over the hand.

An increasing interest in hand-knitted sweaters and in handknit effects is remarked both here and in reports from Paris, and Angora, introduced as trimming, is considered, in several quarters, as attractive and much more practicable than the sweater knit entirely of Angora yarns.

On the rue de la Paix the most delightful velvet in figured designs—black and white, gray and white, and black and gray, soft and pliable as silk, are now seen. These will be used this fall for afternoon ensembles, either for both dress and coat, or for the gown alone worn with a coat of plain velvet.

SINCLAIR'S

CURSE OF LOVE

by Mildred Barbour

She nodded mutely, tears welling in her eyes at his kindliness.

"And you'll do as I've said?"

"Yes," she whispered. "Oh, how good you are!"

He waited until she hum of her car had died away in the distance. He had given her his revolver for protection, but, he asked himself, had he been wise to send her over those lonely roads with a highwayman about?

And if Stokes died—for Dr. Merrivale's optimistic statement to Norma had been intended to comfort her and was, by no means the truth—what then? What a scandal for them all!

CHAPTER 33.

WON OR LOST?

Norma reached town unnoticed. She was so eager to get home and to see her husband again that it is doubtful whether she would have noticed a skulking figure by the roadside.

The exciting events of the night had made the original reason for her flight seem almost paltry and inconsequential. The fight of Stokes, lying unconscious on the ground, and the realization of what the tragic situation might mean to Philip had shown her with sudden clearness that her love for her husband was greater than any other consideration in the world.

What did it matter, she thought, whether or not he had married her because he owed her father a large sum of money? What did her pride, what if he didn't really love her and had married her for convenience, she would make him love her, every yet. What a fool she had been to run away, to think she could live without him.

She noted thankfully that the pink Ventian palace was dark and silent. Evidently, her absence had not been noted by her father or any of the servants. As she drove into the garage, she noticed that Phillip's car was not in its accustomed place. But he frequently left it in the private lane at the other side of the garden. His was a "bus," he often laughingly explained, to which wind and weather had done their worst.

Norma let herself in and made her way noiselessly upstairs. The house was wrapped in silence. Philip's door was closed. She hesitated a moment before it and then, mindful of her promise to old Dr. Merrivale, tiptoed to her own room.

She undressed in the darkness and sank thankfully into bed. She had not realized that she was so weary. Determinedly she put from her all the disquieting thoughts that the night had brought and dropped into restful sleep.

The sun was shining through her coral silk curtains when she awoke. Birds were singing in the garden. The scent of flowers drifted in on the breeze. She heard the clip-clip of the lawn-mower as the gardener went over the already perfect and velvety sward. The sound reminded her that it must be late or such noise would never be tolerated.

She glanced at the tiny clock on the bedside table and saw that its hands pointed almost to noon.

"How silly of them to let me oversleep," she thought. "Dad and Phil will already have breakfasted and gone."

She rang for her bath and a breakfast-tray, and lingered over her rolls and coffee, turning over in her mind what she should say to Philip: whether she dared tell him what Sydney Stoker had revealed, or whether it were better to keep silent and let him tell her, everything in his good time, when the very depth of her own love for him should have made him care for herself.

"It's best to be frank," she decided "Then there'll be no possibility of another misunderstanding. Besides, I'll have to tell him to make him understand what I was doing at the bungalow last night. He'll believe me! He must believe me! I can't let him go on thinking that I was out keeping tryst with Sydney, or that I knew Sydney was coming."

With a sense of shame at her callous ness, she recalled that she had not given Sydney Stokes a single thought since waking. And he might be suffering excruciatingly, might be worse this morning.

Reaching for her phone, she called Dr. Merrivale at his residence.

"The doctor has just come in and is having his breakfast," a woman's voice replied reservingly. "He was away on a case all night."

The nurse's accurately was taken from the hand of the woman, at that moment, for the doctor's bluff voice interposed:

"Hello." And then, when Norma had answered, Dr. Merrivale went on: "Oh, yes, it's you. Everything's fine. The patient's doing well. No need to worry. I'll call you up, if it's necessary, but I don't anticipate that it will be."

Thankfully, Norma hung up the receiver and hurried to her waiting bath. She emerged, lovely, refreshed, with scarcely a trace of yesterday's strain upon her pretty face.

Caesarean operation in London brought a baby into the world seven minutes after the mother was run over and killed by a motor truck.

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I read with interest the letter written by "Wanta Know Two." I, for one, will say that there are a few girls left who do not care for "petting popularity." I am one of them. Some may call us a bit old fashioned, but better be "slow" than "sorry."

WANTA KNOW THREE.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

In reference to the letter you printed from "Wanta Know Two" I wish to say to the young-man that, in spite of the fact that he has gone out with girls who liked to pet, that is no sign that there aren't girls in this day who would appreciate a real honest-to-goodness boy of his type. I, too, have been discouraged. But, after reading what he has to say, it makes me glad and happy to know there is one honest and man-like boy left.

God bless you, "Wanta Know Two," and stick by your ideals. I am sure you will find the girl you are looking for.

FLETA.

These ought to encourage "Wanta Know Two." And there are many more girls like the writers of these letters who are seeking the companionship of boys like him.

KIWANIANS AND FRIENDS ENJOY FINE OUTING AT GLEN ISLAND

Swimming Exhibition By George Young A Feature

Belleville Kiwanis together with Picton Board of Trade, their families and friends had a gala day yesterday. It was the occasion of this Service Club's annual picnic to beautiful Glen Island in the Bay of Quinte, and for the large turnout which took in the highly successful outing, there were attractions and events in which both young and old, thin and stout, could participate and enjoy, and all were ready to admit that the affair was put across in regular Kiwanis style.

Perhaps the event from which the gathering derived most pleasure was an extraordinary swimming and diving exhibition kindly arranged and given, for the benefit of the picnickers by none other than the famous George Young, and the O'Byrne sisters, Rita, Irene and Olga. George demonstrated the Australian crawl, with which he won the Catalina swim and by the use of which he hopes to emerge victorious in the coming big C.N.E. $50,000 world's championship swimming marathon. Young's remarkable form as he sped through the water for a mile or so was a real treat to the visitors and an exhibition to be remembered.

The O'Byrne sisters, too, holders of many Canadian swimming championships, displayed remarkable ability in fancy diving and stunt work and their performance rounded out a swimming exhibition by real stars, worth going a long way to see.

At the conclusion of the exhibition, Kiwanian Bill Millet, on behalf of the Belleville Kiwanis, presented George Young with an honorary membership in the local club. In a brief address "Bill" dwelt on the honor which George had brought to Canada by his prowess, thanked him, his manager Ralph Levy, his trainer Henry O'Byrne, and the O'Byrne sisters for their entertainment. He assured George that the local club wished him all success in the coming swim.

George, on an adjoining spot, expressed his appreciation of being made a member of the Belleville Service Club, and stated that it had been a pleasure for him to assist in making the outing a success.

George Young and party are leaving Glen Island tomorrow for Oakville after spending five enjoyable weeks training at the Island. Mr. Levy, in a short talk, took the opportunity of thanking Mr. Williams, manager of the Island resort for the wonderful treatment accorded the party during the stay. They will leave in the morning for Oakville where George will complete his training for the Exhibition marathon.

Then there were races for everyone — running races, three-legged races, swimming races and everything that goes to make such an outing one to be remembered.

The Picton Board of Trade and "friends" who joined the local club in the picnic was well represented and furnished opposition for the Belleville lassies in two good softball games, the Belleville ladies trimmed their Prince Edward rivals in the first encounter, but the Picton Board of Trade men's team ran away from Kiwanis men and won the handsome trophy—a large sonderscript cup of doubtful monetary value.

The races were all well contested the winners being awarded valuable prizes. Charlie Hanna in his usual genial manner was the capable starter.

Altogether the event was a tremendous success and George Lee, in charge is to be congratulated on his work. Many took along basket lunches and for those who didn't, the Island Hotel served a most enjoyable meal. The Bon-Ton Orchestra was there as well at the pavilion and generously provided snappy music for the dance lovers. Many of the picnickers remained for the evening dance at the Island.

DEATHS & FUNERALS

RICHARD ELMER

A well known resident of Kingston passed away at his residence, 198 Bagot street on Wednesday morning in the person of Richard Henry Elmer after an illness of three years following a paralytic stroke. Mr. Elmer was born in Kingston seventy-two years ago and has resided here all his life. He was one of the oldest business men of the city. He was the proprietor of the well known Elmer barber shop for over fifty years.

Mr. Elmer was a man of sterling quality and benevolent spirit and will be missed by a very large circle of friends. He was an Anglican in religion and is survived by one son, Richard, manager of the Shell Gas Company, Belleville; and two daughters, Mrs. Malcolm Gibson and Mrs. William Johnstone, both of Hamilton; also a niece, Miss Georgina Ferguson.

The funeral service will be conducted by Rev. J. H. H. Coleman, assisted by Rev. James Dixon, at his late residence on Friday afternoon at two o'clock.

FLOODS IN SIBERIA KILL 100 PEASANTS

Vladivostock, Siberia, Aug. 18.—Forty thousand peasants are reported to have been deprived of shelter and over one hundred drowned in great floods which are sweeping the Maritime provinces following a steady downpour of eighteen hours. With rain continuing to fall today, Usuri River was out of its banks for miles and the Bikin, one of its tributaries was rising two inches per hour. The Suchan also has overflowed.

WOOLAROC WON BIG AIR DERBY

Landed Two Hours Ahead Of "Aloha"—Only Two To Finish

Wheeler Field, Honolulu, Aug. 18.—The monoplane Woolaroc, piloted by Art. Goebel, Hollywood, California, stunt flier won the 4,123 mile derby yesterday (Honolulu time), winning first prize of $25,000 in the Dole "" race. Lieutenant W. V. Davis, San Diego, was the navigator.

The monoplane Aloha, piloted by Martin Jensen, arrived at Wheeler Field at 2.30 p.m. (4.50 p.m. coast time.)

The crowd went wild as Jensen appeared through the Oahu's landing coming down on the Waikne side of the field on the second runway, 9:10:00.

Although thousands had left the field after the arrival of Art. Goebel, who won the race in the monoplane Woolaroc many remained and greeted Jensen as enthusiastically as they did Goebel.

Jensen stopped the Aloha half-way down the field, turned it around and taxied back to the revelwing stand. He waved his aviator's helmet in response to cheers from the grandstand.

The official landing time of the Wool roc was 12:25:00. Goebel made the first of four planes leaving Oakland yesterday to arrive. Goebel was also the first man to leave Oakland in regular order. The Miss Doran left after the Woolaroc but had previously stalled and was forced back.

The actual flying time for Goebel was 28 hours, 17 minutes and 20 seconds.

Great Reception

The tremendous crowd cheered and cheered as Goebel appeared over the field and circled it preparatory to landing.

Goebel stepped from his plane dressed in a plain business suit and with his linen unsoiled. Lieutenant Davis followed him out, dressed in his navy uniform.

The crowd went wild with enthusiasm at the great finish and shouted its applause. Goebel answered over the 'a salute of army bombs bursting in the air.

Mrs. Martin Jensen, wife of Martin Jensin, piloting the Aloha, broke through the ranks of military police and raced to Goebel's side. She narrowly escaped being hit by the whirring propeller.

Goebel expressed surprise when he was told he had won. He threw his hands in the air and shook hands with Jensen in a handshake of welcome for all the crowd.

"Say, folks, it is certainly great to land here," Goebel said. "How many others are in ahead of me?

"God bless you," Mrs. Jensen cried, when she greeted Goebel. "Oh can't you tell me something about Martin? Is he still in the air? Did you pass him? Where do you think he can be?"

Kissed the Winner

Mrs. Jensen threw her arms about the victorious pilot and, kissed him several times before Governor Farrington, General Lassiter, Admiral Dole, prize donor, could reach his side.

Two of the four planes which finally got away from the Oakland airport started before Goebel and his navigator, "Bill" Davis, U.S.N., took off. Augey Pedlar and Mildred Doran the flying school-teacher were the first to get started one hour and a half after Goebel left.

TENNIS

Yesterday afternoon on the Albert College courts, Point Anne and Belleville Tennis Clubs engaged in a friendly tilt at tennis when they met for the closing engagement between these two teams. As usual, when these two clubs meet, the games were closely contested and the scores pretty even. The Belleville players, however, had a slight edge on their visitors and managed to be the victors in four out of the five matches played. By this victory Belleville have earned the right to play off with Campbellford, the winners of the northern half of the District League for the Tunnon Cup. These matches will be played about the last week of this month, it is expected.

The scores yesterday were as follows: A. Black defeated T. Bender, 6.4; 10-8. Miss B. Ross defeated Miss J. Starr, 8-6; 6-1. Miss Macauley and P. Cole defeated Miss Bell and B. Roseberry, 8-7; 8-1; 6-5. W. Coulby and R. Brown defeated H. Payne and R. Payne, 3-6; 6-3; 7-5. L. Duval defeated A. Armstrong 6-2; 8-6. This last match was the only victory for Point Apne. After the play refreshments were served and everyone enjoyed an hour's social intercourse before departing for home.

SOFT BALL NOTES

The Beavers played brilliant ball behind the spectacular pitching of Molly Gray last evening and the locals defeated the Napanee Lenfs on their own lot by a score of 12-7. Lil Wagar did the flinging for the home-team and she was in fine fettle. The Beavers played like a consistent ball all the way and hit the ball with a vengeance. Mr. Paul manager of the Napanee team was very much upset over his team's loss and was adamant that he would not play an other game for the championship, he claiming that one game should have been awarded the Leafs by default when Mr. Meagher, Manager of the locals states distinctly that he notified Napanee two days previously that his team would not be there and Mr. Paul agreed to play the game at a later date. As the thing stands at the present time the Beavers and the Leafs are tied on the games which they have played a play-off which Mr. Paul is not in favor of.

Tonight, Monday, the Napanee cachers, sustained some bad blows on the face during the course of last evening's ball but the game continued:

Twig Woodley umpired.

The Cubs, Twig Woodley's new aggregation will stack up against the Trenton Beavers in an exhibition game here tonight. The Beavers have won 11 games here in Trenton and are the best in the neighbouring town. Mr. Woodley's hassles gave the local fans the best of entertainment last evening and the line-up contains the names of some very smart ball players. Gertie Hagerman and Inez Thrasher will form the battery for the Cubs. The game will get under way promptly at 6.30.

On Saturday of this week, the Beavers will have as their guests the Trenton Peanut team of Toronto. Mr. Meagher has brought some fast teams to the city during the past summer and he says that the Planters squad are as peppy as any of them. The visitors are identified with the Industrial League in Toronto.

The Intelligencer softball team are playing in Point Anne this evening in an exhibition game with the cement-mill team. Either Doyle or O'Connahue will toe the slab.

JOE WRIGHT SENIOR IS OFFICIAL REFEREE

Toronto, Ont., Aug. 18.—Joe Wright Senior, has been selected by the Canadian National Exhibition officials as official referee for the $50,000 aquatic exhibition in Lake Ontario on August 31. Mr. Wright is father of Wright Joe, Canada's champion sculler and the appointment was on recommendation of Elwood Hughes, inventor of the swim. Mr. Wright, now one of the leading rowing coaches on this continent, in his younger days was among the world's greatest oarsmen. "His word will be taken on any aquatic event and he is a man of international reputation," Mr. Hughes said today.

Martin Burke, New Orleans heavyweight, who meets Larry Gains, Canadian champion, in a ten rounder in Toronto Friday night. Burke beat Gains recently in New York, but the latter has always claimed that the decision against him was unfair, hence the rematch.

BOYS AND GIRLS SAVE A MILLION

The Thrift Movement in Public Schools of Ontario

TEACHING BY PRACTICE

The Penny Bank of Ontario and Its Strange Charter

By J. R. Middleton

Children in school three hundred schools have on deposit with The Penny Bank of Ontario approximately one million dollars, and 40,000 pupils in Toronto alone are depositors, and in several other cities of the Province the number of customers of the Bank is increasing. The service is provided in fifty-five municipalities, large and small, and can be made available in any community served by a Branch of any Chartered Bank.

Within the past five years the school-savings movement has been stimulated in the United States by a committee of the American Bankers Association, in consultation with a group of educational leaders. In Ontario Progress was made on the system of teaching thrift by practical banking and Toronto was established. The Ontario plan is thoroughly worthy and has some features that are unique.

The Penny Bank of Ontario is incorporated by Special Act of Parliament for one purpose only; the collection and deposit of children's savings. It was established by a charitable fund of $10,000, but no dividends may be paid to the shareholders, who are individual guarantors. The Directors receive no fees. The dollar of the Bank funds may be put out on loan. The money must be invested in Dominion securities, or deposited in the Post Office Savings Bank. Hence the liquid reserve on deposit with the Chartered Banks. The cost of service of the Bank is the interest on these securities and depositors, and this rate, of course, is not large. Out of that income there must be paid all operating costs and the cost of the minimum monthly balances. The surplus is just sufficient for an economical form of administration.

Chiefly the Penny Bank of Ontario is not a money-making corporation. It is a philanthropy, supported by educational and financial leaders who know that thrift is a virtue worth teaching; men who understand that an ounce of practice is worth a ton of theory. The aim is to inform the habit of saving, and for that reason the banking hour comes on regularly—generally every Tuesday morning. The money is paid to the teacher, who enters the amount of each deposit and the receipt balance in the child's pass book. A carbon copy of the entry goes to the bank with the money and there the records are kept.

Hoarding is not encouraged. It is a children's virtue to accumulate money but more useful and satisfying sources of gratification, such as a bicycle or a trip to camp. The aim of the Penny Bank is achieved. The saving habit is formed, and school usually persists when the interest of the bank is no longer the magnet.

A thrifty population produces a large reserve of capital for business expansion and tends to limitless prosperity. For that reason the investment and financial interests in the work of The Penny Bank of Ontario are unanimous in approval

BELLEVILLE FORCED INTO THIRD GAME FOR QUINTE CHAMPIONSHIP

Deloro Gained Verdict In Second Tilt Before Big Crowd

BAD BREAKS

Locals Out-Lucked In Season's Closest Exhibition

The championship series in the Bay of Quinte League is tied up again following Deloro's win over the Nationals at the Exhibition Park yesterday. The third and final game will be played here on Friday afternoon at 4.30, with the same umpires in charge.

The score yesterday was 3-2 but in all fairness to the locals it must be said that it shouldn't have been. Every one of the 2 runs that the visitors scored was unearned and were virtually handed to them on a silver platter. In the toughest issue that the ballplayers have faced this season, and they have outhicked all the way through and according to Hoyle should have walked off with the bacon and the laurels for 1927 but dame luck was not playing into their hands yesterday and as a result another game is necessary to decide the spoils. The Deloro Club played ball to win but they got the breaks from start to finish and Friday's game will be a battle to the last ditch.

Looking at the game from the angle the locals had nobody to blame but themselves for their defeat, but there were several angles from which on night view it. It was the first complete game of the season, going ten innings before the verdict was finally decided. The largest crowd of the season went away disappointed but confident that they will yet some how on Friday on the right end of the count.

Costly Errors

Lionel Harper who until the tenth played a spectacular game at short made a very bad error which later resulted in the winning run going over. Two were down and first base was occupied. Hughes sent up a moderate infield fly which was of the softest variety and the players dropped their gloves and started for the dug-out but it was not over and Harper allowed the ball to slip through his fingers and Brown was perched on second and Hughes resting serenely on first. How ever things looked still bright for a shutout in this innings. Manager Shorty sent "Art" Quinn who was occupying the bench on account of a sore toe, in to pinch-hit and he dumped one down toward first base which Gibson had ample time to retrieve and toss over the runner and Quinn ambled down slowly and Gibson in his haste dashed the runner on the base and the pellet rolled past first and Brown tore for the plate and crossed as Jerry recovered the ball.

The locals however, undaunted went to work in their half of the tenth and stared what appeared to be a promising rally. Hagerman the first batter smacked sharply to left field. Poste pounded on to Reigh but Derry who was injected in South's place in the batting order brought the fans to their feet with another ringing hit to left centre The best Gibson could do was to fly to Bond, and Ross drove one down at third rie while the pumper picked out of the dirt and the fracas was over.

The Official In Charge

The umpiring was not of the best by a long way and at least three decisions were questionable. Alex Kay, of Peterboro, had as his side-kick Harold Nicholson, of Kingston, and the two were not at all pleased at some of their calls. One close one at the plate at bed Belleville of one run when, from the red box and grand stand it appeared as though Kay [illegible] was wrong. In the fourth inning Ross had gone out to the pitcher and Weir singled to left and Feeney shot a hard one down to Jack at short-stop and the ball taking a bad hop rolled to the outfield. Harry doubled to right and Vern scored and Feeny close behind came leaping in as Boudrault whipped the ball from the outfield and still remained over standing up and every one thought he had beaten the ball by Kay waved his hands indicating that he was out and the crowd roared their disapproval and it looked as though they were justified. But Nicholson called Hagerman safe later in the game and a good percentage of the fans believed that the ball had been safe by inches. But Alex Kay in all his Central Ontario career was regarded as one of the best of his calling and as a general rule few of his decisions were disputed and an arbiter is certainly not a better position to note the play than the average spectator.

It was a thrilling game with plenty of excitement and the cash customers and another splendid turn-out is expected on Friday.

Gibson's Pitching

"Hook" Gibson the boy who has been improving every time out was pitted against Frankie Leal the veteran right hander and the local rounester overshadowed his older rival. The former repeated his excellent performance in his victory last Saturday and the laurels cannot be attributed to him. He allowed but five hits and these were scattered throughout the pastime. His hook ball was looking over like a charm and he had plenty of speed and left control. The his one bad throw to Harry at first paved the way for the Following yesterday's game here the Manager of the Deloro Club E. A. Elliott and Robt. Cutting an official of the local team got together to arrange for the third play-off tilt. A coin was flipped and Mr. Elliott shouted "heads" and as it happened the "tails" side was upward and Mr. Cutting announced that the next game will be played here on Friday afternoon of this week at 4.30 p.m.

The same officials Kay, of Peterboro, and Nicholson, of Kingston, will be in charge. "Hook" Gibson will face another hard test when the Smelters. Gibson has pitched four hard games in a row and he seems to be improving all the time. Mr. Elliott will probably send his south-paw Ralph into action.

inning counter but his mistake was ave meant nothing had his team ates not put him in the cesspit of he Nationals behind him for a quar- ns of play in the fourth inning but it ot they could do was to hang up ny counter. The old-timer had ne ne sensational for Ralph on Friday ine although Manager Elliott use ly to shoot the signals and had m the assignment.

Harper's spear of Bonds drive in th ird was the most sensational play of the afternoon. He dug his spike in the sod and literally hitched himself to the flying and managed to cling to t upon the plaudits of the crowd. Na Kay pick-up of Bonds liner to end he game got Leal out of a bad pos ion.

A coincidence occurred in the seventh inning when Gibson pitched three ball to retire the side. Up until the fourth inning not one member of the hoop team got as far as first base. With the exception of two base hits the Deloro team went down in straight succession from the first to the third inning.

Bond started the ball rolling in the first when he singled, Jack who followed him did likewise but Bond went out when Vern Weir took Jimmy Quinn's two drive to force him at third. Boudrault was sent out to Poste and Gibson made a wild pitch and Jack scored. Two seconds later he fired one over which was a trifle low and when Feeney was hunting for the ball which was half a dozen feet behind, Quinn tallied Weir scored in the fourth on Harry Gibson's nice double. In the eighth Hagerman walked, went to second on Leal's bad throw to first and tied Deloro on Poste's single. The story of the hectic tenth has already been told Which for the next episode on datur day.

BAMBINO'S BLOW DEFEATS CHISOX

8th Home Run Of Season Puts Him Even With Gehrig

Chicago, Aug. 18.—The versatility of George Herman Ruth is positively astounding at times. Yesterday he reversed the general order of things and rose from the sidelines to the sublime, turned form to fame and made George Connally, the White Sox pitcher, wonder if the whole world wasn't topsy-turvy after all.

Twice the mighty Babe fell before the tantalizing change of pace hurled at him by Mr. Connally and when he struck out for the second time with the bases filled, the score tied, two out and the eighth inning at hand, he stooped to the depths of disappointment.

In the eleventh the Babe stepped up to the plate again and clouted one off Mr. Connally's curves into the left field stands and treated around the bases with the run that gave the Yankees a 3 to 2 victory.

This was Mr. Ruth's thirty-eighth home run of the season incidentally and put him back on ever terms with his twin thriller, Lou Gehrig, of the great American home run handicap.

At Detroit, Billings, the bespectacled right-hander from Brown University, started his first major league game and pitched the Tigers to a 6 to 2 victory over the Red Sox.

Philadelphia made it three straight from the Indians at Cleveland when Grove outpitched Hudlin and the Mackmen won 4 to 1.

The Washington Senators and the St. Louis Browns split a double bill at St. Louis, the Senators winning the first-game in 1 and the Browns taking the second 3 to 2.

LEAFS DIVIDE WITH SKEETERS

New York, August 18.—The Skeeters split a double-header at Jersey City yesterday with the Toronto Leafs, losing the first, 3 to 1 and taking the nightcap 3 to 0.

Doc Seeger, former Giant pitcher, started the game for Toronto, but gave way to Sarrett in the fifth. Sarrett-Sole received credit for the victory.

Erwin Brame turned the second game out, while bit hard, was strong with him on the case. It was his fifteenth victory of the season. Major league touts and Barney Dreyfuss, of the Pirates, were in the stands.

At Newark the Bears found Chester Falk's southpaw slants a puzzle in all but one inning, and the Buffalo Bisons turned in a 5 to 2 victory. Cohen's hitting and fielding was a large factor in the Bison's victory.

The Baltimore Orioles took both games of a doubleheader from Rochester, 6 to 1 and 12 to 1, hitting safely 38 times. In the nightcap Archdeacon hit for the circuit wit p on board in the fourth frame. The double win gave the Orioles third place over Newark.

Reading and Syracuse broke even in the final of three consecutive doubleheaders at Reading. Keystoners won the first, 5 to 4, and lost the seven-inning nightcap 8 to 3.

PIRATES BREAK GIANTS' STREAK

Quiet Affair Results In Win For Smoky City Team

New York, August 1.—The Giants made only five hits and one run off Carmen Hill yesterday, which was ridiculously inadequate considering that the jolly Pirates slugged Freddy Fitzsimmons for ten hits and four runs. It doesn't require a lighting calculator to see that the Pirates won the second game of the series, also putting a period in the Giants six-ply winning streak.

The Pirates' victory came at a very opportune moment, for most of the customers were beginning to believe that they were nicknamed the Pirates for the same reason that mammoth lads weighing 260 pounds are called "tiny."

On the whole it was a very quiet day 'neath Coogan's Bluff. Donie Bush was not thrown out of the game the Pirate was fined $50 for his base running and even Mr. "Ol" Smith restrained himself and did not attempt to emulate his fistic idol, Mr. Tunney.

Brooklyn bunched hits off Carlson in the eighth and ninth innings to score five runs and whip the Cubs 6 to 5 at Brooklyn.

The victory snapped the Robins five game losing streak as well as ending the four-game winning stride of the Bruins. It was the third triumph for Brooklyn over the Cubs in 17 games.

At Boston St. Louis pounded Robert ash off the mound in the seventh inning and handed Edwards his relief pitcher, roughly enough to earn a 7 to 3 decision over the Braves.

Senor Adolphe Luque held the Phillies to four hits at Philadelphia today and beat Frank Ulrich in a hurling duel. Cincinnati winning by a score of 2 to 1 in a fast game completed in 8 minutes.

TURKS BURY THE DEAD OWN WAY

No Undertakers In That Country—Don't Use Bearers

Angora, Aug. 17. — Turkish funerals are resisting western influences, and the hearse, with and woolies or carriages for the mourners, has been tried in two instances with small success so far.

There are no undertakers as yet in Turkey, and women, however much emancipated they may have been by the abolition of polygamy, still do not go to the cemetery services.

Burial is rapid in Turkey for bodies are not embalmed. Interment occurs frequently the day of death and always on the morrow. The body is bathed, wrapped well in cloth and borne on a sort of wooden stretcher by mourners whole. The procession starts with the men and boys of the family and male relatives and friends but in the street stragglers often come up to help carry the body a short distance. The solemn religious and traditional encourage such action as pleasing to Allah. A body sometimes is carried simply on a board held by the father. The mourners do little mourning. The Moslem religion and tradition enjoin the dead as having gone to a better home. There is sadness and regret but none of the bitter sorrow that frequently affects western homes.

Once the grave is filled and the headstone erected the dead are left with Allah, and there is no effort to care for the grave as that would only distrub the dead. That is why Turkish cemeteries are wild and unkempt with headstones slowly toppling over.

VITAMIN "B" IS TAKEN FROM COW

State College, Pa. Aug. 17. — Nutrition specialists at the Pennsylvania State College have discovered, through unusual experiments, that the highly valuable vitamin B can be obtained from the stomachs of cows in large quantities.

Hailing the discovery as "marvelous," scientists attending the Institute of Chemistry of the American Chemical Society, said it not only would prove of great value in laboratory feedings, of experimental animals, but that it was "entirely possible" that cultures of vitamin B could be obtained in this way for human consumption.

In conducting their tests, the nutrition specialists had a door-way cut into the second stomach, or rumen, of one of the State College prize cows. Although deprived of all food containing vitamin B, it was found, that in a little inclubator in the cow's stomach she produced this valuable material in great quantities.

State College scientists discovered a year ago that cows were the only animal so far known that can thrive on food lacking the necessary vitamin. It was then that experiments were started that led to the discovery that they produced their own vitamin B. The experiments were made under the direction of Dr. H. L. Mechdel, of Penn State Dairy Department.

PACIFIC IS SILENT AS TO FATE OF AVIATORS LOST IN AIR RACE

Rewards Totalling $40,000 Are Offered For Rescue Of Fliers

Reports Of Rescue Of Mildred Doran Proved To Be False

$40,000 In Rewards

San Francisco, Calif., Aug. 19.—The plan which preceded the take-off in the $25,000 prize Dole flight continued in its wake today. Out into the far reaching expanse of the Pacific went the appealing call of radio, aided by searching aeroplanes, destroyers and submarines in quest of two lost aeroplanes, the "Miss Doran" and the "Golden Eagle."

James Dole, Hawaii pineapple king, who put up the prize for the race, today opened his purse again, this time to offer $30,000 for the recovery of the missing planes and their occupants. To this amount William Mallaska, Michigan millionaire, who entered the Miss Doran in the race added $10,000 for the recovery of the occupants of the Miss Doran dead or alive. George Kegrel, publisher of the San Francisco Examiner, also offered $10,000 reward, $5,000 for rescue of occupants of each missing plane.

Illness Only Answer

But the trackless wastes of the Pacific were silent in the appeal of the agencies of modern communication. All day yesterday and through the night, the appeal was unanswered. Where are Miss Mildred Doran, aviatrix, 22 year old Michigan school teacher; J. A. Fedlar, pilot of her monoplane, Dale H. Knope, navigator, and Frank Piatt of the "Gold en Eagle" and Gordon Scott, his navigator?

Every pilot in the Pacific kept constant watch for the ill-fated planes or their crews but no trace of them was heard.

Admiral McLean's message said submarines S 18 and S 16 had departed for San Francisco to search for the missing "Golden Eagle" and "Miss Doran" and that en route they would investigate reports of the "object" having been seen in the water.

False Rumors Spread

Honolulu, Aug. 19.—Publication of baseless rumors in a newspaper here, "not a member of the Associated Press" that the Dole flight plane "Miss Doran" and its crew had been found off the north coast of Maui in an inbound Kraus section, served to excite the residents of Honolulu but caused no relief to anxious officers, demanding more accurate information.

Representatives of the Associated Press, using both automobile and aeroplane radio toward Kaenae early today learn that what observers thought was Pedlar's gaily painted plane was a sampan a Japanese fishing boat.

MURDERER PAID FINAL PENALTY

Quebec, Aug. 19.—Eugene Bigaouette, murderer of his mother in the fall of 1925, paid the penalty on the scaffold today. For some days he had been resigned to his fate and this morning, from his cell to the gallows, he walked with a firm step and met a speedy death. From the moment he mounted the scaffold until he was pronounced dead, seven minutes elapsed. When his head struck last night the condemned man did not know the result of the appeal made to the governor-in-council. At that time he was informed that he was to mount the scaffold today as his appeal had failed. He showed no signs of emotion when told of the failure of the last appeal for clemency. This morning when told that all was prepared and that it was time for him to leave the cell, he cried bitterly.

SYMPATHIZERS PAYS $50

Toronto, Aug. 19.—Five of fifty dollars was imposed by Magistrate Cohen in police court today on Paul Rawlinoff, one of a number of Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers who were pasting printed appeals on street posts and buildings last night.

7-FOOT BASS

Richard Dix Makes Some Kind Of Record With a 218-Pound Fish

Avalon-Santa Catalina Island, Calif., Aug. 19.—Richard Dix, movie star, claimed the record today of landing a 218 pound bass with a light tackle. Previous record catch was a 275 pound fish caught by H. T. Adams, of Los Angeles. Dix was fishing from a small boat yesterday when he argued with the bass for 25 minutes before hauling it over the gunwhale. It measured seven feet

J. F. HILL GIVEN CANE AT PICNIC

Conservatives Of Huntingdon Pay Tribute To Member

The picnic held in James Haggerty's grove, West Huntingdon, on Wednesday of this week under the auspices of the Conservatives of Huntingdon Township for the purpose of honoring their Provincial representative, Mr. J. F. Hill was a decided success in every way, representatives from Belleville, Stirling, Madoc, Tweed, Thurlow, Tyendinaga and Hungerford being in attendance.

The outstanding feature of the program was the presentation of an engraved, gold-handled stony cane to Mr. Hill, M. P. P. by Mr. Thos. Thompson on behalf of the Conservatives of Huntingdon Township. An address of appreciation accompanied the presentation and was read by Mr. H. Rollins, Secretary of the Conservative Association. Although taken by complete surprise, Mr. Hill made a suitable acknowledgement.

A rare treat in the way of an able address by Dr. Montieth, M.P.P., Provincial Treasurer, was one of the chief events of the day.

Other addresses were made by Dr. Embury, M.P. for North Hastings-Peterboro, W. E. Tummon, M.P. for South Hastings, Mr. John Elliott, Manager of the Standard Bank, Belleville, Mr. S. B. Rollins, Reeve of Tweed, Mr. Mc. Truscott, West Huntingdon, Mr. Henry Wallace, Pres. of Conservative Association, Mr. James Haggerty, County Treasurer and Mr. Morton, Reeve of Huntingdon.

A softball match between two local teams was also an interesting event.

FIVE BOYS LOST IN QUEBEC WOOD

Airplanes And Hundreds Of Men Prosecute Vain Search

Montreal, Aug. 19.—With two aeroplanes and a party of a hundred men searching the dense forest in vicinity of Lake Archambault, no trace of five boys who have been reported lost since Sunday night from a flight of two aeroplanes set out early this morning. They scattered three bundles and handbills, bearing the following message: "Boys, when you read this go to nearest open place you can find and make a fire or wave a shirt so that aeroplane can see you and don't come one by one by bush. Stay right where you are until help comes."

The boys who range from eight to fourteen years, were camping at Camp Agaming on Lake Archambault in the Laurentian Mountains.

They set out on a short trip Sunday intending to remain in the woods over night and return to camp on Monday evening. They failed to return and searchers found traces of them fifteen miles from the lake but were unable to follow the trail. A piece of paper found near a recently extinguished camp fire, bore words "We boys from Camp Agaming are lost."

FLINT PRAYS FOR SAFETY YOUNG SCHOOL TEACHER

Flint, Mich., Aug. 19. — Stopped abruptly in the midst of a joyful celebration following radio reports telling of the discovery of Miss Mildred Doran, a native of Sgaxville, Ont., and Pedlar, the missing pair of Pacific fliers, Flint turned to prayer today when it was learned that the reports were untrue.

"Let every resident of Flint remember Mildred Doran and Auggie Pedlar in their daily prayers and pray for their safe deliverance," was the statements issued by the local Ministerial Alliance. The organization of ministers also announced special prayer services to be held in the churches of the city on Sunday.

Vanzetti Goes Insane According To Statement Of His Counsel

Boston, Aug. 18.—Counsel for Sacco and Vanzetti announced today that they will apply to the United States Supreme Court for a writ of certiorari in behalf of the condemned men. It will be based on points involving the "due process" clause of the United States constitution, they said.

Refused Appeal

Boston, Aug. 19.—The full bench of the Massachusetts Supreme Court today overruled exceptions by Saccos-Vanzetti defense counsel to decisions by Justice George A. Sanderson of that court and by Judge Webster Thayer of the Supreme Court and refused to grant a writ of error. This decision was announced just after nine a.m. by Supreme Court recorder with whom the justices filed it yesterday.

Exceptions were to the refusal of Justice Sanderson to grant a writ of error and denial by Judge Thayer of a new trial, revocation of sentence and stay of execution. Arguments of these exceptions were made last Thursday before four justices of the Supreme Court, sitting as a full bench.

These legal steps by counsel for Nicola Sacco and Bartholomeo Vanzetti, whose respite from execution for murder expires at midnight on Aug. 22, were based chiefly on allegations of prejudice on the part of Judge Thayer, who presided at the original trial and who previous refused to grant a new trial was upheld by Mas sachusetts Supreme Court last April.

SPECIAL STAMP FOR AIR FLIGHT

Gov.-General And Prime Minister Will Send Letter To King

London, Ont., Aug. 19.—Canada's first air mail will be carried by Capt. Terry Tully and Lieut. Jimmy Medcalfe when they take-off from this city next week on their 2,900-mile hop to London, England. Announcement of special stamps and letter prepared a special cancellation die to be used on the small and select packages that will go into the bags to be specially constructed Canada Post-office Air Mail Bag.

The stamps were designed and engraved by Ray Lawson's artists in London and are being held here under bond given to the Post Office Department that the stones will be destroyed and that not one of the stamps will be released except in the manner authorized.

It is understood that the issue is limited to a very small number and that of this number ten must be deposited in the Government archives at Ottawa. The stamp is of the same width as the Confederation two-cent issue and is in two colors. In light green are portrayed the upper section of the globe with the North American at the left and the British Isles at the right. Between is a hand engraved replica of the Silver Wright motor, plane, and on either side of the plane are thumb nail photo engravings of Tully and Medcalfe. The surmounting inscription is "London, Canada, to London, England." The arbitrary price mark required under the regulation is shown as 35 cents.

The Governor-General and Premier King have both arranged to have letters carried under this air-mail stamp to King George in London, England.

FRIDAY AN UNLUCKY DAY FOR QUEBEC'S MURDERERS

Montreal, Aug. 19.—The first three Fridays of August, 1927, proved days of expiation for murderers in the province of Quebec and also created a record for successive hangings.

Justice was served in a little manner on the scaffold, on three "occasions" Friday, August 5 George Merle was hanged at Montreal for the murder of Andre Marcelle. Both were French. Friday, Aug. 12, Alexander Lavalle '72, was hanged for the murder of his daughter. The execution took place at Three Rivers. Today, Friday, Aug. 19, Eugene Bigaouette was hanged in Quebec City. He killed his mother two years ago.

RAYNOR WILL BE REMANDED WHEN HE APPEARS IN COURT TOMORROW

Liabilities Are Expected To Reach Around Three Hundred Thousand

STAYS IN JAIL

Counsel Has Not Requested Bail—Only Two Criminal Charges Yet

Speaking with Mr. M. B. Allison, Crown Attorney for Prince Edward County, this morning, The Intelligencer learned that the preliminary trial of Ralph Henry Raynor which was set for tomorrow at Picton Police Court, has been postponed until August 27th. Raynor will appear before Magistrate Levi Williams in the morning and will immediately be remanded for another week. In the meantime he will remain in Picton Jail facing the serious charge of embezzlement.

It is the current belief that investors with Raynor will receive but a small percentage of returns for their money. The next meeting of shareholders has been called for Tuesday of next week at Kingston.

Crown Attorney Allison stated that there was no new light on the case at the present time and that only one other charge had been laid, that by the Provincial Finance Corporation to the extent of $23,000. Mr. Allison said that as no bail had been asked for by F. L. Ward, the defending counsel, the amount had not been set.

It was stated in some quarters that blame for Raynor's downfall is laid at the feet of some of his closest friends. However, this story is discredited by those in close touch with his business affairs.

Liabilities Over $300,000

It was stated in a morning paper that J. P. Williams, a prominent U. F. O. worker, had been arrested on a charge of conspiracy in connection with the bankruptcy. No verification of this could be secured for this take. As the receivers have further into the books of the Company additional claims have been found which may bring the total liabilities close to the $300,000 figure.

The rise and fall of Harry Raynor reads like a tale of "Get rich quick Wallingford." Seven years ago he was a farmer in modest circumstances and today he is practically penniless with his business having passed into the hands of receivers. In the interval he passed as one of the rising wealthy men of this district.

Insurance Companies Pay

Toronto, Aug. 19.—The Commercial Investment Trust Limited of which the Finance Corporation of Toronto paid out $100,000 in the bankruptcy following the collapse of the Raynor Petition and Belleville who is charged with conspiracy to defraud, announced. C. W. O'Grady, the corporation's manager, stated today that the insurance companies had paid the claim.

Barrie, Ont., Aug. 19.—A confession signed by Elwood Nevins, one of the accused, provided an early sensation in the preliminary hearings of ten men charged with theft, perjury and receiving before Magistrate Hale today.

The confession was read in court and in E Nevilles admitted stealing cattle and implicated several of those accused with him. Counsel for the prisoners intimated that they would likely be tried by a judge and jury but would insist on all evidence being brought out before the trial as their clients are committed for trial.

LITTLE DANGER OF TYPHOID HERE

Dr. Cronk, M. O. H. Says Avenues Of Infection Infection Closed

Speaking with Dr. Cronk the Medical Health Officer, last evening, The Intelligencer learned that there is no danger of a typhoid epidemic in Belleville such as has broken out in Chatham and Montreal. Every precaution has been taken by the Board of Health to close the avenues of infection. No compulsory pasturization of milk is required on the part of vendors but other measures have been in force which practically eliminate any possibility of a spread of infectious diseases. Each month a sample of milk is sent to the Government laboratory at Peterboro for bacterial alaysis. A report is redeived by the local department and the department also issue tags to the vendors denoting the grade of milk they are permitted to sell. Where there is more or less of a competition between the milk men of the district to produce the best grade.

Belleville has been almost immune from infectious diseases within the past few months and scarlet fever and typhoid cases are an unknown quantity.

Dr. Cronk explained the Widal test. "The Widal test is a blood test to determine whether you get a certain condition in the blood that shows whether or not the subject is typhoid carrier or a victim of the disease," he said. "A little drop of blood on a slide is analyzed and the condition is shown by the clumping of the typhoid germs under a microscope. This is what is called a positive. A negative test is just normal, of course," explained the M.H.O.

TODAY'S THOUGHT

In society, fools conspicuous grow;
The smallest sense is seen on many.
DAY.

JUST A RESPITE

After two years of strenuous work carried on in the face of personal peril, President Coolidge and his colleagues in the Free State Government would probably not be very sorry to hand over the reins of power now, and let another group of men do the worrying. But they are not to be relieved of either just yet. The resolution of non-confidence in them, moved yesterday by Tom Johnson, Labor leader, was negatived by the casting vote of the Speaker, the votes of the opposing groups being tied at 71 to 71. The Farmers' party and 24 Independents rallied to support of the government, while the Nationalist group of six led by Captain Redmond Barry, with the Labor group and the Peasant Pall mustered in support of the motion of condemnation. The motion would have been carried but for the defection of one of the Independent members, who mysteriously disappeared from the house just before the vote was taken.

Mr. Cosgrave was able to obtain an adjournment of the Dail until October and his government will carry on during the recess. But it is not probable that he will choose to remain much longer in office. There are two by-elections pending in the city and county of Dublin, and if even one of them goes against the government he is not unlikely to call off the legislature together to receive the government's resignation.

Although Tom Johnson would in event be called upon to form a government, he never lobbied the throne could be Mr. De Valera. He leads the largest group at present in opposition, but he and his followers prefer not to take office but rather to dictate terms while others bear the responsibility. A situation is developing by which the two opposing political forces will represent the constitutional principle and the anti-treaty spirit of reprisal — the one led by Mr. Cosgrave and the other by Mr. De Valera. It will not be long before the people of the Free State will have another opportunity to choose between the two.

FORCE NEEDED YET

When a heavy rain has damaged properly and created a panic in the region of Peshawar, Turkestan, looters came out to rob and kill, thus adding to the terror of the population, and created only when the forces of order are at their good hour of their down. This is an old story. The minute the forces of order are disorganized by calamity or any other cause, the evil-intentioned take advantage of the situation and begin to prey, and, if not quickly suppressed, a riot of thuggery ensues that lasts until the police or the militia again secure control. In all parts of the world there have been such incidents. In North America these used to be terrorism in almost every new mining camp and robbery and murder were common. The reason is the desperadoes. Then, and then only, was order restored and the camps had truth made safe. In the great San Francisco earthquake of 1906, when the business district was practically wiped out, fires started and burned for three days. The task of reparation order was beyond the strength of the police and General Frederick Funston took charge with his troops, placing the city under military control. This was looking ahead, and, doubtless, numerous looters were prevented. That was fifty or more years ago, and human nature has not changed much since then. Fortunately, or America, it is the same. Police are needed in most civilized centres for the common protection. And soldiers are necessary in the international field, civilization requires a strong arm to restrain the lawless.

STAGING A FARCE

There should be a convention in Mr. King's journalistic supporters to decide upon a common course of action in the matter of the Hudson Bay Railway. We were told last the other day by the Ottawa Citizen that the Government assumes no responsibility whatever for the sub-Arctic route. Its noble words:

"The present Government is not backing the grain route. It undertook to put the railway and terminals in response to the almost general opinion of the West that such work should be done, and in the belief that the Hudson Bay Railway will, because of rich water-power, minerals, forest, and other resources, and apart from the grain ship route, eventually justify itself."

That seems definite enough until we read in the Manitoba Free Press the declaration that the very "life of the Government" depends upon justification of the selection of Churchill in place of Nelson as a terminal port, says the Free Press:

"That Mr. Dunning will do everything within his power to develop Port Churchill and have the test of the route via that port made under the most favorable" possible auspices we may be taken for granted. He has given too many hostages to fortune to take any unnecessary chances. He has bet his political future, the life of the Government if which he is a member, and six million dollars of public money that he can justify his selection of Port Churchill, within the next four years. Mr. Dunning is a highly competent person and he will do everything in this end that energy can compass and money achieve, and we doubt not that ships will be plying their way as a matter of course between Port Churchill and other ports of the world in a comparatively brief period."

It is not without interest to contrast the lukewarm optimism of the Ontario newspaper associated with the whole-hearted enthusiasm of the Manitoba Free Press. "The first is concerned primarily with the fate of Mr. King and his administration and has in the main political aspects to the eastern provinces as to the Hudson Bay route. The second puts the Hudson Bay in first place, we fear, and is delighted to see Mr. King tied so close to the project that he cannot escape his responsibility under any such flimsy pretext as is suggested by the Ottawa Citizen.

The Free Press, which thinks Nelson has advantages over Churchill as a terminal port, is reconciled to the choice of Mr. Dunning and his expert, by the thought that eventually both ports will be used, and undoubtedly this suggestion will bring a note of cheer into the minds of the tax-payers. "Once the route is opened up," it tells us, "further development will take care of itself; and it will not be many decades before both ports are used to full use." We should be gratified that the Free Press has not yet thought of double-tracking the line.

OTHER MEN'S THOUGHTS

Mr. Tunney says he will quit fighting as soon as he gets married. He's optimistic at all events.—Ottawa Citizen.

Our idea of a helpful guy is the Brantford best man who, when the bridegroom's voice failed him, responded, "Ee does."—Kitchener Record.

The president of the local Canadian Club puts it up to British Columbians to organize tours of eastern Canada on lines similar to those upon which the recent visit of a party from Quebec was organized by the University of Montreal. He very properly points out that if we of this province had more opportunities of meeting our fellow Canadians, more especially those of the ancient province, in their native surroundings, much of the misunderstanding would disappear completely.

There is nothing like personal contact to promote understanding. And we may as well admit that the people of the east know more about us and our affairs than we know about them and theirs. — Victoria Times.

Wife—"Oh, yes, I know, but the dressmaker doesn't."

Judge — "What gave you the impression that the prisoner was drunk?"

Cop — "He was engaged in a heated argument with a bus driver."

Judge — "But that does not prove anything."

Cop — "Well, sir, there was no bus driver there."

Daughter — "He proposed to me again."

Mother — "Where was the harm in that?"

Daughter—"Well, I had accepted him the night before."

KEEPSAKES

Do you suppose that if I put away
The violets you gave to me that night,
Laid them in fragrant dust away from sight,
Took down from fragrant dust away from sight,
Then could I say,
"I have forgotten all!" and find it true?

Could I be sure, whenever we would meet,
That in your sudden smile I could be cold,
And laugh the careless laugh of love grown old—
Then part, and passing on
Along the street,
Could I be glad to know that you had gone?

Such foolish symbols! Strange that I feel yet
The smell of violets, now crumbling grey;
And your still face, half coolly turned away,
Through blurring tears I see.
I could forget
If you had never given these to me.

Prince of Wales Shocks London

Broad Street is lamenting and Piccadilly refuses to be comforted and the voice of the mourner is heard in the land. Something resembling a fashion earthquake has struck London Society and the glasses of fashion and moulds of form of that city are in sackcloth and ashes. This at any rate, is what Associated Press despatches from that city tell us and the reason is that the Prince of Wales is wearing a hard straw hat. It appears that it "don't done" in the best circles and what's more it hasn't been done for forty years. Only Harrow school boys, we are told, scribbled neat hard straw hats and commit this unspeakable crime. It hasn't upset Canada to any noticeable extent and the Prince has a knack of smiling himself in these little matters which is perhaps one of the secrets of his democratic success. In the accompanying photograph he is shown standing against the Canadian Pacific Royal train at Winnipeg station chatting to the Honorable Theodore Rorows, Lieutenant-Governor of Manitoba, and whatever they are saying it is an odds-on chance that they are not talking about straw hats, nor discussing the dictum of Bond Street and Piccadilly. It looks as though the offending headgear may be the correct wear next summer in London.

GERMAN SPA IN AN UGLY TEMPER

Threatens To Secede As As They Tire Of Treatment By State

Berlin, August 18.—Waldeck-Pyrmont, one of the smallest German states, has been thrown into excitement by one of its former inhabitants in exile. The common council of the health resort, Bad Wildungen, where Adolf Hitler Strasser recently spent his vacation, passed a resolution demanding the annexation of the city by Prussia. The reason for this stand lies in a quarrel between the town and the Government of the state of Waldeck-Pyrmont.

The mineral springs of the resort are owned by the state, which derives an annual income of about 875,000 from them, but specialists refuse to make improvements and erect the new building expansion deemed necessary by the municipal authorities.

Negotiations with the State of Prussia have been carried on for some time and probably were encouraged by the presence of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, recently in exile. It is believed, however, that the Government of Waldeck-Pyrmont will prevent the secession of the city.

Moreover, it would have to pay higher taxes under Prussian rule.

It was reported that a company had been organized with a capital of $250,000 to purchase and has demanded by the Bad Wildungen alder men.

PRISONERS

Word of the decision was carried to its two condemned men in the death cells by Rev. Hiram Prime of Charlestown by Michael Mussmanno, of the defense staff. The Reverend Prime said that Vanzetti had become insane, shortly after Mussmanno's visit, soon, Vanzetti told Celestino Madeiros, his companions to die at the same time for another crime they were charged with in the past house. They showed no outward sign of physical or mental trouble as they went with guards to the death chamber.

Upon leaving Vanzetti, Mussmanno called newspaperman into Warden Hendry's office and with the Warden present said Vanzetti's mind had grown very badly. He kept shouting. I know I'm right. I've got a document that is a million men. Who is making all that noise."

The attorney, added, "Soco took the news quietly. He was eating when I left him. He said, 'I want to write a letter to my boy,' Sacco said.

LAKE HAS FIVE YEARS TO SERVE

Convicted On Three Counts This Morning—Gets Stiff Sentences

Harvey Lake, aiith. Alvin Ellis, was sentenced to five years in the Portsmouth Penitentiary by Magistrate Millen in Police Court this morning.

Lake faced three charges, one of breaking and entering the house of George Walker, Campbellford Road, and stealing some clothing, two watch es, a fountain pen, some spectacles a mirror and some stamps. The second charge was breaking and entering into Sealant House, No. 2 of the Canadian National Railways at Rawdon Township and taking some $20 in cash from the till from the safe. The third charge was breaking into the Lake, or Ellis, was charged with escaping from the Adolescent Home and brought to Belleville under custody, last year.

Lake pleaded not guilty to the first charge, and guilty to the last two. The prisoner has a criminal record, having been in Kingston Penitentiary on a breaking and entry charge, was sentenced this morning by Mr. E. J. Butler.

The Provincial Police deserve great credit for the way in which they brought Lake to justice. With only a vague description of the fugitive as "Kid," and supplemented by Provincial Police Officer Sylvester and Provincial Constable Westbrook have worked on the case for a week, finally arresting Lake in Stirling on Thursday, August 11th.

Weird Stories

On the charge of breaking and entry to which he pleaded not guilty, Lake told a contradictory story in his evidence. He said that he had bought the suit of clothes four years ago in some town in Ontario, bought the watch in Sudbury, and the fountain pen was given him by a first cousin he alleged. The glasses were some he had bought for his mother, and a neck tie and handkerchief, also part of the loot, he had by his mother-in-law, Mrs. Lindsay. A hat he also purchased in Lindsay, which however did not show in a photograph taken.

Sell a Poor Pig

Mrs. Lindsay, from Carlestown by McNeal Mussmanno, of the defense staff, was then called to the stand and identified the articles as their own.

When Lake was sentenced he broke down and wept bitterly. He declared that he had never got a fair deal in Police Court. He will, when put in the court room, and who has been supporting herself for some time, took the matter much more philosophically and seeming to care much whether her husband was sentenced to a week or ten years.

The prisoner's sentences on the charges will run concurrently, coinciding with the sentence on this one. He has also a year to serve to which he was sentenced three months last year and which he had evaded by escaping from the train on the way to Bellevue Asylum.

Defies Back on Guard

Dorian Lake, a brother of the prisoner has promised, on a charge of breaking and entering, was given a year's suspended sentence by the Magistrate.

John Tyrrell, on a charge of drunkenness, was assessed a $15 fine with costs.

Three men were seriously hurt in a fracas between strike-breaking painters and strikers in Brooklyn.

Four planes left the Seattle entrance early over the Pacific en route to Honolulu for the $25,000 prize.

This little church at Talbot, Ont., is nearing Grade's oldest church. A log cabin was its original site and the congregation recently celebrated its hundredth anniversary. Ex-Premier E. C. Drury is a member. The collection box shown is one used in the early days. It was made without nails and appears to be an antique safe enough.

SPRINGS SURPRISE

Duchess Of Bedford Played British Biplane To Le Bourget

Paris, August 18.—Aviators at Le Bourget yesterday afternoon were surprised to see a smiling, elderly English woman descend from the pilot's place in a double-seated British biplane which had landed on the French air field. The surprise increased when, presenting her papers to officials of the field, she disclosed her identity as the Duchess of Bedford.

"Just touring Europe," she explained to inquiries about her flight. "It was to be long before this sort of thing won't be in the best unusual."

With her pilot, Captain Barnard, she had travelled by plane from Naples, reaching London. "We made short flights, stopping at Pies, then at Nice and Lyons, before curling here," she said.

The Duchess herself piloted the plane during part of the flight yesterday from Lyons.

SCHOOL PUPILS SAVED MILLIONS

Penny Bank Incorporated By Special Act Of Parliament

Toronto, Aug. 19. — Children in about three hundred schools have on deposit with the Penny Bank of Canada approximately one million dollars. Over 80,000 pupils in the Province of Ontario and in several other cities of the Province the number of customers of the bank is increasing. The service is provided in 50 municipalities, large and small, and 300 more are available. The community served by a branch of any chartered bank.

The Penny Bank of Ontario is incorporated by Special Act of Parliament for one purpose only, the collection and protection of children's savings. It was established by a grant from the banks of $25,000 and a loan of $50,000 by the banks which may be paid to the men who provided the capital guarantee. The directors receive no fees and not a dollar of the funds may be put out on loan.

The money is kept in the form of permanent securities or deposited in the Provincial Savings Institutions, and a liquid reserve on deposit with the chartered banks. The only income of the bank is the interest on these securities and deposits and the rate of course, is not large. Out of that income there must be paid to depositors three per cent. on the minimum monthly balance. The surplus is just sufficient for an economical form of administration.

RAYNOR

whether or not the applications for which they would receive from Raynor trust receipts covering eighty per cent. cash payments and the remaining twenty per cent of the cost of the car. The trust deed is fully covered "secured by bond," he said, adding the only ones losing it would be the insurance companies.

The high light in the whole story is the case of Arthur Hyatt, prominent local man and one of the best liked in locality. Mr. Hyatt not only invested the proceeds of the farm and of other valuable holdings with Raynor, hired him by a 17 per cent. return basis, but he also borrowed money himself, on a 8 per cent. basis in order to benefit by the difference in interest rates. Total loss of Mr. Hyatt is $63,000. It is said that the assets may return three to four thousand dollar.

TODAYS MARKETS

Wheat Easy Off

Chicago, Aug. 19.—Wheat took an easy downward swing today influenced by weakness in Liverpool and eastern Winnipeg, following reports of improved weather conditions abroad and in the Canadian Northwest. There was considerable hedge selling at the start, wheat opening unchanged to 3-4 cent lower and subsequently declining a little more.

Unseasonably cool weather over the corn belt gave a bit of corn support, which started unchanged to 1-4 cent up but later eased off a little. Subsequently the action of our cash provisions reflected the firmness of the grain market.

New York, Aug. 19.—Stock prices continued to move upward today under the leadership of high grade shares in the railroad and realising sales and occasional "bear" selling served up the upward movement but then. Yet, prices generally were well absorbed and a fair block of new issues was established.

Many stock conditions anticipated an increase in farm wealth and stocks, due to the recent upturn in wheat prices. After the Labor Day holiday, were ticked factors stressed by those looking for higher prices and were again active in a number of specialties in which dividend changes or favorable developments are believed to be pending.

Women's News and Views

SOME PATHS OPEN FOR MARKED MEN

By ELSIE MARLOWE

Are you dancing through life on carnival feet, crushing the purple flesh of forbidden fruit against your greedy mouth, laughing at the warnings that would stop your reckless course?

Do you say — "Oh, I'm going to have my fling while I'm young. After I've had my fun—after I've tired every thing, once — then I'll settle down. There'll be plenty of time when I'm old."

Is that what you're saying with your head aloft and your defiant chin in the air? Then read this letter. It is from a man who was also sure there'd be plenty of time to settle down after he'd had his fling. But when the time came, and when he tried to settle down he failed to do so.

Read for yourself. It is a terrible sermon. There is horror and desolation between the lines.

DEAR ELSIE:

I think your corner in the paper is very interesting and helpful. Through you "people see themselves as others see them." How oft times people often are from what they think they are and how easy it is to make excuses for our foolish actions until we wake to the truth!

Take my case for instance. In my teens and early twenties I sowed my wild oats with lavish hand. I prided myself on being a "regular devil." I kept within manmade laws all the time but I broke every decent law of God. I thought I had the right to do as I pleased so long as I "wasn't hurting anyone." It never occurred to me that I might be hurting myself.

Finally the day came to me, which comes to every normal person when I wanted to settle down and have a home. I wanted to start all over again, marry a good pure girl and lead a simple life. But as soon as I tried to settle down for life, my reputation for insatiability stepped in. I found that I must go away where no one knew me and make a new start.

So I went to a place where I was a stranger and I thought everything would be all right. But did I get by with it? Did I fool any one? I DID NOT. I didn't because the record of what I had been was counted all over me. I bore the record in my body and in my tastes and habits. I was tainted spiritually.

I have moved several times since but always it has been the same. I feel as if people were looking through me and I can hide nothing. I must carry my old self with me all the days of my life.

I make friends but they do not last. I try in every way to keep their friendship but they slip away, one by one. I tried to take an interest in community affairs, lodges, etc., and by sheer hard work attained responsible positions, yet I am alone. I can never get further than a speaking acquaintance with girls — my past seems to stand like a barrier between us.

I have a position with a fine salary, a car and many things that should make me happy but I lack the one thing necessary to lasting happiness—home and family. At thirty-three, my hair is well streaked with gray and I surely know the truth of the Bible saying — "Be sure your sins will find you out." This letter is rather strong meat, Elsie Marlowe. I do not suppose you will dare to print it.

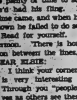

A MARKED MAN.

I have printed it in the hope that it may save some other reckless boy or girl from the suffering which you have endured, poor friend. Your simple words, just as you wrote them are a greater sermon than any I could ever preach.

"I have printed it for also another reason — that I may give comfort to those. Your past MAYBE found you out as sins always will — but you are not doomed because of that. That past does not exist, but the future is as clean and white for you as for any other man. You may go into it scarred — we all wear scars — but its promise is for you if you will have it so. Read the 103rd Psalm and you'll get Bible text. Let me give you another one, morebearing and happier, to put in your heart — "I WILL FORGIVE THEIR INQUITY, SAITH THE LORD, I WILL REMEMBER THEIR SIN NO MORE." Go on into better days, my pal, and God bless you!

St. Adolphe, Manitoba.—"I was very weak and suffered during my periods so that I could not sweep the floor. The pains were in the right side and extended to the left and then down. I seemed all the body was tired out and unable to get up. I took the Vegetable Compound. I say about it in a paper and one would prevailed on me to take it. It has helped me in every way, the pains are less, and I have more appetite. It is a pleasure to recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to other women."—Mrs. D. Lorenz, St. Adolphe, Manitoba.

WHAT'S NEW

(From a Woman's Standpoint)

Wool georgette and crepe romaine will be found at the top of the list for fabrics for autumn models.

New York reports that velvet evening wraps take precedence over metal brocades for the winter, the latter often appearing as insets in velvet wraps.

New York notes that white organdie with black taffeta slip is seen occasionally, but printed organdie on one of the fabric is an excuse for the employment of delicate or occasionally rilliant hues.

Navy blue is daily becoming more in favor with the smart as well as the Canton and the sheer silk and wool georgettes, according to statements made at several dress houses.

Small coats, blazers, gilets and waist coats are smart this season and velvet is a favorite material for a short jacket made usually in black, which adds a chic note to a frock of almost any in formal and semi-formal order.

Sponge cake and angel cake should be pulled apart with two forks instead of slicing with a knife to avoid injuring their texture.

CURSE OF LOVE

By Mildred Barlow

She dressed leisurely, putting on one of her most charming frocks. She wanted to look unusually pretty for the impending interview with her husband. Perhaps he would be a little difficult—he had a right to be—after what he thought he had witnessed the night before—but Norma felt that her love must give her the power to make him understand.

When she was ready, she rang for a maid.

"I suppose Mr. Kendall has left for his office long ago. Did he say when he would be back?"

The servant stared.

"But, ma'am, Mr. Kendall didn't come home at all last night," she stammered. "His bed's just like it was when I turned it back after dinner."

CHAPTER 34.

THE THREAT OF THE OPAL.

The midnight prowler who had stuck a revolver into the pit of Sydney Stokes' stomach in front of Collin's garage, when he was about to step into to his car, was probably the most surprised and frightened man in the state that evening.

He was known among his kind as "Slippery Sam," and he was a thin, wiry little man, with the features of a rodent. He went about his business quietly and that, combined with his shiftiness, had earned him the cognomen of "Slippery." There was nothing of the daring, dashing bandit about him. Always he avoided the limelight. His "jobs" consisted mainly of relieving gentlemen of their wallets and watches and chains, preferably in some remote spot where police intervention was unlikely. He also made a practice of rifling houses that obviously were closed and without caretakers. He carried a gun only as an effective means of threat or persuasion. He had no desire to end his career at the end of a rope, or in the chair.

The closed bungalows at the shore-ed beach seemed designed expressly for his purpose. He had gone over the ground carefully in daylight, for he knew that the owners of these houses often left many articles of value in them, even during the winter. He decided that there ought to be good pickings among the set of them and that the job, moreover, was safe and easy—two things essential to "Slippery Sam." He had only to choose a dark night, force an easy entry through a shuttered window, select his booty at his leisure, and departing, restore the wooden shut ter so that there would be no traces of his visit to attract attention in the light. It might be months before the owner returned to his bungalow and reported the burglar's work to the police. By that time, the goods would all have been safely disposed of, and "Slippery Sam" and his wife, Fanny, would be far away.

On the night he chose for his prowlings—a comparatively "dark night—the night that Norma had fresh her home to the bungalow at the beach and was followed so closely by Sydney Stokes and her husband—"Slippery Sam" found fortune favoring him so beautifully that, being a mere superstitious even than the common run of thieves, he was distinctly uneasy. He figured only too well how the fickle lade smiles before she turns her back.

The closed cottages that were scattered along the each yielded up a splendid booty. Millionaires are careless of their possessions; or, perhaps, their servants are. At any rate, "Slippery Sam" found no difficulty in every description; precious objects that daintily dressing-table ornaments that could be turned into cash—even in exquisite lace mantilla that evidently had been used at a masquerade and forgotten when the family returned to town. It was quite evident that the occupants of these luxurious so-called "cottages" used their summer places kept in constant readiness against the whim that might seize them for a swim or an unpromptu party.

When "Slippery Sam" was prowling down the beach in search of further lunder, he was startled by the glimmer of a light. It was the light at Collin's garage, but the lurking cliffs at that point prevented him from seeing that the bungalow itself was lighted.

"Slippery Sam," keeping to the dark shadows of the cliff, watched for a time and saw a man walk into his lighted area and approach a car that was parked there. He was alone and gave evidence of the fact that he intended to enter the car and drive away.

"Slippery Sam" saw a chance for an extra haul—probably a well-filled wal let and a watch and chain. Fate was certainly working with him that night he thought, as he slipped cautiously up to the man, who seemed to be examining something he had taken from his vest pocket.

"Slippery Sam," not expecting resistance to his peremptory command to "Put 'em up," was thrown into a panic by his victim's silent refusal Stokes was a tall man and extremely strong, despite his thinness. For a time was quick and short. In the midst of it, while "Slippery Sam," considerably taken aback and panicky, was anxious only to get away from the human wild cat he had encountered, he was deafened by the sound of a shot. In the struggle he had not noticed that Stoke's grip, the gun had gone off.

In terror, the thief made off across the cliff, as fast as his legs could, keeping to the deepest shadows, he was aware that there were voices and the sound of running feet from the direction of the beach below. The man evidently had left companions in one of the cottages!

The realization gave wings to "Slippery Sam." He didn't stop running until he'd put a good mile between him and the man he had intended to rob. Panic short exhaustion mastered him halt. He sat down behind a boulder, panting, and wiped his streaming face.

As he did so, a small object fell from his right hand to the ground. Evidently, he had taken something from his victim after all. But their stru gle had been so severe that his one fright so rapid that he had not noticed until this moment, that he had been holding something in his hand.

But the Home's Their Element, Insist Lido Entertainers

New York City—Women are all right in business so long as they have a straight left hand and no rivals. It is only when the rivals menace their supremacy that they become tigresses and wreck the business and themselves.

This is the solemn opinion of George Walsh, Tommy Burke, Billy Mann and Chick Endor, four good-natured young men who entertain at the Club Lido.

"Where would you find four women who could possibly stick together the way we do?" demanded Walsh. "All the other three hooked aggregations I've worked'd have a woman in their act—for love nor money. They are constant superstitiously certain that she would break up their whole organization and their good luck as well.

"Women," said Tommy Purcell, wisely, "are jealous. They want to be the whole show, or nothing at all."

"Whereas we," broke in Billy Mann, "share everything equally. There is no leader among us. No one of us has more responsibility than the others. It's an ideal arrangement."

"Yes," added Chick Endor, "we have made our reputation singing about girls—beautiful girls, lovable girls, friendly girls, and as the one we lend in "precious," but we don't want you in our act!"

Then the interviewer got in a word. "What about women in the home?" he wanted to know.

At that, the four proved that they can sing in harmony together. They yelled in concert: "We're single, single!" "We're all married!"

Then they call themselves the Yacht Club Entertainers.

SINCLAIR'S

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl in my teens, very popular with both men and considered, very good looking.

My mother and dad have some very intimate friends who come and visit us very frequently. Dad used to work with out of the men who is only 23 years of age and who is married to a woman much older than himself. Now he realizes his folly and would give the world to be single again.

I have grown to love him more than life itself and I cannot live without him.

Do you think I am doing his wife a very great injustice by going out with him?

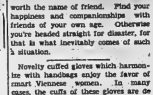

A LOVELY BRUNETTE.

A LONELY BRUNETTE: At least once in a young girl's life there comes a time when she imagines herself to be in love with a married man. Invariably he is a "misunderstood husband" and plays on a young girl's sympathies until she fondly imagines herself wholly, completely in love with him. And she isn't at all! The real answer to the question is that her vanity is flattered by the attention of such a man, and nine times out of ten when it comes to the "show-down," he'll stick to his wife, in preference to the immature blandishments of the inexperienced girl. Of course, you're doing wrong in going out with him. Not only that, but you are betraying your dad and mother. If you have this man or they would not invite him to their home. And any man who betrays such a trust as that isn't worth the name of friend. Find your happiness and companionships with friends of your own age. Otherwise you're headed straight for disaster, for that is what inevitably comes of such a situation.

Some Helpful Hints For Busy Housewives

When milk must be used instead of cream, on cereals or in coffee, scald it first and then serve hot; it will give the effect of cream.

A spoonful of lye should be placed directly over the drain in the sink about once a week and then washed down with boiling water to prevent clogging.

To clean windows quickly, slightly moisten a rag with paraffin oil and rub glass well; after a few minutes, polish with clean, dry cloth, or old stocking legs—they leave no lint.

If the buzz of your electric fan proves annoying place a thick newspaper or magazine under the base.

2 DESPARADOES SHOT THEIR WAY OUT OF PRISON

Waiting Auto Whisks Them To Freedom—Dramatic Escape

GUNS AWED CROWD

Known As Bad Men And Were Not Interfered With

Pittsburgh, Pa., August 19.—With a stage setting even more dramatic than that of the Biddle brothers in their escape in 1902, two desperate first degree murder prisoners late yesterday afternoon walked out to freedom from the office door of the Allegheny County jail in the down town section and escaped in a waiting automobile.

The fugitives were Paul Jaworski, convicted murderer and leader of the bandit gang that dynamited two armored car cars near the Coverdale Mine last March and his pal, John Vaslinder, another first degree murderer accused of having shot a man in McKeesport because he was refused 35 cents in alms. Both escaped.

Armed posses are in pursuit. These include citizens, county detectives, state police and private detectives. The Biddles made love to the warden's wife, got the keys from her, stole some horses and fled. The two who escaped yesterday received guns from a pal, walked down one of the corridors and shot Guards Harry Siegel and John Hanlon through the shoulders when they attempted to stop them.

Then, the fugitives, guns in hand, walked into the jail office and covered Paul Biesewenger, the bookkeeper.

"We are going to leave here, so don't interfere," said Jaworski; "give me the keys, throw up your hands and don't shout or we will kill you."

To make their demands more supportive and emphatic, the two bandits fired several shots in the office. Mrs. Annie McPrederika, the jail missionary worker known as the "Jail Angel," Mrs. Margaret Taylor and her daughter, Mrs. G. J. Yetter, were the other occupants of the office, besides the bookkeeper. Bullets whizzed about the office and the women ducked behind desks and escaped being shot.

Having forced the bookkeeper to give up the keys, the two desperadoes, gun in hand, walked to the massive door gates facing Ross street, opened them and walked down the dozen steps to the street through a large crowd, attracted by the shooting inside.

Sight of the automatics awed the spectators and none dared to interfere. The two fugitives walked perhaps 50 feet to the corner of Ross street and Fifth avenue where they stepped into a waiting car and escaped in the dense traffic at that point.

Warden John McGill was out of the city on his vacation at the time of the break and John Hanlon, a deputy warden, was acting as warden. The two guards were not seriously injured.

Just as the men walked out of the jail to the waiting car, some one called police headquarters and sent in a riot call. When the police arrived the two men had a start of five minutes.

Jaworski was arrested in connection with a payroll hold-up of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation. He confessed the crime and a number of others, in which guards were killed. Jaworski often remarked that he would never die in the electric chair and would escape from the prison, and yesterday made good his threat, despite the close watch kept on him. Jaylarski was armed with at least two revolvers and, as he is under death sentence, police were told to take no chances with him.

Most Daring Escape

The jail delivery came like a bolt from a clear sky and was the most daring since the escape of th Biddle brothers many years ago which ended in a gun fight in Ross County.

Jaworski took all the keys from Biesewenger, the bookkeeper, as he left the office.

Biesewenger had no time to step on the button in the floor which would sound the riot calls, as Jaworski commanded him to remain where he was under penalty of death. Biesewenger said he knew them to be dangerous men and he complied.

Jaworski who has a long criminal record, was found guilty in the Criminal Court some months ago on a charge of murder in the first degree in connection with the fatal Mollenaur hold-up on Christmas Eve, 1925, when I. L. Gump was slain. The jury recommended the death penalty, but Jaworski had not been sentenced.

Previous to his being tried for the murder of Gump, Jaworski pleaded guilty before Judge George V. Moore to having held up the saloon of Louis Mechler on Maine street, Charlsburg on Jan. 3, 1925. He was sentenced last April from 30 to 60 years in the penitentiary for this crime.

Jaworski also confessed to having participated in the Coverdale hold-up early this year, in which an armored car and another car, carrying guards, were blown up near Hillcrest and a $104,000 payroll stolen.

Jaworski and Vaslinder walked from the jail and entered a sedan occupied by a man and a woman which had been parked in Ross street. The machine was driven out of Fifth avenue toward the Oakland district at a high rate of speed.

NEED GIRLS AS WELL AS BOYS

Danger Of Lopsided Development Of Migration To Colonies

London, Aug. 19. (C.P.)—With so many schemes for settlement of boys and young men in the dominions; how about women settlers? There is obvious danger in a lopsided development of migration, and, now that scheme for settling boys in their teens on the land have come to take rank as the most promising of all, that danger is more real than ever.

The leading organization in training for overseas life, and one which his do ing invaluable work in this regard, is the Society for Overseas Settlement of British Women. But an encouraging feature is the establishment by the Dominion country council of a scheme for training as settlers. This is an experiment marked by thoroughness and consequent expense, providing for a year's training for each girl. It is being urged that less financially-strong organizations might provide two or three months' training.

The obvious difficulty in migration of women as against male settlers, is that the inducements for women are less than those extended to their brothers. At present the Dominion declare they need "household workers," and the prospect of going half across the world to wield a scrubbing brush is not an entrancing

It is the aim now to train English girls not for domestic life in the dominions but for country life, as the wives of farmers. Town girls cannot easily learn the things that separate the country household from the town one, and where the woman has been given no chance to accustom herself with conditions on training farms, she will gravitate naturally to the overseas town.

Concerning the strict qualifications required by dominion officials in connection with women emigrants, the Times says: "We can understand what sound at times the over-exacting attitude of dominion officials when we remember that they are taking to their country the future mothers of their people. The S. O. S...B. W. has for many years now worked to correct wrong impressions, whether over-sanguine or over-pessimistic. Its primary preoccupation is with those who need assistance to settle; but women who can pay their way are not less in need of accurate information and friendly services."

To-day, when the overwhelming majority of schemes financed under the Empire Settlement Act have no place for the married man, the Society is chiefly concerned with women going out on their own account. Much of its work is exceedingly unspectacular. It is as important to prevent unsuitable women from going as it is to make it easy for suitable ones to go. A number of practises are in existence today to test this suitability. Girls can be examined free in the different sorts of work which will be expected of them A beginning has been made—by the Australian Government at Market Harborough, as well as by the Lancashire County Council by their own initiative—in providing training of the right kind. Such training aims at laying the foundations at least of competence in the wide range of activities that marks the happy wife of the farmer.

Cosgrave Administration retained office in the Free State by the narrow margin of one vote.

TAKING CENSUS OF B. C. BEARS

Prince Rupert, B.C., August 19.—One of the strangest attempts at taking a census is now being made by by Andrew Widsden of Bella Coola, B.C., according to information received by the Canadian National Railways officials here. At the request of Harlan I. Smith of the National Museum of Canada, Mr. Widsden is taking a census of the grizzly bear population of some eleven valleys along the fiords which are included in the "Northway of America" traversed on the steamship journey between Prince Rupert and Vancouver. The coast line between these two ports is a noted big game hunting spot and attracts many grizzly hunters each year from all sections of the continent as well as from other parts of the world. In order that it may be known to what extent grizzlies roam in these territories, trappers and hunters in this region, which is in and about Mackenzie Park, named for the famous adventurer-explorer, have been asked to make a careful record of the number of grizzlies they encounter on their journeys through the forested slopes of the mountains. This work has been going on for some time, and the reports from the "men of the woods" are now in the hands of Mr. Widsden who is compiling them and will shortly announce the result.

DIFFICULTY IN DECIDING BIRTH

Is Child Spanish, British Brazilian, Or What Is It?

London, Aug. 19 (Canadian Press)—If a child is born of a Brazilian mother in a British ship and the father is Spanish and the birth takes place in Brazilian territorial water what is the nationality of the child?

This question had to be settled on board the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company's mail steamer which reached Southampton Sepora Joy E. Cruz, a passenger, declared her mother while the vessel was in Brazilian waters. After certain investigations Sepora declared that the child, if boy, could be either Brazilian or British, and the mother elected that her son should be registered as British. He was therefore christened Jose Arlanna the second name being after the ship. All births in British ships at sea are used to be registered at Stepney, in East London, but now they can be registered at the first British port of call. All births at sea are recorded in the ship's log, and upon the vessel reaching port the captain must report the matter to the Board of Trade who in turn, informs the Registrar-General of Shipping.

The latter afterwards passes on the matter to the Registrar-General of births who enters the details in a special book known as the Marine Register Book.

FALLING OFF OF COMMUNICANTS

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug 17. — An "alarming" falling off in church membership in Protestant communions at the rate of 500,000 a year is noted in the report of the continuation committee to the inter-church made public by the offices of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America.

The lowered moral tone "and its benumbing influence upon the spiritual life of Christianity" that resulted from the world war, the practice of churches in "grinding" their members, the "negligence" of clergymen in failing to restore members who stray from the flock and the frequent migrations of families from one community to another are listed as the basic causes of the membership losses

BELLE THEATRE

Fox Films version of Warner Fabian's highly sensational novel "Summer Bachelors," which appeared serially in McClure's Magazine and has since become a best seller, had its first showing at the Belle Theatre yesterday and proved the most entertaining picture shown locally in some time

This is a story of husbands who play while their wives are away on their summer vacations.

Oh, yes, some husbands do act that way. But some wives know it, as is shown by Olive Tell, who, in the role of Mrs. Preston, surprises her husband, played by Charles Winninger when she comes home unexpectedly and finds a merry bachelor party in progress.

The resulting complications are of such a nature that it may spell it for those who bet yes on this picture. But they are at all times highly entertaining complications.

The cast that supports Miss Bellamy are all stars in thier own right and include such outstanding names as Matt Moore, Hale Hamilton, Charles Winninger, Clifford Holland, Walter Catlett, James Cullen, Cosmo Kellett and Charles Esdale.

Three Indians are dead in Prince Rupert, B.C., from eating salmon eggs prepared in a galvanized utensil.

Coolness of a Windsor ferry boat crew prevented a panic amongst 300 passengers when the craft was rammed by a freighter.

GOZELLA'S WALK DEFEATS CHICAGO

Home Team Gets Early Lead But Yanks Overhaul Them

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—(AP)—He who serves who only stands and waits. The philosopher who mentioned that fact must have given Ossock Gazella something to think about, for it was in the unemotional manner that Ossock served the Yankees yesterday.

In the twelfth inning, with the score tied and the bases filled, the grave Ossock stood like a bronze statute at the plate, never lifting his bat from his shoulder. He watched two strikes and three balls go by without even lifting an eyebrow in disdain. Then he watched a fourth ball speed past and trotted to first base, forcing in the run that gave the Yankees another victory over the White Sox. The score was 5 to 4.

This was the third straight time the Yanks have beaten the Sox in the last three days, but it's getting harder and harder to do. The first time the ball masters of Manhattan requited only the regulation nine innings to accomplish their feat. Yesterday they took eleven frames and today the Sox hung on for twelve before they bowed to the inevitable and Willie Moore's sinker.

Moore did not arrive on the scene until the ninth inning, after the Yanks had come from behind to tie the score but that was soon enough for him to get credit for his second victory in twenty-four hours. He deserved it in the four frames he worked only one fair ball was hit out of the infield, though two infield hits were registered as hits.

Urban Shocker started the work in a rather lazily manner by hitting Collins Gazella walked and the bases filled, the grave Ossock stood like a bronze statute at the plate, never lifting his bat from his shoulder. He watched two strikes and three balls go by without even lifting an eyebrow in disdain. Then he watched a fourth ball speed past and trotted to first base, forcing in the run that gave the Yankees another victory over the White Sox. The score was 5 to 4.

He deserved it in the four frames he worked only one fair ball was hit out of the infield, though two infield hits were registered as hits.

Urban Shocker started the work in a rather lazily manner by hitting Collins Dec 31 away to a 4 to 1 lead as early as the second inning, but his wor[k] was then on was satisfactory enough [to] get credit for his second victory in twenty-four hours. He deserved it in the four frames he worked only one fair ball was hit out of the infield, though two infield hits were registered as hits.

Opposed to Mr. Shocker was Tom Zachary, the most successful Sox pitcher he lasted the entire game, including overtime, but caused his own downfall in the twelfth when he walked Charley Koonis, opened that last drive with a single and Ruth sacrificed. Gehrig was purposely passed, and when Meusel, who had driven in the tying run earlier in the game, fanned, the outlook of ever ending the contest was cloudy indeed, but Lazzeri beat out a swinging bunt to third, filling the bases, and then Gazella did his day's stunt merely by doing absolutely nothing at all.

Mailliet Shocker fly with one out and the bases loaded settled the St. Louis-Washington contest, Shocker getting the winning run in the twelfth. The score was 6-5. Walter Johnson started for the Senators but was relieved in the seventh by Braxton, who, in turn, was relieved by Carberry in the 12th.

At Cleveland, Bishop's error allowed Cleveland to score the winning run in the eighth inning.

CAN. PAINTERS IN COMMERCIAL FIELD

Quebec, Que., Aug. 18 (C.P.).—Many Canadian artists whose pictures take high place in the new national landscape school earn the more dependable portion of their income in the less pretentious field of commercial art. But, while such work goes unheralded by the critics and seldom brings with it public acclaim, much of it is of genuine artistic worth. The poster or sketch carried out as a "pot boiler" sometimes comprises the particular artist's most note worthy achievement.

The Canadian railway companies with their continual demand for posters and for ambitious pictures to be used in their exhibits in this country and in Europe provide a fine market for a considerable body of our younger painters. Each year they expend thousands of dollars upon artistic products to be used in this manner.

By employing Canadian painters the railways have secured really worth while pictures of a host of Canada's beauty spots. These are of great value in educating the tourist and the prospective settler and in this manner are of national benefit.

The student or critic of contemporary Canadian painting can not afford to despise the commercial output of brush and pencil. He must remember that some of the best artists are capable of maintaining their ideals, even while covering canvas at so much per foot. Commercial posters and exhibits will amply repay careful study and have certainly not received the critical attention they deserve. The day need not be far distant when nart critics will recognize ability and artistically as real ity when displayed in a commercial poster as when evidenced in an academy landscape.

JOE WRIGHT MAY GO TO AUSTRALIA

Toronto, Aug. 19.—Joe Wright, Jr., of this city, who was a finalist in the diamond sculls, and who captured the American and Canadian sculling championships this season, is seriously considering an invitation to compete in the Australian Henley to be held at Melbourne, on October 22. A message inviting Wright to compete was received by Charles Heintzman, president of the Argonaut Rowing Club, of which Wright is a member. A guarantee of £100 expense money was offered Wright.

The youthful Toronto sculler, despite the strenuous season he has already experienced, is eager to make the trip. He has won altogether this season six Canadian and American championships, commencing rowing at the end of May and finishing the middle of August, in addition to rowing three races in the diamond sculls. If Wright should compete in the Australian Henley, he would be the first Canadian amateur sculler to row in Australia.

TREATY SHOULD BE RENEWED SAYS FRENCH FURRIER

Winnipeg, Aug. 16.—That the seal treaty of 1911 made between Canada, the United States, Japan and Russia, should be renewed at its expiry this year was the stand taken by Charles French, fur trade commissioner for the Hudson's Bay company, when speaking to the Lions club at the Fort Garry hotel Friday.

Protective measures, which are considered chiefly by the United States in the northern Pacific waters, have resulted in an increase of from 100,000 to 1,000,000 seals in the 15 years since the treaty has been in force.

He world supply now being about 30 skins a year, r. French said.

Story of Fur Trade

The sea otter is practically extinct, experience story of the fur trade He concentrated on the sealing industry.

The fur trader drew on his 40 years' describing the hunt and illustrating it with slides. He also gave some interesting descriptions of whaling on the Pacific.

The sealing season begins in arch when the herds reach the California coast. The fleet follows them north to the Queen Charlotte islands and across to the Aleutians where the hunt begins. The whole summer is absorbed in this work and not until the seals start south in October is it abandoned. Mr. French said.

HISTORIC HOME WILL DISAPPEAR

London, August 18 (C.P.).—From the sentimental viewpoint it may be regrettable to witness the disappearance of such ancestral houses as Devonshire House in order to make way for blocks of modern flats and offices. From the point of view of an increase in the ratepable value of the Metropolis the change is proving beneficial to an astonishing extent.

When Devonshire ouse was merely the term house of the Cavendish family its ratepable value, along with the grounds, was just over £4,000. The site of the house and garden is now filled with an hotel, a block of palatial flats, and commercial offices, and the ratepable value is £30,000—twenty times as much as it was at the close of the war. There is still much of the ground to be built upon, and when this is accomplished it is estimated that the ratepable value will have increased to £120,000.

The rebuilding of Regent street and the widening of the Strand are producing the same effect.

JOE WRIGHT SR., REFEREE

Toronto, August 19.—Joe Wright, Sr., has been selected by Canadian National Exhibition officials as the official referee for the 450,000 swimming Marathon in Lake Ontario on August 31. Mr. Wright is father of the Canadian champion sculler.

Fifty chickens found in a wrecked automobile near Erindale were stolen from the O.A.C. coops.

A POPULAR VACATION RESORT LAKE OF BAYS

"Distant fields are greenest" does not always hold true, for Lake of Bays is close to Toronto, just 146 miles north and as a place of beauty or a holidaying spot of varies interests it is not excelled in Canada.

For the Nature lover, Lake of Bays is truly edged with a thousand interesting bays each with its own peculiar charm inviting close study and exploration.

For those who prefer sport the splendid summer hotels offer every facility for golf, tennis, boating and bathing, while Lake of Bays and adjoining lakes abound with trout, pickerel and bass that thrill the fisherman.

FIRE AT PORT HOPE DOCK

Port Hope, Aug. 19.—Fire breaking out in the pier on the east side of the west harbour, destroyed a portion of the dilapidated structure about 4.45 Wednesday afternoon. The firemen were called to the scene and soon had the blaze out. The pier itself is of no material value and apart from the danger of its spreading to buildings nearby, the firemen might just as well let it burn the decayed wood.

BATCH OF PRISONERS IN COUNTIES JAIL

Cobourg, Aug. 18.—William Venning, 75, who has been confined to the Counties Jail here for the past week on remand was sent back to that institution for a fifteen day term on conviction of a charge of vagrancy in police court here this morning.

Ten prisoners are confined to the Counties Jail, Cobourg, at the present time, of whom several are awaiting trial. Two arrived Tuesday from Bowmanville to await trial on charge of forgery, William Rosebush and Emily Wood.

CAPTURE ALLIGATOR IN THE RIVER ROUGE

Pickering, Aug. 18.—While bathing in the Rouge River near Kingston Bridge, Pickering, yesterday afternoon Kenneth and Norman Cameron, Baker Street, Toronto, saw something that looked like a log but on investigation proved to be a real live alligator four feet long. Both boys improvised fishing poles, manufactured nets from shirts, and used crooked twigs for hooks, and enticed the "log" to shore. Mr. Morgan, who lived at R.R.No. 5, Pickering, told The Telegram this morning that he had brought the alligator from Florida two months ago. He said that nearly a month ago it disappeared and until the boys discovered it in the river, he had given up hope of ever seeing it again.

HAS LEG CUT OFF BY RAILWAY CAR

Oshawa, Aug. 18.—Fred Davey, 5 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Davey, 65 Harold street, had his right leg completely severed below the knee when run over by a freight car, which was being shunted on Bruce street near the corner of Drew street yesterday afternoon.

Playmates of the injured boy state that he was attempting to kick from a stone which had lodged against the rail and did not notice the approach of a string of cars, which were being moved. He was rushed to the hospital, where it was found necessary to amputate above the knee. His condition is serious but not critical.

ERECT BREWERY IN PETERBORO

Peterboro, Aug. 18.—W. L. Doyle, who recently resigned the Civil service position as manager of the Dominion Income Tax office, at Belleville has been appointed manager of the new brewery that is to be erected here in the half completed structure begun by the defunct Red Arrow Tire Co. It is understood that the new brewery will operate under the charter and re-newed license of the deceased Calc-a-Tireing and Malting Co., founded here half a century ago. A petition was circulated, disappeared and until the boys discovered it in the river, he had given up hope of ever seeing it again.

SCHOOLS COMPETE FOR GOOD PRIZES

Picton, Aug. 19.—On hearing through J. Lockie Wilson, superintendent of horticultural societies for the province, of the rose bowl offered in Prince Edward county for the beautifying of rural school grounds, L. F. Burrows, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Horticultural Council of Ottawa, has advised W. J. Carter that the schools which have entered will be eligible to compete for the valuable prizes offered

Literary Review

Perhaps Mr. Lynd's wisest piece of advice is the following: "Discriminate among kinds of reading. Cultivate the knack of shifting gears according to the grade of the reading in your hand at the moment. Unless you are an unusual person you can afford to speed up your reading of all types of subject matter. But learn to rea your newspaper or a popular magazine or a detective novel even more rapidly than you are able to read a history of a volume of scientific subject. In reading solid non-fiction it is usually worth while to aim the book quickly first to get the general drift of its contents and then go back and read it somewhat more carefully."

One of the foremost academic positions in England has just been filled by the appointment of Mr. G. M. Trev by the Horticultural Council, which consist of ten beautiful silver cups, divided among three sections of the province and in addition there will be an award of merit certificate which may be framed and kept by the school as a permanent record. Full particulars will be given in a circular letter that will be issued to the teachers by Public school Inspector Struthers on the opening of the school.

elyan as Regius Professor of Modern History at Cambridge in succession to Professor Bury. Besides his important biography of Garibaldi, Professor Trevelyan has written a "Life of John Bright," "British History in the Nineteenth Century," and the recent "History of England," which has been so much admired. The third son of Sir George Otto Trevelyan, the new professor is a grand-nephew of Lord Macaulay. He married in 1904 Janet Penrose, daughter of Mrs. Humphry Ward Professor Trevelyan is fifty-one years of age.

Once more I received with grateful acknowledgment an annual visitor, a catalogue of books published in Canada in 1925, about Canada, as well as those written by Canadians. This list compiled by a special committee of the Toronto Public Library Staff, covers the year, 1926. It is only when we turn the pages of this annual record that we begin to realize what a large amount of literary activity is going on in this country. There are over 800 titles in this pamphlet. Many of these, however, are pamphlets, year books text books government documents and society reports, but the balance must amount to over 250 volumes.

GALLANT AIRMEN RUSHING TO RESCUE FEARED LOST

Skiff Scrapes Submerged Head Of Harbor's Third Drowning Victim Of The Local Season

BODY DISCOVERED STANDING HEAD UP, DROWNED IN 8 FEET OF WATER

Julian V. Dupont Of Cornwall Met Mysterious Death Here

THIRD THIS SEASON

No One Knows Cause Of Accident—Inquest This Afternoon

Julian Victor Dupont, aged 55 years of Cornwall, Ontario, was the victim of the third drowning accident of the season, in the harbor last evening about nine o'clock. His body was recovered three-quarters of an hour later in eight feet of water, off Tindale's Boat Wharf. Mystery surrounds the tragedy, as there was no one around the boat house at the time who heard any cries or saw him go down. The theory is advanced that Dupont was within a few feet of the dock and was evidently standing up preparing to land when he lost his balance and fell overboard when the row boat in which he had been cruising about the Bay during the afternoon and early evening.

The body was upright in the water with the head a foot below the surface when the gruesome discovery was made by Leonard Tindale, boat livery-man at 4:45. The police were called and Coroner Dr. Boyce visited the scene of the accident and after making an investigation ordered an inquest which will be opened this afternoon at Tinsley's Undertaking Parlours.

Acted Queerly

The victim had been acting queerly on the boat from one of Mr. Tindale's younger sons early yesterday afternoon and set out for an afternoon's pleasure on the Bay. When opposite Boulter's dock he saw some boys playing and he invited one of them to go for a row. Don Boulter, son of Ralph Boulter, consented to go and the pair followed the shore past the Government dock. When near the old Massey Engineering plant, Dupont commenced to act queerly and salt silly questions and young Boulter became alarmed and rowing the boat to shore he jumped out and ran home Dupont's whereabouts at that time until his body was discovered, remain unknown.

Mr. Tindale had been spending the evening at the home of his daughter and upon returning to his own home he went to the boat house to look for the night. He discovered that one of his skiffs was missing and he set out along the harbor in search. At that time he was not aware that it had been rented for a number of the family and believed that it had been taken in his absence. Mr. Tindale found the craft floating toward the harbor mouth unoccupied. He procured a canoe and was pulling up to the boat house, when the bottom of the frail canoe came in contact with some object, which he discovered to be a human body. The police were called and with a long pike pole they brought the body to shore.

Identification Papers

A medical certificate was found in the bow of the boat and some matches were strewn about the bottom. In his pocket several receipted bills were paid at Brockville last Saturday for room rental.

Speaking with Norman Dupont, a son, living at Napanee, The Intelligencer learned that Dupont's first wife died some years ago and he remarried and since that time he has seldom communicated with his family.

The man had one artificial limb which may have been responsible for the tumble overboard. He was clad in a blue serge suit and vest and brown shoes.

A sister, Mrs. Kilpatrick, resides in Kingston and another brother who has not been heard from in a long years lives in California.

The body will likely be taken to Cornwall for interment.

LOSING APPETITES

Joseph E. Smith

well known chef in Canadian hotels, says people are not eating as much as they used to back in 1894 when eighteen course meals were common. People are losing their appetite for breakfast almost entirely, he claims. His uncle Emil, from Alsace Lorraine, and his cousin, John, were chefs before him, so that the Smith family of 57 years have ruled in noted kitchens.

HOPE FOR LIFE GROWS FAINTER

Sacco And Vanzetti Scheduled To Die After Monday Midnight

Washington, D. C., Aug. 20.—Counsel for Sacco and Vanzetti were unable to [illegible]'s their petition for review of the re[illegible]ction of murder in the Supreme Court today and the papers presented were held to be not in a satisfactory form, no records of the case being presented.

Counsel was at the office of the clerk of the Supreme Court when it opened this morning for the purpose of filing the petition for review. It developed that the attorney was unable to pre sent a record and he went into a discussion with court officials in regard whether a petition for review could be filed in the absence of such record showing the court proceedings in the lower courts. Representatives of the clerk advised him that the petition could not be filed without a record, but the discussion proceeded.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 20.—Arthur D. Hill, chief counsel for Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, said today that he had been informed by Elias Field, Associate Counsel, that Justice James H. Morton Jr., of the Federal District Court had refused to issue a writ of habeas corpus in the case of refused Field permission to appeal to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

Field visited Justice Morton at his home at West Port yesterday and appealed for a writ, which was denied in an effort to stay the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti, whose respite expires at midnight Monday. Hill said that he had written a letter to Governor Fuller asking that he expected to go to Beverley today to see Justice Oliver Wendel Holmes of the United States Supreme court. In his letter to the Governor Hill asked for a further respite "in order that the cases may be dealt with by the Supreme Court of the United States."

BOTH PARTICIPANTS WERE RECKLESS DRIVERS-FINED

David Blue of Madoc and Dr. L. Lougheed of Hamilton were each convicted on a charge of driving recklessly before magistrate Sanford at Deseronto yesterday afternoon. Sentence was deferred in Blue's case until Monday and Dr. Lougheed was fined $5 and costs.

The case arose out of an accident on the highway near Marysville, July 31st, when Lougheed's car which was coming westward with the doctor alone in the car and Blue with his wife and three children was driving [illegible]

In the opposite direction, Blue's car went into the ditch and turned turtle but fortunately none of the occupants were injured.

The evidence showed that Blue's car skidded 180 feet before striking the other motor. Traffic Officer Pyke who was on the scene shortly after the accident was the chief witness.

Chas. Payne of this city acted for Mr. Blue and Mr. Harrington of Napanee was present on behalf of Dr. Lougheed. Crown Attorney Donnelly prosecuted.

LOUD SPEAKERS

Famous Old World Cathedral Installs Modern Improvements

Cologne, Aug. 20.—The world-famous Cologne Cathedral, one of the most ancient and grandest monuments of mediaeval architecture, is the first church in the world to be equipped with loud speakers. After a number of successful tests, twenty-two instruments are connected with a microphone, and are now installed in various parts of the enormous building. The instruments also make the sermon which were formerly almost inaudible, on account of echoes and poor acoustic conditions, plainly audible in every corner of the huge edifice.

LADS ARE FOUND AFTER 72 HOURS

Five Boys Were Never Much Worried—Lived On Berries

Montreal, Aug. 20.—Hale and hearty, but sore-footed and gloriously dirty after walking about for three days and sleeping for three nights in the North ern bush, the five Montreal boys who had been lost since Friday camp, in the Laurentians, were found yesterday morning shortly after 6 o'clock by two search parties, headed by Guides Charbonneau and Aubin.

The boys, sitting in a circle in a clearing one and a half miles from Lake Cyprese, which is 18 miles north east of St. Donat. They were talking and munching blueberries and raspberries. No hardships when found. One of the smaller boys was dozing.

Little Aurel Forgrip, who is only eight years old, was so tired that he had to becarried.all the way to a farm house, five miles north of St. Donat. The others all trudged along.

Owen Frederick told of his experience on his arrival at the camp.

"I had a good time," he said, cheerfully. The boys, who never once lost heart, led by the biggest of them, Kenneth Wray, who is 15 years of age. They had come out on Thursday morning with Fowler on the picnic, and the camp manager had gone back to some other boys, after telling them to wait for him. Owen Frederick and another lake, not far from where Archer's boat, had tempted them, and they had set out in a row boat which seemed perfectly safe.

They had only walked about fifteen minutes, said young Frederick, when they found they were lost.. Where they went, and how they lost their way he could not explain, but they realized they must try and get in touch with the outside. All their matches were gone, and they could not light fires to [illegible]

STATE OF SIEGE AT U. S. EMBASSY

Paris, August 20.—A guard of two hundred and fifty Republican Guards and 400—was rushed to the American Embassy on the Rue-Saint-Honore this afternoon to reinforce the already heavy contingents on duty there when urgent calls for assistance reached the Prefecture of Police, telling of the refusal of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts to grant Sacco and Vanzetti's appeal for a new trial. A cordon was quickly thrown around the building housing Embassy officials and staff, and until the fate of the two condemned Italians is finally either by no one will be allowed to enter the area without identification.

NEW YACHT CLUB FORMED HERE TO FOSTER RACING

B. Y. C. Expect To Own Fair Sized Fleet By Next Season

SAILORS INTERESTED

Mayor Eardley Wilmot Is Commodore—Strong Executive

A new yacht club was born in Belleville last night at a meeting called by a group of dinghy sailors and yachtsmen in the Bay of Quinte Country Club House. It was decided to call the new organization the Belleville Yacht Club and pennants and crests will bear the monogram B.Y.C.

Mayor Eardley Wilmot was elected Commodore, Dr. A. D. Proctor, Vice-Commodore, George K. Graham, Rear Commodore, and H. J. R. Graham, Secretary Treasurer. A strong executive and sailing committee was appointed. The officers elected on Monday night met to prepare the constitution and bylaws which will govern the Club.

On the invitation of the directors of the Bay of Quinte Country Club the new organization will make its headquarters at the Bay of Quinte Country Club House, and use the magnificent stretch of water in front of the Club House for racing. As most yachtsmen are also golfers and carry their clubs with them on their cruises, visiting from other ports also will get the double pleasure when they visit Belleville.

Within the past three years dinghy sailing has taken a wonderful hold in this city. Three years ago Dr. Proctor was a lone wolf with the affairs of the B. Y. C. to improve the water front at the Club and enable yachtsmen who are going to take advantage of the gailing facilities at the B.Q.C.C. A fine flag pole, donated by W. A. Schmaltz, has been raised on [illegible]

WOMEN TO FIGHT

Bolshevist Commanders Are Incorporating Them Into The Red Army.

Riga, Latvia, Aug. 20.—Regiments of women reserves, fully armed, and equipped as regular soldiers, are being used with great success in the present autumn manoeuvres beginning in the vicinity of the Rumanian borders, reports the Odessa Izvestia.

In the sham battles, the Bolshevik officers are placing companies of women between the companies of men. The cooperative spirit thus aroused is greatly increasing the morale of the women.

ONTARIO'S PRIME MINISTER STAYS?

Toronto Globe Prints Interview With Mr. Ferguson Today

The Toronto Globe reports Hon. G. Howard Ferguson today as definitely declining to even consider accepting the leadership of the Federal Conservative Party. The newspaper details an interview with the Premier in which Ontario's Premier makes clear his intention of staying in the Provincial field and carrying on his work here. The Globe says:

"Premier Ferguson has spoken His hat is not in the ring. The Dominion Conservative party now must look elsewhere than to Queen's Park for its guiding star.

"I have definitely made up my mind." Mr. Ferguson told The Globe yesterday, "not to be a candidate for the Dominion leadership."

"But when they get you to Winnipeg," The Globe suggested, "they may persuade you into accepting it."

"I cannot be persuaded," was the Prime Minister's emphatic statement.

So that's that!

Mr. Ferguson's rejection of the Federal leadership—for there is little doubt but that it was his for the asking—"puts" the case stated only a few hours after a very representative party delegation, it is understood, had walked on him to point out that Dominion needs should have priority over Provincial interests or attachments; that the Winnipeg convention was calling loud, so, why not?

"Stay Right Where I Am"

Mr. Ferguson, in speaking to The Globe, was inclined to put the general situation in a more modest way. "Leader," said he, "my name has been frequently mentioned in this connection. Convention there has been forced upon me, naturally enough, some consideration of the matter. I have reached the conclusion that it is best for my own interests, as well as the interests of the country, to stay right where I am."

Work Still to Be Done

"There is sufficient scope in this Province of Ontario to provide work for me for many activities. There is a certain amount of work still for me to do in connection with the effect of which will not be confined solely to the Province, but will affect the welfare of the Dominion as a whole."

Mr. Ferguson pointed out that when he formed the present Provincial Government about him ere lain political bad been attached to which all members had subscribed and had pledged themselves to carry through.

QUARRELEE FINED

Cobourg, Aug. 20.—A neighbour's quarrel which had its climax in Police Court, was fully aired before Magistrate W. H. Floyd here this morning when Mrs. Ethel Brown was charged with using abusive language to James Goudy and members of his family on the afternoon of Sunday, August, 14th. Brown was fined $10 and costs.

MATCHED FOR SHINES AND BOOSTED SLOW BUSINESS

New York, Aug. 20.—A great boot-black career is predicted for Tony Pumento of Long Island City. When business was dull in his shoe shine parlor he conceived the idea of mailing prospects and offering to match coins. If he lost the prospect would get a shine free, if Tony won he got the regular price of five cents he said. "Some real suckers," said Tony, "You see the shins come me only about half a cent."

RESCUE PLANE FRANTICALLY ASKS FOR HELP—THEN ALL WAS SILENT

At the age of 71, Sir Thomas retired from his judicial post and returned to the bar. He is now engaged building up a new practice in London. SEVEN ARE HELD AND ONE FREED

Crown Drops Case Against McEwen—Used As State Witness

Barrie, Aug. 20.—Seven men were committed for trial here by Magistrate Jess yesterday after preliminary hearings lasting all day, on various charges of theft of cattle, clothing and other goods in the Beeton-Cookstown district. These charges were the culminations of nine investigations made by Inspectors Stringer and Rae and Sergt. Creasey, after Dan Forsythe, notorious outlaw, had been killed by Alex. Hodge in the latter's farmhouse near Beeton on July 22, while Hodge was defending himself from an attack by Forsythe who endeavored to steal from him the sum of $810 which Joseph McDermott and Charles Hammill, cattle drovers, had paid over to Hodge a few minutes before.

The excitement which developments in the "clean up of terror" has engendered showed no abatement yesterday. The courtroom was crowded to the doors, and scores had to remain standing.

From the outset it was apparent that the Crown's principal case is directed against McDermott. The latter is being implicated by the reading of confessions and statements made to Inspectors Stringer and Rae by all the prisoners except the one discharged for trial at the next court of competent jurisdiction. These statements would appear to indicate McDermott as the leader and moving spirit in the cattle rustling, and as being in league with Dan Forsythe in the theft and disposal of other goods. It was alleged by those making the confessions that large sums of money had been paid to them by McDermott for their services.

NOT FOUL PLAY.

Death was due to drowning, not to foul play, as was previously suspected was the verdict that Dr. J. J. Robertson, local physician gave when he performed the post mortem on the body of the Cornwall man who was drowned in the harbor last night.

"Dallas Spirit" Reports Two Bad Tail Spins And Is Lost

GIVE UP HOPE

Ships Rushed To Spot But No Trace Discovered Yet

San Francisco, Aug. 20.—An errand of mercy and rescue apparently was at is dramatic end hidden end, the vast reaches of the Pacific were being combed today for Capt. William P. Erwin and Capt. A. H. Eichwaldt, pilot and navigator respectively of the rescue plane "Dallas Spirit". The plucky pair started from Oakland yesterday to wing their way over the unmused lanes of water between her and Hawaii in an effort to "spot" the missing Dole flight planes, "Golden Eagle" and "Miss Doran", or their fliey occupants.

Whether fate intervened or their radio equipment went out of order,or what not known, but at 9.02 last night following a message flashed into the office here of the Associated Press, "S. O. . (extraordinary service) tail spin". Then silence. As swiftly as lightning clears the sky after the roar of the fury from Edwin and Richwald.

Lulled into security by the pleasant greetings received over many hours, the A. P. operator, suddenly electrified in to action, began writing frantically. Here is what poured into his ears: "Went into tail spin, came out O.K., but sure scared.—Erwin. Also—Richwald. X X Bill Erwin!—thought it was all off but we came out of it—lights on instrument board went out and it was so dark that Bill couldn't see if X X X X X X tail spin"—he heard no more.

Stunning Climax

It was stunning climax to a noble undertaking. The A. P. operator stopped, hurried the copy to the editor and turned back to his instruments. Apparently he wished the data of the radio, listened for some further sign from the air. There was no response.

San Francisco, Aug. 20.— Henry Bronte, navigator of the plane which Ernest L. Smith flew from Oakland to Hawaii, declared that a tail spin could have thrown the motor of the Dallas Spirit out of condition. A hundred things could have happened to it to [illegible] spin to disable the radio". He declared, consecutively it looks as though they might have gone into a tail spin".

Steamer Lights Flares.

San Francisco, Aug. 20.—A message received by the Federal Telegraph Company early today from the Tanker "Richfield Texas," approximately two hundred and fifty miles west of this port and seventy miles south of the Great Circle route to Honolulu, said that it had sighted a flare and was proceeding to investigate. The flare was not repeated, the message said.

The Federal Telegraph Company maintained communication throughout the night with the West Seguana, Standard Oil tanker, and the Richfield. The flare lasted half a minute the radio operator of the steamer said.

The message received from the steamer added the information that the flare was distinct and seen about three miles off starboard bow by mate and lookout.

H. B. R. COSTS

In a complete survey of the Hudson Bay Railway the Vancouver Province states the great mistake was made in starting the railway before proper investigation had been made. In the light of more complete information this conclusion is warranted, yet it is debatable that there is no important case or west to attack the minister of railways nor his engineers for the decision which means abandonment of Port Nelson. It is the opinion, general enough that it is better to take the loss now than later and proceed to the work of plans for the completion of the railway and the necessary harbor works at Church ill with the least delay possible.

While it may be correct that Frederick Palmer was unable to obtain expert information at Ottawa regarding Churchill, it is nevertheless true there was positive evidence against Port Nelson and favorable reports on Churchill in possession of the senate committee in 1926. The Tyrrell brothers and D. W. McLachlan, engineers who all knew the subject matter on which they reported, took very decided views. J. W. Tyrrell's report was considered carefully by the senate as it spoke in determining their recommendation for delay, and Mr. McLachlan's experience at Nelson proved it was in no way a promising location for an important harbor on which millions of money were being spent. Having all this in mind, Mr Dunning looked to Mr. Palmer's report a confirmation of his own opinion that a mistake was made in the choice of Nelson. That there was a general absence of confidence in Nelson and an intangible preference for Churchill in the country is shown by the comparative of public opinion during the past week.

Apart from certain elements in Saskatchewan and Manitoba, there is no enthusiasm for the project. The grain trade has shown no confidence in the route, for it offers as much of what will add to the speculative feature of the trade that shippers will not count very much on the new route. The question of what amount of tonnage will be available and of who will have the enterprise to try out the route, have probably never entered into the estimates of some of the warmest advocates of the Hudson Bay route as an outlet for grain.

The country is involved to the extent of $31,500,000. The government is committed to completion of the railway and opening of the route. The public finds in chief concern today is wanting to know what the consummation of these plans will further involve in outlay of public funds; what will be the annual cost of operating the railway, and of constructing the required harbor and terminal works.

Brigadier-General R. W. Paterson states, apparently on expert information, that it will be necessary to dredge the harbor to an extent of a million and a quarter square yards. Allowing for a lower cost than was estimated for Nelson, this would probably mean $1,250,000. Starting with that and the estimates as passed and known, the prospect for total cost will approximate as follows:

Hudson Bay Railway, March 31, 1926 ..... $15,545,3280
Estimates year's work on re construction, 1926 .. 2,000,000
Line to Churchill 7,500,000
Dredging at Churchill 1,250,000
4,000,000 - bushel terminal elevator 2,000,000
Docks and harbor works (figures for Nelson) ... 7,000,000

Total $37,545,328

To that may be added cost for improvements to navigation in the form of lighthouses, ice-breakers and cost of the aircraft now on duty on the route, which will lift the total well above the former estimate of $40,000,000 for the Hudson Bay railway and route. It is quite evident there is reason for caution and inquiry before proceeding with any further construction.

KEEP UP STANDARD

Once more the harvesters' excursions are announced for the west, to help care for the crop and have it threshed out and delivered to the market. There seems to be fewer men out of work in Canada than in any year since 1918, and consequently the western farmers will have to depend more directly on the farm workers who go from the eastern provinces for the express purpose.

The cry is being raised in a very subtle manner that men are desperately needed east of Red Deer to embargo on immigrants from the unwanted countries of the continent should be lifted. The time is opportune for the cry. But not until it is known to what extent relief will be sent from the east and the demands for men met by our own people, will be in order to suspend the embargo.

The movement from Great Britain and the Scandinavian countries this year has been heavy and until the real farmers are heard from through their own reputable organizations it will not be time to reconsider taking down the bars. The Anglo-Saxon-Celtic, Gallic, Teutonic and Scandinavian elements give wide diversity and should perpetuate the best Nordic stock and proved social principles of life and living.

The attractions held out on the advantages to be gained by filling up the country may seem to be plausible. But let it be remembered that one year's carelessness or indifference to duty by immigration officers would mean much loss and after difficulty to Canada in keeping social ideals up to the normal level.

HAVE YOU HEARD THESE?

"Get out in the country," said the doctor, "long walks in the open air. He alcohol in any form and one cigar a day."

"But—doctor—"

"One cigar a day!" reiterated the doctor.

SUNDAY

A quiet morn,
A peaceful day,
Cool, gentle shade
Where people pray
In little church
On little hill—
Good people, come
To do God's will
On Sunday.
A quiet noon,
To talk or rest,
Young folk and old
In Sunday best.
A little talk
Down by the stream
A little thought,
A little dream
On Sunday.

A quiet eve,
The distant chimes
That sixty rest
Their thirty rhymes.
Flowers are folded
Stars are bright
And little prayers
Reclaim each good-night.
To Sunday.

THE PASSING YEARS

(From The Intelligencer of this day 20 years ago.)

The residence of Mr. Frank Morris near the C.P.R. Station at Nepisiguit was burglarized last evening and a quantity of silverware taken.

W. D. Fuller a well-known resident passed away suddenly yesterday.

Last evening two men named Holt and McCartney were buried in a gravel pit near Pictou. They were finally extricated and revived.

A store owned by Alex Wardhaugh was scorched by a blaze last evening.

Mr. H. P. Ketchesson is passing his holidays in the city.

Miss Clara Vermilyea was out yesterday for the first time after her recent illness.

Sir MacKenzie Bowell, Mr. Thos. Ritchie, Dr. Yeomans and W. Denhane are on a fishing trip in the north.

Many from Belleville attended the horse-races in Picton yesterday.

OTHER MEN'S THOUGHTS

Golf was invented by a Scot whose wife objected to his drinking at home. It is carried on with clubs twisted at the end in make the game complicated.

The idea is to take a small ball, stock it out of sight, spend ten minutes looking for it, and then knock it out of sight again.

It is hardly a game; it is a tee fight with clubs, a five-mile walk punctuated with perplexing problems, the sublime stooping to the ridiculous, three acres and a ball, billiards gone to grass.—London Weekly Dispatch.

The clothes you wear have a great deal to do with the way you feel. If you wear bright clothes, you will feel bright and cheerful. If you wear a somber suit, you will feel somber. If you wear expensive clothes you will feel prosperous. If you wear a suit of odd design, you will feel peculiar. If you wear glad rags, you will feel happy. If you wear a snappy suit, you will feel snappy. If you don't wear any suit, you will feel chilly.—Judge.

Still weak later the patient returned to town.

"How do you feel?" asked the doctor.

"Splendid! Fit as a fiddle!"

"And you liked it all?"

"Yes; everything except the one cigar."

The doctor smiled. "The tobacco habit, my dear sir—"

"It isn't any joke," put in the patient ruefully. "It's hard for a man at my time of life to take up smoking!"

Grubbs—The best man in the world is likely to make mistakes.

ROYAL SIX IS NEW CHANDLER MODEL OFFERED

New Model Great Achievement Of Design

Announcement has been made of the appearance of a new Chandler model, the Royal Six Sedan, of roomy luxurious and magnificent six yet produced by Chandler, remarks William H. Williams, of Williams Motor Sales, Dixie Motors Limited, 362 Hargrave street, local Chandler distributor.

This car, made to please the most fastidious, is claimed to be the last word in comfort and luxury. Its graceful lines of the custom built body are enhanced by the quick blue in which it is finished. It is also furnished in solid bemlock with Mountain Rido's green mohair velour.

Interior Appearance

The interior of the Royal Six is lavishly equipped. The upholstery of the high-back stuffed seats in a silver gray mako riding more comfortable. Reading lights are on both sides of the rear compartment in addition to other appointments such as distinctive vanity and smoking sets, silk toggle grips, and silk shades on the rear windows. A bronze rail with hand grips is provided for a robe.

All hardware is in statuary bronze finish. Neat pockets beneath the cowl provide space for tools and incidentals. The instruments board is finished in circassian with instruments grouped under glass in the center panel. A beautiful gasoline gauge, an electric clock and a combination cigar lighter and emergency lamp are added refinements on the instruments panel.

A foot dimmer headlight switch and convenient.

"All in all, this new six is the most magnificent yet produced by Chandler," said Mr. Williams. But luxury has not been substituted for service or extravagance of performance.

RESCUE PLANE

6.08 a.m., Pacific Time that it had encountered nothing but dense clouds and fog since it left Seattle. Its fuel supply would continue circling for another hour, and then, if it found nothing would continue on its course.

At 7.05 o'clock this morning another message to the Boeing Airplane Company from the Tanker West Sequana said that a mist bank was making visibility very bad in the vicinity of the ship.

Meanwhile other ships are rushed under forced draft early today to the spot approximately 560 nautical miles west of Seattle. Destroyers and the aeroplane Dallas Spirit last night sent out by U. S. C. G. cutter it had gone into two succeeding days search. The radio of the plane was silent after its frantic distress calls and it was believed a plane had fallen into the sea.

Radio experts said the power line feeding the instruments of the navigating plane also fed the power tube filaments of the radio. If the plane went crashing headlong towards the water, the storage batteries would have overturned and automatically severed the connection with the instrument board. If the plane was making a ready forced landing, the radio set would go out as soon as the dropping antenna struck the water.

SELL CITY DEBENTURES

Oshawa, Aug. 20.— Approximately $275,000 of Oshawa debentures will be put on the market early in 1928. City Treasurer Blackburn states. Work for which these debentures were authorized is in progress, but the city's financial position is such that Oshawa can afford to wait for a favorable moment for issuing its bonds. It is likely that the next issue, totalling more than a quarter of million dollars, will be disposed of in February.

RAISED CHEQUE

Oshawa, Aug. 20.—Accused of having forged the name of F. Shellenkuf, Oshawa baker, to a cheque for $30.45, Melville Bragg, East Whitby farmer was this morning committed for trial at the next session of the Assizes to be held in Whitby. He will be held in custody until bail can be arranged. Col J. P. Paterson appeared for the Crown and D. A. J. Wanson for the accused.

AGAINST SPEEDERS

Cobourg, Aug. 20.—Following a special traffic officer, R. Grant, is continuing his campaign against reckless drivers and disregarders of traffic regulations today. TRAVEL TO OR FROM THE WEST BY LAKE AND RAIL

Palatial Steamships 110ns, Canadian Pacific house flag provide tri-weekly service between Twin Cities and Bay terminals. Contrary to what one might expect it is no longer expensive to travel by Steamship to or from Winnipeg than by rail. It is cheaper in fact, as rail dollars count, the whole of ones meals as well as the berth on either the Keewatin, Assiniboia or the Manitoba which are the finest Ocean Steamships on the Great Lakes. By leaving Toronto shortly after noon on a Saturday or Wednesday it is possible in less than twelve hours to connect with a Steamer at Port McNicoll and enjoy two days and nights at Sea. A similar connection may be made at Owen Sound on Mondays. Sault Ste. Marie is the only port of call enroute, but it is a voyage replete with interest and charm, a restful and refreshing break in the west ward journey and the service is irreproachable. Ask any Canadian Pacific agent.

Dinghy racing will continue this year until the 1st of October. Next Spring several new dinghys will be on the water and if present plans mature it is probable that some larger yachts will be owned here and sailed off the Club House. Later it is the intention of the B. Y. C. to affiliate with the Lake Yacht Racing Association and it is hoped that before many seasons pass the ancient yachting glories of Belleville will be revived.

This afternoon the directors of the Country Club are entertaining the lady members to tea following the regular Saturday dinghy races.

JUST LIKE A CHAMELEON AND ONLY EIGHTEEN

By ELSIE MARLOWE

"I've got the bloody-Broody Blues," moans Mary Lou. Up one day and down the next.

Never knows how she's going to feel ten minutes from now. Worse than the measles or the mumps, isn't eighteen an awful age? Listen—

DEAR ELSIE:

I am eighteen, and I don't wonder that they call it the crazy age I seem to be perfectly normal, modern young girl with modern advantages and ideas and you'd think I ought to be happy. But I'm miserable most of the time. My trouble is MOODS. I don't know whether I have a dual personality or just too vivid an imagination. Whatever it is, one day I will be in a perfectly delicious mood, happy and optimistic and friendly, and the next day I will be an utterly different person — glum and depressed and peevish. And no matter how hard I try to control or analyze myself I can't seem to do anything about it.

I never know what sort of a person I will be tomorrow!

Surely there must be some cure for such a horrible condition. I suppose the sensible way to rid oneself of such an annoyance would be to commit suicide but thank Heaven, I haven't the nerve to do that.

Please advise me what to do with this funny, queer person which is Me.

MARY LOU

All right, let's go, little sister

First, try to realize that there really isn't any Mary Lou yet There's a collection of growing, changing and

Mistakes Mothers Make In Care Of Little Ones

Many mothers give their children solid food in too early an age and say proudly that their babies "ate everything that grown-up people do." Such a course is almost certain to bring on indigestion and lay the foundation of much ill-health for the little one.

Other mothers administer harsh, nauseating purgatives which in reality irritate and inflame the delicate stomach and bowels and at the same time cause the children to dread all medicine.

Absolutely no meat should be given to a child until it reaches the age of 18 months, and then only if approved by the doctor. For medicine, all strong, disagreeable oils and powders should be abandoned and Baby's Own Tablets given instead.

Baby's Own Tablets are especially made for little ones. They are pleasant to take and can be given with absolute safety to even the new-born babe. They quickly banish constipation and indigestion, break up colds and simple fevers and make the cutting of teeth easy. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

horses and tissues, nerves, emotions thoughts which will some day shape into Mary Lou, but at present they are shifting and adjusting every second.

This is the most unstable time of your life, honey, and your emotional nature is as fiery as the rest of you. But don't worry about that. Be glad that you have a rich and complicated nature which needs delicate adjustments. A flatworm probably has a very easy adolescence, but who would be a flatworm? So hold steady as best you can, little sister, and remember that they are bothering other folks too. If others can manage their moods, can't you? Of course you can.

AT WHAT TIME SHALL SIX-TEEN PUNCH THE TIME CLOCK AFTER AN EVENING WITH THE BOY FRIEND? Thats what Gertrude wants to know.

DEAR ELSIE:

I am a girl of sixteen. I go out occasionally with boy friends and have a real good little life. Mother says I should get in my clever. What do you think? How late can a girl of my age stay out and how many nights out of the week should sixteen year - old girl go out? Also should I keep steady company with one boy or should I be friendly with others?

GERTRUDE

You don't mention what your notion of a reasonable hour might be, Gertrude. However since you ask about mother's wishes in the setting given, I gather that your idea of a "reasonable" hour is somewhere beyond that line.

A girl of sixteen is the growing tree, Gertrude. Her body still has some hard work to do. And it can't do that well, unless it has the necessary help — the biggest help for healthy, sturdy growth is rest — and rest is brought about by sufficient sleep. So don't check the growth of your body by depriving it of sleep. Eleven o'clock is a reasonable hour for a sixteen - year - old girl to be at home. Surely three hours of fun and pleasure should be enough.

And if you are going to school you shouldn't go out too much. Why not let Friday be your fun-night? That's the end of the school week and you can take an extra spoonful on Saturday morning.

As for the boy friends: have as many as you can, Gertrude. Be a friend to all the boys. Don't go off "steading" with them but hike with other boys and girls, go swimming with them, have little evening parties or afternoon excursions, and at the healthy age you can out of life, little girl.

To remove blood stains, saturate with kerosene; let stand a few moments, and wash out with cold water; or, try a little ammonia and cold water wash in luke warm. Old blood stains may be removed by rubbing a little of potassium-cut lated four times its weight in water.

CURSE OF LOVE

By Mildred Barbour

He fingered the tiny bag in astonishment. It contained an object that was large and hard and round. "Slippery Sam" knew that feel.

In great excitement, he profused his pocket flashlight, shielded it carefully, and opened the tiny bag to examine his find.

At the sight of it, blazing up at him, his jaw dropped.

"Gee!" he gasped, half-aloud. He stared at it and then, with a gasp, dropped it as though it had burned him.

"An opal!" he gasped. "Talk about bum luck!"

Superstition gripped him. A realization that he probably had killed a man swept over him. He hadn't done it intentionally, of course, but that would cut no ice with the police. He had wanted only a wallet, and he had taken a life! And here was this infernal jewel, worth a fortune, to put the noose round his neck.

He picked up the lovely thing, gleaming balefully in the glare of his flashlight and, being more greedy than superstitious, stowed it away in his pocket. Then, as always, when he was in trouble and needed comfort and counsel, he hied himself home to his wife.

Their lodgings were cheap and inconspicuous in a quiet, but respectable part of the town. Fanny was waiting for him, reading a paper-backed novel, under a single light in their bed-room. She was a plump, pretty woman. Her red hair was so carefully marcelled that it fitted her like a cap. She wore a cheap, gaudy Japanese kimono.

When "Slippery Sam" entered, she looked up from her book and gave him a fond smile.

"You was a long time, Sammy. I was starting to get scared about you."

"Fanny!" he whispered hoarsely, wiping his forehead and swallowing hard, "I've killed a man. At least I'm pretty sure I have!"

"Sammy!" she sat up, horror-struck in a fury lest words be told her what had happened and she listened, her plump face growing more and more troubled.

"Maybe you didn't kill him," she said, when he had finished. "But we daasn't wait to find that out. I guess we better be on our way, Sammy. Let's be back about 3 o'clock."

"But we ain't got money enough to get far away," he protested.

"You didn't get anything tonight?" He shook his head.

"I left it all there after the shooting. I had to run for it, I tell you. There's only —this." He fumbled in his pocket, bringing out a cheap watch, gave it in his hand, and I caught hold of it in the fight."

He drew out the black opal and laid it in his wife's palm.

She stared at it, awe-struck and recoiled

"An opal! Sammy, we're done for!"

CHAPTER 2

Fanny loved her husband very dearly. She was rather a pretty woman still and, in her plump youth, had been almost handsome, so that she had had a number of admirers and numerous chances But, as in many cases, the weak, crooked little man possessed an attraction for her which was lacking in superior to him in body and brains.

He fact that "Slippery Sam" was a thief made no difference to her. She wasn't above a little polite thieving, at times, and, being well-dressed since she was handy with her needle, public places were also her hunting ground. Once, in a department into the ladies' room around luncheon, time, when patrons were busily drinking before the dining-room and, while she leisurely powdered her nose, her sharp eyes would be watching for a purse or a ring, carelessly laid aside while its owner washed her hands.

Sam had the true value of crowds and confusion. She made her hunt quite methodically, and mastered out, without any suggestion of haste, before the owner discovered her loss. she had never been caught, and while her husband had no police record to draw the suspicious official eye on her activities, she had been fairly successful.

But she was superstitious. Many a time when her deft fingers were about to grasp their prey she had with a sudden, panicky impulse, shied from the glass shelf above the washbowl.

It was small wonder that she cried aloud at the sight of "Slippery Sam's" booty. His statement that he had accidentally shot—and probably, at that distance, killed a man, together with the discovery of the black opal, unnerved her completely.

"It's no use, Sammy," she wailed, "we can't get rid of it right away."

"How you goin' to do it?" he demanded despairingly.

"There ain't really another one like it in the whole world It never is that. If we try to pass it, we're caught, and, if we don't try and it's found on us, we're caught again.

"Let me think!" Fanny began to walk up and down the meager room, her gaudy kimono wrapped around her like a Roman toga. "It's a cinch we can't take, to to the usual place. The Bills will look there first thing."

"Yep!" He sank down on the bed and held his head gloomily in his hands. "Yep, there's no use trying that."

"We might take it out and bury it in somebody's garden," she said, half to herself.

"But we got to have money, Fan," he protested. "I tell you, if I crooked that guy, I got to put as much country between me and that place I can. And the quicker the better."

She wrinkled her smooth white brow in thought.

"Yes, we got to have money—quick" she agreed.

After a few more minutes, while she thought deeply, and he watched her in both despair and hopefulness, she exclaimed:

"I got it!"

"I hope you have!" he breathed fervently.

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I just received an invitation from a boy friend of mine to join him in spending the week-end in Maine. His sister and cousin are also going along with us. Do you think it is right for me to accept the invitation? SALLY.

SALLY: I'm sure mother is willing and satisfied that the party is properly chaperoned, I see no reason why you may not accept this invitation. I would advise you to be guided by your mother's opinion.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl in my teens and I am madly and passionately in love with a young man about my own age. He seemed to like me for some months and came to see me quite often, but finally he suddenly stopped coming to see me without any explanation whatsoever.

Please tell me what to do? Must I learn him alone and act as if I don't care or must I try to win him back? Can you suggest some way of regaining his friendship? BROWN EYES.

BROWN EYES: I doubt, my dear, that this lad was sincerely interested in you or he would have given you some explanation for his abrupt neglect. Try to forget him, Brown Eyes. If you meet him, be friendly, but casual. You might arrange an informal party and include him as a guest. If he is still interested, he will take up the intimate from there, and if he doesn't, then definitely put him out of your mind.

Some Helpful Hints For Busy Housewives

For fruit stains on colored fabrics use borax and ammonia.

To keep milk from curdling when boiling, add a pinch of baking soda.

You can prevent a door or drawer from sticking if you rub a cake of soap over the edges.

Your tumblers and lamp chimneys are not so liable to crack if you lay them in cold water and bring the water to the boiling point, then allow them to cool gradually before removing from water.

To freshen milk which is beginning to turn, add enough carbonate of soda to cover a ten-cent piece for each pint and boil the milk which will then be quite sweet and will keep.

What happened to your watch to-day?

Why, nothing, at all, you will say. You didn't drop or jar it, and it kept just as good time as ever.

Yet, something has happened to it. Every twenty-four hours the oil in your watch evaporates just a little more, becomes a bit more gummy; tiny particles of dirt sift into the delicate mechanism, even through the most tightly fitting case, and eventually the timekeeping performance of the watch is impaired.

Be fair to your watch. Have it cleaned, oiled, and adjusted at least once a year and avoid heavier repairs later. Experts in our Service Department will do this for you at moderate cost.

And while you're considering the care of your watch, be sure it's thoroughly up-to-date in style—dressed in one of the celebrated Wedgwarth Cases, that set the fashion for watches today.

DELORO STAGE DRIVING FINISH AND TRIM NATIONALS IN FINAL

Belleville Lead 6-1 Until The Fatal Seventh Inning

SCORED 9 RUNS

Both Pitchers Knocked From Box In Gruelling Game

Coming down the home stretch with a marvelous burst of speed the fighting baseball machine, of Deloro, outpointed the Belleville Canadian Nationals in the most thrilling encounter witnessed on the local diamond this year. In the face of the heaviest odds they came back to play the railroaders off their feet and win the final and deciding game of the Bay of Quinte League by a score of 11-6. The visitors who have lead the circuit all season were too fast for them with the feet and utter roots but that spark of enthusiasm and urge to win which lurks in the hearts of the champions presented itself and with a burst of speed they passed the Nationals and left them trailing in the wake. Going into the seventh inning the score was 6-1 with the visitors almost out of sight in the rear and within a few moments the Deloro supporters were sent into an ecstacy of delight and frenzy of excitement as their favorites commenced their rally which ended so tragically for Belleville On they came like the fighters they are with a barrage of hits which gradually resulted in runs and more runs. Sending one pitcher to the dog-out they commenced work on the other and before the fatal session was over nine runs had crossed the plate and in the succeeding innings the Belleville team made a last vain stand but the blow had left its marks and despite their efforts to retrieve the lost ground it was too crushing and Deloro had fairly easy sailing during the balance of the affair. The Belleville team ran into some bad breaks on Wednesday and to a certain extent the same thing occurred yesterday. Two regrettable errors spelled their defeat in the unlucky seventh and paved the way for Deloro's victory.

But even the Belleville people in the stands could not help but admire the Northerners for their fighting heart and ability to overcome the obstacles that lay before them. Belleville team and supporters have no alibis to offer. They went down giving their best which they have endeavored to do all season and the fans were certainly treated to a game that will not soon be forgotten in the annals of local sport. In the opinion of the writer the Nationals lost to a better all-round team, at least a better-balanced team. They are well fortified from the back stop to centre field. They have a splendid nine consistent ball all year and are worthy representatives in the O.B.A.A. play-downs and the fandom of Belleville and vicinity with them the best of luck for the quest of another championship The locals are strong in some positions but lamentably weak in others, and the batters that should have been holding up the big end have been falling down miserably. The unfortunate loss of Irvin Lott ace and the hatchet should be buried but the lack of pitching was apparent in every one of the games played. Some of the boys were excused on account of work but at no practice session were there more than four or five players at the outside to put in an appearance and the boys themselves are well aware that this was a strong point in their failure.

Harper Blamed

Lionel Harper who was unfortunate by the boy who was largely responsible for Wednesday's loss played a similar role yesterday and commenced operations in the stands blaming Harper for the whole affair But there is no deny ing the fact that the game lost by a sweet short-stop and he was only initiated in the position when no one else could fill the bill. Short stop is not Harper's calling by a long way but out of the goodness of his heart he went in and attempted to plug the hole that has been a source of worry for many years. For the benefit of those who are not aware of the fact Harper asked to be excused from duty yesterday on the grounds of his showing on Wednesday, but the boys who compose the team would not listen to his pleas and assured him that no malice was held against him. Harper gave after hard-hit ball an attempt to field and he turned in attempt to field and he turned in some smart work yesterday before he booted a couple And one must remember that he has but played a short were travelling at a rapid fire gait and any other player might have done the same thing under similar circumstances. Harper has his heart in the game from the time Gilbo he got on the diamond until the last man was out.

Both pitchers who started were hammered out of the box in the melee and those who finished were subjected to severe mauling. "Hoot" Gibson who has been the one member of the staff to stand up under the strain of the season throughout the season was given his first start time five within six days and it is no wonder that he cracked under the strain. His arm was both ering him when he ascended to the mound and for six innings he toiled through holding the Deloro crew to a scale if hits and one run, but he gradually weakened and the final blow-up came in the seventh. Gibson was given a commendation as he was relieved from the mound following "Penny" Mills orders, but it was really useless for him to keep on pitching farther. Hof and the heavy-hitting Smelters popping up to the infield and going out on easy flies in the outfield in the early chuckers and only in the third frame did they really appear dangerous and he retired the side with only one run in that instance.

Ralph Involved Also

But Gibson was not the only one to send the reins over into other hands. Bill Ralph who flings them from the port side was driven out of the box in the sixth inning after the Nationals had hung up three runs. He was hit fore and aft in this frame and it was a wise move on Manager Mills' part to give him the gate. "Inky" Woods who had been playing second base assumed the task and he too was convinced that he had nothing soft before the curtain was rung down on the local bal season.

"Punch" Derry who has been held up for some weeks was called in to fill Gibson's shoes under the most trying circumstances but he made the best of a bad position with the Deloro team at the height of their hitting spree The score was 6-5 when he shouldered the burden and according to the laws that govern scoring he was credited with a loss.

A Perfect Day

Harry Mills who caused around the initial sack accounted for half of the railroaders runs and had an otherwise perfect day at the bat. In five times up he was given two walks, both of them purposely and twice he was hit by the ball. Besides out of these four he scored and in the fifth time up he crashed a double which scored his brother from second. He used excellent judgment all the way. Harry is a smart first-baseman and he plays a lovely game, and had it over Hughes like a tent.

The Deloro team never looked worse this season than they did for the six opening innings when they were beaten out after stepping into the lead It was all milk and honey and they play ed like champions. They were blown like jack-rabbits during the earlier part of the game and scored only in the one inning.

Belleville Scored First

The Nationals were the first to break into the score column in the opening frame and Weir the lead-off man singled but was caught napping off first first base. Peeny doubled to right and Harry walked. Harper came through with a smashing three-bagger which sent the both of them over, and Weir but for his lapse of memory when he was caught flat-footed would have also tallied on this hit. -

Jimmy Hughes opened the third for Deloro by sending out a pretty double and Woods sacrificed him along. Bill Ralph was safe on Post's boot but Bond struck out Jack did the needy by coming through with a rousing single which sent Hughes home.

In the fourth Harry Mills was hit by a pitched ball and Harper laid down a neat sacrifice and Hagerman was out to Deloro's pitcher. Ralph came through a timely single over second and Mills tallied.

Scored the Base

In the sixth the same boy started the ball rolling again when he was accorded a free ride. Harper sent down a one baser and Hagerman was safe on Ralph booted his bunt. With the bases loaded Ralph ground out for Scott and the latter took a toboggan slide and swiped home on the drive one third on which all three rounded. This ended Mr. Ralph's game and Woods retired the side.

Regan the first batter in the sixth got a life when Gibson moved up his gentle infield hit. Brown singled and Hughes sent one down at Harper which the big boy kicked half way across the diamond in his eagerness and the cushions were occupied at every corner. Woods singled which scored Regan. Quinn who had gone to second on Ralph's departure doubled and both Brown and Hughes dinted the rubber. Bond struck out Jack boated one to Scott and Woods and Quinn gleefully tore di. Boudreau horned in with a single and Mr. Gibson tallied. Gibson was handed his passport to the showers at this stage.

Regan was out at first via Derry but Brown's school hit of the inning drove Quinn home, Hughes got his second double and Boudreau and Brown came in. Woods ended the night-mare by going out to Harper.

In the ninth Belleville started prom laingly. Ross was given a free ticket and "Peeny" was safe on a fielder's choice, Harry doubled to score him and Harper singled to left which scored the latter. "Hagerman fanned and gung batting for Post singled. Scott popped up gently to Woods and the game was over.

CHICAGO DIVIDE WITH BROOKLYN

Giants Remain In Fourth Place As Pirates Split.

New York, August 20.—Along with the other first division clubs, the Giants stood still in the pennant race yesterday, moving neither forward nor backward. Although an even break is better than a punch in the nose, it did not help the Giants at all in their laudable efforts to overtake the Cubs, Pirates and Cardinals. To catch somebody you must go forward. The Giants won the first game 5 to 4, and were on their way toward winning the second when George Harper interfered with a straight fly ball, given the first base line which broke a tie score and drove in enough runs to let the Giants win 8 to 5.

At Brooklyn, the Dodgers and the league-leading Chicago Cubs split a double header to even the four game series. John Blake shut out the Dodgers, 3 to 0 in the first game, but Doug. McWeeny hurled Brooklyn into an even break with a 6 to 1 win in the nightcap.

Blake's victory was the 12th shutout suffered by the Dodgers this season, and the fourth successive game in which Jess Petty's mates have failed to score a single run for him. Five Brooklyn errors helped the Cubs to victory.

Brooklyn bunched hits off Jones in the second contest, scoring three tallies in the eighth on three singles, two passes and a sacrifice. The win was McWeeny's first since the opening week of the season. Hazlinote shelved three of Brooklyn's five hits.

After Kent Greenfield had held St Louis to two hits while Boston hammered out a 6 to 1 victory in the first game of a double-header at Boston, the world champions evened the tables, and won the second game by the same score. Sherdel was effective in the box and Bell starred in support.

At Philadelphia, the Cincinnati Reds took both ends of a double-header from the Phillies, winning the first game, 5 to 3 in ten innings and the second by 1 to 0.

The Reds won the first game when singles by Keeley and Ford scored two tallies in the tenth. Singles by Dressen, Allen and Walker in the first inning gave Kezar a victory over Jack Scott in the second game.

GEHRIG HOMERS BUT YANKS LOST

Chicago, August 20.—Ted Blankenship tamed the rampagious Yankees in their wild flight for the pennant here yesterday afternoon. That is, he tamed them at a team. Individually he wasn't so successful especially as regards Mr. Henry Louis Gehrig, who drove his thirty-ninth home run of the season into the right field stands in the ninth inning.

If Mr. Gehrig had come to bat more often the Yanks might have won. But even the Buster must take his regular turn and he drove in only two runs, which weren't quite enough. The White Sox won 3 to 2.

Hoyt allowed the Sox eight hits while Blankenship was tapped for a similar total, but exactly half of the Sox safe blows were infield affair that might have been handled on a warmer day.

Poems Old And New

IDENTITY
T. K. Hedrick

A raindrop, lifted to the sky
And blown by all the winds, am I.
Through cycles vast my course is run,
By star and star and sun and sun:
I merge with river, rock, and man
According to an ordered plan;
An atom of the cosmic whole,
I lurk in body, mind, and soul;
I know not whither I must go,
But this alone I surely know,
That this, the thing that men call "I,"
Is one with all; and cannot die;
Are, one, with that vast shoreless sea,
The mystic strange infinity
That forms mind, body, soul, and sod—
Yea, one with you—and one with God.

MAYIN SONG
Pack, clouds, away! and welcome day!
With night we banish sorrow.
Sweet air, blow soft; mount, lark, aloft
To give my Love good-morrow!
Wings from the wind to please her mind,
Notes from the lark I'll borrow;
Bird, sing, sing thy wings! nightingale, sing!
To give my Love good_morrow!
To give my Love good-morrow
Notes from them all I'll borrow.

Wake from thy nest, robin red-breast!
Sing, birds, in every furrow!
And from each hill, let echo shrill
Give my fair Love good-morrow!
Blackbird and thrush! in every bush,
Stare, linnit, and cock-sparrow,
You pretty elves, among yourselves
Sing my fair Love good-morrow!
To give my Love good-morrow!
Sing, birds, in every furrow!

Let Me Tell You

Mustard made with milk instead of water will not blacken a silver spoon.

Onion juice, rubbed in immediately, will often remove scorch marks from clothes.

Vinegar and water or a solution of tea will freshen up shabby black lace or crepe de Chine.

Burnt dishes and stained china can be easily cleaned by rubbing with a damp cloth and common salt.

If the milk is warmed slightly before the eggs are added there will be no water at the bottom of a baked cake.

SEE STINGS
If you happen to be stung by a bee apply ammonia or ordinary washing soda immediately. Afterwards any simple antiseptic lotion may be used. Witch hazel is very useful in helping to allay the irritation.

CUCUMBERS AND THE DIGESTION
Cucumbers, when served with vinegar, are often bad for the digestion. It is far better to serve them in thick strips that can be lifted with a fork and eaten like a piece of pear or apple. Avoid the vinegar — it ruins the delicate flavour that a slight sprinkle of salt brings out.

THE USEFUL LEMON
After extracting the juice of lemons through the usual squeezing, do not throw the empty half-skins away at once. They have many useful purposes. When washing up dinner or supper ware, throw two skins into the bowl and rub the plates and dishes with them. They will remove all traces of onion, fish, and other smells, and if one of them is used in the rinsing water will make the china look nice and glossy.

SMELLS INSECTS DISLIKE
No insects like strong smells, and a good plan during the hot weather is to scatter some pungent-smelling substance throughout the house. Windows and doors should be washed over with water containing a few drops of a strong solution of cassia chips. This can be made by simply boiling the chips with water. Bowls of cider tree sprigs should be placed in different rooms — or, if preferred, saucers or spoons containing any such perfume as oil of peppermint, eucalyptus, menthol, lavender, violets, or geranium may be used instead.

BOOKLET ON ART OF TEA MAKING

Mr. Spalding Black, on the staff of the Salada Tea Company, has written a pamphlet an interesting leaflet entitled "The Art of Correct Tea Making". Although approximately 35[illegible] cups of tea are consumed every day in Canada, and yet it is doubtful if one-fourth of the number is prepared with the necessary care to bring out the full flavor of the tea leaf so that this refreshing food and refreshing drink may be thoroughly enjoyed. The following is from "The Art of Correct Tea Making:"

"Tea is one of the kindliest blessings of Nature. In its comforting, individuality once can lose the worries of the day and forget the failings of effort.

The full joy of a cup of this gracious beverage can only be reached when fine quality tea is aided and abetted by care exercised in its preparation, to draw from each leaf the essence of flavour and refreshment with which it has been endowed by Nature.

HOW TO PREPARE TEA
In the countries of the East, where the drinking of tea has been enjoyed for a thousand years or more, the subject of preparing the leaf for consumption has become a fine art and a ceremony, but the full, delicious refreshment and healthful stimulation may be extracted from the fragrant tea-leaves, if the following rules are followed exactly—

Rule No. 1—The best quality of tea must be used. The tea also must be fresh, to yield the full goodness.

Rule No. 2—The water of the water used will affect the flavour of the beverage in the cup. Draw fresh cold water and bring it to a hard "bubbly" boil. Never use water that has been boiled before. Sometimes chlorine put in water to purify it will completely change the flavour of the tea. Soft water is to blame, however, and not the tea.

Rule No. 3—It is proper that only a crockery or china teapot be used, never one of metal or any other substance if the pure and delicious flavour of the tea is to be drawn forth. Tea likewise should never be enclosed in a metal tea-ball.

Rule No. 4.—The teapot must be scalded out with boiling water and while it is warm, place in it one level teaspoonful of tea for each cup required.

Rule No. 5.—Now pour the boiling water on the leaves. Allow to steep in a warm place for five minutes. Stir just sufficiently to diffuse the full strength of the tea. Then pour the liquid off the leaves into another heated vessel, unless served immediately. If poured off in this way, the tea will not take on a bitter taste, which even the finest tea will do unless prevented from over-steeping. Tea made according to these rules will be fragrant, delicious and completely satisfying.

She never has to buy her meat,
It's fixing her fine right at her feet

JELLIED ASPARAGUS SALAD
Arrange cooked and salted asparagus tips, or tender asparagus cut into two-inch pieces, in individual molds which have been wet in cold water. Fill the molds with a thick, highly tomato gelatine mixture made according to any good recipe. Put in the refrigerator until cold and set. Unmold on nests of white lettuce arranged on a flat dish. Garnish with mayonnaise.

PEANUT BREAD
Measure and mix together thoroughly two cupfuls of ground flour, two cupfuls of entire-wheat flour, four teaspoonfuls of baking-powder, one teaspoonful of salt, and one-half cupful of brown sugar. Then add two cupfuls of milk, one well-beaten egg, and three tablespoonfuls of melted shortening. Mix in thoroughly three fourths cupful of chopped peanuts and one-half cupful of seedless raisins floured slightly. Beat all together well and pour into greased bread pans. Allow to stand fifteen minutes in the pans before baking, and bake at 375 deg. F. for about forty-five minutes or until done.

SALMON CONES
Rinse canned salmon and separate into flakes; there should be one and three-fourths cupfuls. Season with salt, cayenne and two teaspoonfuls of lemon juice, and add one cupful of thick white sauce. Shape in cones, dip in egg and crumbs, fry in deep fat and then drain on brown paper. Arrange around cramed peas, garnish with parsley.

GOLDEN RULES FOR THE LARDER

The latest issue of "New Health," the organ of the New Health Society, of which Sir Arbuthnot Lane is president, gives the following hints,which it calls "Twelve Golden Rules for the Care of Food:—

1. Keep all your food in a refrigerator, if it is possible to provide one for your home.

2. If not, see that your larder has an open window, or ventilating grid.

3. Keep the open part of the window covered with fine gauze or muslin.

4. Buy a safe,er — you can get one for 2s. 6d. — and always keep it handy.

5. Spray your larder regularly with a weak solution of carbolic or some prepared fly-killer.

6. Stop up all mouse holes —scrub larder shelves and fixtures frequently with a weak disinfectat.

7. KILL THAT FLY.

8. Keep all food covered — keep meat and fish in a hanging gauze safe

9. Protect all fruit, jam, and cakes from wasps.

10. Wash all milk jugs, bottles, and cans, first with cold, then hot water, then rinse out with boiling water.

11. Keep milk and butter covered with damp muslin, or in a water-absorbent earthenware cooler.

12. Don't use boric acid as prepared preservative; they are harmful to health.

Retain Your Vigor

This Can Only be Done by Keeping the Blood Rich and Red

If you would regain your vigor and ambition, keep your blood and nerves in good condition. Anaemia, or thin blood lowers the vitality, starves the nerves and causes a general rundown condition. When the blood is thin the skin loses its color, the shoulders droop and weight is lost. The victim of anaemia loses appetite, suffers from indigestion, headaches and sleeplessness, and is nervous and easily exhausted after slight exertion. If you have any of these symptoms do not delay but begin treatment now with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and you will be gratified with the prompt improvement in your condition. Among the thousands who have found new health through the use of this medicine is Mrs. erbert Magle, Lorlow, N.B., who says:—"I had not been feeling well for some time and was gradually growing weaker. I would have dizzy spells and often faint. I was subject to severe headaches and found it hard to do my work. I took doctor's medicine for some time, but it did me no good, and I was still growing weaker. In this condition I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and in a short time found they were helping me. I continued the use of the pills for a while longer, and found that the trouble that had bothered me was gone and I was once more a well woman."

Get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at your druggist's or write The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., and the pills will be sent post paid at 50 cent a box.

Without a thought to the expense!

JUST IN PASSING

"I chanced to pass one morn
A tiny cup of rain
Held fast within a roadside rut,
Ad, as I cast a downward glance,
It proffer me—
The sky and dawn!"

"Love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness temperance, St. Paul's 'fruits of the spirit' says Archdeacon Hindley, of Melbourne, Australia, "are a more accurate description of a good dog than that of a so-called good Christian as the world knows him."

DEATH OF "JOEY."
Monkey Who Lived Liquor and Made Three Escapes

"Joey," the monkey famed for his London escapes and escapades, is dead. A post-mortem examination is to be held by his owner, Mr. George Palmer, the naturalist, of Park St., Camden Town.

No monkey has attracted more attention in London than "Joey." He escaped about two years ago at Camberwell, and was at liberty for a fort, night before he was recaptured. Some months ago he escaped again, this time from Tooley Street, and he eluded his pursuers for ten days. It was even suggested that he should be shot on sight, but Mr. Palmer by a ruse succeeded in securing him, and since then he had kept the monkey at Camden Town.

"All who knew 'Joey,'" said Mr. Palmer to-day to an Evening Standard representative, "will regret to hear of his death, for he was a great pet. He escaped a third time, and the only way we were able to ensure his return was by giving him a strong cocktail. We mixed beer, whiskey and other drinks, and sent this up to where he could be seen, with the result that 'Joey' was overcome and captured.

"He had a liking for strong drink. People from all parts were in the habit of visiting the place to see him, and very frequently they gave him drinks. He would take whiskey neat, and it is possible that this indulgence has had some effect on his health."

"Joey" is to be stuffed.

The difference between man's finest sensibility for Nature and his occasion al apparent indifference to her — or should one say, his modesty of himself and his idealisation of her — is presented by Frederick Niven in the London Observer. It should be remembered in reading Man and Nature that the latter has no qualities save those which man ascribes to her out of his consciousness of his own attributes. But then, poetry is not syllogism.

"The chatter of the pople on one side
And on the other, laughter of the loon.
Small sarcasms, bridge and politics
Fronting the silver silence of the moon.

"Novels for feeble-minded to discuss
And find a meaning in (oh!) and there
Outside, these little dolphins of the world . . .
The swallows, weaving freedom through the air.

"The tolerant trees; the heedless rocky crests;
Aurora flaming in the northern sky;
She said that he said and I said to her—
And then they die."

Why Gum-Dipped Mileage Costs Less "Per Mile"

The demand from car owners for Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires has given Firestone dealers a large increase in volume that enables them to sell these tires to you at the lowest prices in the history of the industry.

The Firestone Balloon Tread, scientifically designed three years ago, and unchanged today has the wear resisting qualities that give thousands of extra miles.

This tread must be placed on a carcass that has the qualifications to withstand terrific flexing. The Firestone carcass is made of cords dipped in rubber solution which not only saturates and insulates every fibre of every cord, but unites sidewalls with carcass, eliminating any possibility of separation under the extreme flexing of low-pressure.

The Firestone Dealer in your locality will gladly explain the Gum-Dipping process, the scientifically designed tire tread, and other advantages that only Gum-Dipped tires can give. See him today.

NAMES SIMILAR TO THE ENGLISH

Many Counties And Towns In Maritimes Named Like England

Charlottetown, P.E.I., August 19.—County and town names in the Maritime Provinces were so familiar to English people, as was recently said a flying visit to the Atlantic corner of Canada that they almost felt they were back in their home land.

It is a fact that in the matter of nomenclature the early settlers of the Maritimes displayed little originality either adopting the Indian names or christening their new discoveries after the shires and villages from which they came. Thus Nova Scotia today boasts such counties as Halifax, Windsor and Chester, while among New Brunswick counties one finds Kent, Westmoreland and Northumberland.

"Hearing these names spoken on every side, made the country through which we passed seem strangely familiar," remarked Sidney H. Lewer, editor of a British poultry periodical. "Of course the topography in many districts was in strong contrast to that to which we were accustomed, but in Prince Edward Island the illusion was very complete. Prince Edward Island might be a section of English countryside, the farms and the methods of cultivation are very similar and made me feel completely at home."

Several of the touring delegates to the recent World Poultry Congress also found family associations in the names of towns and districts through which the special train bore them. The Hon. Florence Amherst particularly enjoyed a visit to Amherst, Nova Scotia, because the quiet little town derived its name from her distinguished ancestor, General Amherst, who played an important part in the British conquest of French Acadia, now Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

Very many Maritime names do bow or to English Royalty of the past, the House of Hanover, having been particularly favored in this regard. Queen Charlotte is remembered by Charlottetown, P.E.I., and Charlotte Street, in Fredericton, N.B. Of course there are a host of George Streets, while Kings and Queens abound on every side.

Prediction probably carried this street-naming tradition to the limit when it christened six parallel streets Queen—Charlotte; King—George; Regent, Brunswick, thus thoroughly honoring the Royal Family of the day.

Of course the name of the capital itself is a graceful tribute to one of the imported German lords. It supplanted the more attractive name of the original French settlement — Ste. Anne's Point. In the same way the French settlement of Port Royal, Nova Scotia, became Annapolis under British rule by courtesy to Queen Anne.

While the English members of the International party will miss this link with the Old Country as they proceed westward on their trans-Canada pilgrimage, they are expecting to enjoy the wonders in store for them to the full. Winnipeg, Medicine Hat and Vancouver are names which bring to mind no memories of the home across the Atlantic, but they will doubtless give the visitors a royal time nevertheless.

IMPOSSIBLE TO GIVE RETIRING TALK TO B.A.A.S.

London, August, 19 (Canadian Press) —Being in Canada, the Prince of Wales will be unable to personally deliver the addresses as retiring president when the British Association for the Advancement of Science holds its inaugural general meeting at Leeds on August 31. He will, however, send a message from the Dominion, to be read at the meeting. Sir Arthur Keith will be the new president.

The sessions proper of the great scientific organization will take place from Sept. 10 to 17; 3200 are expected to attend, a number well above the average.

Sir Arthur Keith's presidential address will be on "Darwin's theory of man's descent, as it stands today." The address will be broadcast by wireless. In all, there will be about 300 scientific communications, addresses, discourses, discussions and papers.

Some of the most important of these are: "The broadening of the split cook in education," by the Duchess of Atholl, parliamentary secretary to the ministry of education; "Rationalisation of Industry," by Prof. D. H. Macgregor; "Outstanding problems of relativity," by Prof. E. T. Whittaker; "The Englishman of the future," by Prof. F. C. Parsons; "Agriculture and National Education," by O.G.T. Morrison; and "Forestry and the empire," by Sir Peter Chatterbock.

Discussions which are of wide interest as well as importance are those in coal, on prices; on the psychology of special scholastic disabilities, and on the report of the committee on educational training for overseas life.

A new feature this year will be a series of special meetings on scientific

The association, though always composing themselves with the economic and industrial interests of the localities where they meet have not hitherto arranged a complete series of communications on the applications of science to a particular leading industry.

Full advantage is being taken of Leeds as a centre for scientific excursions and arrangements have been made for field work in geology, archaeology, agriculture, forestry and for the inspection of various industrial activities and the collection illustrating primitive weaving at Bankfield Museum at Huddersfield.

An exceptionally large number of public lectures have been arranged this year since it was found that they were in strong demand; and the usual arrangements have been made for the admission to the meeting of selected students from universities and colleges and some sixty students have been nominated. Women continue to take an increasing part in the meeting and its activities.

ENTHUSIASTIC OVER TRIP WEST

Toronto, Aug. 19.—After spending twenty-one days in the west across Canada and back the 125 members of the Dean Laird Special disbanded at one p.m. today, the touring which was conducted, by Dean Minister Laird of MacDonald College, Quebec, included a number of teachers and education[illegible] from the eastern provinces. All are enthusiastic over their visit to the West, and felt it a fitting finish to self down the Great Lakes from Port William. James H. Carter, who was the oldest member of the party, being 75 years of age, enjoyed the tour to the utmost. This is his first trip across Canada, although Mrs. Carter has travelled extensively in other countries

"I think we have as good a country as there is in the world," Mr. Carter said. "There is nothing like Canada for me and I took this trip on purpose to see it in its Jubilee Year." He has kept a close watch on the crop reports, having been a farmer in the past for 25 years and prophesies an excellent harvest if the frost holds off. As for the Canadian Rockies Mr. Carter thinks the scenery around Banff and Lake Louise beyond description and enjoyed the drive along the Banff-Windermere Highway.

What stands topmost in the minds of the party is the prosperity of the Golden West, the varied scenery and the excellence of the Canadian Pacific service. Many side trips were introduced enroute, including an inspection of the grain elevators at Port William and another of the radio-[illegible] farm in Oliver, B.C., and one was made of the Bluebell Silver Mine at Riondel, B.C. Golden sunshine and blue skies accompanied the special train all through its course.

Skin Is Now Clear Had Disfiguring Eczema

Two letters which tell how Dr. Chase's Ointment has cleared the skin of Eczema.

It is not unusual for people to use pleasant smelling salves and lotions for diseases of the skin with the idea that they have healing value. This is of course a mistake.

Dr. Chase's Ointment is a medical preparation which is composed of the most effective ingredients known to science. For this reason it is looked upon as the standard treatment for eczema and similar skin troubles.

Mrs. Sadie Wald, Lennerville, Que., writes:

"My little sister's face was all broken out with eczema, which even spread to her ears and neck. Her face was a frightful sight. We tried several kinds of remedies but no success, until we saw in Dr. Chase's Almanac a recommendation for holding your Ointment in a cloth to steam it. After using it for a few hours, she was entirely free from sores and her face is as white as ever her face is as white as ever. Dr. Chase's Ointment is a real [illegible] Mrs. Chas. AT SUNDOWN WAS PRINCE'S PICK

H. R. H. Voted Popular Jazz Song In Ottawa

He likes his golf and the occasional informal party where he can enjoy a dance.

"He must get tired, with all this formality—and no wonder" said a motherly sould as she strained her neck to catch a glimpse of the Prince of Wales, his brother Prince George and Hon. Stanley Baldwin, England's Prime Minister! It was apparent that her remarks were intended for the hair of the throne for at that particular moment the crowd was cheering his entrance to the enclosure.

There were no doubt many mothers and fathers too who felt very much like the woman, but it must be borne in mind that the stalwart Prince has some relief, now and then, from the important duties which revolve around him when He is making an "official visit."

During his stay in Ottawa there were a number of informal events such as golf and dancing and it is while he was honoring a very charming daughter o Ottawa that he suggested an informa party while in Toronto. At this Ottawa dance, the Prince requested certain numbers of which he is particularly fond, especially singling out "At SUNDOWN" a distinctive fox trot song That this was no passing fancy was demonstrated by a further request for this number when he was entering his self at a private and informal party which was arranged for him in Toronto. The press reports stated "His Highness requested that "AT SUNDOWN" be played as the third number which he danced with Mrs. Trevor Grant."

At the Capital Al and Bob Harvey made this number the. Prince several times during the Country Club dance and it was featured by Don Bonnaudo's orchestra, at the Prince's request, on the boat trip fro Niagara Falls. The words of the chorus of the fox trot that caught His Highness' fancy are as follows:—

"Every little breeze is sighing of love
Inspiring at sundown,
Every little bird is resting and feather
dressing at Sundown,
Each little rose-bud is sleeping,
While shadows are creeping,
In a little cottage cozy
The world seems rosy at Sundown,
Where a loving smile will greet me, and always meet me at Sundown
I wonder why—when Hoarys,
When night is falling, God love's calling me home."

New York, N. Y., Aug. ... Two comic incidents in sport have proved that even the motion picture cannot tell the story of sport from most decisive. ESKIMOS ENJOY TEETH PULLING

New York, N. Y., Aug. 17.—Eskimos like to have their teeth pulled, says Dr. Louman M., Waugh, professor in orthodontia at the Columbia School of Dental and Oral Surgery, in report from the Labrador coast, where he is carrying on researches with the Eskimo tribes in Northern Labrador and the Ungava Bay region.

Eskimos make grateful patients when their confidence is once gained, states Dr. Waugh, and seldom bite the hand instead of my face.

After he had extracted teeth from a group of Labrador Eskimos, including four women and five men, they smiled and thanked him and all said they didn't hurt at all." Dr. Waugh indicates that this attitude is characteristic of all his Eskimo patients.

NEW COINAGE IN JERUSALEM SOON

Jerusalem, Aug. 17. — Packing in 1,-100 cases and weighing seventy-five tons, 430,000 Palestinian pound's worth of coin in silver, nickel and bronze have arrived under strong military escort.

This is the first instalment of the new currency which is expected next fall to supersede the Egyptian currency now in ed.

The Palestinian pound is equivalent in value to the pound sterling but is divided decimally into one thousand "mills."

SOFT SATINS FOR EVENING

New York—In the opinion of style experts recently returned from Paris the untrimmed satin crepe evening gown scores on the side of elegance. Patou and Vionnet as well as several lesser houses, feel that it expresses the mood of the hour. They create gowns of softly draped lines and depend largely on the lustrous reflections of the satin for decorative effect.

Dresses designed in this spirit appear to tend toward soft tints, nearer, oyster white, moonlight blues and a beige that suggests more of a yellow than a rose cast being the more important tones. Paris continues to wear white and soft apricot and flesh tones for evening, but these are perhaps more often found in fluttering chiffons, which are still important especially to the younger set.

Beaded dresses are by no means passe but it is noticeable that there must be something distinctive in the beading, either in the beads themselves, or in the manner in which they are applied, to deserve any recognition Paris will see none of the tawdry silkyer beaded dresses that are uttered out from factories by the dozens. Some of the better models have the bodice beaded in one color, the skirt in another or perhaps the bodice in white and the skirt in turquoise or coral as the case may be.

There is an effect of animation in the newest frocks and a general tendency toward one-sided effects achieved either by drapery or placements of pleats. Several draperies occur at the front, after the Egyptian manner, and many skirts curve upward at that point.

While there is a movement in Paris toward more elegance in dress this is an idea being promoted by the couturi the women who wear the models apparently being perfectly satisfied to spend the daylight hours in sports clothes. Sports clothes have become exceedingly glorified. Many of the newer ensembles are rather formally trimmed with furs dyed to match the cloth or crepe they trim, and rather more inclined to be introduced on dress than collars. The sleeveless coat and the cape are the newest entries to favor in sports things.

While hosiery for street wear shows a decided tendency to darken and a very definite trend toward gray, it remains the fashion to wear chiffon hose of invisible hue for evening, no matter what type of shoe is chosen. Evening slippers are very elaborate, though, strange to state, not always exceedingly high-heeled. Jeweled straps are a pleasant addition and rather smarter than straps of the material from which the shoe is fashioned.

PROBLEM NOT SOLVED

A new teacher in the backwoods district gave her pupil this problem to work out over the week end: "If a man can run around a field, one mile square, in 32 seconds, how long will it take him to run around eleven and three quarter times?"

QUALITY AND SERVICE THE BEST

MANY IMPROVED DISPLAYS WILL FEATURE FAIR

Much Display Work Is Arranged By Experts

Just about one week more Belleville Industrial Fair for 1927 will open its gates—a bigger and better Fair than ever. It could not but be noticed in last year's Fair that remarkable improvement had been made in the attractiveness of the displays over those of the previous year.

As a matter of fact, one of the chief reasons for this advancement lay in the fact that many of the exhibitors, unwilling themselves to undertake the none too easy task of arranging an attractive Fair booth, engaged the service of competent sign men to do the work.

It will be remembered that among the exhibits which attracted much attention and favorable comment was that of the Modern Cleaners and Dyers, an original and meritorious display arranged by the A-1 Sign Studio of Front Street." This was but one of several prepared by the A-1 whose work last year set a high standard, and one which will take a lot of work to improve upon this year.

Yet the exhibits must improve, along with the general progress of the Fair from year to year, and realizing that the logical man to arrange an exhibit is one who has made a life study of the problem of effective display work, more and more exhibitors are entrusting the matter of their display this year, to the A—1 Sign Studio. In so doing, they are certain of getting good results, through added attention to their line. At the same time, as well as the improvement to their own exhibit, such exhibitors are doing their share to really make Belleville Industrial Fair better this year than ever.

Plants Cover Two Square Miles

Studebaker plants and facilities now cover nearly two square miles, according to a recent survey of plants and property. South Bend, Detroit, and Walkerville plants include more than eight million square feet of floor space, and occupy 1100 acres of ground.

What a quarter of a century of progress has done to change motor cars is strikingly represented in a comparison of the smart new car of 1902 and of 1927. Twenty five years ago the Studebaker electric runabout was the last word in transportation. Viewed somewhat askance by conservatives who were loth to replace their high stepping horses with the new fangled horseless carriages, the 1902 runabout was nevertheless considered the smart est turnout of the day.

Progress affords few greater contrasts than that between the 1902 runabout and the Erskine Six Sport Coupe, which is accepted as the height of Motoring fashion today. In the former a crude adaptation of a carriage body is mounted on the rubber framework of the electric. In the later we find a graceful, low swung and distinctively designed body created by Dietrich — a master custom body builder — who took his inspiration for, the body design from the smartest of Europe's high priced cars. Compact in its proportions, the Erskine Six-Coupe affords ample room for two in the beautifully finished interior, with seats for an extra couple in the commodious leather upholstered rumble seat in the rear deck.

Not only in appearance and comfort but in performance, too, the Erskine is a far cry from the 1902 runabout. Its sturdy economical motor will zoom from 5 to 25 miles an hour in 8 1-2 seconds, and climb eighty to a speed of 60 miles an hour. And a mile a minute twenty-five years ago was a speed only visionaries made as Jules Verne believed would someday be possible.

TWO YOUNG LIVES LOST IN PAUDASH LAKE ON SUNDAY

No Trace Of Any Of Seven Lost Pacific Fliers --- Sacco And Vanzetti To Die At Midnight

VETERANS HONOR THEIR COMRADES WHO HAVE GONE

Impressive Services At Cemeteries Sunday As Graves Are Decorated

MEMORY GREEN

One Hundred And Fifty Odd Soldiers And Big Crowds Attended

"Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."

This text was exemplified all over Canada yesterday when Decoration Day services were held in every city, village and hamlet of the Dominion.

Nearly one hundred and fifty veterans and hundreds of spectators were present at the great open-air Decoration Day Service held in the Belleville Cemetery yesterday afternoon, when the graves of deceased soldiers were strewn with beautiful flowers, and the memory of those who gave up their lives that mankind might be saved, was freshened by prayer and song. Lest we forget! Lest we forget!

At two o'clock, Bandsmen of the Salvation Army Band led the parade of returned men and officers started out from the Cenotaph, Legion Headquarters on Front street and marched to the foot of the West Hill, where transportation was afforded them out to the cemetery. Every man wore a poppy on his coat, and many had their breasts bestrewn with medals. What a fine, sight those valiant defenders of the world's freedom presented! Some still bearing the scars of battle, others with no outward sign other than a hurt upon them, but their souls sealed forever with the horrible memory of the greatest war the world has ever known.

Upon arrival at the cemetery the men formed up again and marched to the band marched to the mausoleum where the service was held.

Service Impressive

The mausoleum was hung with a huge Canadian flag. Two British flags hung down in front of the door and two small British flags were stood log by the steps. Directly in the centre of the doorway was a cenotaph bung with a Union Jack and encircling the initials R. I. P. (Requiescat In Pace, Rest in Peace).

The veterans lined up in front of the steps with the spectators behind them and the band to one side. Upon the steps were the Rev. A. L. Geen, chaplain of the Canadian Legion, under whose auspices the Decoration Day Service was held, the Rev. Mr. C. E. Clarke, Adjutant T. J. Walton, of the Salvation Army and his Adjutant.

With the strains from the Salvation Army band ringing out over the gravestones broke forth into that fine old hymn "O God our help in ages past," followed by a prayer by the Rev. Geen. Another hymn, "Fight the good fight, with all thy might" and then two brief addresses, followed by the closing hymn "Forever with the Lord," completed the service.

The Addresses

The services, by the Rev Clarke, as assistant chaplain of the Legion, and Captain Walton of the Salvation Army, were very brief in their rendition but also touching. Both explained the meaning of Decoration Day, how it was a Day set aside to keep green the memory of those who had died and given their

BUSY THIEVES IN TRENTON SUNDAY

Thieves were busy in Trenton over the week-end. The grocery store of J. W. McEwen, Front Street, was broken into early Sunday morning and $50 worth of tobacco, cigars and cigarettes was taken. The burglars also took away with them Mr. McEwen eggs, fresh soon, too.

McCauley's Grist Mill was another place to suffer the attentions of the robbers. About $16 in cash was taken from the mill. Speaking to The Intelligencer today, Chief Bain of the Trenton Police Force, stated that he was working on the case now, but as yet had not gained any clues.

NECK BROKEN IN TWO PLACES

Dived Into Shallow Water From Boat

With his neck broken in two places as the result of diving into shallow water, Douglas Anderson, of Toronto, Ont., is said to have better than an even chance of recovering. Going out in a launch he dived from the deck and despite injuries to his neck was able to swim back to the boat. He went to work next day, felt a pain a day later and then an X-ray showed his broken neck.

4 ACCIDENTS ON HIGHWAYS OVER THIS WEEK-END

Attempting To Pass, Reynolds Of Montreal Has Car Piled In Ditch

SMASH ON BRIDGE

Belleville Car Crowded In Culvert On The Kingston Road

The week-end saw the usual toll of automobile accidents in and around Belleville. One crash on the Provincial Highway near Desoronto, a car smashed through the overhead bridge between Trenton and Brighton and a bad accident just outside Belleville went to swell the rostrum of summer accidents in this vicinity.

When he pulled out to pass a car on the highway by Desoronto, Saturday evening, G. F. Reynolds, of Montreal, saw an automobile approaching from the west. Reynolds swung his wheel into the ditch, but only the front wheels were off the highway when the car driven by John Hall, of Fredericksville, Ontario, crashed into the rear of Reynold's automobile driving him in to the ditch. Mr. Reynolds had his wife and child, a little boy in the car with him. His wife suffered a smashed shoulder and was taken to a doctor in Desoronto for treatment. Neither they child nor the child were hurt beyond a bad shaking up. The car was brought into the McLaughlin Garage, Belleville, badly wrecked.

Through Overhead Bridge

Mr. T. Bailey, of Indianapolis, going east on the Provincial Highway last night sideswiped the overhead bridge between Trenton and Brighton, completely wrecking his car, although not injuring himself. Bailey, when he came to the bridge, evidently applied his brakes too quickly and skidded side ways, crashing into the railing of the bridge and breaking the side of the car. Two wheels were smashed, also. The car was taken to Graham's Garage, Trenton, where it will be repaired.

Travelling east on the Provincial Highway between Trenton and one o'clock Sunday morning, an automobile driven by Mr. Eugene Doyle of this city was smashed up in a car operated by Mr. T. Hanna, driving for Coleman's Taxi Service, resulting Doyle's car crashing into a culvert. The Doyle car rebounded from the culvert side into a bridge on the other and then turned over. Hanna skidded about fifty yards down the road finally coming to rest on a fence on the south side of the road, badly wrecking the car. Doyle's car sustained four broken fenders, two broken wheels, a dented side and had the windshield board crushed. None of the occupants of either of the cars were injured. Provincial Police are investigating.

ONE DEAD, ONE DYING IN BAD AUTO SMASH

Sudbury, Ont., Aug. 22.—James Stitt of Stittsville, Ontario, was instantly killed, his sister, Etta sustained injuries from which she will probably die and three other occupants of the car in which they were driving were less seriously injured as a result of an accident here today. Their automobile while passing down a deep gulch, struck a bridge and was badly wrecked.

TAFT WOULD NOT ACCEPT PETITION

Hours Of Life For Condemned Murderers Dwindle Rapidly

Boston, Mass., Aug. 22.—Sacco and Vanzetti today refused the last offer of prison chaplain to pray with them before they die as they had lived, outside it's gate.

Boston, Aug. 22.—Michael Musmanno, of the Sacco-Vanzetti defense counsel, announced that Chief Justice Taft had sent him, a telegram in which he announced his refusal to receive a petition for a stay of execution because the matter was outside his jurisdiction.

Musmanno withheld the text of Chief Justice Taft's telegram but added that Mr. Taft had advised him to go before one of the three Supreme Court justices now in this district, if he wished action on such a petition. The defense attorney has appealed in vain to Justice Holmes and Brandeis and today Attorney Arthur D. Hill was on his way to place a petition for a stay before Justice Harlan A. Stone at Isle Au Haut, Maine.

ADDED CHARGES FOR M'DERMOTT

Police Implicate Him In The Attempted Robbery Of Hodge

Barrie, Ont., Aug. 22.—The charges that Joseph McDermott, cattle drover of Beeton, did attempt to rob Alex Hodge with Daniel Murphy, armed" has been laid against McDermott by P. S. Duncan of the Provincial Police and the information was in the hands of Magistrate Jeffs of Bradford, committal of McDermott and Frank Skelly opened today.

Committed For Trial

McDermott was committed for trial on certain charges of cattle stealing at the preliminary hearing. The County Council chamber, in which hearings of others in the case had taken place on Friday, was again jammed with farmers and their folk who came from all parts of county and had waited since early morning.

A new charge of conspiracy with Daniel Forsythe to rob Alex Hodge as well as charges of perjury, were yet to be heard. Inspector Wm. Stringer of Provincial Police testified that McDermott had confessed to buying cattle which he knew to be stolen.

ACCIDENT SAYS CORONER'S JURY

No Blame Attached To Any one For Drowning Of Dupont

Death due to accidental drowning was the result of the inquest into the death of Julian Victor Dupont who met so tragic an end in the local harbour on Friday evening. The inquest was held at the shortest in Belleville annals, only inalfhs for forty minutes. The jury empanelled by Police Sergeant Harmon, principal witness included—Mr. Charles Panter, foreman; W. N. Valance, E. J. Weldon, T. Meyer, C. Cochrane, R. Cole, H. Day and F. Wilson.

The first witness to take the stand was Sergeant Harmon who told of finding the body standing upright in the water. When asked what in his opinion was the reason for the body remaining upright, he replied that Dupont must have gone down feet first and the weight of the iron on the victim's artificial leg held them there. The sergeant stated that he had found out that the man had been staying at Doctor's Hotel.

Dr. J. J. Robertson, local physician, who performed the post mortem; Norman Dupont, son of the drowned man; Albert Doctor and Leonard Tisdale, were all witnesses. Tisdale, who found the body and notified the police told how he had made his gruesome discovery, his boat scraping the head of the victim. The body was taken Saturday to Dupont's sisters home in Kingston.

LEAPING FROM A BLAZING MOTOR BOAT YOUNG COUPLE ARE DROWNED

Shocking Tragedy On Paudash Lake Near Bancroft On Sunday

BODIES RECOVERED

Mr. Johnson, Summer Resident, Gallantly Attempted Rescue

When their motor boat took fire from some unexplained cause, sixteen-year-old Marguerite Siddons and Alan Nell, the young son of a neighbour, jumped into Paudash Lake near Bancroft, and were drowned yesterday afternoon. Although the girl's body was recovered within ten minutes, life was extinct. It was more than an hour later before the young man's body was brought to the surface.

The young people had gone out in a motorboat for an afternoon's cruise on the lake and all went well until just as they were approaching the island owned by Mr. and Mrs. Johnson of Toronto, Mr. Johnson noticed the boat burst into flames and Nell and Miss Siddons jumped overboard. Securing his boat as rapidly as possible, Mr. Johnson was on the scene in a few minutes and quickly secured the girl's body. Young Alan, it was an arduous task to raise Nell's body and it was about an hour before it was accomplished.

Marguerite Siddons was the daughter of Robert Siddons, a farmer, whose home adjoins the lake. Alan Nell was a son of Thomas Nell, who operates a saw-mill in the vicinity. Both families are well known and highly respected.

SAW MILL BURNS IN NORTH HASTINGS

Early yesterday morning Mundoo Brothers sawmill on the C. N. R. about three miles from Delzie station was destroyed by fire. How the origin of the fire is unknown as no one was present during the progress of the blaze. The loss will be about $2,000 on the building, machinery and tools but the lumber stacked in the mill escaped the blaze. The property was partially insured.

NEW PLANE WILL BE ALMOST UNSINKABLE

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 22.—Plans of Capt. E. L. Janney to fly from Ottawa to Washington, D.C. and back again were discussed by the airman and Mayor Balharrie today. The mayor expressed confidence in the success of the trip. Capt. Janney returned to Ottawa over the week-end from a visit to the United States where he was always he arranged for the construction of a special plane for the flight.

"I expect to make the flight between the tenth and fifteenth of September," declared Capt. Janney. The new plane there will be a specially constructed gasoline tank. In case of accident the machine would be in two minutes and the air space in the empty tank will more than support the weight of my plane. It would keep it afloat till the waves demolished it."

The new law will continue until Thursday its search in the Pacific Ocean for the body of Frederick Brancker, British aviators, it was announced. Naval statisticians estimated that the search will cost the navy nearly thousand dollars. This amount, namely for fuel, is above normal operating expenses of fleet of 43 vessels in the search. GASOLINE TAX

PREMIER FERGUSON has warned the public of Ontario to expect another reduction in the automobile license fee and an increase in the gasoline tax. He told a party gathering in Frontenac-Addington that he had a strong personal feeling in the matter, and as we shall see he surprised if the members "feeling" finds official expression in the next session of the Legislature.

Mr. Ferguson has the correct attitude towards the subject of operating taxes on motor cars. There is no more equitable tax, nor any more easily collected, than that on gasoline. The motorist pays it in small sums, and in exact accordance with his use of the public roads. The heavy car which uses a million of gasoline in ten miles pays double the tax, for an equal distance, which falls on the car running twenty miles to the gallon. The business or pleasure car contributes to the road construction in proportion to the provincial treasury, while the man who only uses his car to drive to church or to go to the shopping—to quote Mr. Ferguson—benefits from his moderation.

The Government reduced the license fee for all cars by a flat five dollars at the beginning of this year, and presumably the revenues have not suffered greatly. Another all-round reduction by the same figure with an increase of the gasoline tax by two cents would leave the annual payment of those who operate almost unchanged. There would be a material increase however, in the tax paid by motor liveries and by drivers whose mileage is particularly heavy—and it is these, we suspect, who get most advantage from the high cost of good roads.

MARGIN OF SAFETY

The newspaper dispatches from London, Ont., to London, Eng., is rich in gamble with death that it is one of the very few kinds of risks on which Lloyds of London, will not issue insurance. Up to the present Lloyds has refused to insure a transatlantic flight, though at the height of the submarine warfare it gambled on the safe passage of cargo ships between the United States and her allies, and thinks vain insurance a good risk. The famous insurance company has thirty-two years' transoceanic transportation, a fleet of ships from which it will be glad to recover.

Lloyds has acted on the strength of the fact that only one of the four regular transatlantic attempts was fatally successful. One plane reached its prearranged destination, one is still missing and two others fell short of their destinations and were damaged in the landing. Had Lloyd's issued an airplane flight the kind of insurance it has refused another flyer it would have won out on Colonel Lindbergh's first solo flight within prescribed bounds is one of the safest methods of transportation. Statistics indicate that a person runs far less chance of being killed in the air than on the streets, and insurance companies, interested in the business possibilities of aviation, have compiled some statistics that must convince the most cautious of the groundlessness of their fear of flying.

Commercial planes in the United States flew 5,000,000 miles last year with only two fatalities. Australia reports one death in a million miles flown. French commercial pilots have lost one crew for every 72,000 hops. One German company carried 94,000 passengers a total distance of 2,814,000 miles with only one fatality.

English insurance companies are writing policies for protection of the air traveler at rates much lower than the rates for transportation on land. On this continent insurance companies no longer consider flying a needless risk justifying a denial or liability and cancellation of a policy. And insurance company policies and rates are guided by actuarial figures, not by the timidity of their boards of directors.

EFFECTIVE

It has been left to Zion City, Illinois, according to an Ontario motorist, to devise the most effective method yet discovered for dealing with speeding motorists. On his return from a trip through Illinois he stated that in that city the method adopted is to fire at the tires of all cars exceeding the legal speed limit. The speed limit in that city is fifteen miles an hour, a limit which we are reminded by Liberal signs placed at the entrance to the city. He was entering the city at twenty-five miles an hour, when he passed a sentry box at which two citizens in uniform were seated. Guessing, at that speed, he was surprised to hear the report of two shot-guns, and to find that his tires had been punctured by the bullets. On stopping, he was informed by the marksmen that this was the method adopted by the city bylaws for dealing with speeders.

While this method can hardly be recommended as a means of stopping speeding on the Ontario highways, on account of its attendant dangers, it has the advantage of being very effective, providing the men with the guns are accurate shots. In some cases of reckless driving, indeed, it would be safer to the general public to have the speeder dealt with in this way, rather than let them continue on their mad career along the roads.

RECORDS

Criminal offences in Canada increased 10.83 per cent. in 1936, as compared with the previous year, according to the convictions recorded and published by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. The total was 107,-281. Indictable offences, the more serious crimes, increased 1.33 per cent., which probably means that they merely kept pace with the growth in population. It is gratifying to note that burglary, considered one of the worst crimes, decreased from 1,934 to 1,826 cases, a substantial improvement. As regards provinces, Quebec makes a fair showing, there having been a decrease of 3,263 convictions, or 5 per cent., in the year. This is satisfactory, for it indicates that, despite the very considerable increase in the number of residents of this province, including Montreal, a city with a poly population and a great port and railway terminus, crime is being kept in check. Ontario has never a better record than Quebec, for the figures show a decline in crime of 6.50 per cent. Greater Canada evidently is not growing worse; rather the contrary.

The report of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics also seems to show that the forces of law and order are alert everywhere and that arrests are swift, for otherwise crime and convictions are not secured in the courts in a large proportion of cases. Nowhere in the country are trials dragged out indefinitely. The law is respected by the mass of its people and fictitious satisfactory on the whole, and that is as it should be.

HAVE YOU HEARD THESE?

Wife—who has caught her husband entertaining a penny on fortune telling machine)—Stop! So you're to have a beautiful and charming wife, are you? Not while I'm alive, Horace—not while I'm alive!

Husband—Yes, dear.

Patient—Doctor, how are my chances?

Doctor—Oh, pretty good, but I wouldn't start reading any continued stories.

Student—A physician who wont give out prescriptions.

Shoeless, he climbed the stairs, opened the door of the room, entered and closed it after him without being detected. Just as he was about to get into bed his wife, half-aroused from slumber, turned and sleepily said: "Is that you, Pido?"

The husband, telling the rest of the story, said: "For once in my life I had real presence of mind. I licked her hand."

First Lady—strike me then—I defy yer—strike me!

Second Lady—Right! I wouldn't flatter yer by altering the shape of yer face.

OTHER MEN'S THOUGHTS

Hollywood is still talking of the director who, wanting to get a bit of realistic anger acting from a phlegmatic actress handed her a notice of the ten per cent. salary cut just before he began to film the scene.—Life.

The late Tom. John Oliver was an immigrant boy who became premier of a Canadian province. There have been several other instances of a like nature since Confederation was established in 1867. Which is signal proof that Canada is a land of great opportunity for the earnest worker. There is room, better, in fact.—Montreal Gazette.

All this business of bathing contests can scarcely be camouflaged. It may make this or that pretension, but it is solemn reality nothing but a glorification of the feminine nether limb ungarnented and unadorned. Legs, long oppressed and unjustly prosecuted, have come into a real popularity and proved their merits. A shapely leg, per se, is not without artistic value and it is not inherently immoral. The trouble is that with the arrival of midsummer we turn into a nation of leg-watchers. And this manifestly is going too far.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

LOVE'S CHALLENGE

When days are words, and all is done,
And we together lie alone
In One last city, and the sun
Can be more serve us than a stone.

If then the riches that are signed
In shapes of perishable earth
Should know denial, and the mind
That counted them be nothing worth:

If love that orders patiently
Upon the lover's brain the one
True stature of the loved should be Less than the dust when all is done

Should love be forfeit, but a sound
Of days outlasted by a rhyme—
Then would eternity be found
Apostate in the court of time.

TRAGEDY STRIKES POLISH FAMILY

Warsaw, August 20.—Tragedy, which has been stalking the Royal family of Lubomirski, one of the oldest houses in Poland, has claimed two more victims. Prince Ladislav, one of the richest landowners in the Polish Republic, and his wife, Jean Countess Plater, died last night from alleged poisoning from game which they shot on an abutting trip near the Russian border.

The pair, who were thirty and twenty-six years old respectively, suffered through four weeks untold agony. When it was explained to the Prince that the end was near yesterday he asked that his wife be brought into the room, and after embracing her fell back dead. The Princess died two hours later.

CHATHAM TYPHOID SITUATION BAD

Chatham, Aug. 20.—The typhoid situation in Chatham today is serious but not as serious as some of the press despatches would indicate, according to Dr. T. L. McRitchie, the local medical officer of health.

One death from the disease has occurred, the 13-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Watson Beemer of this city having succumbed.

Mr. McRitchie says there are seven or eight cases in the city that might be described as very serious, and there are quite a few other patients in hospitals who are very ill, but the vast majority of the cases are of a mild type. The doctor believed that the total number in the city would not exceed 50.

Give the Operator the distant number
Belleville to Montreal and to Toronto, Ottawa, Quebec, Hamilton and many other Distant Points
The greatly increased speed in Long Distance telephoning is an event of very great importance. As the result of a long study by our Traffic Engineers operating methods have been speeded up to keep pace with scientific advances. A simplified method of handling Long Distance calls has been devised that makes a Long Distance call almost as rapid as a Local call.
But to be able to give you this "double-quick" service the operator must be told the distant number you wish to talk with. Without it she cannot make such a direct connection.
We will look up numbers for you, before you put in your call, but the really efficient way is to keep a directory of them, such as we offer to prospective customers.
PRIVATE DIRECTORY FOR YOU
This new "Double-Quick" service is available only when you can give the distant number.
We will provide a directory of distant numbers you frequently call, and keep it up-to-date for you.

Gay Festival At Banff For Scots

Scots folk in Canada and the United States can well look forward with keen interest to renewing acquaintance with many of the delights of the home country on the occasion of a Highland gathering and Festival of Scottish music to be held at Banff September 3 to 5 to which the Prince of Wales has given his patronage.

What more magnificent setting for a Highland gathering could be chosen than Banff with that vast amphitheatre of Rocky Mountains encircling the headlong waters of the Bow and Spray Rivers. Scottish lay readers who first penetrated these mountains a hundred years ago were awed by the ruggedness of the scene and impressed by the similarity to their own rugged highlands. The force of circumstance and the love of adventure have brought many Scots to this Western land and it is only natural that they should wish to take part again in the old-sports and traditional feats of manly prowess which will be a feature of the gathering, in addition to a wealth of Scottish music. The record history of this music goes back to the days of Columba whose mission, established in the sixth century in the Island of Iona, spread all over the south and west of Scotland.

Many of the finest exponents of Highland dancing in Western Canada have intimated their intention to take part in the gathering, and Banff, which is the tourist capital of the Rockies, will be a place with the tartans of Scotland. Brawny Highland boys will take part in tossing the caber, putting the ball, throwing the hammer, and other such sports.

Supplementing these features will be a series of concerts in the great ballroom at Banff Springs Hotel, for which several of the best known Scottish singers have been engaged including Campbell McInnes noted for the rendering of Border and Highland ballads; Madame Jessie Dawson, who under her maiden name of Ruth Thom attracted the attention of Mary Garden, the well-known prima donna. She is a beautiful interpretation of old Scottish songs; Davideen Thompson, the Winnipeg baritone, who sang with the Minneapolis Symphony and Ruth Mac-Kinnon, Winnipeg's fine contralto.

Gaelic stages will be represented by Norman Cameron, tenor and by a group of folk-song vocalists from the Hebrides who have come to make their home in Canada.

The programme of Scottish music has been drawn up in historical sequence commencing with the ballads of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, followed by songs of the periods of Mary Queen of Scots, Prince and Jacobites. In turn there will be songs by Burns, Sir Walter Scott, Lady Nairne, and Christopher North.

Hebridean music, recently made popular by Mrs. Kennedy Fraser will also be featured, and place will be found, too, for the folk-songs and dances of Highland tribes of India whose hunting grounds were from time immemorial the Heavenly Rockies. These Indians will be gathered in a picturesque encampment, and with their teepee and variegated costumes they will add another note of colour to the gathering.

By the courtesy of the Canadian minister of Militia each of the seventeen Highland Regiments in Canada will be represented by its best regimental piper in an endeavor to secure a beautiful trophy offered by E. W. Beatty, chairman and President of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company through whose interest and generosity the presentation of this unique Highland Gathering at Banff has been made possible.

HURON CAMPAIGN OPEN THIS WEEK

Liberal Leader And Others To Help Conservatives Send Speakers

Ottawa, August 22.—As a curtain raiser to the Conservative convention in Winnipeg on October 4, the Huron election on September 13 will signalize the return of political interest following a summer of national celebrations and receptions.

The campaign in North Huron, an federal seat of which was vacated by the death during the last session, of John W. King, opens in earnest this week when the Prime Minister and Hon. James Malcolm, Minister of Trade and Commerce, visit the Riding on Thursday, to speak at Wingham and Goderich. Prominent representatives of the Conservative party are likely to follow in the next week.

In the last three federal contests there were three-cornered fights, the late John King being returned by a narrow majority of 800.

Little Huron, King, who had previously represented the riding as a Progressive, had considerable Liberal support, but sailed in as a hyphenated Liberal. In the pending by-election the three candidates are: Dr. Isaac Gaggs; Conservative, George Spotton; Liberal, Archibald Hyslop; Progressive, R. Bricker. The election will be held on September 13, and the official nominations announced next week.

From 1867 down to and including 1917, the riding of North Huron, former ly South Huron, has been represented at different times four Liberals, three Conservatives and one Unionist, so, according to its record, the outcome of the by-election is only a matter of conjecture.

Little hope, however, may be held out by the Conservatives of victory in the cause of that group in Ontario is virtually extinct. Mr. Bricker, though, will be a factor in the by-election by attracting from the support to either of the other candidates.

VETERANS HONOR

little all that the world might be saved.

"It is not, perhaps, so necessary to freshen the minds of you men who have lived through it all," stated the Rev. Clarke, "but for those who these services are held."

Captain Wilson, one of his experiences in France and in England; how he had been privileged to be stationed at some of the best hospitals "over there," and how he had helped to cheer up the wounded men when they were brought in from the "front" with all of ware Hell wreaking on their bodies.

Perhaps the most impressive part of the whole ceremony was the floral tributes laid at the foot of the cross. T. Foster, and when the sad sweet notes of "The Last Post" floated out of the bugle of Bugler Dave Crew, every head was bowed in prayer.

Following were the names that graced the cross with flowers, of which there was a large display:

TAFT WOULD NOT SHOT WOMAN FOR SPENDING MONEY

electric chair unless their counsel, working at several wits' ends, could obtain another respite or stay of sentence.

With them will go Celestino Madeiros, convicted of another murder. His confession, which exculpated Sacco and Vanzetti, although disregarded, served to stay his execution pending their fight for life.

Enraged Ukranian Then Killed Her Husband And Suicided

Toronto, Aug. 22.—That Mrs. Madeiros had been spending money which he intended to use in bringing his wife and family over from the old Country was the tenor of notes scrawled in Russian which was pinned on the door of the room in which Samuel Royz yesterday shot and killed himself after murdering Stefan Medweds and wounding Medweds' wife and Leon Zatz, an aged Rumanian.

In the note the dead Royz charged Mrs. Medweds with misappropriating funds which he had entrusted to her if it is believed that Mrs. Medweds had invested funds for Royz and neighbors declare she opposed Royz's intentions of bringing his family from the Russian Ukrain to this country. Royz had lately placed $170 with the steamship company for passage money and it is asserted Mrs. Medweds had previously spent $70 of this for jewelry, etc.

Royz, like the Medweds couple, was a Ukrainian. He roomed in the same house. Late yesterday he rushed into the couple's room with a revolver in his hand and fired at Mrs. Medweds, slightly wounding her. He then fatally wounded her husband, who sought shelter in the home of Isaac Satis. Royz fired three shots into his body. Royz then went back to his room and shot himself.

Toronto, Aug. 22—Translated, the note left by Royz was: "Medweds has soaked me out of all my money. I would have sent $170 to my children but now I should return. I return it and she grabbed everything. I was a fool to trust her. She has not bought everything for her. She said to me that I am not the only fool she deceived. I said she will not have to discover me. I did her."

TODAYS MARKETS

MOTOR SHARES ACTIVE
New York, N.Y., Aug. 22.—Establishment of a record high levels by United States Steel Common at 128 3-4 and General Motors (old stock) at 235 overshadowed all other developments in today's stock market. Waves of profit taking and short selling swept over the market at intervals, giving it the appearance of irregularity, but offerings were well absorbed and the general trend was to higher levels. Leading of the United States for dividend and the delay in marketing of the new Ford car stimulated the demand for the motor shares. Further weakness cropped out, however, in the rubber trust issues, preferred sagging more than 3 points.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE
New York, Aug. 22.—Foreign exchanges steady demand rates in cents Great Britain 485 3-4, Canadian dollars 1-32 of one per cent discount.

Profit taking developed on the swells, but upturn was generally maintained until commission houses sin both sides. Opening 3-8c to 1 1-8c higher, sheet continued to show moderate advances. Corn was firmer with w heat and on local buying Starting 1-8c to 3-8c up, market subsequently showed further fractional gains. Oats were affected by other grains and provisions were firm in line with rise in hog values.

FOUND COUPLE DEAD

Alpine Climbers Discover Bodies While Rescuing Guide

Geneva, Aug. 22.—Four Alpinists, including one Englishman and an American, have met with tragic adventure in the Tyrolese Mountains.

The party, after leaving Grindelwald, Switzerland, encountered a storm and arrived safely at the Vittorio Veneto hut on the Italian frontier.

Here a search party headed pursuit to allow the party to continue their journey unmolested, stating that military manoeuvres were taking place and the frontier was closed. On the Alpinists' return after a descent of the glaciers in such weather one of the guards said he would conduct them by a less dangerous route. During the climb he fell into a precipice. The Alpinists, tying their ropes together, descended to the scene and found the Italian not seriously injured.

They also found the bodies of a young Austrian couple who disappeared from Innsbruck a month ago. The party notified the Austrian authorities.

PETTING THEIR WAY INTO CHEAP FAVOR

"I'll don't want to be a flat lire," sighs Peggy, "but if I refuse to pet and smoke and drink with the boys—"

And then Peggy tells us what happens to girls who want to "stay nice" in this year 1927.

DEAR ELSIE:

I'm a high school girl and I'm writing you in the hope that you can help me. Today I went to a bike with five boys, four girls and a chaperone. We accidentally got separated from the chaperone We had to hike several miles by ourselves, and as usual the boys (and I guess the girls were partly to blame) got to making personal remarks and even smoked and petted.

Now Elsie, I try to be a "good girl" and still pal with the boys. I refused to smoke but I will admit I have done it. I didn't do it just to be "nice appearing," you know, but just because I didn't feel like smoking in public, along a highway and making a fool of myself. If I smoked it must be in the privacy of my own room.

Well, I wouldn't "pet," either. The boys all left the other girls alone and I was left out. The one boy I particularly liked and wanted to like me chose another girl who would pet.

Do you think I was right in not doing it? I don't want to be a "flat tire," but what is a girl to do? Does he admire them or the other girls? Could I gain his admiration by doing it? Is it because she is more attractive? She is, but I can do lots of things she can't. I play tennis, swim and dance and do everything that boys usually like. The boys like me, but they treat me with a "sisterly feeling." They come to me when they are in trouble and ask me if I think they should do certain things, but somehow or other at a party, bike or entertainment I always take second place.

How can I encourage this one fellow? Isn't it nice to me and is always polite and gentlemanly with me, but, oh I wish he would show me's little attention. Is it wrong for me to wish this? I really do care a lot for him. I don't mean to be sentimental. I don't have any trouble with the "little boys." They all fall and fight for me, but the older ones don't.

But the question remains—if I pet, smoke, swear or sneak out nights to meet them, and everything, will the boys care more for my company? I confess I'm tempted to do it, Elsie. I pet every faith in your answers, and will try to abide by what you say.

PEGGY.

Yes, Peggy, dear, that's just about what happens to "nice girls" nowadays. And I know how it hurts. Nor am I shocked because you're tempted to take the easier, more exciting short cut to popularity. Every normal girl wants to be popular. Every normal girl is curious and thrilled at the thought of love, and longs to win the love of some particular boy. There's nothing wrong in that. But just because I do want you to win lasting popularity and affection I say:

STICK TO YOUR GUNS, PEGGY. KEEP UP YOUR FIGHT TO BE NICE, FOR IN THE LONG RUN THE NICE GIRL WINS THE GAME. You're living in a boys-girls world, with more freedom and opportunity than ever before—more freedom and opportunity than most of us know how to use wisely. And it's a world for boys and girls should want to do the things they have been forbidden to do for so long.

Petting is wonderful dynamite, and there's where it was a wrong thing—not an old one, for that matter—why did not long to see an explosion now and then? For you are not experimenters or explorers for a steady diet. And we don't give our loving affection to reckless, dangerous people or amusements. Safe happiness, quiet friendliness are the things we want to keep."

The "red hot baker" will enjoy a passing popularity which you would have dear. They may even fascinate you for for a while. We're all inquisitive about new experiences. But they'll never hold him as Nice Peggy will. For you are your nicest so long to the lasting things of life, little girl and when men seek wives and mothers for their babies they seek the girls they can respect and understand—girls whose hearts haven't been a public parking ground for every trifling vagabond.

So hold to your ideals, Peggy But remember as you do that "niceness" also carries its dangers. It's fatally easy for nice girls to grow sniffy and critical and self-righteous. And that's just as unlovely a vice as drinking and pecking. Keep to the merry middle ground of good fellowship. Be jolly and sympathetic and as charming as you can possibly make yourself. Set their hearts a-tingling BUT KEEP THEIR HANDS OFF! And here's to Real Romance, Peggy!

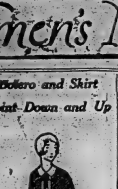

WHAT'S NEW
(From a Woman's Standpoint)

Sports effects influence even evening gowns.

Greater prominence than usual is afforded the beautiful type of evening dress in fall collections, and Lanvin, Drecoll, Patou, Jenny, Magnin, Agnes, Redfern and Lenief all endorse the period frock which has been so well liked.

For afternoon, small-figured velveta, velvet patterns on voiles or chiffons, silks with metal trimmings, and silks as delicate in color and as fragile as Venetian glass are most in favor, while for evening, black velvet seems foundation of collection; also mousseline de soie, crepe Romain and tulle embroidered in diamante are seen in profusion in black and all pale tints on models which plainly show the influence of Egypt and the Orient.

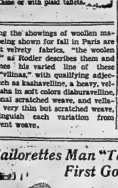

Bolero and Shirt Point Down and Up

Jerry really won't mind going back to school this year, for the business of standing up to recite becomes a pleasure when one wears such a charming frock. Indeed what could be smarter than a bolero front cut in two points that button down over a belt to meet the box-plait, and sleeves that button up over lower sleeves of contrasting material? In back the frock is one piece, but in front the contrasting fabric makes the upper part over which the bolero hangs. Twill, wool or silk crepe, velveteen or cashmere for the frock combine smartly with crepe de Chine or with plaid taffeta.

Among the showings of woollen material being shown for fall in Paris are the soft velvety fabrics, "the woolen velvets," as Rodier describes them and he names his varied line of these weave "villmas," with qualifying adjectives such as kashavelline, a heavy, velvety kasha in soft colors diabuvelline, a diagonal scratched weave, and velldrap, a very thin but scratched weave, to distinguish each variation from the parent weave.

Sailorettes Man "Tampa", First Government Motorship

CAPT. (PRO-TEM.) SYLVIA LERCHER, LEFT, AT THE WHEEL, AND HER 1ST MATE, SYLVIA HOWTON

Easy to Run as Auto and Saves U. S. Money.

Old tars who have been navigating the seven seas, grasped with amazement in New York the other day when the "Tampa," first of the government's new converted motorships, manoeuvered in the harbor under a crew of college girls.

The merry sailorettes were from Hunter College and their mate is from captain and chief engineer down, were turned over to them by Capt. P. F. Taylor of the Tampa, just to show how easily the big ship operates.

"You can put only one man on the Tampa as easily as an automobile," said Capt. Taylor, "but she is a big money saver. Our standard crew is 36 men, but we can run with 32. A steamship of the same size would take 45 to 50 men. It costs us $240 a day for fuel while at sea, while a steamship of the same size would cost $350 to $400. When we are in port we close down our main engine and run an auxiliary only. A steamship, however, has to keep up steam at all times to be prepared for an emergency. Due to our smaller crew, our wages are $121 daily while those on a steamer would be about $175 per day. We carry fuel to run 12,500 miles and don't have to buy kerosene for lighting. We can start anytime without having to get up steam."

Capt. Taylor was enthusiastic about the two double-acting Worthington Diesel engine which the government has installed in the Tampa. It is the largest engine—not subject to foreign royalties—designed and built by the Worthington Pump and Machinery Corporation, for the government.

"The engine is a marvel," he said. "I have sailed under sticks of steam, and I have never seen a ship that operates as easily as the Tampa. It is simplicity itself. She reverses wonderfully and answers her helm so quickly that she can stop herself very quickly. Her cooling system is so remarkable that we had to install heaters in the engine room, several hours' heat is wasted. As we have no boilers, we save boiler and lumber space."

Capt. Taylor said when the Tampa was run by Shipowners, Germany, on her maiden trip she was met by flotillas of tugs with sailors and experts to see the marvelous new engine whose fame had preceded the ship. The Tampa, it is said, will be the model for the American merchant marine and Shipowners are already redirecting the shipment of American crops and manufactures.

Advice to Girls
By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a woman of twenty-five I have been married twice. My first husband is dead. I have a child by him and two by my second husband.

I am very unhappy because he leaves me alone every night. I am nervous and disgusted. He makes me stay away from my first child—he is so inconsiderate.

He insists he is right, except he doesn't want me to go anywhere and leaves me alone with the two kids at night. He never takes me with him and is always talking about being out with some other girl.

What do you think I ought to do—stay with him or leave him?

BLUE EYES.

BLUE EYES: Children are, of course, a grave responsibility, and both parents should recognize them as such. The whole of the burden should not rest upon the mother. Most often it is inevitable that the mother must stay at home in the evening to see that no harm comes to her little ones. There is no reason why the father of the household should not spend all but one or two evenings with her and relieve her of this duty at least once a week.

I am sure that if you handled the problem intelligently and tactfully it could easily be adjusted. Don't nag your husband and insist that he stay at home. Reason with him. Tell him that you are willing for him to go out once or possibly twice a week, but that, in the same way, you should have a free evening now and then.

Then you point out that if he expects you to be a good wife and mother, he must not do anything that will cause you worry. Tell him that you both have the future of the children to think of and that he owes it to his family as well as you to cease his attentions to other women.

In the meantime, I want to urge you to give greater thought to your personal appearance. No man will long remain loyal to a ragged-edged wife at home will look for distraction outside the home.

CURSE OF LOVE
By Mildred Barlow

"How do you know he'll buy it?" asked "Slippery Sam."

She made an impatient gesture.

"He always has bought the odd stuff we took him. He's nuts on queer things—you remember he took those sort o'dolls, or something, in jade that you picked up? He'll take anything that's queer. He's got some heathen religion — I don't know what. I guess he's a little crazy — any man would be living all alone in that gloomy old house and never going out or seeing a soul. He gives me the creeps!"

"But there's nothing queer about that opal," protested "Slippery Sam," with spirit. "I ain't never seen anything so pretty — even if it does give me the shivers."

"That's just it!" she argued impatiently. "There can't be another one like it in the world. It's the most beautiful thing I ever laid eyes on, but there's something about it that scares me. Old Sanchez says it has that way, too. He'll want it right off for that crazy collection of his. I'll b-e you any money he will!"

"Well, go to it!" he said, with obvious relief. "And make it snappy, Fan, 'cause we've got to beat it quick."

At eight o'clock the following morning, Fanny, dressed with her usual taste and care, emerged from their lodging, the black opal safely stowed in her bag. Her first task after closing to left and right to assure herself that there was no salesman about, she walked quickly in the direction of the house of the recluse, Sanchez.

Directed from behind the courer things began to happen in the street she had just quitted.

CHAPTER 26
The Recluse

Sanchez, the old man to whom Fanny took the black opal, was as mysterious and remote as the house in which he lived; a house that was set far back in an untended garden and presented to the world a barred door, and shuttered windows that resembled closed eyelids in a flat, incurable face.

Sanchez neither went out, nor received visitors. He was a strange sort of person. Over his untidy white hair he wore a black skull-cap. His eyes were fierce and his nose as hooked as a hawk's beak. His mouth was hidden beneath a bushy, untidy white beard. His thin voice was given to ways to wear a species of Prince Albert, badly in need of pressing and repairs—were greasy, shiny and frayed bare with age.

For ten years Sanchez was supposed to be enormously wealthy. Collecting was his hobby, and he paid any price for the thing that struck his fancy. The big gloomy old house in which he lived with a single servant, a Hindu, as mysterious and inscrutable as the Orient itself, was filled with curious objects: some rare and priceless, some seemingly without any value except to the man who cherished them. There were exquisite vases from famous Chinese dynasties long dead in antiquity; rare jewels, parchments, or vases from the pagan days, revered by the dawn of Christianity on altars of sacrifice, and much more modern articles, many of them revealing rare beauty. Nothing, provided it was strange, or beautiful, or held some gruesome association, was too incongruous for the old man's collection.

Now that reason he was meat for thieves who wanted to get rid of their plunder. He bought without question and paid a good price for things that would either have been worthless to the usual "fence," or dangerous. Undoubtedly, he knew that he was purchasing stolen goods, but the fact apparently did not trouble him.

He received but one visitor in the big, shuttered house — a Professor Lind, an authority on archaeology, who came sometimes to consult him and to argue over a muted question. It was rythored that Sanchez (nobody really believed that that was his real name) had been a noted scientist in the days before his eccentricity made him a recluse.

Fanny, who had been to see him before, with grasping results, lifted the brass knocker on the barred door with confident fingers. He would not refuse to see her.

The Hindu servant received her and went to seek his master, leaving her alone in a dim, shuttered room at the foot of the staircase.

Fanny waited so long, grasping with tense fingers her handbag that contained the black opal, that the silence, the dimness, the mustiness of the house got on her nerves. She longed again to be in the small security of the street.

Finally, the servant returned, walking so solemnly that he seemed to materialize out of the air directly before her, and it was with difficulty that she repressed a scream.

She followed him up the stairs, down a long dark corridor, and into a room at the rear of the house. She remembered that room and shuddered. It had no windows and was lighted by an immense dome set in the ceiling—a curiously wrought dome that cast a soft glow like the lighting in a cath edral. There were cases of objects, both strange and priceless, ranged about the walls of the rooms.

Sanchez, unclasped in appearance to see she had seen him last as in a great carved chair behind an immense table littered with manuscripts, old and yellow and parchment-like. His thin hands hovered over them, touching them fondly. He looked at her in silence, making no effort at greeting.

Nervous and embarrassed she fumbled in her bag.

"I have brought you something, Mr. Sanchez—something I think you will like. My husband got it in—a business deal."

He held out his skinny hand, still silent. She slipped the black opal into its chamois bag and laid it in his palm. In that brief gesture, as she stood there, she could see its marvelous fire flame in the light from the great dome.

Some Helpful Hints For Busy Housewives

After polishing windows, moisten a clean rag with a very little glycerine and rub it over the pane. Windows polished in this way do not "steam" and will stay much longer. A thin coat of pure glycerine applied to both sides of the glass will also prevent frost from forming on it.

Best way to skin beets without bleeding—put them in cold water as soon as cooked; then draw the hand gently down each beet and the skins will come off easily. Leaves stems an inch long on beets and the tailor will not cook out.

When making pancakes, to keep them from sticking and to avoid smoke from greasing griddle, add (last) two tablespoonfuls of melted lard, or a tablespoonful of melted butter, to the batter; it will not affect the flavor and griddle will not have to be greased. A soapstone or aluminum griddle must never be greased. Instead of greasing an aluminum griddle, rub it with a tablespoon of salt tied up in a piece of cotton cloth. Be sure griddle is hot and entirely free of grease.

TO GIVE BACK RELICS TAKEN FROM SOLDIERS

Officer Hopes To Find German Owners Of Keepsakes

New York, Aug. 22.—A man of 52, whose diffident manner and youthful face belie his age and his attainments, will board the steamer New York on Wednesday to make a Mississippi, German many. With him will go a small wood en box and a large packing case.

The map, who is Lieut.-Col. George Crome Cook, R. C., U. S. A., possessor of a Conspicuous Service Cross for work during the World War, will, if asked, refer to the contents of the wood en box and the packing case as "junk," but he has cherished that junk enough to have catalogued every item of its 500 component parts.

Specifically, the small box contains such things as cars, epaulettes, citations, pay books, Iron Crosses, wound medals, etc., all belonging to German or Austrian troops who fought the Allies and picked up by Col. Cook during his service in France. The packing case is filled with Zeppelin parts, pieces of shell, helmets and larger trophies.

"Since 1917 I have looked at these souvenirs year after year," said Colonel Cook today, "and lately I have ceased to feel great pride in their possession My conscience has begun to hurt me. If I were saying continually, 'Who won the war?' So I came to the conclusion that they should be restored to the owners as keepsakes or mementoes. They don't belong to me."

Colonel Cook then outlined his plan. Once he has reached Germany he will buy an automobile. Then wherever possible he will visit the soldiers or airmen of Germany who lost the trophies.

He has the names and regiments of a good number of the German soldiers who were bereft of their epaulettes, medals, crosses and other insignia when captured, and he is quite sanguine of finding "Fritz" at home.

"I hope they won't take it amiss," he said, "for I'd hate to be thought of as an arrogant person. I want to help along, in this way, the understanding that is slowly growing up between the United States and Germany. I am sure that in such cases where the men are dead, their fathers, Mothers, wives and families will be glad to have these remembrances of their kin... I know if my son were killed in a war I would be glad to have his insignia, his rifle or his shoulder straps."

(Col. Cook, for example, will try to find Alfred Merten, of Gotha, Saxony. For in the small wooden box is an infantry cap and a shoulder strap which were taken from Merten by the French at Blaches in Ariels, July 9, 1916. Col. Cook wants to restore the cap and strap and learn Merten's version of the war.

Another item Col. Cook wants to give back is a wound decoration, a stamped medal, finished in silver, that was bestowed upon Wladislaus Jaglia of the Fifth Company, 463d. Prussian Infantry, for being wounded four times at the front. Jaglia was captured on September 30, 1918, at Montingy.

SIR HARRY WAS PROSTRATED AT NEWS OF DEATH

London, August 19 (C.P.)—Lady Lauder, wife of the world-famous comedian, died somewhat suddenly after an operation in a Glasgow nursing home Sir Harry, whose devotion to his wife was intense, was prostrated and was compelled to take to his bed. Their only child, Captain John Lauder, was killed when serving in France with the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders.

Lady Lauder had travelled all over the globe with her husband. With him she had been feted by kings and presidents, and through it all she remained one of the most kindly-hearted and unaffected of women.

Annie Callanor was a humble lass in Hamilton when Harry Lauder, the "hailin' loon" from the Arbroath spinning mill, became a miner and subsequently her husband. She worked in a flax mill as an early age, earning 4s. a week, and 4s was while she was attach ed to the Salvation Army that she met Harry Lauder.

They began their married life in a poor miner's cottage, until Harry, with a "soiree" reputation as a comedian behind him, resolved to try his luck on the concert platform.

While he travelled round she lived on in Hamilton on a wage of 20s. a week, on which she had to maintain herself and their boy John. And it was she who consoled him and sent him on afresh when he had been compelled to return in the pits as "quickit" comedian," which was his stage-life for a failure. Then he made his name. She was the inspiration of his love songs, and often helped to write his greatest successes.

It will be recalled that when Sir Harry Broadcast for the first time he told his hearers how his wife would be listening-in. And, before closing, he said: "Now listen here, sweetheart, I am coming north to Glasgow to-morrow night. Mind you are there to meet me."

Herbert Cole was shot to death while Big and Little Arkansas rivers, causing heavy damage, by flooding Kansas towns.

Some 4,200 houses were destroyed in Turkestan from Saturday's earthquake.

CANADIAN BOY HELPS HIMSELF TO RABBI'S CAR

Had Escaped From Prison —Was Once a Ball Player

Toronto, Aug. 20.—Advices received here tonight tell of the arrest in Richmond, Va., of Archie Hyatt, Chatham's 23-year-old "bad boy" bandit.

Hyatt is held by the Richmond authorities for the theft of a Packard sedan from Rabbi Calisch, who had just returned in the car from a honeymoon tour.

The machine vanished from the rabbi's garage on Monday night, and it said to have been found in Hyatt's possession the following evening.

Hyatt told the Richmond police that he was married four months ago at Niagara Falls to Lottie Quinlan, a Richmond girl. He also admitted the alias "Lyle Kirby," and that he was wanted by the Michigan state reformatory at Ionia, Mich., to complete a term of imprisonment for larceny which he interrupted by successfully scaling the prison wall a month after he was committed.

Hyatt professed to be quite a baseball player. He said that two years ago he was signed up by the Toronto International League team to play the outfield, His career, hidden with the Chatham team of the Kent County league, he said, had attracted the attention of big league scouts.

JOSIAH STAMP NEW DIRECTOR

Rose From a $4-a-Week Position To High Places

London, August 19 (C.P.)—Behind the announcement that Sir Josiah Stamp has been elected a director of the London, Midland and Scottish Hall way lies a story of the romantic rise of a boy clerk in a Government office, earning $4 a week, to one of the pinnacles in the business world. He will succeed Sir Guy Granet as chair man next October, while retaining his position of President of the Executive of the company.

Sir Josiah's appointment is all the more interesting from the fact that 18 months or so ago he was in no way connected with the railway. That in so short a space of time he should become not only the head of the L.M.S., but one of "Big Four" in the railway world is a tribute to his genius as an organizer and a statistician.

Sir Josiah, who is only 47 years of age, entered the civil Service in 1896 at the age of 15 1-2 as a boy clerk in the Inland Revenue Department.

Before he was 18 he obtained first place in the competitive examination for the second division clerkship, and was appointed to the Marine Department of the Board of Trade. He then earned the modest salary of £70 a year. Soon afterwards he was transferred to the Inland Revenue and at 18 was Assistant Surveyor of Taxes.

In 1916 his own department recognized his remarkable abilities by appointing him over the heads of a hundred other officials, First Class Surveyor of Taxes. Two years later he was made Assistant Secretary to the Board, an appointment he resigned in 1919 to become a director and secretary of Nobel Industries, Ltd.

Colleagues who have sat with him on various commissions, including the Tan ion Dewes Commission, spoke of him as "our encyclopaedia." He is a man with a passion for facts.

When a reporter spoke to him about his new appointment he said: "I cannot tell you what I have done. If there is anything worth telling, I must leave that to others. It is true that I have but in a new organization on the L.M.S., and it is now working smoothly."

GERMANY AIMING AT RESTORATION OF SEA POWERS

Winnipeg, Aug. 20.—Within ten years Germany will be a formidable competitor for supremacy in commerce and in sea power according to Fred W. Wile, journalistic expert on German affairs.

Mr. Wile, whose headquarters are at Washington, D. C., and Mrs. Wile are spending a few days in Winnipeg on their way home from a holiday trip to Jasper and other points west.

In 1905, Mr. Wile obtained an interview with an European monarch and in 1906 he went to Germany as resident correspondent for the London Daily Mail, the affiliated Northcliffe papers, the New York Times and the Chicago Tribune.

During the war he conducted a column, "Germany Day by Day," for the Daily Mail, and also acted with the intelligence department of the American government.

His present view is that Germany will ask for a revision of the Dawes reparations plan in the near future on the ground that she will not be able to meet the huge payments falling due in 1930. Many economists he said, are of the opinion that some revision should be made.

Mr. Wile is deeply interested in Canada's new policy with regard to Imperial relationships. The United States, he said, was watching the "experiment closely." He took it that Canada considered the change permanent as it had obtained a fine legation building in Washington.

Discussing the Sacco-Vanzetti case, Mr. Wile declared the delay in settlement would likely lead to a demand for revision of the whole system of criminal justice in the United States. If this happened the case would be a blessing in disguise.

Mr. Wile is visiting historic spots in Manitoba and collecting informa tion on its story of development.

THIEVES HUNTED FOR HOUDINI'S SECRETS

New York, Aug. 20.—Thieves failed to secure secrets of Houdini, the magician, in a break-in at the Brooklyn home of his brother, Theodore Weiss Hardeen, the police have been told. Jewels and other valuables, said to $15,000 in liberty bonds were available to the thieves, Hardeen told police, but the fight of time and the Chinese torture cell equipment, valuable parts of the late magician's pet subterfuge, were hidden and were not found by the thieves.

The break reported yesterday, when Hardeen returned from a vaudeville tour. Hardeen said he thought the robbery occurred more than

GIANTS GRABBED BOTH ENDS OF A DOUBLEHEADER

Pirates Gained; Shaved Idle Chicago's Margin To Three Games

New York, August 22.— Amid a shower of old, battered straw hats and other useless articles the Giants grabbed both ends of a double-header from the Reds yesterday, thereby moving to within five and a half games of the league leading Cubs. The scores were 9 to 8, we won that one in the ninth—and 6 to 1.

Forty thousand wild-eyed customers watched the proceedings and about 20,- 000 second-hand hats were picked up on the field by Hennery Fanian's vassals after the game. Every time a customer felt that he must give vent to his emotions he took off his straw kelly and made a forward pass over the goo gloo.

Thousands of customers went home this afternoon, and were met by the little woman, who asked suspicion- ly "where's your straw hat," "if chuck- ed it away in the ninth inning," said the customer sheepishly, "after Leslie Mann hit that single. Lady, what a swat that was," and so on far into the night.

So many bareheaded persons left the field after the game that onlookers thought it was a physical culture congress breaking up. Even the fair customers fell into the spirit of the game and gayly tossed a few chapeaux on the lawn.

It was just that kind of an afternoon and staid, blase New orkers stood on tip toes and screeched like whoo' boys as the Giants, firing away with both barrels, batted upward in the first game, beat the Reds with a three run- rally in the ninth and then , waltzed home with the second encounter in their pocket.

Pittsburgh shaved another half-game off the Cubs' hold on first place today by trounding Brooklyn, 2 to 1, giving the Pirates a sweep of the two-con- test series. The idle Chicago club flew beside the pack by three games. The defeat relegated the Robins behind the Braves in seventh place.

Carmen Hill worked against Milt Daak in a pitcher's battle which was decided in the ninth when Wright's single drove in Cuyler, who was running for Barnhart after the latter had hit safely.

The first cast she made brought the beauty to the edge of the skiff and it was safely landed. Though Mrs. Wiser had lived always among the islands it was the first muskanonge she had ever caught.

YANKEES DROP THIRD IN ROW TO CLEVELAND

Detroit Second; Pushed Senators Further Into Third Place

Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 22.—Lo, the poor Yankees. They're in a terrible predicament. Yesterday afternoon they lost their third game in a row and only a mere matter of fourteen or fifteen games keeps them leading the American League.

Still, there's some consolation in the fact that they have reached their limit. At no time this season have they lost more than three straight and the belief prevails that the crisis has been passed.

Again the Indians went on the war path. They broke out spasmodically against the mild tyranny of George Pipgras and beat out a 7-4 victory on their discordant tom toms. They're not going any place in particular but they seem to take an impish delight in keeping the Yanks from clinching this thing called the pennant.

For one little moment the Yankees mutinied against their pranks and brushed aside a four-run deficit as though it were merely a swarm of gnats. They also brushed a couple of tons of Garland Buckeye out of the box with the same gesture of annoyance. Alas, it might have been better had they let Mr. Buckeye remain where he was.

He was succeeded by Willis Hudlin, who immediately changed the Yanks' minds about causing any trouble. That is, if they had any such notion. They realize that the world series is only a few weeks away and they evidently don't want to be all worn out for the occasion.

After the Yanks' little rally had tied the score in the fourth, Hudlin allowed them just two more hits, both singles, and not a New Yorker got as far as second base.

It was most distressing and wholly out of keeping with the Yanks' usual tactics of hit 'em hard and let the pitchers fall where they may. They're getting entirely too humane.

Mr. Pipgras' work was as spotty as a leopard skin. When he was good he was very, very good, but when he was bad he was well socked. The Indians bunched a pair of hits with a pair of passes in the first inning and the result was a pair of runs. They garrounded a double by Buckeye with two singles in the second and that gave them two more. Then Pipgras settled down and behaved himself for a while.

Detroit gained its eleventh successive victory and tightened its grip on second place by beating Washington, 11 to 4, in the third game of the series at Detroit yesterday. Haskell Billings pitched the full game for the Tigers and scored his second victory in the two starts he has made as a major leaguer. The Tigers hammered Horace Lisenbee freely. In the seventh inning they bunched five hits with a pass and two errors for five runs.

All Chicago Philadelphia hammered opposing pitchers and beat Chicago 9 to 6. Coddman's home run with two men on base in the first inning sent Jacobs to the showers and gave the visitors a lead which was never overcome. Ward smashed out a home run for the Sox in the sixth with none on base.

The Browns took two games from the visiting Boston Red Sox at St. Louis, winning the first by 5 to 0 and the second 4 to 3.

TORONTO LOST BOTH PITCHING DUELS TO BEARS

New York August 21.—The Toronto Leafs dropped both ends of a double-header to the Bears at Newark yesterday. The Bears won the first, 1 to 0, and the second 2 to1. Pitchers' battles featured both games. Conan's double followed by Conroy's ripe in the eighth settled the initial encounter. Two passes and a wild throw broke up the second game in the seventh inning. Lee rushing home with the winning run when Burke threw wide to play on an attempted double-play. Newark went into third place over the slipp[illegible] Orioles.

Jersey City, the club destined to operate in Montreal next season, also first two games today, the league-leading Buffalo Bisons scoring two shutouts, 4 to 0 and 1 to 0. The beaus marked the 15th and 16th shut-outs suffered by the Skeeters this season. And ran their consecutive scoreless innings to 23.

At Reading the Rochester Colts defeated the Keys 4 to 2, the Tribe hurlers holding the occupiers to four hits.

Syracuse took two games from the Orioles at Baltimore, winning the first 6 to 2 and the second 4 to 3. The Stars scored three runs in the last frames of the second game to overcome an Oriole lead.

Ottawa, August 22.—Merry, but apparently amateur ryggman some time Saturday night tried unsuccessfully to break into two safes in the freight offices of the New York Central Rail way Company here. All they succeeded in accomplishing was to wreck the combination on both safes Only a small amount of cash was in the safes.

This better Oil means a better Car

REPAIR men blame seventy-five per cent. of all car repairs on faulty lubrication. They could be nearer the truth if they blamed most repairs on the fact that the average car owner thinks "all oils are alike."

In action, oil forms a protective film over the vital parts of a motor. This film is constantly assailed by scorching, shriveling heat and tearing, grinding friction. Under this two-fold attack, ordinary oil-films break and burn—then comes big repair bills—all because a film of oil failed to master deadly heat and friction.

Because the whole problem of correct lubrication lies in a FILM of oil, Tide Water Technologists spent years studying not oils alone, but oil-FILMS. Finally they perfected in Veedol the oil that gives the "film of protection," THIN AS TISSUE, SMOOTH AS SILK, TOUGH AS STEEL—the oil that is tested to withstand heat 100 degrees hotter than the hottest friction spot in any motor.

Stop to-day at the orange and black Veedol sign. Have your crankcase drained and refilled with the correct oil for your particular make of car. ALWAYS ASK FOR VEEDOL BY NAME. If you drive a Ford, ask for Veedol Forsol.

FAIR ENTRIES BIGGER THAN IN ANY OTHER YEAR

Optimism Pervades Directors Meeting As Preparations Proceed

Ottawa, Aug. 22—The Ottawa Exhibition, which opens today, will be one of the most successful ever held. The entry list in all branches of the fair greatly exceeds those of previous years, while the various attractions are more than outstanding, judging according to reports presented at a busy meeting of the directors, presided over by Cecil Bethune, the president.

Optimism reigned at the meeting when business was disposed of, and the directors announced they were practically ready for the opening on Monday.

To Restrict Baseball

Permission was granted to the City Baseball League to hold the final play-off game between Metropolitans and Davidsons at Lansdowne Park, but stressing that in the future no athletic events will be allowed for six days before the exhibition. Controller McIlroy made a special plea for the baseball fans, and said that the painting of the grandstand would not be seriously interfered with.

The directors decided to remove the cotton signs at the west end of the grandstand grounds during the fair week, as requested by A. D'Amour, who said that the horses in the races were bothered by the signs. Some protest was made because the public on Bank street, by-pass might see the performance free, but A. E. Provost pointed out that it might have many to enter the grounds, as proved by the circus men's psychology of a free parade which afterwards attracted, many.

Protest About Roof

The Pontiac County Agricultural Society of Quyon, was granted the use of 50 chicken coops for its fair on September 7-8.

Various prominent main building exhibitors protested about the roof in the main building, but Controller McIlroy pointed out that there are only two leaks, and they will be repaired.

Worth and Hammond authorized the directors to deduct $1,000 from their fee and deposit it with immigration authorities as a bond for the return to the United States after the exhibition of six Chinese members of the Royal Pekinese Troupe.

Entries Are Large

Cecil Bethune announced that the entries in all departments of the fair were much larger than last year. He presented the figures, which showed that the poultry entries had increased particularly, while the stock entries were also in great number.

A committee was appointed to meet the Board of Control to take over the Jubilee Rink, which will be dismantled and used as lumber by the exhibition.

A. H. Pitsimmons announced that the southerly entrance to the grounds will be made for the fair, and that special traffic arrangements had been made.

Those at the meeting were John Bingham, Ald. W. Macdonald, Mayor J. P. Balharrie, A. E. Kelly, Dan E. Johnson, J. E. Paisley, manager and secretary; H. W. Cooper, treasurer; A. E. Provost, Controller McIlroy, Ald. D. A. Esdale, John W. Brand, John Caldwell, C. A. Beach, Ald. E. Lavoie, D. Hammond, A. G. Mackay, Warden R. G. Tripp, G. B. Rothwell, James McKee and A. H. Pitsimmons.

Six hundred soldiers are engaged in fighting fires which are sweeping the entire island of Corsica.

BLACKHEADS

Get two ounces of peroxine powder from your druggist. Sprinkle on a hot, wet cloth and rub the face briskly. Every blackhead will be dissolved. The one safe, sure and simple way to remove blackheads.

SULPHUR WILL CLEAR SKIN OVER NIGHT

Any breaking out of the skin, even fiery, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying a little Mentho-Sulphur, declares a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, the sulphur preparation begins at once to soothe irritated skin and heal eruptions such as rash, pimples and ring worm.

It seldom fails to remove the torment and disfigurement, and you do not have to wait for relief from embarrassment. Improvement quickly shows. Sufferers from skin troubles should obtain a small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.

CANADIAN NATIONAL

Highland Gathering in the Canadian Rockies

Reginald Pred, Jasper Commissioner, and Piper Alex. Stewart, of Sir George Simpson on ceremonial inspection of Hudson Bay Co's posts in the Rockies.

One of the first subjects concerning Canadian events of late that the Right Hon. Stanley Baldwin touched on after his arrival in Canada recently was the Canadian Folksong and Handicraft Festival held at the Chateau Frontenac last May. Premier Baldwin observed that though a Festival was invaluable in preserving and reviving the old-time customs, songs and handicrafts, indigenous to Canadian life and particularly the province of Quebec. On the basis of the musical success comes the announcement that a Scottish Gathering and Song Festival is about to take place at Banff, September 5 to 9. Scottish communities are looking forward with keen interest to the coming festival to which the Prince of Wales has given his patronage. Clubs in Canada, played a remarkable part in the development of the country, their names having groups ranging in history from engineering for trading and exploration parties—Selkirk men in Prairie Provinces, Thompson and many others in the past generation who first penetrated the mountains of the west. Herein these same traditions are unrivalled in the world for beauty, the Scottish Gathering and Festival will be held. Activities will centre around the Banff Springs Hotel that stands on the side of Sulphur mountain commanding a "million dollar" view of the Bow Valley.

The historic character of the Scot has been carried down from generation to generation in his music. The lyrics and ballads that are sung with never-tiring enthusiasm will be heard to advantage at the coming festival.

The singers themselves will be good Scots of no mean artistry. J. Campbell McInnes is a Highlander, now settled in Toronto, who is a recognized master in the interpretation of the old ballad. His rendering of "The Ewe Bucht at Howlet" is one of the great things in the history of song. Jessie Macleod, although her name is French by marriage, won her first success on the concert stage under her maiden name of Ruth Thees and hails originally from Northern Scotland. Dorothy Thomas first saw the light in Perth and now plays in the famous Grace Church Choir in Winnipeg, triumphant alsfo-of-every many Western Festivals. Her himself has shone as a star at such Festivals in the United States as well as in Canada. Ruth Matheson is a young contralto of Winnipeg who is winning recognition far outside her native city for her interpretation of Scottish songs. She comes of the stock of the Kildonan settlers. Norman Cameron is a Hebridean who sings the Gaelic with a Gaelic tenor—none sweeter. And with him, as pianist, will be the elegant Mrs. Sing with indescribable charm the songs of the Western Islands. The Canadian Pacific Celtic Male Voice Choir will lead choral renderings of well-known Scotch songs.

With the dances—the Highland Fling — the Sean Truibhas — the Sword Dance — the Reel — and with Marches goes the stirring the music of the bagpipes, not forgetting the pipe-band competitive events of piobroch, of which not so many are left now. It is to the Highland Regiments that we owe the chief impetus to keeping alive the stirring music, the sound of which stirs the blood as no other music can. By courtesy of the Canadian Minister of Militia each of the seventeen Highland Regiments in Canada will have the opportunity of being represented by its best regimental piper in an endeavor to gain a special trophy presented by E. W. Beatty, Chairman and President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, through whose interest and generosity the organization of this Highland Gathering at Banff has been made possible.

Scottish names and contests of all kinds will be a feature of the three-day Gathering.

THE THISTLE LAW

(From the Attica, Indiana, Ledger-Democrat)

Many farmers over the county have inquired about Canadian thistles and the law governing them.

The law prohibits the harboring of thistles over twelve inches high, but as a matter of fact, the law is generally better disobeyed than obeyed.

Many farmers over the country, however, have made a conscientious effort to rid their farms of the thistle but farmers that rent are generally less interested and does pay much attention to the farm or the landlord.

Every man must cut these thistles off his farm or be it subject to prosecution, for if any farmer knows of a patch that he knows is going to seed if not cut, the county agent, inspector of the owner and if no action is taken he can file affidavits.

If an affidavit is filed the trustee will see to it that the thistles are cut and the cost of the service will be added to the owner's taxes.

House committees are instructed to organize lectures and courses for the tenants to instruct them about gas warfare as a means of protection from various kinds of poison gases. They are further required to prepare in every house a special "gas protection room" with air tight doors and with a ventilating system through which the necessary air is to be supplied. CUT HEADS OFF STUDENTS FOR SEDITIOUS WAYS

A thrill of horror ran through the civilized world when on August 17, 1861, a number of students in the Chilean military college at San Lorenzo were executed on a charge of "seditious practices."

Spanish-American radicalism 47 years ago was strikingly similar to that exhibited today by the Calles government in Mexico. Jose Manuel Balmaceda became president of Chile in 1886 he was bitterly opposed by the aristocratic and clerical parties. Affairs became more and more tempestuous, until on January 7, 1891, actual revolution broke out.

Balmaceda assumed the functions of a dictator. Seven months were spent in manoeuvring, principally for bargain loans and arms. Balmaceda raided the bullion reserve in the "House of Money" at the Chilean treasury in Santiago; sent the silver abroad in a British man-of-war for the purchase of a cruiser and other war materials. The revolutionists obtained rifles from the United States. During the night of April 23, the rebel ship "Blanco Encalada," lying at anchor in the bay of Calders, was torpedoed and sunk with a loss of 300 lives. It was not until his outrage upon the college students, however, that the mass of Chilean population became hostile to Balmaceda. Three days later, Balmaceda was defeated with heavy losses at Concon. On August 28, at Placilla, the final struggle ended in victory for the rebels. Both the Balmaceda generals were killed; three days later the victor forces insurgents entered Santiago and assumed the government of the republic.

Balmaceda concealed himself in the Argentine legation. On the evening of September 18, the day on which his five-year term as president closed, he committed suicide by shooting himself. The death of Balmaceda finished all cause of contention in Chile, and was the closing act of the bloodiest struggle that country had ever witnessed. In the various battles more than 10,000 lives were lost, and the joint expenditures on war preparations exceeded £10,000,000 sterling.

Some men seem to be happy only when they have a grievance.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 23.—Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti have paid with their lives for the murder of which they were convicted six years ago. They died calmly shortly after midnight in the electric chair at Charlestown State Prison, protesting their innocence of the crime, affirming their belief in anarchy and refusing the beliefs of religion.

In his native tongue Sacco shouted: "Long live anarchy," as he sealed himself in the death chair. "I am an innocent man," were among the last words of Vanzetti.

Celestino Madeiros, sentenced for the murder of a Wrentham Bank clerk, preceded to the chair by a few minutes the two men whom he had attempted to save by confessing that he was present at the crime of which they were convicted and that neither Sacco nor Vanzetti was there.

Up to the hour set for the execution jaded cheer, the seven years legal struggle to save the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti, had ended abruptly when every court and legal recourse had been exhausted. defense attorneys still strove to find new means of gaining a respite for the condemned men. Four attorneys hastened by automobile to Williamstown to lay an appeal for a stay before a Justice of the United States Supreme Court turned back only when they heard by telephone that Madeiros and Sacco already had been executed and that the fate of Vanzetti was a matter of minutes. There, at last, defense counsel finally admitted defeat.

From his cell in the death house Madeiros, first of the three to be called, walked a few feet to the chair in the execution chamber without emotion. He entered the chamber at 12.-02.47 and at 12.09.35 he was dead. In a few moments later Sacco walked to the execution chamber. Pale but apparently strong and vigorous and quite alert and collected, he sat down and shouted, "Viva Lanarchia." He entered the chamber at 12.11.12 and was dead at 12.19.02. Vanzetti came shortly afterwards and after uttering a short speech in which he declared he was innocent, he sat down in the chair. He had entered at 12.20.36 and was dead at 12.36.55.

LESSON LEARNED FROM DISASTERS

Little Hope Remains Of Finding Any Of The Lost Fliers

San Francisco, Calif., Aug. 23.—While the search for the lost fliers in the "Dole" race from Golden Gate to Honolulu progressed with unflagging zeal though dying hope, efforts to derive profit from the flight's lessons were under way today, just one week after the start of the 2400 miles air marathon.

As forty naval vessels and a fleet of observation planes fruitlessly searched the greedy Pacific's waves for six men and a girl who made up the crews of the Golden Eagle, Miss Doran and Dallas Spirit, Lieut. B. Wyatt, of the Navy Air Corps who inspected the planes and compasses for the flight committee, declared that two indisputable lessons had been learned from the flight's disasters.

First, all planes to undertake extended over-water flight should have a thoroughly adequate test under full load.

Second, land planes should be prohibited from making extended over-water flights.

COLLEGE HEIGHT RATEPAYERS ARE SORE AT RAISE

Protest Meeting Over New Hydro Rates In Prince Of Wales' School

BIG ATTENDANCE

Second Boost in Six Months Annoys Residents Of Thurlow

At a meeting of the ratepayers of that portion of the Township of Thurlow adjoining the City of Belleville, called to study the situation of its residents who are hydro service users, in the face of a second rise in cost within six months, and this time not only a material rise in cost, but also the prospect of being called upon to sign a five year contract with the Hydro through the Township with unstated prices and unguarded costs and in connection with the form of a mortgage on the respective properties. There were two or three hydro retained ratepayers in attendance including also several of the Sidney ratepayers who find themselves in a similar situation. There was also present the Reeve and a number of Township men of Thurlow Council and the Clerk of the Township.

Mr. Ambrose Dafoe was called to act as chairman, Mr. Mowat as secretary.

Mr. O. H. Scott, manager of Belleville branch of the Hydro, spoke first giving his version of the agreement presented to the ratepayers for signature, but Mr. Scotts agreement did not seem to prove very convincing to the Hydro users present.

Mr. Hill, M.P.P., offered his assistance but claimed he knew little or nothing of the situation.

Mr. Harry Bronk, reeve of Sidney, advised those present to avoid signing the agreement presented by Mr. Ireland, M.P.P., for West Hastings, had phoned him that he would be glad to attend a meeting with the Sidney ratepayers during the coming week and would assist all possible and suggested waiting for this meeting.

Dr. C. B. Scantlebury read an Engish translation of the agreement whicff the people were asked to sign up with their own, "the public owned Hydro System in order to retain power or lighting service.

A resolution carried "that Thurlow users join with the Sidney users hold ing a joint meeting during the coming week at the Prince of Wales Community Hall at the school, at a date convenient to Mr. W. H. Ireland M.P.P. and Hill, M.P.P., Mr. R. J. Graham and others who are deeply interested in the matter.

An announcement will be made in the Press when this union meeting will be held at the Prince of Wales School, Thurlow.

CREDITORS MEET THIS AFTERNOON

Plenty Of Rumors Regarding Raynor But No New Developments

This afternoon the meeting of creditors for the R. H. Raynor Estate, which went into bankruptcy a short time ago, was held at Kingston. There was a large number of creditors from this city, Picton, and district, in attendance at this meeting.

The Intelligencer was today in receipt of a letter from the Canadian Department Stores Limited, of Picton, denying a rumor that they had removed merchandise from the Raynor home and also a communication from F. W. Moffat, Custodian, stating that he has investigated this story and that it is without foundation and is entirely false.

The story around Picton is that seizures are being made of automobiles in that district and an instance is related of where a young man who purchased a used car on weekly payments had it taken away even though he had completed payments on it. He paid the purchase price the second time plus ten dollars to the bailiff.

GRACE COOK WON BISHOP TROPHY

Swimming Contest For Girls Proved Popular At Country Club

Yesterday afternoon the Bay of Quinte Country Club saw a novel event in the form of a swimming contest for the girl members of the Club. Three beautiful trophies were donated by Bishop and consisted of silver cups. The first race was a dash from the Country Club dock to the raft. This included three very youthful swimmers, Nancy Hyman, Helen Mary Schuster and Phillippa Burrows. These three lovely swimmers took the raft quite easily. The other events were more and proved quite the extensive programme. Following the swim the girls were entertained to tea at the Club House, presented with prizes to the winners. There is a strong possibility that this swimming contest will be an annual event at the Club.

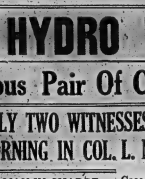

The Winners

The proud recipients of the trophies were Grace Cook, first, Ann Schuster second and Phillippa Burrows Marion Lace of Toronto, Miss Gwen Laiter assisted Mrs. Bishop.

ONLY TWO WITNESSES HEARD THIS MORNING IN COL. L. MARSH'S CASE

MAN IN CHARGE

F. M. Moffat

Case Again Laid Over For One Week—More Evidence

LIQUOR IN CAR

Provincial Police Gave Measurements And Pictures Of Road

"I couldn't say whether Colonel Marsh was drunk or not," stated Sergeant of Provincial Police Roy Clarke, in Police Court this morning, in the case of criminal negligence, the alleged cause of Colonel Marsh smashing into a car driven by the Rev. Mr. Glover, of Smithfield, and seriously injuring Mrs. Andrews, Mrs. Glover's mother-in-law, and Mrs. Glover herself, on the 11th of July last.

The Sergeant was the first of the two witnesses called this morning in the case. He testified that he had arrived at the scene of the accident about 8.15 p.m., and told how he had investigated it, drawing lines over the skid marks of the Marsh car, and also searching the Colonel's automobile. "I found three bottles of whiskey, two unopened and one nearly empty, in the car. Marsh was sitting on the side of his wrecked automobile and I did not try to question him as he seemed rather dazed."

"You did seem to be happy that Marsh was drunk, do you?" asked Crown Attorney Cartwright.

"No. I couldn't say whether Colonel Marsh was drunk or not," replied the sergeant.

Photographs were taken of the scene of the accident and such technical evidence was given by Sergeant Clarke Mr. McCormick, photographer, was the other witness called, and merely stated how and where had had taken the pictures. There are numerous witnesses yet to be called.

Serious Charge

This is a serious charge that is laid against Colonel Marsh, and if he is proven guilty, he will be liable to a term of imprisonment, as he is also liable have to face a civil action. The case was adjourned until next Tuesday Mr. Charles Payne is counsel for Col. Marsh.

THE BRITISH DEBT

An official report, just issued by the British Government shows that the national debt has increased about one hundred and fifty million dollars during the past year; that being the first instance of increase since 1920, and a most significant indication now regarding the unprecedented cost of thirty-odd billion dollars. That helps keep ringing in the British Parliament the protestations of Washington, with a loud response to hope, credit, and are contemplating the liquidation of taxes by three hundred millions. Great Britain shoulders that into account as additional burden the annual report of the minister of spending and quite sufficient to give much anxiety to the Chancellor of the Exchequer, who has succeeded bravely with the local problem, and tried to lighten the load, extra, especially in its pressure about; but where least it ought be felt. To this end Chancellor Churchill imposed additional duties upon wines, tobacco, beer, heavy motors, motor cycles, etc., without any possible increase of the income tax, which direct and indirect returns about ten per cent. from small incomes and on the large income payments, from thirty-to forty-six per cent. The new budget, in short, is an apposite illustration the nature of the great problem with which British statesmen are grappling. One hears much about the cost of armaments, and those connected with army, navy and air, and yet that the governmental expenses have been swollen beyond natural needs. As a matter of fact the figures have been reduced. But the taxpayer for which the British Government must stands responsible passes the figures in annual up to a formidable total. Four per cent. of the budget for "indebtedness" is assigned to pay. Great Britain owes the United States billions. The prolonged coal strike also contributed less of continental custom. And shipping business tended to aggravate the situation. Taken all in all, the country as a whole has come through some very rough waters; and the Government has still ahead of it a ponderous task.

However it leave, in one country everything which has a commercial and legitimate base pays for war debt reduction and the identification of bargaining terms it is Great Britain. Yet she has stuck strategically to the letter of her fiscal obligations and firmly resolved to shoulder the burden, and that stand for international economy and probity all round. The national income tax provides the Government with about forty per cent. of its funds. Attempts have been made to substitute on land assessments, and without any strangulation of investments. Of course the Labor line do not agree with this programme, and have a out-and-dried proposal to levy a surtax upon all incomes above five hundred pounds. They fail to see, or affect to ignore, the possibility of such drastic countermeasures, although it might occur to them to remind them that the general strain of business cannot improve by depressing individual initiative. The problem scheme is the answer. It cuts an artery for transfusion of blood to the very body it bleeds, and works over wounds till vitality.

On the favourable side of British finance stands the encouraging fact that there is no lack of large investment and the time of preparedness for greater ventures in the world market seems to be after the difficulties of the day with promise of a better time coming. It would be utterly erroneous to conclude that Great Britain has at last surrendered to the conquerors on Main Street. Nothing could be further from the truth. She has wealthiest many a fiscal storm, and will do so again. Not the least comfort of her credit is the well earned respect for stopped perseverance under the most adverse conditions. It is the sort of grit that spells new adventure and ultimate mastery. The British can attribute by the tempest that threaten to be broken.

YOUTH

There is a way modern youth has, when cautioned against vacation making of the powers of youth, of optimistically philosophizing: that "youth is only young once," and "Enjoy yourself while you can."

And old age ever has said, "If I was young again," "What noblness might I build here attached had I not missed youth's potentialities," "What a pity youth cannot survive the years."

Which philosophy, that of youth or of old age, is the more fallacious and most tragic—Can anything be more tragic than misguided youth?

True "some of the rarest flowers are latest in bloom" in vegetable life as well as in human life, but the early bloom is all important, which is to be admired. Old age is the frost which nips the late buds and blossoms in the garden of human existence. No age like youth can so well appreciate fame and success, but youth can only recognize fame in the garb of toil and. that garb is ever unpopular with youth.

In centuries past. it was not infrequent that men youth occupied the highest positions in th circles of literature, military tactics, drama, art, and society. There was nothing so amazing about precocity and, prodigies. How different from today when precocity is nothing short of the divine spark of genius and a world calloused to a youth of dissipation and indolence never dreams of a youth fired with active ambition.

When F. Scott Fitzgerald as a college youth of 19 won recognition as a writer of short stories a reading public did not vision midnight oil, years of study and writing or such a thing as ambition, but cried in one voice "The day of genius has not yet set." When here and there across this broad nation one or two of the millions of Canadian young men win fame and prominence a world-wise nation winks one eye and says its course to wagging about "pull," "luck" and "nerve."

Doting Canadian fathers and mothers caution aspiring off-spring against "wasting youth's hour of play and pleasure." Canadian educational methods train young men and women to begin the struggle during the third decade of their lives, and the youth of Canada take their parents and instructors at their word and engage in the job of making their fame and fortune until there is a total exhaustion of energies and allbis for further bounding on parental incomes.

There is some grounds for the concern belief that precocity is genius. It is genius for work, if the accepted dictionary definition of the word "genius" is a supreme native endowment.

OTHER MEN'S THOUGHTS

Great Britain has the fastest naval craft, the fastest motor car and is now building an airplane that will travel 200 miles an hour. Aren't these English slow?—Border Cities Star.

The solution of the agricultural problem will lie in devising a means to keep the man who is born a farmer contented with his lot. Propaganda touting the city lure out on the farm is just wasted money, because he won't "stay put."—Los Angeles Times.

Recently the Free Press, noting the claim of the Montreal Weekly Witness that there is already a Canadian flag, said that, therefore, the fact the Dominion Government would not fly over public buildings was not much of a flag. And it added: "Canadians want a real flag." We observe that the Toronto Globe has interpreted this remark as an attack upon the Union Jack. This gives the measure of the intelligence of the Globe since it became a sort of morning version of the Toronto Telegram—Manitoba Free Press.

LITTLE CITY

I found a little city,
Where everything was still,
A little quiet city,
Upon a grassy hill.
And some came to the city,
Who prayed, and some who wept,
But all the people living there
Were silent, for they slept.
The flowers in the city
Were pink and gold and blue;
Rosemary for remembrance,
And pansy buds, and rue.
And all the trees that grew there,
Were gallantly in leaf,
But, oh, the little city,
Was still, beyond belief.
Yet I, who found the city,
I was not wholly sad,
For all the peaceful beauty
Made something in me glad.
I knew that He who planned it,
Does all things for the best,
That in his care, the city
Knows blessed love and rest.

CANNOT FIND THE MISSING QUEEN

New York, Aug. 22.—Queen Hetep-Heres is still among the missing.

A report received from Dr. George A. Reisner, confirms the previous news dispatches, that a coffin identified as that of Queen Hetep-Heres, mother of Cheops, the Pharaoh "Pyramid" of Gizeh more than 2,000 years ago, has been opened by members of the Egyptian expedition, sponsored by Harvard University and the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, and found empty. Members of this scientific party have been seeking the body of the missing queen for more than two years.

Five youths held up a bank in Vinton, Iowa, and escaped with $25,000 in currency.

NEW YORK WOMAN EXPERT JUDGE

Alice Duffy First Independent Woman Pearl Expert In U. S.

Since pearls first adorned the royal diadems and regal robes of queens they have been the prized possession of every kind, and it is peculiarly fitting that the standard for one of the most famous women decided to become an expert in these rare gems. Alice O. Duffy was the first independent woman pearl expert in the United States and is probably the only fully qualified pearl experts in the world.

Miss Duffy holds a supreme and unique position in the field of expert jewelers. The foremost firms of New York and other clients go her workshop when rare pearls are in need of attention.

Twenty years ago Miss Duffy, after years spent under the guidance of a prominent New York jeweler, opened her own shop as a pearl expert and collector of rare and unusual jewelry. It was the year for Dr. Quick, but in spite o fthis, Miss Duffey's venture weathered the first stormy months, and by the end of the second year was securely established and successful.

For some time Miss Duffey held exhibitions at hotels in New York, as well as at seaside resorts during the season, but as the demand for her services grew she was forced to remain in New York to give her undivided attention to the yard gems which presented New Yorkers brought to her for restringing, matching and repairing.

"Pearls are quite like persons, you know," Miss Duffey says. "They are sensitive to illness, to climate and temperature as are their human wearers. But they, too, are thanked for services and may be immunized from worry by means of a solution, which I prepare myself. I have restored the life and lustre of countless rare gems and thus insured them against further harm.

I recall one unusual instance when a woman who had been ill for some time brought me an exquisite strand of pearls which had become oblong in shape after she had worn them but a short time. They soon responded to treatment and regained their former lustre and contour. And they are pearls that are ever alike, and if one is matched as perfectly as possible with another both gems are doubled in value. Only a matched string of pearls requires the keenest eye and the most delicate color sense, for pearls contain thinnermeable shades and color tones."

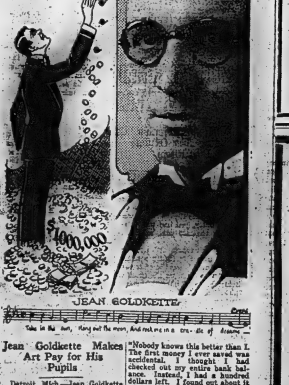

Miss Duffey's workshop is a real tree sure house, for during her years of work with precious gems she has collected many rare bits of antique jewelry, strings of amber, clear and mellow with the years; exquisite blended amber from Amsterdam and bracelets of woven gold.

She has a tiny box of carved ivory, beads worn by an emperor of ancient China, others from Italy and old Celtic bracelets from Miss Duffey's own Ireland—for she is of Irish descent.

Several Chicago tourists were hurt in a motor crash near London.

Musicians Put Themselves on Regular Business Basis

Jean Goldkette Makes Art Pay for His Pupils

Detroit, Mich.—Jean Goldkette has put art on a paying basis. Mr. Goldkette is generally the big boss man of music. A number of years ago he came to the United States and established the Detroit Conservatory of Music as a conservatory equal to any in the old world.

Then came the time when musicians had become some of the most prosperous trades people in the world. He hastened that day by providing training which allowed men and women from his schools to ask real money for their efforts. Even after they were able to demand and get good salaries, he discovered that they saved very little. Because of that he worked out a co-operative saving scheme for them.

"The artistic temperament is not a thrifty one," he admits. "Nobody knows this better than I. The first money I ever saved was accidental. I thought I had checked out my entire bank balance. Instead, I had a hundred dollars left. I found out about it when I needed the money for an instrument. I bought the instrument and saved it by thinking.

"I decided there was no reason on earth why musicians should be improvident vagabonds. It has been my chief ambition to make them less so. In our college, we've got a good basis of classical music. Then they learn popular music and jazz. This combination is a thing and does not lower their musical taste. Popular tunes such as "Alice in the Sun," "Song of the Nile," etc., cannot be considered trash. The popular musician of today is the classical musician of tomorrow."

Mr. Goldkette is president of eight financial institutions. Many of his musicians hold shares in numerous enterprises in Detroit.

He leads one of the orchestras at the Book-Cadillac Hotel in Detroit.

DONATED CUP.

Col. W. J. Cooper, of Ottawa, a former Belleville man, and a lover of lawn bowling, has presented a silver cup to the ladies of the Belleville Bowling Association and the competition for the capturing of the trophy rests with the ladies on the bowling green commencing.

CAPITOL THEATRE.

Patrons of the Capitol last evening were treated to one of the best screen comedies to date, "Hit or Miss," when Rosalind Keene La Plante is featured for the first three days of the week in "Sewers of Widow," the famous Broad way stage success. Last evening the large audience in attendance was kept in a continual state of laughter; many of the humorous events shared a house boat,—something a little out of the ordinary run. With such personages as Bryant Washburn, Frankie Darro, Walter Hiers, Tully Marshall and several others in the cast, little more need be said on the story. Harry's all good. At together the picture is a mighty good entertainment and should not be missed. A good professional vaudeville number and a comedy and the Capitol Symphony Orchestra round out a fine bill.

FRONTENAC GIRLS CITY CHAMPIONS

18-3 for the Frontenacs was the score in the Deacon's-Frontenac girls' softball game held on the Armouries park last night. This game was for the city championship and was called in the 7th innings on account of darkness with the score reversed back to the sixth innings, and a heavy downpour of rain ending the calling of the game. This will give the Frontenacs the championship. Possibly will turn up with the championship for the Deacons and Keller and Douglas for the Frontenacs. Calling and Wise umpired.

SOVIETS HAVE ODD TEACHING SYSTEM

It is supplemented by a portable printing machine outfit, medical and veterinary organization, a political educational department and a library.

CHARLIE PAYS DEAR FOR DOMESTIC PEACE

Los Angeles, Calif., Aug. 23.—Charlie Chaplin's price for domestic peace today provided a wealth of figures for conjecture and gossip of the movie-going and newspaper reading world. And that knew of the film jester and his marital difficulties. Sixty-two million in cash yesterday, in which the grasping comedian's young wife, Lita Grey Chaplin, won the permanent title as the matrimony decree of divorce probably cost the actor in excess of a million dollars.

Record figures placed orders Sept. 9 locomotives to two English firms.

WANTS REMOVAL OF WHITEFIELD'S DUST TO TOMBS

Ottawa, Ont., August 23 (C. P.)—Continued developments of the power resources of Canada and its influence on the birth and growth of new towns in various parts of the Dominion, is drawn to the attention in a striking manner in the following letter to the Ottawa Citizen:

"Water-power is one of Canada's greatest natural resources and is available in large quantities near practically all the centres of industry from coast to coast. It is now established from the experience of many that wherever water-power is developed industry and population inevitably follow. Further, it is the natural tendency for the large industries to locate at the power site, because the cost of power is low and the land for factory sites is cheaper, the cost of living for employes, taxes and other items are lessened and thereby the general costs of production are reduced.

New towns spring up wherever large water-powers are developed and older towns take on new life and growth—for instance the towns of Three Rivers, Grand Mere, Shawinigan Falls, Donnacona, and Cap de la Madeleine, Quebec, in the area supplied from the power development on the St. Maurice river; in the Eastern Townships of Quebec and northern New Brunswick over an area of 6,000 square miles has resulted in the locating there of 27 new industries, representing over $20,000,000 in factory equipment, and the employment of 6000 persons; on the Saguenay river, 200 miles north of Quebec, the development of 300,000 horse-power has led to the establishment of the new sealed town of Arvida which is expected to have a population of 10,000 in a few years; at Cedars Falls, the development of a site with all ultimate capacity of 50,000 horse-power is taking place and the new model town of Cedars Falls is already far advanced with hospitals, schools, convent and town hall. Other towns that have been created by water-power in conjunction with pulp resources are Chicoutimi, Kenogami and Clark City.

In the province of Ontario, in addition to the new municipalities and employment resulting from power industry developments at Niagara Falls and other sites, the whole industry of the province is carried on with the aid of water-power, although with the large production of gold, silver, nickel and copper would be impossible without power in conjunction, with forests have not only made possible a large pulp and paper industry, but is responsible for the creation of new communities such as Iroquois Falls, Smooth Rock Falls, Rock Falls, Espanola, Dryden and Sturgeon Falls and has also added largely to the industrial values of many other Ontario cities and towns.

In Manitoba Winnipeg, and districts were much of its business expansion to its low-cost power provided by the falls at Fort Alexander in British Columbia where water-power make heavy contribution to the prosperity of the new industrial centres that have been created by the pulp and paper industries at Powell river and Ocean Falls; whereas on the Atlantic coast a new community in Nova Scotia has come into being in connection with a pulp and paper enterprise at Sheet Harbour, and the development at Grand Falls on the St. John river in New Brunswick will have a beneficial effect on the city's population in that part of the latter province.

RUMORS CLOUD MOVES IN STAR'S DIVORCE SUIT

Reported Settlement Between Chaplin and Wife May Deaden Trial

Los Angeles, Calif., Aug. 20.—The cast had started to gather today for the climax of Charlie Chaplin's domestic tragedy, in which Lita Gray Chaplin's sensational divorce case plaint and the comedian's counter-suit programmed for trial next Monday are the main attractions.

Preparations for the trial scores went forward amid clouds of rumors and reports that a property settlement was being negotiated or being effected between the principals whereby trial settlement had been either made or received, the reports persisted that questions of custody and disposition of the two children, already conceded by the comedian to their mother, would be arranged out of court.

In that case, the trial probably would be a farce-drama, as the decree being granted by default, and "seven women," three of them prominent modern picture actresses, accused by Mrs Chaplin, and "a certain young film magnate," named by the actor, would never lose their anonymity in court

Which is Ontario's most popular vacation resort?

If that question were put to a vote the Kawartha Lakes would rank high among the outstanding favorites.

Here are glorious lakes and beautiful wooded shores. Here are the haunts of the fighting "muskies" and the sport giving speckled trout. Here the air is always cool and invigorating.

In the Kawartha Lakes are hundreds of attractive summer sites and with our low points have been located cottage colonies and well-kept hotels. Everything is here that a vacationist could desire, yet none of the gateways to this land of summer delight are more than three or four hours' distant from Toronto, via the Canadian National Railways.

For full information, etc., apply to any Canadian National Agent.

Oil Stocks Down

New York, N.Y., Aug. 23.—Pre-convenuous came into the stock market for a while today following early signs of sumption of the upward trend in which the previous week absorbed most of the dividend paying railroads reached their best prices of year. For a time the market stocks in Pittsburgh were influenced and declined simultaneously with the oil section ultimately born down by the balance of the list.

Weakness of oils was attributed to fear that the 10 cent cut in Pennsylvania grades announced by the Standard Oil Co. would lead to liquidation of Pan-American on rising over the retention of the purchase price of Standard Oil of Indiana. Sinclair B went down 4 5-8 points and lost part of the 10 point gain sustained in Houston Oil Atlantic Refining and General Asphalt.

BREAKING BARRIERS OF SELF-RESTRAINT

What's your price? What would it cost to buy your pride and self-respect and honesty?

Would you sell them for a nickel? "Of course, I wouldn't" you cry indignantly. "I wouldn't sell my self-respect for a million dollars. No amount could would."

Here's a girl who considers herself very sensible. Yet she's willing to sell her honor and her pride for even less than a nickel. Just one cheap sidewalking caress from any passing boy will buy her self-respect!

DEAR BLUE:

Some people think "necker" don't have any harm in them, 'cause I'm a "necker," and I'm in love.

Oh, I knew being a "necker" isn't a thing to be bragging about. I do it just because I really enjoy being kissed and petted. Necking is kind-a like dope—if you get the habit it's hard to break.

Now, the boy that I'm in love with is also in love with me, but he thinks I'm sweet and unsophisticated. He thinks he's the only one who kisses me. And when he makes his vows to me to be true, I also make the same vows, and be believe me. He believes my lies. And, while I have proof of his true-ness, he doesn't know that the very next night I'll be in the arms of just anyone.

The other night we were discussing "necking." I asked him what he thought of a "necker" and he thought there was nothing cheaper and more disgusting. He said if all girls were as sweet and good and true as me the world would be a lot different. It made me have a terribly guilty conscience. That's why I'm writing to you. What must I do. Must I tell him what I am and make him hate me? I love him so. NECKER.

Shall you tell him what you are? Do you know what you are, little girl? Just a cheat.

No, I'm not referring to the way you have cheated this fine, clean boy. I'm thinking of the way you are cheating yourself. Cheating yourself out of all the beautiful power and pleasure which life might hold for you.

Here you are—young, bright, pretty, with such a treasure in your hands as all the world might be your slave, if you would have it so.

What is that treasure?

The rare loveliness of your own womanhood, little sister. The mystery and charm and allure that surrounds every pure girl who keeps herself unsullied.

That lure is like the beauty of a walled garden whose fragrance drifts to the passerby, tempting him, thrilling him. He longs to find his way behind that wall and discover that lovely blooming place. He dreams of the fragrance that comes to him and in his heart he builds a little altar to beauty.

That is how the beauty of a pure girl calls to the world.

But if the walls were broken down and the garden lay open to every tramping vagabond, do you think that place would still hold its mystery or charm? Do you think anyone would treasure the memory of its spoiled loveliness, its tainted fragrance? You know they wouldn't.

You were a walled garden, dear, but you are letting the wall crumble bit by bit, and any stupid, vulgar loiterer who wishes may steal its beauty and smear filth over its beauty.

Now do you see why I have called you a cheat?

The word hurts, doesn't it? And so deeply the necking of kisses, slobbering kisses and leaving hands sickens you? And you wish, so desperately, that you had guarded your secret, treasure. It isn't too late, my dear. You can build it—wall again. It won't be easy. And you'll never be quite rid of the ugly scars those memories have left. But you can build it, and the old wonder and joy and pride will come back when you do.

I'll start today, if I were you. And I don't think I'd tell the boy a single thing about it. He'd never know you have had to learn. He hasn't really been deceived in you. Deep in your heart you are fine—only for a little while you blundered. Keep that blunder to yourself and start today to be the girl he thinks you are—the Princess of the Walled Garden.

Some Helpful Hints For Busy Housewives

Knots should always be avoided when sewing—in gathering out of the wearer. So just moisten the end of the darning cotton to prevent its continual slipping through. You will find a knot unnecessary.

It is a point to remember when preserving whole strawberries, that the addition of a tablespoon of cold water added to each pound of fruit improves the flavor and texture of the syrup. Also add half a pint of red gooseberry juice added to one pound of strawberries will make a firmer jam.

The Bolero Meets the Belt Half Way

BUTTERICK L. 1569

"I know," said Florence, "that I ought to get away in this new bolero frock, but I don't want the bolero front to get away from me." And so she buttoned it down smartly to the belt with a very new and interesting cross-over effect and repeated this band and button motif on the long sleeves, as you will see in the sketch above. In back the frock is one-piece, blousing slightly above the belt, while in front the pleated skirt is attached to a straight upper part of harmonizing color over which the bolero hangs. A silk crepe back with printed vest is smart, light weight wools combine well with silk crepes, and velvet or velveteen with metallic brocade.

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a young man of seventeen and keenly interested in a girl who attends the same school that I do. I have been out with her several times, and have had her at my home. I am a car, so both doors and are both quite popular, but in spite of all my attentions and court esies she seems only mildly interested. Yet, she seems to be very interesting and sociable while out with other fellows.

Can you suggest some plan whereby I can win her interest and admiration?

PUZZLED GREATLY.

PUZZLED GREATLY:

Apparently she is sufficiently interested to go out with you frequently, especially if you are real friends. And really, you are too young to worry about much else.

After all, there is nothing finer than a companionship that is based upon compatibility. Make the most of it. Perhaps, at some time, she will show the interest that you seek.

DEAR ANNIE:

I am in love with a young man who is two years my senior. Lately he has begun showing me my girl friend. Please tell me how I can win him. RUNNED TOOTH.

RUND-EYED TOOTH: I know of no recipe by which affection can be reinspired. Continue to be friends with him. Be as interesting as you know how. Perhaps, in time, he may find your companionship more agreeable than that of your friend.

WHAT'S NEW

(From a Woman's Standpoint)

The supple, all-leather toque assumes an important place in the color tion of Paris milliners.

At the recent wedding in London of Mrs. Quinton Dick and Lord Howe, the bride, who wore a pale pink crepe and lace, caused something of a sensation by arriving at the church with a Great Dane, whose coat-black coat was bedecked with ermine tails for fall and winter tire.

Glazed chintz, the flowered, popular, fabric for draperies and upholstering may be put to a new use for shower curtains of the glazed chintz are not only practical but colorful and extremely decorative in the bathroom and it is said the glazed chintz shower curtains shed water like a duck and dry more quickly than ordinary shower curtains, while beach parasols, made from old umbrellas covered with glazed chintz are another ingenious use for the master lals.

New York reports that navy blue, which has for seasons past been considered as a strictly sailor color, is now such fair from a style feature in the usual percentages of piece-dyed woolens sold for fall, is now taking on a much more important role, and is considered a fashion element, and this is particularly true of the new sheer wool crepes and wool voiles, which are being ordered in navy, either in the plain types, or in navy ground supporting a pattern of tiny checks or other motifs in silvery rayon.

CURSE OF LOVE

By Mildred Barbour

Sanches stared as it for an instant, snatched it closer, held it away from him, as if it burned him and he wished to drop it. Then, with a look of natural voice, uttered a sentence in strange tongue.

It sounded to the frightened Fanny like a curse. She shrank back in terror, for the old man was coming toward her. He was clutching the opal and speaking a foreign language. The light of sheer madness was in his eyes

She screamed, and turned to run. Then, at a sound, she saw the Hindu servant at the door.

"He's gone crazy!" she cried in pantomime. "Let me out of this place! Let me out! Let me out!"

She ran blindly down the dark corridor, half fell, the length of the stairs and reached the front door—only to find it locked and barred and the key gone. She pounded on it frantically, shrieking at the top of her lungs. But even her shrieks could not drown the horrible sounds that came from the horrible sounds that seemed to be coming nearer.

DESERTED!

About the time that Fanny was fleeing from the terrifying scene wrecked by the sight of the black opal, Stokes, the plain American police on the outskirts of town, was facing the maid who had just informed her that Mrs. Kendall had not returned home at all the previous night.

Norma was too honest to be facile at subterfuge, but pride gave her the strength and the inspiration to say to the astonished and curious servant.

"Oh, of course, I quite forgot—how stupid of me, Mr. Kendall went out of town last night to see a client and he said he might not return until this morning. Thank you, Anna, that is all."

She dismissed the girl and sauntered over to her dressing-table.

Then she turned and drew close, she sank into a chair, rested her elbows on the dressing-table top and, cupping her face in her hands, stared into the mirror.

But she didn't see her own reflection, her white face, her frightened blue eyes. She was concerned only with the ominous fact that Philip had not returned home after he had left her alone at the bungalow with the wounded Stokes.

Where was he? Where had he gone —and why?

There was a possibility of an accident, of course. The man who had shot Stokes was still at large. But Kendall must have reached town safely, for he had telephoned Dr. Merrivale. And, if there had been an accident, her father would have been notified hours ago.

She forced herself to go back over the events of the previous night—the scene at the bungalow when Philip had found her there with Sydney Stokes and had believed that they met by appointment—her own plea, after Stokes was shot, that Philip hurry away, lest he involve them all in a scandal!

But what had she said? She tried to recall her actual words, but the excitement of the night had driven them from her memory. Wasn't it possible that Philip was waiting for her to send for him, to tell him how serious Stoke's injury was? And yet, Philip was not a coward! He couldn't be hiding.

Undoubtedly, he was at his office, waiting for a word from her! She would ring him up and tell him the situation was saved. Dr. Merrivale had seen to that. There would be no scandal. Stokes's injury would be attributed to his actual cause—the encounter with a thief.

Norma went down to the library, where there was a private telephone that had no extensions in other parts of the house. She called her husband's office and waited until his secretary answered.

"Mr. Kendall is not in just now. Oh, it's Mrs. Kendall? Just a moment, Mrs. Kendall, and I'll give you the office manager. I think he has some instructions from Mr. Kendall."

Norma's heart went icy cold.

"Never mind troubling him," she managed to say lightly. "I only rang up to ask whether my husband would be home for lunch."

There was a brief silence at the other end of the wire. Then the girl said hesitantly, obviously puzzled:

"But—Mr. Kendall left for San Francisco this morning—about an hour ago, I believe."

Norma's pride didn't come to her rescue this time. She never remembered afterward what she said to the girl. It occurred to her later that the shock must have made her low consciousness temporarily, for, when she came to her senses, she still was sitting in her father's big chair by the library table and the receiver was clutched in her cold fingers. An indignant operator was asking her to give the number that she wanted rung.

Dazedly, Norma restored the receiver to its hook and huddled in the Philip had left her!

She couldn't talk in the cold, brutal fact, but it was the only one the less. His departure without a word meant just that. There could be no other interpretation.

He had left her—because of Sydney Stokes! She couldn't believe that! Her own sense of innocence was too secure, the misunderstanding too ridiculously unfortunate to have weight in real life, she told herself.

No, Philip had gone because he wanted to. He had seized on the incident of Sydney Stokes' as a legitimate excuse. He had probably been waiting all along for some such excuse. Stokes, then, had been right. Philip Kendall had married her because he was lonely for money, not because he loved her and wanted her for his wife.

Norma put her pretty dark head down on the arm of the leather chair and cried wildly.

Demand for Renzyme Steadily Increases

Users of this new stomach treatment enthusiastically recommend it to others.

Even though Renzyme is a drugless product and entirely different from the preparations found in a drug store, druggists are very enthusiastic in regard to it.

They recognize in it a natural treatment which cannot fail to afford relief and have found that their customers do not use it long before they discover absolutely the value of its merits.

J. C. McConnell, Druggist, of Neary's, Ont., writes: "The sale of Renzyme has increased rapidly and no stomach medicine has been got across the counter with so little argument. Our experience has been that satisfaction is all that will accept nothing else, as it seems to do the work."

"One of the most favourable points in selling it is the idea of no drugs which the public seems to take to, and sales are gradually increasing and it has been gratifying to see it go across with so very little effort."

You can obtain Renzyme from your druggist at $1.50 a bottle or it will be sent to you, postpaid, on receipt of price, if you mention this paper. The Renzyme Laboratories, Toronto, 2, Canada.

Americans Interested In Canadian Locomotives

Interest taken by American railway officials in the advance of Canadian locomotive construction is emphasized by the fact that the Canadian Pacific Railway Company have been asked to send their finest passenger engine to Baltimore to be placed on exhibition at the coming Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Centenary Exhibition and Pageant to be held September 24 to October 8. President Coolidge has intimated that he will be present at the opening day.

Canadian Pacific officials have sent word to Baltimore that they will be represented there by the latest type of their "2300" class passenger locomotives. The compact design of this engine is one of its striking features. In construction the weight was kept to a minimum even though an increase of 50 pounds per square inch was attained bringing the boiler pressure developed up to 250 pounds per square inch. This was accomplished by the use of a special nickel steel boiler plate the first of its kind used in boiler construction on the American continent.

The coming Baltimore Centenary Exhibition is expected to be the most complete outdoor and indoor exhibition of transportation ever collected, including the earliest and latest types of locomotive from the North American as well as the European Continents and the British Isles.

Terrible Backache.

Hamilton, Ont.—"After my baby was born I had terrible backache and headaches. I could not do my work and felt tired from the first minute I got up. But worst of all were the pains in my sides when I moved about. I had to sit or lie down for a while afterwards. I could keep my house in order, but many things had to go undone at the time, because of my ailments. I was told by a neighbor to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and am thankful I took her up. I was relieved before I had taken the first two bottles and have not had any trouble like it since."—Mrs. T. DOG RACING MAY OUST THE MOVIE IN GT. BRITAIN

Sweeps The Country As Most Popular Sport For Evenings

BIG PROFITS

Royalty Attends And Aristocratic Ladies Own "Stables" Of Racers

London, August 23—Greyhound racing, brought to England from Florida by Charles A. Munn, has taken the British Isles by storm. Within the year since it was first introduced at Manchester, this sport has become a rival of horse racing, motion pictures and the legitimate theatres.

The London Stadium at White City, built for the Olympic games of 1908, has been converted into a dog track. It is nothing unusual on Saturday nights to see 80,000 to 100,000 spectators there. In fact, the estimated attendance during the last twenty weeks shows 2,500,000 paid admissions at the White City alone. Manchester has proved so profitable that a rival syndicate which just bought Wembley Stadium for £1,250,000 will open shortly with dog races.

While there has been considerable antagonism to these sports, its detractors maintaining that the public will soon lose interest, it has been things to its favor—it is within the reach of all, as the entertainment is cheap, and it is provided in the evening hours.

The nobility has taken keenly to the sport and it is now the vogue among the noble women to own racing dogs' stables. Since such stables can be maintained at a comparatively small outlay, they have become popular. Among those owning stables are Lady Patricia Ward, Lady Hammond Greene, Lady Chesham, Lady Mountwyn Benson, Lady Wharton, Lady Maude Inness-Ker, Lady Lonsdale, Baroness and Miss Betty Baldwin, daughter of the Premier. Men, too, are going in for the sport. Lord Beaverbrook, Lord Stavordale, Marquises Blandford and Sir R. Woodman Burbidge are stable owners.

Patronized By Royalty

Members of another of the royalty are patronizing the tracks regularly as visitors. Thus far they have included the Prince of Wales, the Duke of York and the King of Spain. The King of Spain was so much interested that he offered a challenge cup which was won by an English dog named after the well-known British war horse, Man o' War. While the White City track is the only one in London at present, scores of others are being started all over Britain. Already tracks in Edinburgh, Belfast, Dublin, Glasgow, Cardiff, Hull, Birmingham, Sheffield, Liverpool, Brighton, Leeds and Bradford are under construction, with more building daily.

Since the beginning of the year, 30 greyhound companies have been formed. Four of these are public and the remaining 26 private. Their total capital is £3,645,000. Twelve have been organized this far this month. Nobody has been harmed or injured in the sport as yet, but the action of the Grey Hound Racing Association, which operates the White City and four other tracks, in appointing Lord Westmoreland, Lord Lonsdale and Major Humphrey De Trafford, a trio of well-known English sportsmen, to act in this capacity at these tracks, is regarded as the first step toward the appointment of a regular commission.

Save for the mechanical rabbit and the absence of jockeys, greyhound racing is not unlike horse racing. It provides the same thrills. There is a strange intermingling of staid and sound with thousands of shouting persons, who parked in a comparatively small space in stands which are alternately lit up by arc lights around the arena, and through the darkness as the lights are extinguished for the race, leaving a the only illuminated part the bright, white track serving as the race. As in horse racing, the start of each race is heralded by trumpeters, then start the bugles are blown, six men, dressed in white frocks, each leading a greyhound on a leash, emerge from the pad dock. The dogs are paraded around the track to the starting point, where they are put in separate compartments of a huge kennel.

The public, a life-like imitation operating on a lever from an electric "mind ray" safety boarded, watch them start at around the course. It moves slowly, swaying drunkenly at first, while the rail grew and mechanic flames like a subway express train.

As the quarry passes the kennels, all doors are flung open simultaneously. Six greyhounds spring to the cause. The dogs show great appreciation of grass at than a horse in their colorful clashes around the arena. The race over, the dogs are rushed back to their stalls, while the attendants recapture the greyhounds.

The same system of betting in vogue for English horse tracks is used in dog racing. And all the bets are placed with bookmakers, whose stands are surmounted by huge green umbrellas, behind by milling throngs of bettors, adding to the general picturesqueness.

DUTCH AIR LINER CRASHED IN ENG.

One Mechanic Killed And Seven Passengers Were Injured

London, August 2.— An airplane mechanic was killed and seven passengers injured just before 9 o'clock when a big two-engined Fokker biplane of the Royal Dutch Air lines, bound from Amsterdam and Rotterdam and Amsterdam, with thirteen passengers and a crew of two, crash and burned here at Kegt.

High winds which ripped the tail from the plane, it is believed, caused the accident. The pilot lost control and tried to land as gently as possible, but just as the ship touched the ground it crashed into a stump, killing the mechanic, a Dutchman named Brumlaan, instantly.

The injured passengers were taken to hospitals in London for treatment. None were seriously hurt. All praised the coolness of Pilot Vandyck, which it is said probably saved many lives. Vandyck, describing the accident, said: We were flying at a thousand feet, when I noticed the trembling of the ship's tail; then the ship started to dive. I thought we were going to spin. I managed to keep her nose up; then the rudder came off and we hit the ground, landing between two trees." Witnesses say the tail of the plane was caught fire when the ship struck, but the flames did not spread to the cabin.

KNEES WILL BE COVERED BY THE NEXT SNOWFALL

Paris Decrees Longer Skirts Longer Hair and More Hips

Paris, Aug. 23.—Knees are going into eclipse next winter. Waist-lines will be worn and hips have been reinstated.

This behind from the sanctum of the dressmakers, where winter fashions are being shown to buyers from foreign countries who are on hand to get effect on the white bread and pastry consumption of the world.

Short hair is threatened, if not actually doomed, by fashion-makers. Now that ruffles are back, with all they stand for, almost anything may happen in the world of style.

Not all the important dressmakers have shown their collections as yet. Some of the best are still to be heard from. But even if well-known houses continue to display, there have been sets and lifted them and placed many orders for clothes which are fitted to the knee and below.

A Progressive Party for LABOR DAY

LABOR DAY—the last summer holiday of the year—is more and more coming to be of local or community interests. It is the day for assembling for out of door festivities, for picnics, motor trips and for golf and tennis tournaments.

One of the problems of the average woman-hostess on a day like this is to provide victuals that without interfering with the activities of any member of the family.

In a certain suburban community last year a group of friends planned a progressive meal party. It quite simplified the work of each household, but proved to be a most enjoyable form of entertainment.

All of the families in the group went to one house for breakfast, to another for dinner, and to a third for supper. In the interludes between these each household "over" on two of the women during the dinner preparations. It was agreed beforehand that the meals should be very simple, in order that no one would be burdened with too much to do.

Perhaps the chief reason that the plan worked out so well was that everyone adhered to the agreement. The women met together and planned the meals, so that there would be sufficient variety. And while they were planning they decided, to have dishes which could be at least partly prepared the day before.

The Division of Labor Proved Highly Satisfactory

Mrs. B. who has two small children, reported that it was worth the extra effort of preparing dinner for fifteen to be able to dress herself and the children, and have a leisurely breakfast, instead of having the street to find breakfast all ready.

Mrs. A. who was responsible for the breakfast, didn't mind the early effort because she was there through for the day. And so on each seemed very well satisfied with her share of the burning.

POWER PROJECTS FOR DISCUSSION

Premiers Of Ontario And Quebec To Talk On Developments

Ottawa, August 22.—Advantages probably will be taken of the presence of provincial prime ministers in Ottawa early in September for a discussion between Hon. Charles Dunning, Premier Taschereau and Premier Ferguson concerning the development of water-powers on interprovincial streams in which the Dominion Government is interested by reason of navigation rights.

The Prime Ministers of Ontario and Quebec will be in the federal Capital for a week or two attending the conference of provincial prime ministers and Dominion ministers. The premiers of Ontario and Quebec will hear what Mr. Dunning has to propose regarding the exploitation of such water powers as those on the Ottawa River at Carillon. When Parliament last session refused to renew the charter of the Montreal-Ottawa and Georgian Bay Canal Company the disposition of Mr. Dunning was to leave the matter in abeyance pending a round-table conference of the parties primarily concerned. The federal ministers of rail ways and justice contended that the navigation rights on the Ottawa River were paramount and Mr. Dunning held that, if the Dominion Department of Railways and Canals is constructing navigation works incidentally which the head of water, some advantage should accrue to the Federal Treasury.

Meanwhile the provinces have asserted their rights and jurisdiction over waterpowers has largely been enjoyed by them. The Dominion has been content to carry on with other problems and has apparently been fair within the jurisdiction of the Federal Government. Mr. Dunning's idea would be to develop the power and sell it equally to Ontario and Quebec. This may not appeal to the premiers, but they will not start shaking their fists at the Dominion until they hear what the Minister of Railways has to propose if they do not like his plan, they will probably take the matter to the Privy Council.

CANADA'S PRESS GAVE FAIR PLAY

Winnipeg, Aug. 23.—Speaking to the British Newspaper Society at luncheon tendered them in the Fort Garry Hotel today by the Winnipeg Press Club, Sir Henry Thornton, president of the Canadian National Railways, said that the high standard of quality and broadmindedness of the Canadian newspaper fraternity. "It has been my misfortune," stated Sir Henry, "to have occupied a degree or public attention since I came to Canada. On some things, naturally, the newspapers of Canada has not always seen eye to eye with me, but that I can say sincerely for the newspaper press of Canada, never have I been given any thing but fair and honest dealing by the newspaper of this country. I have had an opportunity to study the public press of a number of countries." It is my honest opinion that no country has a more discriminating, clearer, more honest press than the Dominion of Canada. Founded upon a solid base by men of wisdom, honor and spirit, the newspaper profession of Canada has been carried on today by men and women who are a credit to their profession and to the Dominion. Against whom the charge of infamy or scandal can be raised and who are worthy standards of public thought in this country. As long as Canada can recruit to its journalistic ranks men and women like these all that pertains to what is highest in the material life of this Dominion will be in safe hands."

Only one side of the road was dealt with this year and the filler applied as soon as possible, the aim being to interfere with traffic as little as possible.

PLENTY OF WORK

Kingston, Aug. 23.—The conditions at the employment bureau on Monday morning were exceptionally bright and the demand for workmen in practically all branches exceeded the supply of men available. Major Stroud, local superintendent, stated that conditions were at their peak and pointed out that the demand for laborers, freight handlers, plumbers and pipe fitters, steamers, painters, etc. was very heavy.

QUEEN'S MEN AT CONGRESS

Kingston, Aug. 23.—Professor Manley Baker, head of the department of geology at Queen's University, will leave on Wednesday to join the British Empire Congress of Mining and Metallurgy at Toronto. Professor Baker, head of Queen's mineralogy department, who is at present in the Red Lake district, will join the party at Sudbury and proceed across the continent.

An especially heavy grade of road tar was used. It had to be liquified by steam and applied at a high temperature. The heavy oil was somewhat of an experiment as it was used on two pieces on Saturday. The first this road. The department are well satisfied with the results and with the way the surface treatment work was handled.

Have You Piles

Then You Have Something to Learn

Thousands who have piles have not learned that quick and permanent relief can only be accomplished with internal treatment. Neither cutting nor any amount of treatment with ointments and suppositories will remove the cause.

Bad circulation causes piles. There is no operation required. According to the lower bowel and a weakening of the parts. Dr. J. S. Leonhardt found the remedy and called his prescription HEMROID. Dr. Leonhardt tried it in hundreds of cases with a wonderful record of success, such, a wonderful record that HEMROID is now sold by druggists everywhere under a rigid money-back guarantee.

Just send your name and address to "to have occupied a degree or public attention since I came to Canada. On some things, naturally, the newspapers of Canada has not always seen eye to eye with me, but that I can say sincerely for the newspaper press of Canada, never have I been given any thing but fair and honest dealing by the newspaper of this country. I have had an opportunity to study the public press of a number of countries." It is my honest opinion that no country has a more discriminating, clearer, more honest press than the Dominion of Canada. Founded upon a solid base by men of wisdom, honor and spirit, the newspaper profession of Canada has been carried on today by men and women who are a credit to their profession and to the Dominion. Against whom the charge of infamy or scandal can be raised and who are worthy standards of public thought in this country. As long as Canada can recruit to its journalistic ranks men and women like these all that pertains to what is highest in the material life of this Dominion will be in safe hands."

SWEDISH STUDENT BIKES OVER GLOBE

New York, Aug. 22.—A sturdy student of the University of Stockholm, Bertil Stahl, has reached New York on a journey around the world on a bicycle.

Stahl left Sweden in 1926 with two companions. One of them quit in Norway, and the other became homesick in the far East. Stahl said he turned back.

Stahl said he was arrested six times, interrogated by Abd-El-Krim, the Riffian Moroccan leader, and chased by the cavalry Army in China. The chief object of his trip, he said, is to get a first hand knowledge of the history and geography for his bachelor of arts degree.

BELLE THEATRE

"Getting Gertie's Garter," a new Metropolitan comedy-starring Marie Prevost, was written upon the idea that Charles Ray, the screen's favorite simple Miss Prevost, shall not get the garter until the concluding scene of the picture.

The first day's shooting actually brought forth the garter, made of precious metal and studded with gems. It's value was high and it took a rather old dress suit to get it into the shop. Miss Prevost was so enthusiastic about the garter that she took it home the first day and that evening displayed it to her guests, who voiced their opinion of its beauty and workmanship.

Next day she forgot to bring it to the studio and Charles Ray, who lives near the Prevost home in Beverly Hills Cal., was called up on the phone and directed to stop in at Marie's home and bring the garter to the studio. He did, and thereby reversed the script as he secured it on the first day's shooting of the comedy.

"Getting Gertie's Garter," now at the Belle Theatre, in the supporting cast are Harry Meyers, Phyllis Haad, William Orlamond, Sylvia Ashley, Franklin Pangborn, Fred Henderson and others. The picture was directed by E. Mason Hopper and is said to be packed with laughs.

CHICAGO SLUMPS ONCE AGAIN IN THE THIRD GAME

Phillies Go Down To Cardinals By Score Of 1-0

New York, August 2.—By winning their third straight victory over the league-leading Chicago club today at Boston, 8 to 2, the Braves cut down the margin of the Cubs over the second place Pittsburgh club to two and a half games. Two unearned runs in the eighth settled the issue for the Braves back, English and Webb made mighty Ked Farrell, Clark and Robertson followed with base-hits. Ec. Brown, of Boston, set a new National League record when he played in his 554th consecutive game.

The previous record of 533 games was held by Fred. Luderus, of Philadelphia and Philadelphia Chick Hafey's boor run into the bleachers gave Jess Haines the best of a Harling duel with Fred Ulrich, the St. Louis Cardinals defeating the Phillies by a score of 1 to 0. Ulrich gave up only four hits to Hafey was the only Cardinal to pa. Second base. The victory was Haines twentieth of the season.

TORONTO WINS FROM READING

Bisons Registered Fifth Victory—Colts Defeated Bears

Toronto August 22.—Hilling Harrison and Fallon hard it the first two innings, Toronto defeated Reading, 13 to 6, in the opening game of the series here today.

Jackson had four hits for the Leafs and drove in six runs. Alexander pulled out two home runs, one in the second inning with Burke on base, and the other in the eighth with Lee bases unoccupied. Faulkner pitched easily and always was master of the situation.

The Buffalo Bisons opened their long home stay registering their fifth straight victory, with the Baltimore Orioles as their victims, by a score of 12 to 5. Baltimore shattered a club record of holding the opposition scoreless for 32 innings and tallying four straight shut-out victories, when they manufactured a run in the first inning.

At Rochester, the Colts defeated the Newark Bears 7 to 2. Rob's Purnham, Newark hurler, started strong, but was pounded hard in the late innings. It was "Mordigo Dan" and the Tribe manager started in the box himself, hurling in the fifth inning for a pinch hitter. Mills finished the game and got credit for the victory.

ONLY TWENTY SETS OF PERFECT TEETH

Chicago, Ills., Aug. 23.—In all the United States there are only twenty sets of perfect natural teeth, Ernest E. Dalton of this city, declared in an address today before the National Dental Technicians.

"The estimate of twenty persons with perfect natural teeth is conservative," he said. "I myself have seen but one example of flawless teeth and that was in the mouth of a young girl.

"A visit to the dentist need no longer be dreaded, for a new technique, known as ackers, combined with a new gold which is almost as hard as steel and, at the same time resilient, is eliminating much of the pain connected with dentistry."

Although differing on the extent of the reduction, both France and England agree that forces on the Rhine should be cut down.

TWO FAST GAMES IN PROSPECT FOR FANS

On Wednesday evening at 6.30 pm the Old Armbrusters have, the "Cubs" face the Bardnet test they have had in the c career, when they match the Atlantic's, as everybody knows the Ontario's are a real smart ball club but the manager ment of the club promises to give them a real battle at any rate.

On Friday at 6.30 the Cubs have challenged the city league champions the "Proctenaer". So the two real fast games of ball are assured for the fans on Wednesday and Friday. Come early and get in the front row around the railing.

TOURISTS COULD NOT LEAVE U.S.

St. Albans, Vermont, Aug. 22.—More than 30 New York communists bound for Montreal were removed from special train here today by immigration officials when it was found they had no papers to prove their United States citizenship. Lack of such papers would prevent their re-entry to the United States from Canada.

Prince of Wales and Prince George spent the week-end in Victoria.

HUGE PILE OF OPIUM BURNED

Shanghai, Aug. 19.—While the burning of opium is not an unusual act in China, a recent destruction by fire of 240,000 ounces of the drug at Pecting constitutes probably the largest "opium smoke" in recent Chinese history.

Along with the opium were 8,418 ounces of morphia and other narcotics as well as 956 hypodermic syringes and needles. The burning was witnessed and approved by a number of government officials, both foreign and native.

Labels from many of the packages burned indicated that opium is being smuggled into China under the disguise of common drugs. The figures from the customs office for the first quarter of the year, however, show that the largest part of the opium captured was of native origin. Persian opium is on the decrease, while Indian opium import, or at least capture, is on a gradual increase.

KING PRESENTS FINE ANCIENT VOLUMES

Dublin, Aug. 23.—The King has presented to the governor of the Irish Free State 24 volumes from the Royal library at Windsor Castle, including the statutes passed by the old Irish parliament from the third year of Edward III till the union in 1800 under George III.

One of the last acts of Grattan's parliament was to give its order for the binding of these statutes. They were placed in the record office in Dublin in the Four Courts but were destroyed in 1922 when the building was blown up in the fight of the Free State with irregulars. Duplicate copies were at Windsor and these are the volumes now presented by the King. They will form part of the library of the President of the Executive Council.

DON CARRICK IS 3RD IN 1ST HALF

Eugene Homans Leading For U. S. Golf Championship

Minneapolis, August 23. — Eugene Homans, one of the last to finish the first 18 holes of the 36-hole qualifying round of the United States amateur golf championship over the Minikahda course here today, turned in a 71 to lead the field. He was one stroke in front of Phillip Findlay, youthful New Yorker, who in turn led Don Carrick of the Scarboro Club, Toronto, Canadian amateur champion, by one stroke, Carrick had a 36-35—71.

Findlay had a strange mixture of birdies and holes in one above par, five of each. His card:—

Out ..... 344 643 536—38—
In ..... 344 644 434—36—72

Carrick was three above par on the out nine, but came home in 35 including an eagle three on the 473 yard 14th. Three his second uphill shot was 6 feet and the pin.

The Canadian champions card:

Out ..... 454 544 443—38
In ..... 434 554 534—35—73

The Dominion youth was one above par on four holes; but the eagle at the 14th and a birdie 3 on the 347-yard 17th kept him within a stroke of a perfect score.

George Rotan, of Houston, Texas, record a pair of 77's for a 74 to tie for third place with Jimmy Johnston of Minneapolis.

Jimmy Johnston, of Minneapolis, set the pace today, with a 74, one stroke ahead of Bobby Jones, British open champion and four better than the former Hilledaler. George von Elm, who was all over the lot with his shots.

Convictions for criminal offences in Canada showed an increase of 10.83 per cent. during the year 1926 when compared with 1925, according to a survey just completed by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

In announcing the results of the survey, the bureau reported that the total number of convictions for the year ending September 30, 1926, was 187,361 as compared with 169,044 for 1925, an increase of 18,317.

YANKS LOSE OUT BY SCORE 9-4

Fourth Straight Loss For Hugmen—Shaute Held Them

Cleveland, Ohio, August 23.—Perhaps after all, the Yankees started reeling up for the world series a little too soon. They have had quite a holiday here, but it looks as though they'll have to go back to work again any day. The trouble is the Yanks had all the fun during the Yanks' little vacation from the serious business of winning a pennant.

Today the tribe beat the Yankees again. That set a couple of records. In the first place it stretched the New Yorkers losing streak to four straight a longer run of defeats than any they have suffered this season. In the second place it was the first time any one had made a clean sweep of a series against them, as only once before have they come out on the short end of any set of games.

Besides that it made Miller Huggins who has been resting comfortably on the team left Washington, start feeling seasin. The score of 9 to 4 was no laughing matter.

Here are some of the outstanding figures at the Canadian Olympic trials held in Toronto. The big cut at the TOP LEFT shows Cyril Coaffee, the Illinois A.C. of Chicago, winning the final of the hundred yard dash in 9 4-5 seconds. He won by four yards and two of the three watchers gave him 9 3-5 seconds, which equals the world's record. In the cut from LEFT TO RIGHT are shown Laurie Cohen of Winnipeg, the Manitoba sprint champion for the last four years, who finished a bang up third to Johnny Fitzpatrick, who is running next to him with his arms extended. Third from the LEFT is Buck Herter of Detroit, who, like Coaffee, is an expatriated Canadian. Coaffee, the winner, is on the extreme RIGHT. On the LEFT TOP is the Manitoba relay team which won the relay event. From LEFT TO RIGHT are Jimmie Bell, the Manitoba quarter mile champion, who won the quarter mile championship on Saturday, Brandt Little, who ran third in the half mile championship event and lost his title, Bill Brown and Bert Frankham. On the extreme RIGHT is Walter Robertson, the coach of the Manitoba contingent

SHELL PRODUCTS

ON land, water, and in the air, great progress has been made in motor transportation, and synonymous with this progress are SHELL PRODUCTS.

In the early days of the Great War, large quantities of T.N.T.—the most powerful high explosive—were manufactured by extracting the power properties from SHELL GASOLINE.

Today, these same powerful properties are retained in well balanced proportions in "AVIATION" and "SHELL" Gasoline.

Fill up your tank with "AVIATION"—the famous quality anti-knock Gasoline—you can't help noticing the difference.

NAVY READY TO ABANDON SEARCH FOR LOST AIRMEN IN THE PACIFIC

Only a Faint Glimmer Of Hope Remains For Rescue

Fifteen Additional Destroyers Ordered Out To Scour Seas

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 24.—A woman and four men—seven days lost at sea—two more days of search. Hope for the missing "Dole", race fliers, Miss Mildred Doran, John "Algy" Pellar, Lieut. V. R. Knope, Jack Frost and Gordon Scott, who left Oakland airport for Hawaii a week ago today, glimmered wanly on the seventh day of silence.

Chances were as faint for the recovery of Capt. William Erwin and A. H. Eichwald, who flew out of the airport Friday in search of their missing companions and were believed to have crashed into the sea after sending out a frantic S.O.S. on their radio, in face of discouraging reports from 42 submarine destroyers, aeroplane carriers and their searching crew, every flashing colorless, laconic "NIL NIL NIL" periodically by radio came word that fifteen additional destroyers and one light cruiser had been ordered to join the search with the idea of scrutinizing the uncovered sea area before the failing of "zero hour" tomorrow when the search will be abandoned by the navy.

MASON WANTS TO GET HIS SEWING MACHINE AGAIN

Just Married To "A Darn Fine Woman" And He Needs It

ROMANTIC STORY

Claims Daughters Took Away Furniture During The Wedding

When in married last night for the second time, Boyd Mason, Canniton, was supremely happy to say the least. With a fine new home to rent by correspondence to Detroit and having her come over to get him, he was look ing at the world through rose-colored spectacles. But to his chagrin, when he returned to his former home he found that his two daughters, Cora and Lorna Mason, had had a sewing machine, two chairs and a washing machine removed from his home. At least he claims that they did and has lined the four men that were seen carrying the furniture down the road last night by T. Clayton, a friend of his, while he was under going the process of being "hitched up".

Mason frankly admitted that the Provincial Police and this morning came into Belleville and had a search warrant issued, but to date he found the missing articles in his brother's home, where he believes the two girls are staying.

He went to town these two girls of mine arrested for pilewery", stated, or rather shouted Mason to a representative of the Intelligencer today. "The girls were in the habit of using the machine, but it was mine and not theirs.

Romantic Episode

"I first met my new wife, Mary Grace Cook, by writing to her after a friend had told me about her. I first wrote to her a year ago and Saturday she came to Belleville and we were married that night at the home of J. S. McMullen's place. She is a darn fine woman," went on Royal, "and I sure am proud of her."

Royal Mason is forty-eight years of age and his wife is fifty. He was married in his youth but his first wife has been dead for about six years. Mason is a farmer and does not look his 48 years of age at all.

Furniture Recovered

Provincial Police Constable Wetherall recovered the furniture for Mason this afternoon. Besides the furniture mentioned the girls also carried away an old organ. Royal didn't want this back, however. Mason has decided not to prefer a charge of theft against his daughters.

PATIENT CREATES A SCARE ARMED WITH HARMONICA

About eight o'clock last night the Belleville General Hospital staff was considerably alarmed to learn that a patient, one William Brown, had a gun and some cartridges and was going to shoot everybody that came within his line of vision. Naturally, the nurses' minds were hardly peaceful to think that a potential murderer was in their midst, and hurriedly telephoned for the police. Soon the stalwart blue form of the law arrived on the scene and courageously attacked the killer single handed, it was found that the gun was nothing more nor less than a harmless harmonica, or more commonly known as a mouth organ. The bullets were real enough, being of standard .32 calibre but what's the use of bullets with no gun?

The deadly missiles were taken away from the offender and he was sent back to the hospital from the stalwart blue form of the law arrived on the scene lets were taken to the Police Station.

W. H. ROBB LIKES PRINCE OF WALES

Mr. Wallace Havelock Robb, of this city who is now visiting at Victoria, B. C., was the guest of the Prince of Wales during His Royal Highness visit at that city recently.

Commenting to the newspapers on the Prince, Mr. Robb states:—

"In the quiet of his own private rooms the Prince of Wales impresses one as a man of very sincere and deep character, a side of his personality of which the public does not see much. He appeared to me to have vast mental resources, and he strikes one as physically in the pink of condition."

"His royal highness is a better observer of men than I am of birds," said the poet after the meeting. He looked at one with keen interest and is a charming and attentive listener. He chats and laughs freely."

TRACED BOND STOLEN IN FAMOUS BANK ROBBERY FIVE YEARS AGO

Evidence That Forsythe Planned Jobs At Stouffville And Mt. Forest

$115,000 STOLEN

Some Securities Turned Up In Toronto Broker's Office Recently

TORONTO, Aug. 24.—Officers of the Criminal Investigation Department, Ontario Provincial Police, this morning began work on a search for Dominion Government bonds stolen from banks at Stouffville and Mount Forest by safecrackers five years ago. Trace has actually been obtained of one bond through the police investigation of the crime wave in the Benton district, and recovery of other stolen bonds is expected to follow if the search which was started today.

Some of the bonds stolen from the Royal Bank of Mount Forest were recovered in the possession of one Floyd Austin, who was arrested by Pinkerton detectives in the Pennsylvania Railway Station in New York. This man was brought back to Guelph and tried on the charge of robbing the bank, but he was acquitted after he had tried an alibi. The bonds, he claimed, had been given to him by another man.

Bids Is South

After the man was released from custody, Deputy Commissioner Cuddy of the Ontario Provincial Police was informed by the Pinkerton Agency that Austin had been seen by accomplices in the bank robberies in Canada to whom he had written asking for funds to defray his defense, at the same time, threatening to "squeal" if the money was not forthcoming.

Since the killing of Daniel Forsythe by Alexander Hodge in his lonely farmhouse near Mount Forest, Provincial Police have learned that Floyd Austin and Daniel Forsythe served terms together in New York prison and that they were released just before the bank robberies in Stouffville and Mount Forest.

$115,000 Stolen

The robbers got about $115,000 in cash and bonds after robbing the bank safe and entering the safety deposit vaults rented by bank customers. Before entering the bank one of the robbers stood watch over old residents of Stouffville from the door to the bank and who afterward gave the alarm to the police.

About two weeks later the robbery took place at Mount Forest. And, while the amount stolen was not so large, the number of bonds belonging to the bank's customers were stolen. Austin was subsequently located in New York City with some of the stolen bonds in his possession, but at the time of his arrest was unknown being presented that he was not in Ontario on the day of the bank rob, and he was finally identified by residents of Mount Forest, however, as having been there a few days before the robbery.

One Bond Turns Up

One of the bonds stolen from Mount Forest belonged to Joseph Goodyear of Mount Forest, and, according to the police, turned up only a short time ago in a Toronto broker's office, reaching there from the Boston district. It was this clue that caused the Provincial Police to organize the search for other bonds.

SMALL RUN OF PINK SALMON THIS YEAR

VANCOUVER, B.C., Aug. 24.—Gill net fishing for "pink" salmon in all British Columbia waters north of Howe Sound may be stopped by the Dominion authorities at the end of this week for a period of two weeks or more. Run of pinks, it is reported, has been so small in some areas that fears are expressed that the future of the industry is threatened.

U. S. Has Geese On

JUNEAU, Alaska, Aug. 24.—Henry O'Malley, commissioner of United States Bureau of Fisheries mentioned yesterday he had recommended, that fall fishing for salmon between Sept. 14 and Oct. 14 be closed this year due to the small run of fish.

Daily Intelligencer
DAY OF QUINTE'S LEADING NEWSPAPER—BELLEVILLE

LEGS AND WHEELS

The daily journey into the pedestrian and the motorist still goes on. A Toronto driver has written to the press in satirical vein to point out that some of the street accidents to pedestrians are the result of the pedestrians' own folly or to say that, having all the rights of the road and some of the rights of the pedestrian as well, a human motorist... He has apparently considerable to...

...those who write about the accident to pedestrians and the motorist's responsibility in the matter, and to take the attitude that there are two methods of...

...and that by recommending the one they do all they can to keep it from the motorist and some of them do fool, and of course much fault to avoid having...

...Legislation is of consideration the motorist should be allowed to drive with a view to speed, but the chief point is that by which the cost has been raised so much as to be more on the short time the walker. The walker is doing something which he has been doing from infancy. Like his motoring companion sometimes he gets hurried, and his mind is not always alert. If he can step aside on the other hand, is doing something which he still a little unwilling. It is conscious of his car all the time. He does not go very fast—he can stop in two or less feet—but take him from the car and put him within in the street and he is likely to become as careless as the rest of mankind.

It would be that the pedestrian is the creature of habit. Whether he has been made for some thousands of years and is still safe in the fields and streets. But in the streets he is no longer safe. Though he has not yet learned the traffic he is not safe. Pedestrians still cross busy thoroughfares without thinking, or look the wrong way, or change their minds, or...

...Unfortunately they adopt the air of the Savage pedestrian. Motorists suppose and consider accurately in the face of danger.

The Toronto driver rather suggests that both motorists generally have set, and the motorist is the more to blame. He could come at once whether the man behind the hedge has a gun or not. Presumably they must submit to being run over without complaint. That is foolish. It is not too strong. There is room for reform on both sides. While dangerous driving should be severely prevented and punished, pedestrians should also be expected to exercise their wits. It is purely unfair, in every case, to attribute control over human body on two legs—than it is to lay the responsibility with a heavy motor car on four driving wheels. Neither walking nor driving should be done against the laws either of nature or of common humanity. Both drivers and walkers should have a little more consideration for the other fellow.

GOOD NEWS

Unless all reports from the Western Provinces are inaccurate—and there is no reason for believing them so—the Dominion Government has her entitled to a handsome reward for its attitude in the matter of the Canadian Pacific Railway. The Government has refused to grant any further assistance to the railway company unless it undertakes to build a line to the Pacific coast. The company has agreed to do so, and the Government has kept its word. The line is now complete, and the company has received the promised assistance. The Government has also refused to grant any further assistance to the railway company unless it undertakes to build a line to the Pacific coast. Doctor Lynch—The medicine will kill you but it's fear-ful cost.

The doctor entered the patient's room in the morning and, according to habit, read the chart first thing. He was a little surprised to read:

"Two a.m. Patient very restless. Nurse sleeping quietly."

A well-known official of the Telephone Company was rudely startled from his slumbers by the ringing of the telephone. After bruising his knee on a chair, he reached the 'phone.

"Hello!" he growled.

"Are you an official of the telephone company?" asked the voice.

"Yes, what can I do for you?"

"Tell me," said the voice, "how it feels to get out of bed at two o'clock to answer a wrong number."

MOTHER-WISH

If I could only follow
Little son, little son,
Your way by hill and hollow
Till your long road's done!
You have so many miles to go,
So many things to meet,
When I can never, never guide
Your careless feet.

Will you know true and kind,
The stranger girls you find,
When you journey from your mother
Where the world's roads wind?

But I can only strive to build you strong and wise,
Before your path leads far from me,
and childhood dies!

If I could only find you,
Baby-girl, baby-girl,
When colored world lights blind you
And world-dances whirl!
But you will only laugh to stand
And greet the careless hour,
When Love shall take your willing hand
And show the world in flower.
Will the man you love that day
Keep you safe and glad and fay,
When you journey from your mother
Down the old, new way?

But I can only strive to build you fair and true,
Before you pass too far to heed my love for you.

NEW POLICY NEEDED

Hon. Charles A. Dunning is in a position to appreciate the meaning of the Empire marketing board, of which he offered criticism at the dinner given to the visiting British press men. He was formerly manager of the Saskatchewan Co-operative Elevator Company, which had large trade relations with Liverpool. As its possible the board has much to teach, as also have Canadian producers in the matter of preparing their goods for the British markets. The Canadian government has undertaken to help standardize Canadian products so as to further trade in the British market.

Mr. Dunning's point was particularly made against the British manufacturer who prefers to continue making his goods in his own shop in Britain, to the neglect of establishing a branch in Canada. We have a lot of American branch factories, but not so many British. Why not? For one reason, the British preference makes it less desirable or profitable for the British manufacturer to make up his goods over here. The American manufacturer has to pay full duty, which truth to tell, he is able to pay in most lines and come in to compete with the Canadian manufacturer of Canada must face up on the issue of how far we are prepared to go in the effort to make it inviting for outside manufacturers to locate in Canada.

The trade returns for the first four months of the current fiscal year, April to July inclusive, confirm the tendency to which reference has been made in the Spectator. For these four months the favorable balance has fallen to $17,000,000, plus $4,000,000, exports of foreign goods through Canada. On the very latest day on which the report was issued the Washington telling that for the twelve months ending with June 30, $1,000 Canadians entered the United States. In other words, while we were feeling satisfied that we were adding to the new Canadians, more than half that number, mainly natives, had left us in the same period for the United States. This is food for thought for Mr. Dunning, his leader, and the country generally. What is wanted most of all is a policy which will keep our own people at home, giving them the opportunity they require. It is well to have new citizens coming into the country, but what is the reason we cannot hold our own people?

TRYING TO FIND NESTS OF INSECTS

Williams Lake, B.C., Aug. 24.—Steps are being taken now to locate the egg beds of grasshoppers so that next spring they can receive a liberal supply of poison bait when the insects hatch out. Without these precautions a bad situation is predicted for the Chilcotin cattle country.

Fears of a grasshopper plague in the Peace River country were dispelled this year when heavy rains drowned millions of the insects shortly before hatching.

CORRIDOR IS NOT NECESSARY NOW

Ontario Has No Use Now For Strip Through Manitoba

Ottawa, August 24.—When Port Nelson was chosen by Hon. Frank Oliphant as the terminal of the Hudson Bay Railway, the promise of Ontario was given a five-mile right of way across Manitoba to Hudson Bay. The decision now arises, in view of the change of terminus from Port Nelson to Port Churchill, what becomes of Ontario's corridor? Fifteen years ago Ontario had the idea of building a railway from the vicinity of Cochrane to Port Nelson. The territory was surveyed for forty or fifty miles, and investigation showed that the scheme would be a very expensive one, with several new bridges spanning the great rivers which flow north yard into Hudson Bay.

It is now known on good authority that the province of Ontario is not so keen on the project, particularly in view of the fact that the Transcontinental and Northern Ontario Railway, owned by the people of the province, is being extended from Cochrane to James Bay. It is further explained that Ontario has running rights over the Hudson Bay Railway, if the Government chooses to charter them by building a branch line from the T. & N.O. to connect with the Hudson Bay line. The province of Ontario is not so much interested in the outlet to Hudson Bay as in the development and exploitation of the rich timber and mineral resources of the Albany River region.

PARTING GIFTS MADE TO MRS. N. SMITH

A very pleasant evening was spent at the home of Mrs. H. Smith, 200 Moira street, on Monday evening, when about 60 of her friends gathered to bid her voyage to Mrs. Smith, and her children on the eve of their departure for England and also to pre sent Mrs. Smith a parting gift as a slight token of the esteem in which they are held. During the first part of the evening music and dancing were indulged in and about 11.30 everyone repaired to the dining room where Mrs. J. Izzard read the following address:

Dear Mrs. Smith and family:—We, your friends and neighbors, are gather ed here tonight to bid you and your family God speed on your contemplated voyage to Merrie England. It is with the deepest regret we do so as you have been a kind friend and neighbor, ever ready to lend a helping hand and even go out of your way to do so if necessary, and we will surely miss you from our midst. As a slight token of our esteem for you we ask you to accept this cloth bag and trust it will help to remind you of your friends across the sea, and should you ever wish to return, remember there will always be a hearty welcome awaiting you. We trust you and yours will have health and happiness in your new home. Although it will not be a strange land to you, yet it will be different to Old Belleville and we sincerely hope you will have no cause to regret your leaving the land of the Maple. In the words of the old poet: the best of friends must part—so wishing you the very best of luck, we will again say, Part but—not Bon Voyage. While will be London again, will be Belleville's loss and on behalf of your friends—taken by surprise, replied in a few words.

Miss E. Meade

Miss B. Steele.

Mrs. Smith, though completely taken by surprise, replied in a few words, thanking all for their kindness and assuring them she would not forget them in her new home across the sea.

After the presentation, dainty refreshments were served, after which dancing was again indulged in until the wee sma' hours when everyone departed for their homes after again wishing Mrs. Smith the best of luck.

DEATHS & FUNERALS

MRS. AMY HORTON

Mrs. Amy Horton, widow of the late George Ashley, died at her home, 9 Evans Street, on Saturday, August 20th, in the 82nd year. She was a member of the family of the late Elijah Horton of Rawdon Township. Mr. and Mrs. Ashley moved to Belleville from Marmora, where Mr. Ashley died twenty-six years ago. Mrs. Ashley and Miss Fuller moved to Belleville fifteen years ago. Mrs. Ashley was eighty six years of age and enjoyed fairly good health until two weeks ago when she fell and the fall was indirectly the cause of her death.

The Rev. L. M. Sharpe preached the funeral service. His words of comfort were highly appreciated and were especially adapted, having known Mrs. Ashley and family for the last twenty years. He was assisted by Rev. J. E. McCutcheon of the Tabernacle Church, and Rev. W. H. Trouting of West Huntingdon. She is survived by one son, Aaron Ashley, West Huntingdon, and two daughters, Mrs. R. Vosper of Carmel, and Miss Julia of Belleville.

Many floral tributes were spread and were as follows:—Wreath, the family. Sheaves from, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph, Mr. and Mrs. Kingston, Geo. Horton and family and Mrs. Mary Horton. P. Horton and family, Mrs. Owen and Mrs. Harris, Mildred and Luella Jones, Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Clarke, Mrs. Bruce, Mr. and Mrs. R. Perpson, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. J. Wilson, Mrs. Phillips, Spray, Mr. and Mrs. Ashley, Mrs. Murray, Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Horton, Mrs. J. Fox.

MRS. JOHANNA BANNISTER

Mrs. Johanna Bannister, wife of Reuben Bannister, died at the Belleville General Hospital last evening in the age of 39 years.

The late Mrs. Bannister was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hill, of the Mohawk Reserve, and was a member of the Anglican Church.

Surviving, besides the sorrowing husband and parents are five children, Reuben, Clyde, Mary, Percy and Roy, also two brothers, John and William.

MRS E. J. ROGERS

The funeral of the late Mrs. E. J. Rogers, sister of Mrs. Hope McGinnis, of this city, took place from her late residence 99 Quinte Square, King, ston, Saturday afternoon, to Cataraqui Cemetery.

The large attendance at the funeral and the great number of floral tributes, were evidence of the great esteem in which the deceased was held.

A lady of cheerful and affectionate disposition, she will long be remembered by many.

The flowers were carried by six neph ews and two close friends, namely Dr. George Marsh, Albany, N.Y., Clyde Marsh, Oregon, Howell, Robert Miller, Wilson Marsh, of Cleveland, and Charles Litherland, Kingston, and David Rankin and Allan Rankin.

The service was conducted by Rev. J. H. Coleman, of St. Paul's, assisted by Rev. N. R. Burke. The pallbearers were three brothers, Tom, Charles and John Marsh, and Arthur Kages, Hope McGinnis and P. Letherland.

GIRLS WHO GIVE THEIR EARNINGS TO PARENTS

Suppose you were a working girl living at home.

And suppose you turned over your check to dad, who cashed it and gave you just what he wanted out of it.

What would you do?

That's what Malvina's wondering about today and she's telling us about it.

DEAR BLISE:

I am a girl of nineteen living at home and working downtown. I have worked since I was seventeen. I have a fairly good position and make a nice salary. But I keep to give most of my salary to my folks.

Of course, I have the nicest room in the house. Mother is good to me, too. My mending is attended to. My laundry is sent out and I don't have to bother about it. When I need something fresh I simply go to my dresser, knowing it will be there for me.

Then there are other advantages, too. I can bring friends in and mother is always sure to have a good dinner. I have a nice living room in which to entertain, but it seems a little silly to avail myself of that. Dad doesn't make much an awful lot—yet we get along fairly well before I worked.

I have always given my check to dad. He cashes it and dad mother gives me something out of it.—It never seems to be a fixed amount. I know mother and dad sacrificed much to give me a good education and buy me pretty things and that I owe them everything. But at the same time I wonder about this money question.

I spoke to mother about it and she seemed so terribly hurt I hesitate to mention it again. Will you please publish this so that other working girls can tell what they do. And what do you think about it, Blise?

MALVINA.

Ma's right to want things but on a sensible basis, Malvina. Whether families are rich or poor, their financial relationship should be conducted business-like. But I have a hunch that when you begin to figure your expense account you'll find that you are getting more than your money's worth. Do you think that you could get as much service and luxury in any other place for the same amount of money? I doubt it.

However, mother shouldn't be hurt, because you wish to regulate your affairs. And perhaps, if you approach the subject tactfully she'll see your point. Remember that you will always be her "baby" to her, no matter how old you are, and the thought of money dealings between you must hurt her cruelly. And yet, for your own pride and self-respect you must have those dealings.

So go to her and talk it over frankly. Tell her that you must learn how to manage your money against the days when you will be running your own house. She'll probably tell you that you won't do as well for yourself as she has done for you—and she'll be telling you the truth. You won't. But you must take some lessons in the hard school of experience if you've ever going to grow, and now's the time to start.

As for the amount you shall pay her, that depends on your resources and on hers. But play fair when you make up your budget. Remember that you can't finish on a million dollar salary on a mere $15 outlay and contributing enough to pay for bath room lockings. You can't have your cake and eat it both, honey. If you spend your earnings on clothes and entertainment and self living you can't carry it about in your pocket. So take your choice.

CURSE OF LOVE

CHAPTER 18
SUSPENSE

Norma retired to her room and bathed her eyes, swollen with weeping, in preparation for luncheon with her father. She knew that he would ask questions if she did not appear.

Fortunately, Collins always had a hearty appetite and most of his attention was focused on his food. He rarely noticed the appearance, or the mood, of those who sat at the table with him. He said merely: "Phillip not here yet?"

And Norma replied calmly: "He won't be here, Dad. He had to go to San Francisco on business this morning."

She was not yet ready to tell her father what she had learned over the phone an hour ago, for she could only construe Phillip's action as desertion. She knew her father's violent temper; also his lack of tact and diplomacy. It would be just like him to go charing up to San Francisco on the next train and try to locate his son-in-law with the aid of a detective.

Norma felt that her cup was too full. She couldn't bear that. If her husband had chosen to desert her, she must accept the fact. Her pride would permit no other course of conduct. In other circumstances—if Sydney Blake or revelations hadn't shaken her faith and trust in Phillip—all in Reno, Nevada—she might have acted differently. But she could interpret Kendall's disappearance only as proof that he could not be to rid of her and had seized on the first pretext to accomplish his purpose.

The afternoon dragged endlessly. She tried to read, but though her eyes followed the print, she could not have told any one the contents of a single paragraph. She attempted to sew, but she was stopping constantly to listen for the sound of the telephone, or the postman's ring at the front door.

Surely, surely, she thought, Phillip would write a brief, kind note to tell her what he intended doing. The inaction, the suspense almost drove her mad, and yet she sat quietly in the shade of the veranda, some times looking over the sunken garden, and now and then sewing on a square of silk that had been designed as a monogram.

She dined with her father and, when she had given him his coffee, waited until he had retired to his own quarters. Then she fled to her room and wept through the long, lonely hours of the night.

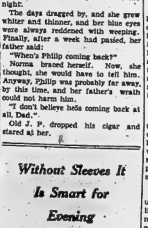

The days dragged by, and she grew whiter and thinner. Her eyes red rimmed were always reddened with weeping. Finally, after a week had passed, her father said:

"When's Phillip coming back?"

Norma braced herself. Now, she thought, she would have to tell him. Anyway, Phillip was probably far away, by this time, and her father's wrath could not harm him.

"I don't believe he's coming back at all, Dad."

Old J. P. dropped his cigar and stared at her.

Without Sleeves It Is Smart for Evening

Readers drawn to a close, and as the afternoons gradually grow shorter afternoon frocks grow more elaborate. While it is not so illogical when one considers how attractive these new gowns are. This graceful frock of velvet and lace is the most important for the first tea-dance of the season, for it is easy to see how delightfully the circular skirt will whirl about at one moves. And the sleevy flower, on the left shoulder will surely bring good luck at bridge parties. The circular skirt is cut in two pieces, shirred at the center front and attached at a low waistline to the body of the frock. Including the sash it is only 3¼ yds. of a 40-inch material are needed for size 36.

"What do you mean?" he demanded sharply.

"Phillip and I have—parted, Dad." He glared at her.

"What's he done?"

"Nothing," she answered, with forced calm. "It—our marriage was a mistake, Dad. We—we found it out in time."

"You mean that low—"

But she stopped him with a gesture that was almost regal.

"Please, Dad! It's no use blaming Phillip. I dare say it was my fault as much as his. We—we're just not going to live together—that's all."

It was too much—for his standards were far more simple and less modern. In his day, a young couple didn't part forever, because they failed to get on together at the start. They made the best of it and raised large families and, by the time they celebrated their silver wedding anniversary, they were devoted.

He stared at his daughter curiously. She even awed him a trifle with her dignity, her air of proud reserve.

"Stand his daughter. But he said gentle hand on her slim shoulders and said gruffly:

"Right, my girl. What you say goes. Your Dad's glad to have you with him, all his again."

He then proceeded to climb in his car, drive to his office, and instruct a dependable assistant to find out all about Phillip Kendall and his affairs.

Some Helpful Hints For Busy Housewives

To clean a slender vase, fasten a piece of an old sponge on a stick and push it down into the case; this will also be found useful for cleaning decanters and other bottles. Glass bottles and vases may also be cleaned by rinsing them out with powdered charcoal.

By reason of its nature, a blackleaf brush is an item very much in demand or cleaned, but it is all the better and lasts longer for such attention. Make a warm, soapy lather to which a little soda has been added. With a stiff stick stir the mixture and round in the water, giving it two or more waters as may be required. When quite clean scrub the stock of the brush and also the handle.

To remove paint from window panes, rub the spots with a strong solution of hot soda, or powdered whiting. Leave on till nearly dry; then rub off with woolen cloth. A discarded safety razor blade is also useful for cleaning putty and paint from windows without scratching the glass.

Cloths for cleaning windows without use of water can be made with a semi-liquid paste of benzine and calcined magnesia. The cloth which should be coarse linen or somethine free from lint, is dipped into this mixture and hung in the air and when nearly dry evaporated and it is free from odor. This cloth may be washed again and again and is a great convenience; when soiled, wash and redip.

All spots and stains can be removed much more easily before washing, as washing and boiling only serve to fire stains a firmer hold. Fruit, tea and coffee stains, are probably the most common; ther will usually disappear, when fresh, if the stained portion is placed lightly in embroidery hoops, or held taut over a basin or bowl and hot water poured from a height over and through it.

To remove cream stains—For delicate colors wash the article in alcohol, or ammonia and water; if colors are not delicate, cover spot with a paste of soap and cooking soda; let stand over night then wash out. Ink stains may also be removed by soaking them in paraffin, glycerine, or ammonia; then wash in hot water as usual, if material can not be washed, try alcohol or ether.

When milk is slightly scorched the burnt taste can be removed by putting the pan into cold water and adding a pinch of salt to the milk. First rinse in cold water the dish or pan in which milk is to be heated and it will not stick. To prevent milk boiling over, rub the edge of the saucepan with butter.

Sometimes the most reliable dressmakers we ever run on other articles in the wash tub. If the stained garments are put into cold water and brought to a boil it will often take away these marks. Repeat if necessary, but do not use soap.

SINCLAIR'S

Advice to Girls
By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

When crossing a crowded street as at night, is it proper for a girl to take the young man's arm, or should he escort her?

TROUBLED.

TROUBLED: It is never necessary at any time for a young man to take the arm of the girl he is escorting. When crossing a crowded street, the young man may offer the girl his arm.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a young girl in my teens. Last Summer I met a young man two years my senior and we took quite a fancy to each other.

I cannot understand why he should tell my friends of his affection for me and not tell me. Can I tell him I care for him or wait until he tells me?

WORRIED BLUE EYES.

WORRIED BLUE EYES: You must be patient. The young man will tell you of his affection in due time. Under no circumstances make any declaration of your own affections until he has told you of his.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a young man of twenty-one I have been married for two years, but my wife and I are separated. Some time ago we parted over a trivial matter.

Apparently she is contented to let matters rest as they are, for she is having company nearly every night I still love her very dearly and would like to do my best possible to try to see her when she is obviously satisfied with the situation as it is?

LONESOME.

LONESOME: By all means go to see her. It is impossible after so short an experience at marriage that she should have ceased to need you. It is more than likely by reinstating so much, she is attempting to find distraction.

You are both young and the first years of married life are not always smooth. They are years of adjustment and each must be patient and willing to compromise. By all means go to see her and ask her to help you pick up the threads again. And next time don't permit a "trivial matter" to separate you.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I a ma bachelor in my forties. I have a very devoted friend of whom I think a great deal, and she says she thinks a great deal of me.

I have three maiden sisters older than myself. When I go to see my friend my sisters sit up till I come home. Then they fuss and fight with me and say that I shall not marry her or anyone else. We are all in business together. My home is very unhappy and I fear they are turning my dear one against me.

What shall I do?

LONESOME.

LONESOME: Your sisters are being very unfair to you, my friend, and I don't think you should permit it any longer. They are making you miserable and ruining your home life by their constant bickering, and if allowed to continue in this manner they will most likely cause you to lose the love and respect of your friend.

You must realize that it is purely selfishness on their part, for they fear the influence of this wo___n over you and they are afraid lest you marry her and thereby upset their well-ordered routine. Women of their ages fight against the intrusion of a young woman and greed is above all things. As their younger brother you have probably been dominated and ruled by them all your life, and I think it is time that you were showing a little independence.

You must break away from these unnatural bonds now and once and for all declare your independence and right to live your own life. Talk to your sisters with frankness and firmness and tell them that they are no longer privileged to meddle in your affairs. Of course, you must explain, the selfishness of your sisters to your friend so she will understand the situation. If she returns the deep affection you have for her, why don't you marry her?

Meeting Of Creditors Appoints Moffat As Permanent Trustee

Kingston, Aug. 24.—Some nineteen to twenty creditors and legal representatives of creditors were present at 2.30 p.m. yesterday in the chambers of Judge LaMoe of Kingston in the old stone courthouse, when a permanent trustee and inspector were appointed to handle the estate of N. M. Raynor, Kingsdale dealer of Picton and Belleville, whose failure for nearly a quarter of a million dollars, and subsequent arrest have created a sensation.

Among those present were P. M. Moffat, who had acted as custodian and interim receiver, Arthur W. Roebuck, barrister, Toronto, representing Singer and Elliott, Toronto Accessories, Clifton and Foster, R. C. Todd, The Gabriel Manufacturing Company of Toronto, and Arthur Heller and Robert Fenwick of Belleville. J. P. Williams, against whom a charge has been preferred of conspiring with Raynor in one instance and A. P. Hyatt, a large creditor, were also present. W. O. Grady was there for the Commercial Finance Corporation of Toronto; H. A. Branscombe, solicitor of Toronto, representing certain clients, Oliver Chown of E. Chown and Sons, Kingston, Gordon Walmsley, barrister, of Picton, and Charles Payne of Belleville.

The first business of the meeting was the appointment of an official trustee. Official scrutineers were appointed in the person of R. E. Nurse of Picton and J. C. Reynolds of Kingston, and P. M. Moffat, interim trustee to scrutinize the personal and tally themselves of their bona fides.

Right at the commencement of proceedings, at the appointment of scrutineers of proxies prior to the election of a trustee, H. B. Branscombe, Toronto, representing, it was understood, certain insurance companies objected to the appointment of Charles Payne, solicitor of Belleville, as a scrutineer. The grounds for the objection were that Mr. Payne had a number of proxies. Arthur W. Roebuck, barrister, contested this objection, holding that Mr. Payne was fully entitled to act as a scrutineer, and he seemed on the verge of winning his point when Mr. Payne withdrew, "Under the circumstances I would not think of standing now," he stated, and scrutineers were appointed as above.

Those present were Charles Thompson of Bloomfield, B. Algo, Charles Holston, W. S. Benson, and Arnold Hyatt, all of Picton, Leo Riggs and Austin Whitter of Belleville, and W. O. Peederly, investigator for insurance companies and finance corporations.

P. M. Moffat, Trustee

The scrutineers returned to the meeting after fortyfive minutes and announced that there were 287 votes represented in the meeting. Those were distributed as follows: Gordon Walmsley, 43, Charles Payne, 21, A. Roebuck, 18, W. O. Grady, 21, A. P. Hyatt, 81, and J. P. Smythe 24. "That makes 236 votes out of 287 held by six men," said Chester H. Wood, official receiver, who was presiding. O. W. De C. O'Grady then moved that P. M. Moffat be appointed trustee and Charles Payne seconded the motion which was carried without any objection. Mr. W. De C. O'Grady is managing director of the Commercial Finance Corporation and Charles Payne a solicitor of Belleville.

The basis of voting was three to ten for the first $1,000 and one vote for the next $1,000 or fraction thereof. On motion of O. De C. O'Grady, seconded by Chas. Payne, P. M. Moffat Hudson and Company was appointed permanent trustee. P. M. Moffat, newly appointed trustee then outlined Raynor's assets as $54,544.27, to which was to be added the surrender value of a life insurance policy of $150,000.

Appointments of inspectors came next, these first proposed being Gordon Walmsley, Charles Payne and A. W. Roebuck, proposed by A. Hyatt seconded by B. Algar and W. H. Pedercley, J. P. Smythe and Charles Payne proposed by O. W. De C. O'Grady and seconded by A. R. Smith. H. B Branscombe said W. P. Pederley should be included.

A. Hyatt's motion was then voted upon and duly carried. Gordon Walmsley, Charles Payne and A. W. Roebuck being duly appointed as inspectors. The vote was 185 for and 85 against.

P. M. Moffatt said that there was already about $7,000 in hand cash available and advised conserving the Belleville garage, till it was ready to be sold in order that there might be a good will to be disposed of.

The meeting was then brok[illegible]

WHITE HOP PICKERS ARE IN DEMAND

Helme, B.C., Aug. 24.—While hop pickers are so much in demand in the Fraser Valley that extraordinary inducements are being offered to them by growers. One grower offers to provide rent free, two room apartments with built-in beds to accommodate four persons, and summer kitchens equipped with stove, oily water, store wood and fresh bedding—all of which are offered without charge. A children's nursery with competent nurse attendant to care for, smaller children during working hours is also provided while yard attendants do the real hard work for the pickers, such as sawing vines, emptying baskets and handling sacks. Another company offers the free use of an amusement hall in addition to a nursery.

DESCOS PROTEST FRONTENAC GAME

Want Contest Replayed As Seven Innings Were Not Completed

While the whole world waited, Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti were shocked to death in the electric chair at the Massachusetts state prison at Charlestown in explation of a crime committed seven years ago. The two men are shown in the centre, Vanzetti at the right. At the left is Mrs. Sacco with her youngest child and at the right she is shown leaving the prison with her two elder children after visiting her husband for the last time.

The "Descos" Girls Softball team are protesting the final game for the city championship as the full seven innings were not played. The letter of protest, sent to the vice-president of the league explains their position as follows:—

Aug. 23rd, 1927.

Mr. Charles Thompson,
Vice-President,
The Women's Softball Assoc. of Belleville,
Belleville, Ontario.

Dear Sir:—

The Descos Club Softball team herby protest the game played between the Frontenac and Descos teams on August 22nd on the Armoury's lawn, commencing at 6.30 p.m. This game was called by the umpire on account of darkness, before the 7th innings was completed.

We protest this game on Section 19 of Rules of Competition, sheet 5 of the Constitution Women's Softball Association of Belleville, which reads as follows: —

"No amendment or alteration shall be made to the Constitution and bylaws except at the annual meeting, only by two thirds vote of the members present. Notice of any proposed alteration o ramendment must be made to Secty. of the Association in writing at least ten days prior to the date of the annual meeting and each club shall be provided with a list of them at least one week prior to the annual meeting." The Descos Baseball team have received no notice of any change in the Constitution regarding section 19.

We might say that the Descos Club is not asking to have this game awarded to them, but feel that this is a very unsatisfactory way to finish the League, after it has had such a successful season and we would suggest a final playoff game of nine or seven innings. This game is to commence at 5 p.m. if necessary.

Enclosed please find $2.00 which is the protest fee according to section 6 rules of Competition, sheet 5, Constitution of Women's Softball Association of Belleville.

We are,
Yours truly,
S. J. Clubad,
Manager, Descos Club Softball Team

PILCHARD HAS COME AT LAST

Vancouver, B.C., Aug. 24. — The bashful pilchard, which stayed out in the deep sea so long this season that fishermen were wondering whether it would ever come within range of their nets, has at last put in its appearance off the west coast of Vancouver Island.

The non-appearance of the pilchard at the usual period this summer caused considerable anxiety among British Columbia fishermen and packers who, during the past two years, have invested several millions of dollars in the establishment of elaborate pilchard meal and oil factories. Their alarm, however, has subsided considerably since the way fish has returned in untold thousands.

Old-time fishermen claim that the unusually heavy fishing to which the pilchard schools have been subjected since the order-in-council legalizing their use for fertilizer and oil was passed is responsible for the late appearance of the pilchard, but government experts contend that the lateness of the summer and the real cause of the appearance of the pilchard, but government experts contend that the lateness of the summer

BOBBY JONES' 76 BROUGHT MEDAL

British Open Champ Had Smashing 31 On Outward Nine

Minneapolis, Minn., August 24.—Bobby Jones, champion golfer, shot a 67 here yesterday to tie the Minikahda course record, and to lead the field in the national amateur golf tournament with a total of 151.

Jones showed every sign today of repeating his title as national amateur golf champion from George von Elm, from whom he lost it in the finals two years ago also when he lost it here yesterday. Von Elm was struggling to a 78 to qualify with 154.

Seldom in championship play has a 31 been recorded and never but once before had a golfer qualified with 142 for a major tournament. That was in 1926, when Clarke Corkran of Philadelphia, set the same figures at Merion Cricket Club, Cards:

Par:
Out	433	543	435—35
Jones:
Out	443	443	334—31
Par:
In	434	344	434—37
Jones:
In	434	344	453—36—67

Jones broke par by four strokes on the first nine. He banged four birdies and shot the other five holes in par to set a record for that nine, and, in fact, for almost any other nine holes of a championship course. His was straight every shot, pitched close to the pin from almost any distance and frequent ly was down in one putt.

Harrison R. (Jimmy) Johnston, playing over his home course, added a brilliant 71 to his 74 of Monday, for a total of 145, which gave him the lead temporarily until Jones came home with his sensational card, to take the lead and send Johnston to second position. Even there Johnston was not safe, for Don Carrick, Canadian amateur champion, of the Scarboro Club, Toronto, who was 83rd in the field yesterday, had a chance to oust Johnston. Carrick, after cracking up five successive fours, two threes and another four, slipped at the ninth on the outward journey, taking a six and making the turn in 36. He needed a 35 into take second place behind Jones.

Eugene Homans, New York, and Charles Dorfman, Philadelphia, were behind Johnston with 148 each, and Chick Evans and Art. Sewell, of Chicago, Dave Martin, of Los Angeles, and Arthur Yates, of Rochester, were tied with 150.

Max Marston, of Philadelphia, former champion, took 78 by virtue of six straight fives on the in, nine for a 42, his total of 152 for 36 holes let him into the match rounds, however.

Jack Mackie, New York, presumably frustrated away his good 75 of yesterday by taking 82 today for 157.

G. Ross Somerville, of the London Hunt Club, finished the 36-hole qualifying round with a total of 157. Scores of 156 and under are expected to qualify players. The former Canadian champion had a round of 40-38—78 today and 79 yesterday.

The first two Canadians to finish are almost certain to be among those who failed to finish among the first thirty-two.

A. T. Cuthbert, of Winnipeg, western Canadian amateur champion, had 40 and 39 for a total of 79. His 82 on Monday gave him a total of 161.

Frank Thompson, of Chicago, former ly of Toronto, runner-up for the 1927 Canadian title, also had 161. He had 42 and 41 for a total of 84 today and 77 yesterday.

BEER GANGSTERS USE DYNAMITE IN WAR

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 24.—Three bullet ings were wrecked, eight others caught fire and five hundred persons were routed from their homes early today when a dynamite explosion attributed to beer gangsters rocked an entire west side business block. Police were searching in ruins for three men reported to have been trapped in the debris.

WHERE WILL I GO?

In Canada it is not "Where may go?" for my summer holiday, it "Where will I go?" In the metropolitan city of places available for Canadians to spend their summer vacation, it is usually desirable to select new scenes each year. Why not visit the "Highlands of Ontario" this year? Muskoka Lakes, Lake of Bays and Georgian Bay afford such a variety of interests that one is able annually to spend, or if quiet, restful places are desired there are easily found. There is abundance of excellent hotel accommodation available at moderate prices where all summer pastimes may be indulged in, golf, tennis, fishing, swimming, boating, etc. If a canoe or camping trip appeals many ideal trips can be suggested. Rogers, who had a splendid record as an aviator eitsdoor, to the British navy, was entered in the Dole Pacific flight contest and hopeful of success. As his plane got out of control, Rogers jumped from it but his parachute failed to open. It crashed to earth and was instantly killed close to the spot where his $35,- 000 specially built plane was supplied to pieces. The photo shows the wreck age of the plane.

LEAF PITCHER HELD READING HITLESS; 14-0

Toronto, August 24.—With John Prudhomme, Toronto's youthful right-hander secured from Rochester in mid-season, pitching a no-hit, no-run game, the Leafs defeated Reading, 14 to 0, in the second fixture of the series here yesterday.

Prudhomme was in rare form and but four visiting players reached first base, all on passes, two in the opening inning, one in the second and another in the third. Only eighteen batsmen faced the Toronto pitcher in the last six innings, the side being retired in order each time.

The Buffalo Bison's winning streak counted to six straight at Buffalo when the visiting Baltimore Orioles took the short end of a 6 to 1 count. It was Baltimore's seventh straight loss.

Cobb Cells made it two straight over the Wave Bears at Rochester, winning yesterday's game 4 to 3.

Syracuse defeated Jersey City twice at Syracuse, 15 to 3 and 6 to 2. The Stars pounded out 21 hits in the first game.

ONLY ONE MAJOR LEAGUE GAME

New York, August 24.—The St. Louis Cardinals had a merry scoring session today at Philadelphia and made a clean sweep of the three-game series, run with the Phillies by winning, 13 to 3. The game was the only major league contest played for the day, the other fourteen teams having an off-day.

The Cardinals made four home runs during the game, three by Bottomley, Haley and Schulte supplying the other. Every Cardinal out Schulte scored a run or more, and Pfiech was the only one to go hitless.

HOW MANY WILL FINISH IN BIG TORONTO SWIM?

Depends To Great Extent On Direction Of Wind

Toronto, August 24.—When the 600,000 swimming enthusiasts gather for Aug. 31, was first proposed, it was estimated that accommodation for at least 100 natators would have to be found locally. A later estimate of 300 was regarded as a high figure, since the Catalina swim in January brought out what was up to that time, the greatest collection of stars that had ever competed—and total starters in that event were 108. However, when entries closed for the local marathon on August 15, 371 swimmers had signified their intention of competing, while many more have probably mailed their entries in time to have been accepted.

The Toronto marathon will certainly establish many records. Never in the history of long distance swimming has there been so many entries; so many "stars"; so many "dark horses", champions and near-champions. And certainly there has never before been offered such cash prizes. The winner of the swim, if masculine, will collect $20,000; while if a woman should do the unexpected and defeat all swimmers of both sexes she will take $25,000 to spend on "pin money".

Many of the swimmers are training around Toronto. George Young, whose great achievement in the Catalina Channel swim, when he finished alone of 108 starters, has made him internationally famous, had been training near Picton, Ont. Recently, however, he moved his training quarters to Oakville, where, it is said, the water is colder. He is favored to win the marathon, but a glance at the entry list shows that all will not be easy for the local lad. His chances are more than 300 to one, but these odds will without doubt decrease as the swim progresses and the mediocre swimmers drop out.

That many will drop out is a foregone conclusion. Lake Ontario at no time is very warm, and even now the water is getting cold. Many of the better-known swimmers freely predict that at the end of the first seven miles of the 21 mile course the field will be narrowed down considerably, while not more than 15 will finish.

Edward Keating, winner of the Lake George Marathon, on his arrival here from New York, immediately went into the water. "That's colder than Lake George," he said, as he came out with his teeth chattering. Percy Hickson, who stayed in the water of that lake for more than 24 hours, and who is training with Keating, laughed as he too emerged from Lake Ontario's chilly water. "Oh Boy! that's cold stuff! You can tell the world for me that there'll be no 72 Quish in this swim even if there are 900 to start. It will freeze them out if it is as cold as this."

CONVICTS PASSED.

Kingston, Aug. 24.—Inmates at the Portsmouth Penitentiary made good return in their examinations for the middle school, four taking first-class honors, two second-class honors and one third-class honors, nine passing the examinations. Two were successful in writing on subjects for senior matriculation.

FINED $10

Port Hope, Aug. 24.—Harry Gravell and Russell Clark were each fined $10 and costs or thirty days when they pleaded guilty to a charge of theft of an automobile tire when they appeared in police court this morning. It is said that both have confessed to a number of thefts which saved them from a term in the Reformatory. Theft of other parts of from small work on the part of fellow Owen D. Friend and Constable Quantrell and Flintoft who surprised the two while in the act of removing a tire from a parked car on Victoria street.

CARS CRASH

Oshawa, Aug. 24.—Swerving upon the interprovincial highway at a fatal speed near Bowmanville, about 4.30 yesterday afternoon, a White-Knight sedan crashed into a Ford touring car driven by Louis Plaza, 746 Gerrard Street, Oshawa. Mr. Plaza's wife and three little boys were in the Ford and the whole party were thrown into the ditch when the car turned over. One boy got his face badly cut but the others escaped injury.

SIDESWIPED BY TRUCK

Oshawa, Aug. 24.—Mrs. Jas. Ryan, 706 South Carpenter Street, Chicago, has complained to Oshawa police about damages done her auto Saturday afternoon. She said that while living east at a point west of Whitby, a truck driven by E. Miller, 239 Queenslea Ave., Toronto, sideswiped her car and caused damages estimated by her at $150. Mrs. Ryan is visiting Toronto friends.

SWIMMER IN PORT HOPE

Port Hope, Aug. 24.—Miss Audrey Shaw, daughter-in-law of Mrs. W. F. Shaw, Ward street, arrived in Port Hope Friday and expected to remain here for two days training in preparation for the 21 mile swim at the Canadian National Exhibition. Mrs. Shaw was the much desired title, Lady Champion of Canada in the 10 mile swim in the St. Lawrence River from Montreal to Dereschamps, and made it in four hours and thirty-eight minutes. Mr. Orlando Haig, her trainer who is an instrant in the big swim, gained his experience at Atlantic City where he acted in the capacity of life-guard for a number of years.

DENIES RUMOR

Kingston, Aug. 24.—"I do not think there is anything to it at all" said Row Dr J. W. Edwards, M.P., Frontenac-Addington, when interviewed on Tuesday, forenoon by a representative of The Whig-Standard, regarding the rumor sent out from Toronto on Monday, to the effect that the Conservative convention at Winnipeg would likely be postponed for a year.

"The report appears to me as nonsense," added Dr. Edwards, "as I have had all the certificates of the delegates from this county sent on to me, and yesterday I received my official notification. I do not think there is anything at all in this report."

However, the direction of the wind usually has considerably bearing on the temperature of the water around Toronto. An on-shore wind from the south blowing the warm water in, will make it, comfortable; an off-shore wind from the north will make it very cold.

The arrangements made by various swimmers, trainers and managers have aroused considerable interest in several cases the more temperamental "fish" will have orchestras accompany them while some will rely on the much-abused ukulele to while away the hours. Every swimmer will be accompanied by a boat containing his handlers and an official.

The race will start at nine o'clock in the morning, but the finish will be problematical. It may be over at may be considerably later before the nine o'clock on the "same night; it final swimmer completes the course. Everything hinges on the weather. Should the natators have to buck heads to windward one day of the course, as it seems almost certain they will, the time will be lowered considerably. It seems too good to expect absolutely calm water and clear skies.

The original starting point was in the breakwater which runs along Toronto's waterfront. The breakwater was only 300 feet from the shoreline, and a string of barges was to be used from which to start the swimmers. However, since the distance to the concrete wall is so short the entries so lenny, officials of the event have decided to start the "flying fish" from outside the breakwall. Buoys will be laid down governing fouling and other contingencies, and these are at present under consideration.

No doubt there will be much jockeying for various positions in the race and to get away from this the positions will be drawn for by the authorities. Those drawing a position on the outside will have a decided early advantage in the race if they can get to the first turn ahead of the others and it is anticipated that that there will be a decided spurt at the start. The spurt will not last long, however, since the distance of 21 miles will require a slow, steady stroke. The fact that the course is laid out, and that there is "no" tide will probably lead to speed records. The English Channel, Catalina and other 20 mile Georgs marathons have not been laid out in regular courses, and it is a decided favorite to new distance swimming. It will also lead to the inevitable individual brushes between swimmers who have the perfectly natural human trait or dislike of being passed by others.

Now to Grover Coombs, of Sudbury, Ont., who is legless; Michael Hamilbourg, Toronto, who is blind, and Arthur Compton, of California, 14 years old, say the natives of Fort Bowers of Los Angeles, a former grand opera singer, who even now entertains visitors to his training camp, and William Cornwall, Toronto street car conductor, who has 14 children, is not fat tall and weighs 345 pounds. At present William is the "largest" contrant in the swim.

WIDOW WILL HAVE SOME STATUS NOW

Shanghai, Aug. 23.—Heretofore, the widow in China, whether young or old when she remarried has been a "person of no dignity" but the day appears to be arriving when such a condition no longer exists. The Nationalist Government through its woman's organizations has decreed that such reference is "obsolete" and "must be corrected.

Dixie Team Believes It United Blue and

New York City—If he had not been for music, the Mason and Dixon line would still separate his north from his south and Johnny Reb and Billy Yank would still be at it. So the conviction of Mary Cook Cowerd and Larry Braddam, two Georgia singers, twenty-five years who broke the border to their opinion by singing Southern songs to the Yankees who have come to complete the healing of the breach.

"We both think," said Miss Cowerd, "that the songs of the South have promoted an understanding with the North which neither diplomacy nor business relation could ever have done."

"The average person doesn't realize the power of music yet there is hardly anybody living who hasn't known what it was to be blue and out of sorts and cheered just at the wrong moment by a lively bit of rhythm.

"Yes," put in Mr. Braddam, "and street crowds are constantly being dragged out of collective gloom by barrel organs or outdoor phonographs or passing bands. City workmen standing across the street from one of these whimsy machines, dance that play in front of neighborhood motion picture theatres.

"Hundreds of people pass by, absorbed in their own affairs, looking at the pavement. But as soon as they come within sound of the rhythm, their heads perk up and their feet go more briskly. Their eyes brighten and their whole aspect changes. The effect of a good popular number such as 'Sunday,' will last for two or three blocks beyond the sound of the music. It is the same way with other kinds of music. It is the South, we sing the songs of the North and found they weren't so bad after all. At the same time, Northerners sang and appreciated our songs. The effect is a united country."

HELP KIDNEYS BY DRINKING MORE WATER

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless antiseptic that helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulate them to their normal activity.

The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. The famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; can not injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

LOVE MAKING A POPULAR THING LONG AGO TOO

Oxford, Eng., Aug. 22.—Love-making was just as popular on the stage two and a half centuries ago as it is in the present moving picture theatres today and leaders of that day thought more about cupid than they did about the psychological complexes of Hamlet if it appears from a careful examination of the famous first folio edition of Shakespeare. This edition has been edited for more than two centuries in Cognition Hall, Derbyshire, and is now on exhibition at the summer extension meeting at Oxford in the Bodleian Picture Gallery Exhibition.

Bodleian authorities have proof that the volume was chained in the Bodleian library during the first forty years of its life. Consequently the evidences of wear show what plays were most read by the students of the period.

"Romeo and Juliet" is far more thumbed than any other play, and the balcony scene pages are so worn they are almost in shreds. Other favorites in the order of precedence seem to have been "Julius Caesar," "The Tempest," "Henry IV." "Macbeth" and "Cymbeline."

Dishonesty has made a the limit when a man cheats at solitaire.

SLEEPERS STAY

Kingston B. of T. Persuades C. N. R. To Retain Service

Kingston, August 25.—Canadian National officials met the Board of Trade Council yesterday to suggest that the Kingston special sleepers between here and Toronto, both ways, be discontinued. The Board of Trade was opposed. They had traded a train leaving here at six a.m. for Toronto, returning at 11.30 p.m., for the sleeper service. The board members held the nightly sleeper service, was grounded, that yearly it is reducing the loss, that it is becoming better known, and by efforts of both the C.N.R. and the Board of Trade it could be made a profitable service. Kingston was a C.N.R. city, it gave the railway ninety-five per cent of its business, passenger and freight, and any ba entailed by having a desirable service for travellers at night was more than compensated for by the local patronage. The C.N.R. will continue to operate the sleeper service in and out of Toronto.

FORD IS TESTING A 5-PASSENGER FLIVVER PLANE

Developing Production Standards As In The Auto Industry

PLANE A WEEK

Expects Business To Grow In The Next 3 Or 4 Years

New York' Aug. 25.—Henry Ford is experimenting with a new five-passenger, all metal monoplane which will correspond to a five-passenger automobile" and is designed for individual pleasure use as well as commercial automobile" and is designed for individual pleasure use as well as commercial transport.

William B. Stout, designer of the new five passenger tri-motored monoplanes which the Ford airplane factory at Detroit is now turning out at the rate of one a week, described the new type of plane today.

This "baby sister" of the larger plane will be sold "D.O.F." For about $11,000, Mr. Stout said.

"D.O.F.," he explained is a new symbol colined by the Ford factory to correspond with the famous "F.O. B." of the automobile. It means "delivered on field." This plane will correspond to a five-passenger automobile," Mr. Stout said. It is being built with a view to selling it not only to air lines for passenger transport but also to individuals who will use it for pay.

Smaller Type

"Just at present we have only one of this type of plane. It corresponds in every way to the larger plane, save that it is smaller.

"It is driven by a 220 horse power Wright whirlwind motor. This is has performed splendidly in tests, and we expect to get it in production within two or three months.

"We expect to build more than many planes of this type will be manufactured, but we are anticipating a heavy demand."

The idea that the Ford factory was experimenting with a "flivver plane" was discussed by Mr. Stout.

"In the first place, the "flivver plane' is not altogether practical," he said. "Some percentage of people who know how to fly or who can be taught to fly is not small to expect that the airplane will approach the popularity of automobiles for years to come. Also the problem of landing fields must be considered.

"Naturally, we are interested in a "flivver plane' which is reasonable and isn't but we do not see a 'flivver plane' being manufactured in profitable quantities for some time.

"Of course, with increased production, the cost of the flivver plane will drop in the airplane market. People need not expect a radical lowering of price for some time to come, however. Price follows production and production follows demand."

NO PAGEANT AT FAIR THIS YEAR

Directors Have Arranged Vaudeville And Thrills For a Change

"There will be no Pageant this year at the Agricultural Exhibition," stated Mr. Tom Powers to the Intelligencer to-day. "There have been four pageants in the last three years and this year we are going to have a novelty. Captain Hugo and his troup of twenty-six educated horses and ponies, and twenty people will supply thrilling and hilarious amusement for the Fairgoers."

The famous Seattle Band of the Madison Square Gardens, New York, has also been engaged and will play afternoon and evening. It was an inviting prospect that Mr. Powers drew in imagination. O'Callaghan, a prominent Liberal worker for this riding.

This afternoon The Intelligencer tried to get Messrs. Hanna, Fraser and Lott by telephone, but they were all away from home. Someone at the Lott home informed the newspaperman that Mr. Lott had been in Ottawa this week, but he had return ed from there and was today in Prince Edward County.

Earnest (known' to his cronies a "Ted") Greatrix was out at Riley Hall-Way House last night in a friend's car, when to his dismay he discovered that the headlights of the automobile were on the "blink." Not wishing to drive home in the dark, Ted surreptitiously helped himself to four little lamps in all. Furce of circumstances and hard luck (or Ted), caused Highway Traffic Officer Frink to start on his trail, and he was arrested, charged with the theft of the globes.

This morning he appeared in the local Police Court before Justices of the Peace Newton and Walmsley and pleaded guilty to the offence. J. P. Rumor Has It That The Plum Will Go To Dr. M. J. O'Callaghan

It was rumored about the city streets today that Messrs. Charles Hanna, Ex-M.P., Mayor W. A. HOPE FOR THREE CORNERED DERBY

Pilots Are Planning To Race Their Planes Across Atlantic

Curtiss Field, Aug. 25.—The Stinson "Detroiter" monoplane of John Carlton Boyd, 24 of Ottawa, Ont., and London, Ontario, whence it will begin a non-stop flight to London, England, just as soon as weather permits. The Sir John Carling was occupied by Capt. T. Hutchinson, Capt. W. Mackrell, pilots who will fly it across ocean, S. E. Reshnic, Canadian newspaperman.

Departure of the plane for its starting point Harbor Grace and the date of departure for Harbor Grace of another Stinson Detroiter plane in which Bert Schlee and W. Brock hoped to make a record flight around the world. Still a third Stinson Detroiter monoplane used by Duke Schiller and Phil Wood will make a non-stop flight for Paris o Windsor, Ontario, there to hop off or Windsor, England.

With departure of the Sir John Carling today it became known that the crews of at least two of the three Stinson Detroiters hoped for a three corner ed air derby across the Atlantic. Phil Wood formerly asked Schlee and Brock to wait at Harbor Grace long enough so that the planes leaving from Windsor and London could start the ocean hops at the same time. Brock declined but the pilots of the other planes expressed confidence that weather conditions would hold but 24 hours at Harbor Grace until they could be in a position to take off.

WOMEN'S FREEDOM

Addressing a group of delegates from foreign labor organizations gath-ered in Moscow recently, Madame Anna Yat Sen declared the existing status of Chinese women, in a land where all suffer from the oppression and limitations which have come down through the ages, she said it was natural that women suffer more than the men, in the women of more advanced nations this will soon be overcome, and yet it is doubtful if Chinese women themselves are con-scious of their disabilities. Madame Sun Yat Sen has lasted of Western women after her visit to Europe, and in studying at first-hand the social conditions of America and Europe; but such knowledge has come to very few of the women of China. In their absence, they may be unaware of the injustices of their lot in China, as with that of the women of the Western nations. It is, therefore, just possible they may be reasonably con-tented, or resigned.

Women in our own civilization have won practically all the privileges which were at one time denied to them and for which they have during the past forty years in particular made a militant fight. There is, therefore, no reason whatever for debate. The battle has been won, and we may now view, in a genuinely philosophical spirit, the trials of victory. What are they? Are they any less than they contributed to the total of feminine happiness? If Madame Sun Yat Sen should take the trouble to make a study of past and present conditions as to the pos-session of wealth, she might be puzzled to find anything whatever in the nature of an inalienable franchise in their possession, and yet no more than lately disposed to do so. She would find women engaged in com-merce in the arts, in the professions, in the industries, and in practically every field of human activity, and she would not probably find the average of contentment among them either more general or more pro-nounced than she would have found it half a century ago. In fact, she would be frankly at a loss on what to underpin her theory of the benefits won world. This much may be said without in the faintest degree sug-gesting that it was not in every re-spect worth while and just to satisfy the aspirations of women to the full extent we have done.

BREAKING RULES

It is said that every child born in England today has an expectation of twelve years longer life than its grandparents. There are many con-tributing factors to the increasing span of life, among which, of course, is the medical and surgical know-ledge which the world gains from year to year.

Gradually man's age limit is being advanced, so that rules of "how to live to be a hundred" no lon-ger provoke smiles. The trouble with rules, however, is that they are easy to promulgate and difficult to follow. The man in the street cannot watch the process of prolonging life, and has adopted an eat-and-be-merry attitude which embraces philosophy of gambling tomorrow, to take care of itself. It is wise to endeavor to educate the general public up to cor-rect conditions of living, but until all educational process is allow its full effects, effected conditions will remain in the golden era of its prolongation. Scientific research will help to in-crease the span of human life, whereas health rules will continue to be ignor-ed. Unfortunately, the human animal cannot learn right from forced upon him. The silver lining for the future of the race lies in science, rather than dependence upon observance of individual rules.

Every time sanitation, or science prolongs the lives of any considerable number by preventing or curative methods the average life expectancy is raised, and this is being done by abolishing the epidemic and well re-search as that now seeking positive cures for cancer and diseases of the heart.

WHY THE ATTACK?

The Toronto Globe has come to the extraordinary conclusion that Hon. George S. Henry, the provincial min-ister of highways, is the man respon-sible for "the death toll" of Ontario roads. Mr. Henry, says the Globe ser-vely, remains "silent" and "aghast like" in the face of "the ghastly motor-killings" or, if he speaks at all, it is to offer "childish and foolish suggestions" to motorists." On the other hand, the Globe commends Hon. Peter Heenan, who has the provincial-ing portfolio in the Quebec Govern-ment, for his determination to "make the highways under his control safe for all kinds of traffic." One notes in the Globe's old-time partisanship is kept in mind its attack on Mr. Henry is difficult of understanding.

The Globe's criticism of the Min-ister is general and not specific. It offers no constructive advice, and so we do not know what it would have Mr. Henry do in addition to the meas-ures which have been taken by the Government and his own department. As a matter of fact, the systems in effect in Ontario and Quebec for con-trolling the highways and reducing accidents to a minimum are not very dis-tar one to the other, and in both cases the law is being administered today with a fair degree of severity.

The Government of Ontario estab-lished this year the system of driving licenses for individuals, over and above the vehicular license, to provide an additional check on motorists. The Government has given the police and the courts a law which provides full terms for drunken and other reckless motorists and drastic penalties for all forms of traffic offences, including the right to suspend or cancel permits. Provincial highway patrols and traffic officers and while no system has been evolved by which all offend-ers are caught yet speeders and law-breakers on the main roads stand a reasonable chance of being punished. The addition, Ontario Provincial Highways this year has conducted an advertising campaign in the daily newspapers of the province to emphas-ize the perils of reckless driving and to point out the penalties provided for offenders against public safety.

The Government has given the people an admirable system of high-ways, and for their regulation has pu chary teeth in the law. One hundred per cent. observance of traffic rule would eliminate ninety-nine per cent of traffic accidents. Public opinion undoubtedly will support the most rig-orous prosecution of offenders and t the Attorney-General were to urge upon those who administer the law the responsibility which attaches to them, in the control of drunken and reckless or stupid driving the result should be decidedly beneficial.

HAVE YOU HEARD THESE?

Jones was preparing to hole his ball when around a bend in the river came a small motor boat with its con-tinuous "putt, putt, putt, putt."

Jones straightened up and gazing at the boat said, disgustedly: "You mind your own darn business!"

"Shall I bring you some dinner?" asked the steward of the ship.

"Yes, you nisy bring me one on approval," replied the passenger, as he gazed over the bounding deep. "I may not want to keep it."

"Sarpence," said the Scot to the village chemist, "for a packet of sul-phurr. Why, man, I can get it for fourpence in Glasgow."

"Aye," said the chemist, "Ay! ye can gang to another place where ye can get as much sulphur as ye want for naething."

A British officer being tried for drunkenness called his servant as a witness. "Did you see me when I came home on that night?" he asked. "I did." "Was I drunk or sober?" "You were sober." "Are you quite sure?" asked the lawyer. "Yes, sir, he was quite sober and left orders to be called early." "There was a pause, then the lawyer asked: "Did he give you any reason for wishing to be called early?" "Yes, sir, he said he was to be Queen of the May."

OTHER MEN'S THOUGHTS

Every province in Canada showed a declining birth rate, according to the latest returns, except Quebec.

Birth rate in Ontario was higher than in many of the provinces, but lower than Quebec. But the death rate also was lower.

It is not surprising that the birth rate in rural Ontario shows a serious falling off. Country life in old On-tario is more attractive than it ever

Bewildering hope, outrunning praise,
The Earth, renewed by the great Sun's longing,
Utters her joy in a million ways.

What is there left, sweet soul and true—
What for us and our dream to do?
What but to take this mighty Sum-mer.

As it were made for me and you?

Take it and live it beam by beam,
Motes of light on a gleaming stream,
Glare by glare, and glory on glory
Through to the ash of this flaming dream!

WOMAN COULD HARDLY WALK

Mrs. Horn Tells how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health

Hamilton, Ont.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and would not be without it now. I had a bad case of trouble and could hardly walk and I was run down and could not do my house-work. I began to feel better after I had taken it a short time. I was told by a friend to try your Vegetable Compound, and I did, and by the time I took two bottles I was beginning to get around again. I took ten bottles in all and now am all right again and doing my own work. I have got everything to look for, so I have plenty to do. I also used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and I think it is good. But I owe my health to the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Ben Stowe, Hamilton, Ontario.

Do you feel broken down, nervous and weak sometimes? Lydia E. Pink-ham's Vegetable Compound is a tonic; best to take at such a time. It always helps, and if taken regularly and per-sistently, will relieve this condition.

WHY YEARN TO POSSESS A JEALOUS HUSBAND

Most of us hate jealousy. But maybe's moaning around because she can't coax the Green-Eyed Monster to perk on her threshold.

Hello travee a "Jealous Husband" and she has drawn a regular Summer breeze of gentleness.

DEAR BLAIR:

I suppose you will think this is a silly letter. Well, perhaps I am silly, but I am in earnest about what I'm going to tell you.

Blair I wish my husband were jealous.

He's a wonderful man in every way. He loves me and I love him. But he is so complaisant. He takes everything for granted. I'm young and pretty and vivacious. If I do say it. We go out a great deal and I get lots of attention. But do you think he terms a half dozen words? He does not. It's the water off a duck's back. He's sweet and gentle and just goes along day after day in the same way.

I have another friend who has a husband who is just crazy about her. He's jealous to a fault, and my friend says as long as a husband is so jealous a wife can be sure that she has his entire interest. I think she is right.

Don't you think that jealousy is a better proof of love than just the comfortable affection of the man who never notices bottles nor other men smiling at his wife. Really, Blair, I may be foolish, but I tell you I wish my husband were a little jealous.

BELLE.

Jealousy is no proof of love. It's simply a supremely selfish, silly, vulgar mental runway. There's no reasoning back of it. It's one of the hang-overs from the time when we swung from trees to tens. And who wants to go back to those gibbering days?

Real love lies in the strength and beauty of quiet devotion, the tender word, the thoughtful act, the willing sacrifice, the deep silence of real understanding. All these are the immortal stones which build up lasting love.

Real love is dignified. Real love is sane. Jealousy is cheap. Jealousy is insane. Be glad then that jealousy hasn't touched you. Pity your friend who knows it. Realize the beautiful lasting qualities which are the manifestation of your man's Real Love, and bless the generous Providence which has sent them to live with you.

Here's a happier note to lift our hearts after the picture of such bitter misery. This little girl stopped in time. And now she has her reward.

DEAR BLAIR:

Girls, you should see the big grin on my face at the present moment you would wonder what it was all about. Need I mention that I am one of those poor creatures in love, so I will tell you about the grand and glorious reason why.

I am only eighteen now, soon to be nineteen, and was confronted by the same problem as the rest of my sisters. To get—or not to get!

I tried it. And then decided I would rather—sit home by my lonesome rather than experiment any further. And am I glad for it! Well, let me tell you this.

Someone just as clean and good has come into my life—one of those old-fashioned sort of boys, nothing much but a grown-up kid. I could go on for hours telling how sweet and boyish he is, but you would think I am all wet.

I'll bet a dollar there's more than one like me, too, and that they are glad afterwards. Bye, bye, folks, and take my tip.

LUCKY.

CURSE OF LOVE

By Mildred Barlow

CHAPTER 29
ORIENT-BOUND

Phillip Kendall descended from a taxi at the entrance to a steamship pier at San Francisco.

It was a gray, misty day. A fine rain was falling, and the building along the harbor looked gloomy and forbidding. The water that washed the pier was slate-colored. The shining Golden Gate was completely obscured by the mist.

Kendall, gloomily watching the unloading of his luggage, felt that the day was like his mood—grim, unhappy, without hope.

Until the last, he had cherished the thought that he might run across King Carson. But, apparently, that inconsiderate and debonair gentleman was already on his way East. Kendall was forced to accept the dictum of Fate. He must sail for the Orient alone, with none to bid him Godspeed when he left behind him all that had made life worth while.

A porter from the pier came to collect his bags. He passed through the narrow gateway and into the dark, gloomy shed in the Japanese liner's pier. Uniformed officials took his ticket, examined his passport, made a cursory survey of his luggage.

He could see the steamer on which he was to sail, lying peacefully at her slip —a small white boat with two red smoke-stacks that sent up clouds of black smoke to mingle with the heavy fog. There was much bustling and activity about the pier, trucks bearing baggage rumbled up behind him; great cranes were lifting cargo and swinging it into the ship's hold; passengers scurried distractedly here and there, search ing for some last-minute article; already the friends of the voyagers were lining up, behind the gates at the end of the pier to wave farewell when the ship put to sea.

Kendall went directly to his cabin and remained there until he felt the shudder of the ship as she cast her cables and crept slowly away from the dock. Then he went on deck, but the waving, surging mass on the pier, the fluttering handkerchiefs, and the cries of "Bon Voyage" that drifted across the widening expanse of water had no appeal for him.

He went forward and, leaning on the rail, stared into the ominous, lower fog bar that hid the Golden Gate. Beyond, lay the Orient, where so many go to forget what they have left behind them of life, and love, and hope! The Orient, a street who lures those who are friendless, by fate, or, spirit, hiding them into forgetfulness—more often, leading them to destruction!

Kendall feigned poignantly for Norma, the woman he loved above all else in the world. He was leaving her to find the happiness that he was thoroughly, and erroneously, convinced she desired. The night at the bungalow, together with his chance glimpse of her and Stokes in her car by the wayside, and her curious, reserved attitude later on, had made him feel that it was Stokes whom she loved. Why she had married him, when she still cared for Stokes, he couldn't guess —unless, he told himself, it was her father who had arranged matters with Jim Carson and deceived them with Kendall finesse!

Anyway, her words, as he left the ferry boat after the genial assistance for Stokes, had convinced him that she honestly believed the scandal, that she had wanted her husband involved in the matter, not for his own sake, but for her own and Sydney Blake's. Kendall smiles bitterly at the thought. Well, he had spared her the scandal, he reflected. He had not appeared in the affair at all. Though there would be were gossip and shrieks fact from which to weave a tale of scandal—unless it was Dr. Merrivale, and he had proven his trustworthiness.

Kendall had phoned Merrivale on the morning following the mysterious shooting of Stokes, and the doctor had told him that the wound was not as serious as he had first thought, and that he intended pressing the patient to his own house, instead of taking him to a hospital, as a precaution against any trouble. Kendall, chafing at Norma's instructions, had told Merrivale who he was and what had happened, in so far as he knew the facts.

"Mrs. Kendall was quite right," the doctor assured him. "For her sake, you must keep out of this, Mr. Kendall. Your presence wouldn't have done any good, for it undoubtedly would have complicated matters. The whole affair is one of those unfortunate coincidences that never can be explained, more suspicion is aroused. The best service you can render your wife is to remain silent about your presence in the limehouse that night."

Kendall, smiling bitterly, hung up the receiver. If the ever doctor only knew all that Norma had begged of him!

Half an hour later, Dr. Merrivale was trying to reach him by 'phone to tell him that a quantity of valuables, stolen from the cottages on the beach, had been found in the shelter of the cliff. The Chinaman, Stokes' unknown assailant, was thus accounted for. But, unfortunately, as so often happens, the 'phone call came too late.

Kendall visited his bank, arranged his affairs speedily, and directed that his business should be carried on by his manager, Norma. If she would accept the arrangement was to receive half of the profits, and King Carson was to receive the other half in payment of his loan.

With only a few hundred dollars in his pocket, and a scant and hastily put chased wardrobe, Kendall caught a train for San Francisco.

And here he was, leaving all that was dear to him and facing a dark and uncharted future, as the little white steamer crept through the fog of the Golden Gate and turned her nose toward China.

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl in my teens. I love a boy 5 years my senior and love him dearly. He doesn't pay much attention to me any more. Should I wait for him to ask me dates to see me, or should I ask him to come?

He goes to see a girl who isn't very nice. He is a nice boy and of a good family. Should I try to persuade him to stop going to see that girl?

Would it be all right for us to meet at public places to talk?

WORRIED BLONDE.

WORRIED BLONDE:

I would advise you to let him take the initiative my friend. If he is still interested, he will get in touch with you. It is hardly your privilege to be concerned about people he sees with you. I'm afraid he would resent any criticism you might make. If you don't care for the type of friend he chooses, there is no need for you to count yourself among them. Also, it would be better to have him come to see you at your home.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I have been writing to a boy about six times, but I stopped about a month ago. Since then I have received two letters but haven't answered them. I see now I care for him.

What shall I do?

BUTTERCUP.

BUTTERCUP: You might write this young man and invite him to call. This will indicate that you are still interested in him and he will understand you want his friendship.

EARLY HISTORY OF P. E. COUNTY

First Inhabited By Unknown Indian Tribe—Settled By Soldiers

Picton, Aug. 25.—At a recent meeting of the historical society here Mr. F. P. Smith, who recently accepted the position of public school inspector of the city of Kingston, gave a paper on Prince Edward county history. In his paper, Mr. Smith divided the subject into five periods, Geologic, pre-Historic, Indian, French and British.

The geologic formation of Prince Edward County is Trenton limestone. This averages about 400 feet thick overlaying the Laurentian formation. The Trenton limestone holds small quantities of salt, gas, and a very little oil but none of them in sufficient quantities for practical commercial purposes. Glaciers swept over the limestone during the Glacier period, melting some fourteen to twenty thousand years ago. As it melted, it left the soil over the land as it is today. The granite boulders and loose stone that are scattered about the surface are also part of the glacial drift. The glaciers left their marks on rocks, visible in many places where the rock is exposed, a notable instance being in evidence on the Fish Lake road.

During the pre-historic era of Indian tribe of unknown origin lived at the head of Picton Bay. Evidences have been found that they knew the use of copper and that they buried their dead with red ochre.

During the more recent Indian period this country was disputed territory between the Hurons and the Iroquis. The Iroquis were driven out during the time of Jacques Cartier, later receiving the victorious Hurons and regaining it. But they were so much weakened by their struggles with the French that they could not hold the ground they had won. The Algonquins present in the North and the Massassaugas the land possession. During the next period the French came into Upper Canada and built Fort Frontenac, giving the name of "Kanie" to our bay. Pt. Traverse and Pt. Petre are also French names. The first permanent of land in the country was the giving of the township of North Marysburg to Le Salle. During this time, two Jesuit missionaries wintered on the North shore of East Lake on their way to conduct a missionary campaign among the Iroquois.

The third and last period began in 1784 when the United Empire Loyalists settled here, establishing the Royal regime. At the same time a disbanded Hessian regiment under Baron Reitzenstel settled in North Marysburg.

TO TRANSPLANT B. C. FLOWERS TO ENGLISH PLOTS

Vancouver, B.C., Aug. 24 (C.P.).—To obtain from the alpine slopes of Mount Garibaldi, one of the peaks of the Coast Range, specimens of British Columbia mountain wild flowers to be transplanted to the gardens of England, is the object of an expedition leaving here under the leadership of J. C. Bennett, F.R. H. S., of Victoria.

The Royal Horticultural Society of England is sponsor for the expedition, which was organized largely as a result of a visit here last year by Prof. F. J. Chittenden, editor of the Royal Horticultural Journal.

Apart from living specimens that will be brought down from the mountain by the Bennett expedition, it is expected that large quantities of seeds will be selected.

ASIATICS ARE INCREASING THE HOLD ON B.C.

Increase Mainly In Chinese—Japanese Also Figure

Victoria, B.C., Aug. 25.—Asiatics are increasing their grip on British Columbia industries, according to a survey conducted by the Provincial Government.

From 11.30 percent of the total industrial population in 1923, Orientals increased to 11.56 percent. last year. With the total number of industrial workers in the province increasing rapidly, the fact that the Orientals more than held their own during the period under review is regarded as all the more significant. According to the government figures, 1,295 Orientals were added to the employment registers of the province last year.

The figures disclose that Canadians and people of British origin represent 70.2 percent of the industrial population; natives of Continental Europe 15.62 percent, and people of other countries 1.3 percent.

The Chinese in Alaska is mainly in Chinese although, Japanese, particularly the females of that nationality figure more prominently in the returns.

Rivers Inlet, B.C., Aug. 24.—Bird's nest, noodles, shark-fins and rock-snakes have a rival as favorite dish for the Chinese. It is bearp paws. The only disadvantage about bear's paws. The only disadvantage about paws, according to the Chinese pictures, is that they are so rare. Listen every day that a bear is killed even in an out-of-the-way place like this, where bears of several species are comparatively numerous.

But boiled bear's paws are to the Chinese what corned beef and cabbage are to the Irish. The law of supply and demand regulates the price, which ranges from $4 to $5 per set of four paws, irrespective of whether they once belonged to grizzly, black, brown or white bear.

A white man was induced to sample the Chinese delicacy recently. "Some of you may recall your disappointment that came with your first taste of bear or whale steak," he said. Well, your first taste of bear paws will merely register your impressions more clearly. Chinese sauce as a mayonnaise dressing finctured with an inferior grade of turpentine adds little relish to the Occidental palate."

LARGEST CARVED INDIAN ROCK

Vancouver, B.C., By C.P., Aug. 25.—The largest petroglyph or Indian rock carving in the Province of Canada has just been reported to the archaeological office of the National Museum of Canada at Ottawa.

This petroglyph is said to be more than 250 feet long and to be carved on a vertical face of reddish rock of the plateau, straight up the side of the Fraser River valley, about half a mile south of the eastern end of the Cariboo bridge. A trout-fishing trail runs up in its direction, from which it probably can be seen. The place is only about twelve miles from Yale on the railway line and, being both the largest and the most easily accessible of the petroglyphs, it may be set aside as a national monument because of, its value as a tourist attraction.

Previous to this discovery the largest known petroglyph in Canada was on the west side of a seventy-foot canyon about one mile south of the Mackenzie Highway, at a point four miles from the sea in the "Inside way of Canada" near Bella Coola.

DEATHS & FUNERALS

JOHN YOUNG

With hundreds in attendance the obsequies of the late John Young was held yesterday afternoon from the family residence, 30 Howard Street, to the Salvation Army Citadel, where an impressive service was conducted by Adjutant A. G. Dutton, assisted by Ensign Caplan of Trenton and Sergt.-Major Hart of the local corps. The band of which the deceased was a member was also in attendance and rendered appropriate selections. The citadel was draped with the Salvation Army mourning colors, purple and white.

The interment was made at the Belleville Cemetery.

The many in attendance at the obsequies together with the wealth of flowers silently expressed the sorrow caused by the death of the late Mr. Young and the sympathy felt for the sorrowing widow and daughter.

The bearers were Messrs. James and John Hoover, Thomas, Fred, and Walter Greatrix and James Molyneux.

JAMES LASKARIS

James Laskaris died in the Belleville General Hospital yesterday following an illness of some duration.

The deceased was born at Sparta, Greece, 45 years ago and has been a resident of the Province of Ontario for the past nineteen years. The late Mr. Laskaris was a member of the Greek Church, under whose auspices the funeral was held, this afternoon from Messrs. Tickell and Sons' Mortuary Parlors to Belleville Cemetery, where the interment was made, the priest from the Greek Church in Toronto officiating.

FORD IS TESTING

The Ford interests, however, are making every preparation for a tremendous expansion in the airplane industry within the next two or three years, Mr. Stout continued.

Day And Night Shifts

Already the Ford airplane factory at Detroit, that began a few years ago as an experimental laboratory, following the trend of production methods set by the Ford factories in the automobile industry. Mechanical crews are working day and night in shifts in an effort to keep pace with an increasing demand for new ships. The factory itself is being geared up for a double increase in production at the first of the year, and the factory managers foresee a tripling and quadrupling of business within two or two passenger, all-metal, tri-motored being transformed into a highly modern field, with ticket office and transporting facilities that approximate a railroad station.

In anticipation of the increased demand for ships the Ford Company has made efforts to obtain delivery of twenty Wright Whirlwind motors a week.

"How far this expansion we contemplate will extend in a given time it is impossible to foretell," Mr. Stout said, but it can be safely said we are anticipating and preparing for a wholesale increase in the airplane business immediately.

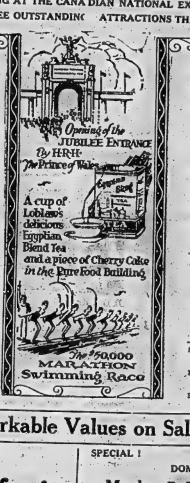

"At present we are turning out one plane a week. Our orders at present call for one every week. By the first of the year we will be ahead of the demand, which in turn has every indication of increasing.

"This type of passenger and freight plane, the ninth of which flew Curtiss Field this morning in a demonstration flight, just stripped how after it had emerged from the factory at Detroit is a $40,000 job.

"This plane is being built particularly for air line companies and large organizations that are now the market for airplanes to speed delivery of orders."

BELLE THEATRE

Monte Blue, heroic engineer of "The Limited Mail" is again cast as a railroad engineer in a play which for thrilling humor, and human interest, outclasses even its splendid forerunner. "The Black Diamond Express" is the story of an engineer, and a society girl whose car, recklessly driven, crashes into his engine. She breaks her engagement with a rich suitor to marry him. Her mother, and the disgraceful acts of the engineer's brother make the girl give him up. In anger she marries the rich man. Her bridal party is carried on the engineer's fast train. Attacked by bandits, the husband is shot, though the train with its cargo is saved. The bad brother is one of the bandits and Monte throws him into a change of heart, but the bandits revolt out punishment to him as a double-crosser. Monte and the girl at last have a clear track to Honeymoon Valley. The supporting cast is splendid, the direction is fine and the photography beautiful.

you drawing a bead on the big fellow but you don't think of that when you're in a fix such as I've described."

The expedition succeeded in bagging many specimens for the Field Museum, Chicago.

The temperature in England never has exceeded 100 degrees Fahrenheit since records have been kept.

CHI. CUBS WIN 2ND GAME OF A DOUBLEHEADER

Score Of 13-1—Dropped First Game By 7-6

New York, August 25.—The Chicago Cubs ended their losing streak at five in a row at Philadelphia yesterday by winning the second game of a double-header with the Phillies by a score of 13-1, after dropping the first by a 7-6 margin. The Phillies scored in the first game when Blake weakened in the ninth inning of the first game and overcame a 6-2 handicap. A double by Spalding drove in two runs that tied the score and then he romped home with the win ning run when Sand greeted Bush with a single. The second game was settled in the first inning, the Cubs scoring six runs on five doubles, a walk and a costly muff by Cy Williams Hack Wilson brought his home run total for the season to 23 by hitting one in the first game and two in the second.

Rain caused postponement of a doubleheader at Boston between the Braves and Pittsburgh Pirates. No other National League encounters were scheduled.

DETROIT HALTED BY 9TH INNING HOMER; LAZZERI

Clout With Score Tied, Two Out And Bases Full

Detroit, Mich., August 25.—Two record streaks going in opposite directions suddenly reversed their routes here yesterday afternoon when Tony Lazzeri hit a home run over the left garden wall in the ninth inning with the score tied, two out and the bases filled. The Tigers' run -C thirteen straight victories, the longest winning streak in the team's history, came to a sudden stop, and simultaneously the Yankees' string of four straight defeats, the longest list of setbacks suffered by the league leaders this year, came to a timely termination.

That blow also put the finishing touches on a stiff uphill climb by the Yankees. As late as the seventh inning they were trailing by three runs when a rollicking rally tied the score. Tony's terrible tap made the final count 9 to 5.

Lowell Carroll started the Tigers on their record run when he beat the Browns on August 12 and it was Lowell Carroll who toured the ball that Tony hit to bring it to a close today. For six innings he pursued the policy of prolonging the performance, but he wavered in the seventh and he wobbled in the ninth. He walked Combs to start with, Koenig sacrificed and Ruth hit a terrific fly to centre, putting Combs on third. Gehrig and Meusel were passed, filling the bases and then Lazzeri did the damage.

Opposed to Mr. Carroll for six innings was Wade Hoyt, but the pinch-hitter retired in favor of a sinch hitter during the Yanks successful drive to tie the score and when the Tigers came in for their turn there was the unmistakable odor of the ambulance gone and in walked Wiley Moore to the rescue. He received credit for the victory.

The Athletics halted the belated spurt of the Browns at St. Louis at six straight wins when Pitcher Walberg clinched his own 4 to 2 victory by hammering out a home run in the sixth inning. Walberg pitched the entire game, holding the seventh-place Browns to five hits while he and his teammates touched eight for their four runs. Wingard was relieved in the ninth by Crowder, relief hurler, who allowed no hits in the final inning. The win, coupled with the Senators' defeat, gave the Athletics third place.

PREMIER KING IN HURON TODAY

Ottawa, Aug. 25.—Premier Mackenzie King will enter the North Huron by-election campaign today when he speaks at Wingham in the afternoon and at Goderich in the evening. Hon. Jame Malcolm, Minister of Trade and Commerce, will also speak. Mr. King is known as his opponent hopes a clear decision from Canada. He will open the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto on August 27.

When reading, what indicates that reading glasses are needed?

The paper is held too far from the eyes.

What is the correct reading distance?

About 12 inches.

Then a person who cannot see clearly to read ordinary print at that distance strains the eyes in attempting to read without glasses?

Yes, but the power which the eyes have lost can be restored by glasses.

LEAF'S FOURTH VICTORY OVER ORIOLES, 2-1; 6-5

Toronto, August 25.—Toronto made it four straight victories over Reading by winning both games of today's doubleheader here. The Pretzels outhit the TORONTO in the first game, but Fisher was given better support than that received by Parks and won, 2 to 1, the hitting of Burke and Alexander accounting for both of the home team's two runs. The score of the second tilt was 6 to 5.

The Leafs gave Sallenbird a 5-0 lead in the first two innings of the second game, but he was unable to hold the advantage, and when his control went back on him in the third the Pretzels scored four runs. They tied it up in the fifth and Faulkner went to the mound with the bases filled.

He was invincible in the balance of the game while the Leafs put over the decisive run in the ninth, hits by Walsh, Jacobson and Burke doing the trick.

The Blues grabbed both games of a double-header with Reading at Hamilton by scores of 18 to 7 and 7 to 5. Bienvenue featured in the first game with two home runs, making his season's total 27. Meagum was credited with his eighteenth victory. Walsh, Jacobson and Burke doing the first game.

Rochester made it four straight victories over Newark by defeating the Bears in both ends of a double-header at Rochester, 4 to 3, and 1 to 0. Lee Head's single in the eleventh inning broke up the first game. Collins' home run inside the grounds in the fourth inning was the deciding score of the second contest.

Al Symmons the Stars scored their ninth straight victory today and their third in a row over Jersey City, defeating the Skeeters 14 to 3.

GEORGE VON ELM IS ELIMINATED

Minneapolis, Minn., August 25.—George von Elm, national amateur golf champion, yesterday was eliminated from competition, in centrance of his title by Harry Legg, of Minneapolis, who defeated the Californian one up in the second round.

Legg shot par 72 to down the champion, who had not been defeated in the event for the last three years, scoring by Bobby Jones.

In contrast to the morning's excitement, when Bobby Jones was threatened by a college stripling, von Elm was cut out by a man almost old enough to be his father.

Harry Legg has been a prominent figure in golf for more than 30 years. He has been Minnesota state champion 10 times. He won the trans-Mississippi title five times and was western amateur champion in 1910.

How To Reduce Varicose Veins

Rub Gently and Upward Toward the Heart as Blood in Veins Flows That Way.

Many people have become despondent because they have been led to believe that there is no remedy that will reduce swollen veins and bunches.

If you will get a two-ounce original bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil (full strength) at any first-class drug store and apply it night and morning as directed, you will quickly notice an improvement which will continue until the veins and bunches are reduced to normal.

Moone's Emerald Oil is a harmless, yet most powerful germicide and two ounces is a very long time. Indeed, so powerful is Emerald Oil that old chronic sores and ulcers are often entirely healed and anyone who is disappointed with its use can have their money refunded. Doyles Drug Store sells lots of it.

IF YOUR SKIN BREAKS OUT USE SULPHUR

Just a moment you apply Mentho-Sulphur to an itching, burning or broken out skin, the itching stops and healing begins, says a noted skin specialist. This sulphur preparation made into a pleasant cold cream, gives such a quick relief, even to fiery eczema, that nothing has ever been found to take its place.

Because of its germ-destroying properties, it quickly subdues the itching coals the irritation and heals the eczema right up, leaving a clear, smooth skin in place of ugly eruptions, rash pimples or roughness.

You do not have to wait for improvement. It quickly shows. You can get a little jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur at any drug store.

PEER BANKRUPT AGAIN

London, August 25.—A receiving order in bankruptcy on creditors' petition, says the London Gazette, has been made against the Marquis of Hertford. He has appeared in bankruptcy court before.

The Marquis, who lives at Torquay, Devonshire, has often been described as the "most versatile peer." He has been soldier, actor, author, journalist, sheep and poultry farmer, playwright, dancer and wine agent. It is said his once refused £300 to appear in a stage pantomime. The Marquis married Alice Thaw sister of Harry K. Thaw, in 1902. The marriage was annulled in 1909.

EWING'S STORIES STILL POPULAR

Fredericton, N. B., August 23. — Fredericton's elm-shaded streets proud protectively between the placid St. John River and the quiet hills, boast the former places of residence of a goodly company of Canadian literary men and women. While touche up the national literary tradition of the New Brunswick capital is well known it is probably not common knowledge that one of the most talented English women writers of children's stories spent many years of her life in an attractive house on Waterloo Row, over looking the river.

Children of today still find delight in the stories of Henrietta Ewing, though their quiet charm is probably less appreciated than if was 30 years ago, She was a distinguished name in England during the latter half of the nineteenth century, such stories as "Amelia and the Dwarfs", "The Brownies," and a score of others made up an immediate appeal, not only to the youthful reader for whom they were intended, but to those elders who were consecrated into the nursery service of "reading aloud."

A genuine literary skill, coupled with a rich and tasteful imagination, gained for her the allegiance of the grown-ups as well as of the children who, of course, stand as the final judges upon juvenile literature.

Henrietta Ewing came to Fredericton when her husband Major Ewing, was transferred to military duty here in the days when the redcoats flaunted their vivid pride on drill ground and street. She lived in one of the most liveable of the old river-front houses. At the time, runs the river, fringed with stately willows. During her day, the forest, pressing hard upon the outskirts of the little town, was only a few minutes walk away in the other direction and in the atmosphere of peaceful security, isolated from the outside world Mrs. Ewing writes many of her best known children's books.

Life in Fredericton was undoubtedly isolated in those days, but the cultured English Lady found a small circle of persons with kindred interests and a similar background to whom she became a much-loved friend.

The house by the river quickly became a gathering place for these literature lovers of, books and nature. Many an excursion, by canoe up the St. John, or on foot into the woods back of College Hill, started from its door and concluded before its ample fireplace.

It was a congenial life and Henrietta Ewing was genuinely sorry when her period of residence here came to an end and she returned to her home land.

It is interesting to note that the author of "Amelia and the Dwarfs" had a literary background and was culturally happy in her marriage, her mother was Mrs. Gatty, author of "Parables From Nature," which is a children's classic. Her husband, Major Ewing, was a composer and in addition to many less known achievements, composed one of the popular settings for that time-honored hymn, "Jerusalem the Golden."

FLIER LANDS BURNING PLANE

Santa Monica, Calif., August 25.—By skilful manoeuvring, Art Wilson, stunt flier landed safely here yesterday after his plane caught fire at an altitude of 2,000 feet. He brought the blazing craft down in a tight spiral. A few seconds after he leaped from the ship it was consumed by the flames.

Details Make the Simple Frock Smart

Above's you noticed how some of the simplest, most unpretentious little frocks have an individuality all their own? Simple lines are always in good taste and when they are set off by a distinctive bit of trimming, as pictured here, the costume is sure to be very chic. Here a slip-over frock has its skirt attached across the front in a novel pointed style, and the stitching that edges these diamond-shaped points combines part way down the inverted plaits. A narrow belt travels through bound slashes in the edges, a narrow band edges the V neck and a flower graces the shoulder.

"STUTTERING JIM" FOUND DEAD IN B. C

Quesnel, B.C., By C.P., Aug. 25.—"Stuttering Jimmie," one of the oldest Indians in the Quesnel Reserve, coal, guide, packer and familiar character in the Cariboo country for fifty odd years, was found dead on a trail here recently, a victim of heart disease.

The aged Indian was one of the aides of Cataline, the famous old pack-train chief of early days. He was a cook with the party that built the historic overland trail from Quesnel to Bassiton, when the "poor man' route" to the Klondike was under way

APPLY SAGE TEA TO DARKEN FADED HAIR

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added will turn gray streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients. It is known as Wyeth's Sage & Sulphur Compound and can be obtained at all drug stores for only 75 cents a bottle.

While gray faded hair is not sinful we desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeths Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You can dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.

Savage Gales Cause Death And Destruction Along Atlantic Seaboard---10 Reported Drowned

VISITS OLD HOME AFTER ABSENCE OF MANY YEARS

Old Lawrence Homestead Was Located On Present Belleville Cemetery

U. E. L. STOCK

Now a Railway Official In U. S. Living In Milwaukee

Forty-five years ago, George S. Lawrence, now a high official with the Chicago and North Western Railway with headquarters at Milwaukee, Wis., last saw Belleville. To-day he came back on his way home from Montreal and made a pilgrimage to his birth place and the scenes of his early childhood.

Belleville was not much of a place when Mr Lawrence last saw it. It was just a good sized country town without paved streets or good sidewalks and with very few buildings of any size even on its Front Street.

The old Lawrence homestead was situated where the Belleville Cemetery now is. It was first settled by Robert Lawrence an United Empire Loyalist sometime around 1800. The house in which this morning's visitor was born still stands and is occupied by the Phillips family and Mr. Lawrence estimates that it is about one hundred and fifty years old. It is in good condition and although the house has been remodelled—two rooms are much the same as Mr. Lawrence remembers as a boy.

The Lawrence family removed to Colborne 83 years ago where they lived for about seven years and visited Belleville each year. It was a long drive, in those days and the trip was not made oftener than about once in a twelve months as the roads were bad and the railway service none too good. The family later moved to Michigan.

Mrs. Lawrence accompanied her husband on his visit to his old home although she was born in Nebraska, she is a descendant of the Jones family, after which Jones' Creek is named on which spot their farm was located. As a child she used to visit the old homestead and played with the boy who later was to become her husband in another land.

WHALE TOO HEAVY TO TAKE THE AIR

Southampton, Eng., Aug. 26.—Mechanics worked all through the night drawing oil from Capt. Courtney's flying boat "Whale" and making a thorough check of mechanism of the flying boat, whose heavy fuel load has baffled several attempts to get her into the air. It was stated at Capt. Courtney's camp to-day that another attempt will be made to start the trans-Atlantic flight to America not later than six o'clock to-night.

FLIGHT WILL START SOME TIME TODAY

Roosevelt Field, L. N. Y., Aug. 26.—The monoplane "Old Glory," loaded and fueled, perched at the runway top today, earth-bound by fresh east winds that definitely precluded the take off on the non-stop flight to Rome. The "lop-off" is set for the first moment between ten in the morning and seven in the evening "that wind and other atmospheric conditions are favorable."

VICTIM'S WIDOW GRANTED $12,000

New York, Aug. 26.—The Board of Estimate awarded Adolfo Miranda in cash to Mrs. Frances Golden, widow of Samuel Golden, who was killed August 14, when, at the order of a policeman, he assisted in chasing a fugitive.

During the pursuit Golden was shot at Sixty-ninth Street and Columbus Avenue. The theory is that a police bullet ricocheted and hit him, as investigation failed to establish that any shots were fired, aside from those fired by police.

BEFORE AND AFTER PRISON TERM

Pictures Show Sp an of Five Years

Horatio Bottomley, the former British parliamentarian and hero of the masses today, presents a physical contrast with the man who, in the years prior to 1922, exerted mighty power in the inner councils. LEFT, is a picture taken five years ago of the former legislator, whose support, more than that of anyone else, was sought before conscription was introduced. RIGHT, as Bottomley is today, on his release from prison. He can regain his seat, he boasts.

Ten Lives Already Reported Lost At Sea—More Feared

90 MILE GALE

Communications Broken In Nova Scotia—Much Damage

Halifax, Aug. 26.—Lines of communication, thrown into untold confusion when Wednesday night's gale and rain storm suddenly broke over Nova Scotia, destroying light and communication facilities, leveling crops and wrecking shipping and wiping out the lives of at least nine people, were being slowly restored today but reports from outlying districts were still meagre and the whole story of devastation following the worst storm experienced in Nova Scotia in 54 years will not be told in its entirety for some days.

Nova Scotia felt the full fury of the storm and damage has been estimated at more than a million dollars. Dominion Atlantic Railway reported 22 washouts between Halifax and Yarmouth alone while highways in some sections were right feet under water.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 26.—Reports from Cape Cod to Newfoundland today revealed what trepidation further reports from their fishing fleets who had already told of nine dead, four missing and many injured, with ships lost or broken by the force of the tropical hurricane which swept up the coast Several damage to ships and lighthways was reported from land but the toll of life was exacted at sea. As the storm swept northward, came reports first of the grounding of three yachts in Nantucket then the grounding of one schooner and dismasting of another off Cape Cod, three vessels and dozens of small craft wrecked in Nova Scotia, one sunk, six grounded and two forced adrift at St. Pierre, Miquelon, with the storm still raging at St. Johns, Nfld.

Halifax, N.S., Aug. 26.—The toll of known dead in the storm of Wednesday night was increased to ten when it became known today that the tern schooner Sligo, which was found awash off Prospect, this county, yesterday with the drowned body of a boy in the forecastle, was manned only by the owner, Arthur Covey and his fourteen-year-old son. It is presumed that the little craft was struck by the storm and capsized while making for shelter and that the man was washed overboard while the boy was trapped in the forecastle.

SPEEDING MOTOR STRUCK WOMAN TO QUICK DEATH

Police Arrest Suspect After All-Day Search Near Newcastle

CAR STOLEN

Second Girl Was Seriously Injured—Waiting To Cross Road

Oshawa, Ont., Aug. 26.—Struck down on the Kingston highway about three miles east of Oshawa, while attempting to cross the highway, one-year-old Mrs. Helen Brown 974 Simcoe Street south, was instantly killed, while Miss Florence Appleton, 24 Stonewood Avenue, Toronto, was seriously injured. The death car, late on late last night from a point at the the side of a house on Alexander Boulevard, and sped onward leaving the body of Mrs. Brown a distance of eight feet. At courtice the driver stopped, abandoned the car and fled but after an all-day search the provincial police made the arrest at six o'clock last evening near Newcastle of Walter Symons who gave his address as Oshawa.

The car in which Mrs. Brown and Miss Appleton were riding had just drawn up in front of "The House Dan Jack Built," a roadhouse on the Kingston highway, operated by Mrs. Brown's sister, Mrs. L. M. Prior. Detective Ward, of the Toronto police force was driver of the car and the fourth occupant was Henry Levy, 31 Markham Street. Toronto Ward had driven up from the east and had parked his car with lights on, partially off the pavement on the left or south side of the road. Suddenly the lights of the swiftly approaching car appeared. At the same time Mrs. Brown followed by Miss Appleton stepped from Ward's car on the north side and stood for a short second for the approaching car to pass. The right front fender of the oncoming car, a roadster, owned by David Prusky, of Peterboro, crashed the open door of the Ward car, then struck Mrs. Brown and Miss Appleton.

In the confusion which followed not a thought was given to following the speeding car. Mrs. Brown and her son, Kenneth, were aroused and after a short search Kenneth found the body of his aunt, in the south ditch.

On examination it was found that Mrs. Brown had suffered a fractured skull and terrible internal injuries and that death had been instantaneous. Miss Appleton was suffering from severe cuts and bruises and from shock she was taken to the Oshawa General Hospital to which she will be confined for a few days.

BAR SHOULD NOT WASTE ITS TIME

Outspoken Delegate Startles Meeting By His Plain Speech

Toronto, Aug. 26.—P. T. Condon, the Yukon delegate to the Canadian Bar Association's meeting threw a bomb-shell into the deliberations of the association which were presided over by Hon. R. B. Bennett, K.C., to-day. "If every judge in the Dominion should resign, there would be no difficulty in finding every position in the country with men of just as much talent and ability" he declared, "There is no reason why the Bar should yearly burden itself with such unpopular duties as bringing back titles, as suggested by W. F. Ponton, of Belleville, in connection with the revision of the Bar constitution."

The question of higher salaries for judges has been much discussed at the present gathering and Mr. Condon's opinion was much more out-spoken than the opinion expressed by Sir Robert Borden yesterday.

CONVICT STATES HE SET 17 FIRES

Confesses To Burning Ste. Anne De Beaupre And Quebec Basilica

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 26.—Burning of 17 Roman Catholic churches in Canada was described today in affidavits signed by Jack Marsden, convict in the Ohio Penitentiary, and turned over to Archbishop Gauthier.

Marsden, serving a term for similar acts in the United States, said he was paid not to divulge details of the affidavits until Canadian officials have had an opportunity to apprehend other members of the gang.

However, it was thought he implicated no others. Fifteen of the church fires described were those of the Shrine of Ste. Anne de Beaupre and the Basilica in the City of Quebec.

Marsden, who admitted burning a number of Roman Catholic churches in several States when arrested at Upper Sandusky, Ohio, two months ago, said that he and his companions singled out Catholic churches, because of the richer value of the loot in them. He said the sanz gang operated both in Canada and the United States, but that none of the others had been apprehended.

ATTEMPTING NEW FLIGHT RECORDS

Paul Redfern Started 46000 Mile Non-Stop Trip To Brazil

St. Peterburgh, Fla., Aug. 26.—Radio message from Station 4AQF Nassau, picked up here by financial journals whose station today said that Port of Brunswick, piloted by Paul Redfern, was sighted 300 miles east of British Bahamas by steamer. Plane was flying altitude of about 2,000 feet headed in southerly direction, last night.

Brunswick, Ga., Aug. 26.—The vast expanse of sea and sky stretching away to the tropics today took behind its walls of silence the fate of it's newest explorer. Roaring away from Brunswick at noon yesterday in the face of unusually favorable weather conditions, Paul Redfern, Cleveland aviator, piloted his huge Sikman Detroiter monoplane seaward on a proposed 46,000 mile non-stop journey to Rio De Janeiro. He sought to establish new endurance and distance marks.

Despite head winds forecast, Redfern today should be far along on his route through the tropics, steering a course east of the Bahamas. The young bird man headed for Natal, Rio, which his flight schedule indicated he should have reached by midnight. Pressing on Redfern hoped to be speeding during the day over the waters of the Caribbean sea toward the Isle of Trinidad. The daring birdman had not been heard from since his plane winged its way out over the Atlantic.

Naval men said that if Redfern reach ed his objective it would be neither short of a miracle. They estimated he would miss his objective at Rio De Janeiro by about 450 miles, as they did not believe his gasoline supply would last more than 57 hours while with favorable conditions it would take sixty two hours to reach his goal. They believe when he reaches the north western coast of Brazil he will turn east to Pernambuco.

Departure was made one hour earlier than the schedule called for, the change being made to permit the overseas cabinet minister to keep an appointment with Henry Ford today! Commander Byrd left for Boston last night by train.

President Of Irish Free State Springs Political Surprise

SEPT. ELECTION

Apparently Anxious To Take Full Advantage Of Public Opinion

Dublin, Irish Free State, Aug. 26.—Swiftly following upon their election victories, the Cosgrave Government last night threw a bombshell into the political situation in the shape of a proclamation calling for the immediate dissolution of the Free State Legislature and for a general election, which will be held about the middle of September.

As soon as the results of the elections, upon which the Government had staked its existence, were known, the executive council decided to take full advantage of the present favorable situation for the Government, and advised Governor-General Healy to proclaim dissolution of the present Dail Eireann.

Tremendous Surprise

This course, which caused tremendous surprise in political circles, it is felt, will prevent a Republican rally from the weak position shown by today's polling figures in the two by-elections in Dublin County held yesterday. There had been some doubts about the legality of the Government's course, since it was generally believed that the Government would require the assent of the Dail to parliamentary dissolution, but it is assumed that the Ministers have taken legal advice on their constitutional position.

The results of the by-elections to fill the vacancies caused by the deaths of Vice- President Kevin O'Higgins and the Countess Markievicz showed that all overwhelming defeat had been inflicted upon the Republican party. Gerald Boyle, running to fill the vacancy caused by the assassination of Vice-President O'Higgins, captured the seat for the Government party by a plurality of more than 22,000 polling 31,986 votes to 9,986 for Robert Brennan de Valera candidate, and 1,228 for Dr. Kathleen Lynn, Sinn Fein candidate.

In the other by-election to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Countess Markievicz, the Government victory was not so overwhelming. Dr. Thomas Bodkin, Government party candidate, received 34,139 votes; R. Briscoe of Texas, the de Valera Republican group, polled 24,047 and Charles Murphy, Sinn Fein, 1,319.

JUST WAITING NOW FOR WEATHERMAN

London, Ont., Aug. 26.—Experts from the Stinson Aviation Works at Detroit, arrived here today to inspect the Sir John Carling in which Lieut. Medcalf and Capt. Tully attempted a Western hop-off from here the next few days. The plane arrived here last week from the Isle of Trinidad. The daring birdman had not been heard from since his plane winged its way out over the Atlantic.

Naval men said that if Redfern reach ed his objective it would be neither short of a miracle. They estimated he would miss his objective at Rio De Janeiro by about 450 miles, as they did not believe his gasoline supply would last more than 57 hours while with favorable conditions it would take sixty two hours to reach his goal. They believe when he reaches the north western coast of Brazil he will turn east to Pernambuco.

EXTEND RADIUS OF THE SEARCH

San Francisco, Aug. 26.—A spot in the Pacific more than six hundred miles northwest of Honolulu was today set by Admiral Richard Jackson, commander-in-chief of the battle fleet, as the farthest objective point of the search planes in the navy's new hunt for Miss Mildred Doran of Flint, Mich., and six others lost trans-Pacific flyers. Admiral Jackson from his flagship anchored in the bay here, transmitted by radio orders that will prolong the epochal search for "four or five days" and extend it five hundred miles further.

THE WEATHER

Moderate winds east to east winds, fine and rather cool today and Saturday.

PROSPERITY AHEAD

Unless some chance misfortune intervenes within the next three weeks the West will yield one of the greatest crops that Canada has harvested in years. An unusual rainfall in May and June resulted in a reduced acreage in Saskatchewan and Manitoba, but being compensated for by a recent Government estimate of not more than 250,000 bushels. Recent weather, however, has been so favorable as to compel the total revision of that estimate and the most conservative observers on the grainer are now confidently predicting a harvest of 250,000,000—which would be one of the greatest in our history.

For five years in succession now Canada has been blessed with rich harvests. If, as now seems probable, a sixth is to be added, a tremendous impetus will be given to the prosperity of the country.

For, in the last analysis, there is no factor so potent in the material progress of a nation as a rich agriculture of production. If evidence of this were required, it is surely seen in the record of the past five years. During 1926 and 1921, following a series of bad crops, Canada passed through the shadows. The farmers of the West, harassed by a spectre of foreclosed mortgages, were disconsolate pessimism. Industry, deprived of a rich prairie market was depressed; railways, with little grain to haul east and little freight to haul west, were in distress; money became scarce; emigration became a national nightmare.

Five rich harvests have changed everything. Today Western Canada is experiencing an astonishing prosperity. The mortgages are all discharged and the general air of failure that so impressed visitors six or seven years ago, and which gave rise to so much wild talk in Parliament, are no longer evident. In their place there exists a new and stronger confidence in the country; a greater and more varied agricultural production, and a wonderful development of west ern cities.

It is a change that is reflected throughout the whole country. A western harvest that puts more than 200,000,000 into the pockets of west ern farmers must necessarily mean a good deal to the industrial east. It means a rich new home market for our manufacturers; a consequent increased employment for Canadian workers; traffic for Canadian railways; trade for Canadian ports. Its effect, indeed, can hardly be measured.

Canada, truly, is being blessed by Providence. Our forests and our mines now do their richest in monthly revenue; our trade with the world grows; bank deposits increase; national revenues surpass all predictions; unemployment is negligible. Whatever mistakes we may make in policy all seem to be so much offset by the favors vouchsafed to us. While much of the world is in turmoil, with economic difficulties and social unrest plague so many of the peoples, Canada remains a cosy corner of the world, its troubles comparatively nothing. It is something for which all of us should be humbly and everlastingly grateful.

CHEERFUL LETTERS

Maybe you never thought about it, but a cheerful letter is a fine thing, and it is just as easy to write a cheerful letter as a gloomy one. Of course some of us are better writers than others, but there is no reason why the ordinary letter can not be cheerful there is no good reason why the ordinary writer or the poor writer, can not attempt a cheerful note when writing the ordinary letter.

Cheer is a big thing. The clever writer of a business letter studies the scientific meaning of the word; he knows all about it—psychologically and temperamentally. The bulk of a business letter may be purely matter-of-fact in text, yet, somewhere, the clever writer will sound the cheerful note that leaves a splendid taste in the mouth of the reader.

You are always glad to receive letters from some people. Why? The answer is that you know their letters are cheerful, that these writers have a way of telling things without the gloomy aspects, and—well, you just feel good over hearing from them. That's all. Again, there are some people who seemed determined to look altogether on the dark side of everything and their view are invariably reflected in the letters they send out to their friends and their business correspondents.

A cheerful letter is like a beacon light to a weary traveler who has lost his way; it comes with all the refreshing sweetness of a summer morn and the honeyed sunshine of spring.

TOO SENSITIVE

It is flatly stated by a London weekly not overly careful of its manner or expression that Canadian audiences are sometimes "stupidly sensitive," the remark having been made in connection with commercial travellers' success in Mr. Baldwin when in Canada. That may be due to our youth as a political entity and related to the ambition now general for exercise of complete autonomy and recognition as a self-governing nation. Extreme sensitivity is not an admirable quality and we are not pleased to be thought of in that light.

Most Canadians like public affairs seriously, for fire has been very much that way with most of us. Mr. Baldwin treated us with respect in offering the assurance early in his speeches of the virility and energy of Great Britain, and in discussing public questions with a fair association of the theoretical and practical in them, being careful to inform himself in advance on domestic and local affairs. There was a complete absence in him of anything like patronage or condescension and we parted with him the very best of friends. He was the incarnation of the democratic equality of which we had heard so much in the past year and beyond all doubt his visit was for the mutual good of all concerned.

HAVE YOU HEARD THESE?

Mr. Goodwaite—Hello! Didn't I discharge you on Saturday?

Butler—Yes sir, and please don't do it again. There was an awful fight when I went home and told my wife.

Stranger—Fine piece of land you have. Price too high for a poor man I suppose?

Farmer—It's worth every cent of fifteen hundred dollars an acre. Are you thinking of buying and settling in this part of the country?

Stranger—Oh, no. I'm the new tax assessor.

The company needed a good bugler and a wizened little fellow from the ranks stepped forward at the announcement.

"Are you a good bugler?" asked the captain.

"No, sir, I'm no bugler!" the private declared, as though he had been insulted.

"Well, for the love of the army and navy, why did you step forward then?"

"Well sir, I thought you said 'burglar.'"

CALUMNY

A whisper woke the air,
A soft, light tone and low,
Yet barbed with shame and woe.

Nor further go!
Ah! might it only perish there.

But not a quick and eager ear
Caught up the ittle, meaning sound;
Another voice has breathed it clear;
And so it wandered round
From ear to lip, from lip to ear,
Until it reached a gentle heart
That shrobbed from all the world apart
And that—it broke!

It was the only heart it found,—
The only heart twas meant to find.
When first its accents were breathed,
It reached that gentle heart at last,
And that—it broke!

FLIES UNDER HANDICAP

High River, Alta., August 26.—Travelling under a severe handicap owing an injury to his right hand, Flying Officer Thomas Shields, of the Royal Canadian Air Force, Winnipeg, commenced the return non-stop flight from the High River air station to Winnipeg, at 7 a.m., mountain standard time, today. He is flying alone.

During his stay at High River, Flight Officer Shields suffered an injury to his hand and during his flight he will be forced to work the control of his plane with his left hand.

The distance by air from High River station to Winnipeg is approximately 775 miles.

He made the trip last week from Winnipeg to High River in eight hours and twenty minutes, establishing a new Canadian record.

THIS SHOWS THE GREAT NEED OF FLY-TOX

United States government authorities show that under favorable conditions with a beginning of one male and one female fly, they may increase in one season to over 90,500,000,000,000 flies. This shows the need of Fly-Tox. Sold everywhere.

Premier Interviews Car Inspector

When Premier Stanley Baldwin was travelling through the Maritime Provinces over the lines of the Canadian National Railways he evinced keen interest in all matters concerning transportation. At Truro, N.S., Mr. Baldwin asked D. A. McKay, Car Inspector, "Did you examine the wheels of my car?"

"Yes sir. They are all right", answered the Inspector.

Mr. Baldwin then asked a number of questions about the work of Inspectors, remarking that in England they were called "car tappers," and using the longer hammer used in Canada.

"Yours is a responsible work" commented Mr. Baldwin as the train drew out.

DESCO CLUB ASK GAME RE-PLAYED

Feel That Injustice Has Been Done By League Executive

The officers and members of the Desco Club in due respect to their baseball team and the loyal fans who supported them so nobly during the present season, wish to state their position regarding the protest made in the play-off game with the Centenac Baseball Club.

The Tricolours and the Desco Club had played their previous play-off games, winning one apiece. The third game was the final and deciding game for the championship. This game was scheduled to start at 6.15 and the result is a unique one to be played which could require to complete a regulation game. Darkness overtook the ball game and the Desco Club were the first half of the seven innings, with one out. The officials found it necessary to call the game and award the trophy to the Tricolours. This they now protest. Privily the game did not start on schedule owing to the lateness of one of the officials, and one of the Desco Club players. When the game was called the Desco Club were at bat with no men out and had men on second and third, scoring several runs. They were quite confident that they were in a batting streak and if the game had been allowed to go on they would have held the victory to at least tying the score, if not winning. However, they were to abide by the officials' decision.

The protest was made according to the Constitution governing the league Competition, section 10, in which it states play-off games shall be 9 innings with 7 required to complete a regulation game. The seventh inning was not completed and therefore the game was not according to regulation.

The committee has every confidence in their players and are regret to say only a partial attendance was on hand, the second vice-president and the president being absent. Two of the three present members decided in favor of the Frontenac Club and their decision was final.

We wish to show good sportsmanship in this matter and are willing to abide by the decision, but at the same time wish to state our position. We do not feel it has been a fair deal to the girls on the team. They are willing on any occasion, agreed by both clubs to play off the seven innings or to play another game. This we feel, is a fair proposition and would clear any misunderstanding.

We feel this is due to ourselves and for the sake of the sport in the City of Belleville we hope that the Executive will reconsider their decision and clear up any injustice they have unconsciously done.

MORE TOURISTS

New Brunswick Has 67,000 Cars Up To July 31st

Washington, August 25. — Tourist travel via automobile into New Brunswick has shown an enormous increase during the last year, the Department of Commerce was today advised by Trade Commissioner Thomas A. Johns. More than 67,000 cars had entered the province up to July 31 compared with 43,000 for the corresponding period in 1926, Customs officials, the report continued, are impressed by the tourists' hailing road maps and literature to tour in.

Tourist traffic by automobile to and through St. John has been exceptionally heavy this year, the report of the tourist, it was stated, was especially high, and it is expected that the profit to the New Brunswick business men will average higher than the usual estimate of $1 per person.

NO SECRET AGREEMENT

London, August 26.—British official sources today denied reports of "secret naval agreements."

It was indicated that the report had created official doubt, but that it was deemed unworthy of consideration. It was stated that the only "agreement" to which the publishers referred, namely, refers, was a comprehensive agreement drawn up by Japanese and Italian naval experts, which was rejected by Hugh S. Gibson, head of the United States delegation.

Starting Advances Made

New York, N.Y., Aug. 26.—Establishment of new high records by United States Steel Common, General Motors and General Electric featured the initial hour's business in the stock market. Trading was again in large volume.

Publication of the pamphlet report of the General Motors Corporation, show record breaking earnings for the first six months and the wide spread circulation of private analysis and forecasts of that company's earnings and prospects stimulated the demand for the old stock, which advanced close to the 250 level. The new stock crossed 125.

Despite predictions of a drop in August unfilled orders of the United States Steel Corporation, steel common advanced in a new peak at 141 on buying influenced by predictions of quickening demand from the automobile industry when uncertainly regarding the new Ford car is cleared up. The buying of General Electric was based, in part, on the announced retirement of the company's special stock. Violent advances took place in several specialties.

WHEAT SPOTTY

Chicago, Aug. 26.— Better Liverpool plain expected and scattered buying by houses with seaboard connections gave a lift to Chicago wheat, values during the early trading today. Corn was affected by the action of wheat, but as profit taking and local pressure developed, both grains suffered set back. Opening 3-8 cent to 1 cent up, wheat later declined all the way. Corn started unchanged to 3-8 cent higher and subsequently eased off with wheat. Oats sympathized with other cereals and provisions were firm in line with stronger hog values.

FIFTY ENGLISH BOYS ARRIVED

Edmonton, Alta., Aug. 26 (By Canadian Press).—Fifty British boys sent out from the Labor Ministry's training schools in England, arrived in Edmonton recently. Fifteen of the boys were dropped at Dayland and other points in central Alberta on the way to Edmonton and the majority of the others left Edmonton in a day or two for Westlock and the Peace River country.

"They are a splendid type of young settler and have been on life in the new land," says the Edmonton Journal. "They have all been instructed in the various trades in the training schools at Brandon and Clayton, in Suffolk, England. These schools were established by the British labor ministry to interest boys in agricultural opportunities in the Dominion. The equipment is all Canadian and the boys are taught the methods of farming in vogue in the Dominion, including dairy work and general work of the farm, such as rough carpentering, blacksmithing and lumbering.

A shoe shine stand was the first thing that aroused the wonder of the boys. "Look, Bill," said Wallace, "look at that man sitting in a chair and getting his shoes polished." The boys gazed in wonder at this sight, as they did at the barber College where a row of men were being shaved.

The boys range in age from 18 to 21 years old and are being placed with various farmers in the northern sections of the province.

Women's News and Views

FALLING OUT OF LOVE A WOMANS' PREROGATIVE

He can't believe that she doesn't love him any more. Why, they were such wonderful friends for two years.

He was twenty-seven and she several years older, but that didn't seem to make any difference. She certainly acted as if she thought the world of him. They were always together and if she couldn't keep a date, she explained all about it, even though he didn't ask for an explanation. Then about three months ago a change came.

"Her interest in me seemed to die out," writes poor "Lovesick and Weak."

"Before that we had been inseparable. When I first met her I acted indifferent and I think my indifference held her. Then I showed her how crazy I was about her and I think perhaps I lost her that way.

"She tells me that her feeling toward me has changed and that she can't help it. But I can't understand. If there isn't anyone else why shouldn't she go on loving me? She says there isn't anyone and I'm sure she's telling me the truth and yet she doesn't want me around.

"It's just killing me. I have set my heart on this girl and I can't be happy without her. I have lost a good job because I'm so upset. If you can help me I will be indebted to you for life."

Do you really want to be helped, Buddy? Then here's some medicine that will cure you, if you're grit enough to take it.

Stop feeling yourself!

Face the truth!

This girl has lost her interest in you. She has forced your society for a while, but that enjoyment didn't deepen into real devotion and now it is gone. Now there doesn't need to be any other man in the case. A girl can fall out of love with one man without falling in love with another. She has really no more control over her feeling than you have. She can't force herself to love you, no matter how deeply she may appreciate your kindness. Your two gestures don't click—that's all. And you'll have to grin and bear it, Bud.

There is just one chance of winning her back. Perhaps you have wearied her with your persistence, disturbed and disgusted her with your emotional pleas and your lack of self-control, self-controlled men. And since this woman is several years older than you are, she may be more apt to regard you as weak and immature. If you back up your pleading a little manly spunk she may admire you again. here's hoping!

Harvey's next with his problem.

Have you ever had a Heavy Friend? One of those intense souls who insists on taking life seriously and gets out to the heart if you are a bit flippant? Yea! Then you'll feel for HARVEY.

DEAR KLEIN:

I sure have a fierce problem. I have a girl friend of whom I am very fond. I would like to take her around but she wants to be serious all the time and I can't see it. Consequently we quarrel when ever we go out. How do girls get that way?

I like this girl but I am not in love with any girl. I like to be friends to all of them. A short while ago I took another girl to a dance and there sure was trouble. My friend got jealous and hasn't spoken to me since.

Now I simply won't become serious and yet I hate not to dance or speak to this girl, she is, in many ways the best companion I've had. But we're both too young to think of serious affairs. Can you tell how I can make her feel differently? HARVEY.

Leave her alone for a while son. It will be a hard lesson, but she'll have to learn it. Girls are, as a rule, apt to take their friendships more seriously than boys. That is because love is woman's main business in life—but men have other interests as well. Also, a girl of eighteen, nineteen or twenty is actually much older than a boy of the same age. She is ready for mature responsibilities—ready to be sweetheart, wife and mother.

CURSE OF LOVE

by Mildred Barlow

CHAPTER 40
The Pact

Fanny, beating frenziedly at the locked front door of the house of sin cheé, the Cochon, glanced back, terrified, in the direction from which the horrible sounds came.

The hall was dim, but, in a path of light at the top of the staircase, she could see Sanchez. His claw-like hand was upraised, as if he cursed some unseen presence. His face was distorted. Even while she looked, he doubled up and collapsed, moaning like an animal in pain.

Fanny felt consciousness leaving her A moment more and she knew that she would faint. Her self-control, ordinarily, the Hindu servant appeared be side her. His face was impassive as unharred and swung open the door, always. With a deft movement, he motioning her to go.

Terror lent wings to her feet. She ran through the garden, thankful for the reassurance of the moon-filled twilight. It was not until she reached the street, panting that she looked back. Passersby were staring at her, and that brought her to her senses.

She forced herself to walk quietly, bethought herself of her appearance, and opening her bag, examined the mirror of her vanity-case. Her face, was as white as chalk, and the rouge on her cheeks stood out in great grim son blotches. Very deliberately, she powdered her nose and chin. Then she found the case and put it back in her bag.

It was only at this moment that she remembered the black opal—the priceless jewel that she had left behind her in the hook of Sanchez.

But wild horses couldn't have dragged her back to that sinister place. With a shrug, she resigned herself to the worthless of Pale. The last hope of making the money to buy herself and her husband to a place of safety far from last night's crime was gone. She and "Slippery Sam" would have to face whatever consequences followed that unfortunate encounter on the beach.

She let herself into their rooming-house with her latchkey. Her head was leaden with its sense of failure. She dreaded having to disappoint her husband, for she knew he would be waiting eagerly, with bags packed, ready to flee.

A door at the foot of the stairway opened, and her landlady's sharp-nosed face appeared.

"Oh, it's you. Well, they've took him."

"Took who?" demanded Fanny.

"Your man. The police came, just after you'd gone, and arrested him."

Fanny's heart stood still.

"What's they talky him?" she asked breathlessly. Her landlady being of the underworld, she knew subterfuge was useless.

"For that there bank robbery last night."

Fanny's plump hand went to her throat in a gesture that bespoke both relief and despair.

"He never done that job," she cried shrilly.

The landlady smiled crookedly. "Let him tell it to the judge."

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

Will you please tell me your opinion on flirting? For instance, my two girl chums and I often take walks in the afternoons, and lots of nice-looking boys pass, blow the horns, smile and drive on. Do you think it improper for us to speak to them?

THE QUESTIONERS.

THE QUESTIONER: My dear, you must remember that flirting leads to unconventional introductions which are often hazardous. The proper introduction gives a slight guarantee of the man' character and is a voucher for his decency which usually can be relied upon. The man who is not afraid of the pale of conventionalities feels no responsibility for the laws of propriety and takes for granted that the girl who accepts his invitation likewise is irresponsible and is willing to take a chance merely for the sake of a good time.

So, my dear, you should not smile back or speak to these boys for that only encourages them to take the next step and give the mihe wrong impression. I must caution you against ever meeting young men in this manner, for it is a very dangerous thing to do. And what you think will only be an innocent flirtation may terminate in something rather serious and degrading to your self-respect. If you should happen to make a practice of it you will awake one day to find yourself with an undesirable reputation. Simply ignore the boys when they approach you and they will receive your rebuke and cease annoying you. Remember, that no boy admires a girl who is unconventional and bold, and he never admits her to his circle of friends.

"It's a frame-up!" declared Fanny hysterically. "I tell you, he never done it! He wasn't anywhere near that bank last night; he was—" she stopped and gulped.

"Slippery Sam's" alibi, she knew, was useless; worse than useless—dangerous. He had, perhaps, killed a man at the beach, while the bank was being robbed. Now, he was caught in a net of Fate's own weaving.

Fanny asked the landlady where they had taken him and, upon being told, she left the woman abruptly and went out of the house. But she wasn't allowed to see her husband at the police station. He was undergoing a stiff grilling.

Dispiritedly, she retraced her steps. Without notice, she couldn't engage a lawyer to look after her husband's interests. She had no hope, only a dull, ceaseless ache in her heart for the weak little man she loved with all her soul.

Hardly realizing what she was doing, she walked in the direction of the home of old Sanchez. Somewhere within her was a vague idea that even yet she might get something for the black opal. Perhaps the old man had now recovered and would let a message for her with the Hindu servant. Nothing could persuade her to enter the house, but dire necessity could drive her to the door itself.

Before she turned the corner of the street, she saw a crowd, curious and gaping, outside the garden gate of the Sanchez house. There was a closed van, like a private hospital ambulance, in front of the door. A man sat, with an apron over her head, was standing on the basement steps of the house next door. She was dispensing information to the onlookers and she leaned from the corner in fashion at Fanny, who stopped beside her.

"What's happened?" asked Fanny carelessly.

"The old man's been took with an attack of some sort. Crazy, I wouldn't wonder. They're taking him to an asylum."

"Who is he? Fanny asked innocent ly.

"An old not that lives all alone. I've always said to my husband —, we're the care-takers here when the family's away—that no was noghouse living all alone like that with their haythen servant." She lowered her voice. "It's strange thing's that went on there o' nights. Seems like he prayed in a funny language to some haythen god, and they do say he made offerings on a kind of altar he'd built."

Fanny shuddered. Her eyes were fixed on the door of the Sanchez house. Presently it opened, and three people appeared. Sanchez, old and stooped, staring dully before him, was in the middle. On either side was a man, one wore the white uniform of a hospital attendant; the other was gray and scholarly-looking with scant gray hair and a pince-nez. Behind them came a trim, plump little woman, wearing an air of great distress.

"Them's his only friends," volunteered Fanny's informant, motioning to the grayish man and the plump little woman. "He's a professor of something or other—digs up mummies and things. She's his wife.—Nana's Lind, I've heard . Nobody else ever came there to see him.

Fanny turned away without a fare well. She saw no reason for remaining. If Sanchez had friends there was no hope of her slipping back and regaining the black opal.

She reached home, let herself into the house, and ascended dispiritedly to her bedroom. Its desolate air struck her with the force of a physical blow. For the first time, she realized how terribly alone she was without Sam. There was nothing to look for ward to. He would not return to her that day or for many, many days to come—more days than she dared count. He would never be able to convince the police of his innocence as to the bank robbery without involving himself in the affair at the beach It was all quite, quite hopeless.

Fanny sat quietly in her chair for a long time and the tears trickled slowly down her smooth white cheeks Suddenly she raised her hands with a gesture of utter despair.

"It's the opal!" she whispered. "I've done us in. A curse upon it! A curse upon it! Oh, Sammy boy!"

To Be Continued

Other Professions Must Raise Their Bids or Lose, Says Leader

New York City—Unless other professions increase the financial inducements they offer to college graduates, the jazz band industry is going to be overcrowded, declares Jack Denny, orchestra leader.

Mr. Denny is a graduate of DePauw University. Every year in his orchestra is a college graduate.

"The best bet for the boy who comes out of college is a jazz band," he said, so far as salary is concerned, three hundred American undergraduates jazzed their way through Europe. This fall, several thousand boys are going with bands to help pay their way through college. Many of them quickly earned from one hundred dollars to two hundred dollars a week while "on tour."

"Unfortunately, the lure of the money is sometimes so strong that some of them forsake their colleges before they graduate, to become jazz musicians. Ten years ago there were no college men in professional dance orchestras. Now, it is safe to say that ninety per cent. of the musicians are men with one, two, and sometimes three degrees.

"Fox trots such as "There's a Boatman on the Erie," which have become immensely popular, are easy to learn because of their simple rhythm and in a few months a man can get a full dance repertoire. In a little while, he is able to earn ten thousand dollars a year. What other business would afford any such salary unday at least five years and maybe two? Big business will have to take steps, or rather dig in their pockets a good deal deeper than they do, if they want to get new blood into their business."

Mr. Denny insists that all the members of his band shall be American. He claims that foreigners can never get the swing of jazz. Qualities which each man must have include initiative, imagination, inventiveness and optimism.

LINDY SPRANG FROM OBSCURE YOUTH TO FAME

Spent Boyhood Tinkering With Motors; Abandoned University

From all obscure boyhood, spent thik ering with motors, and adolescence in which he abandoned a college education, Charles Augustus Lindbergh rose to international fame as the first man to make a non-stop flight from New York to Paris. In his home land he became the living symbol of American youth and manhood, thru ugh his exhibition of the qualities of modesty, sportsmanship, courage and high purpose.

The story of his life, in which the erratic stunts usually chlled from the lives of genius are absent, could be drawn more easily than written. For it is a straight line that begins low and mounts and mounts until, at its apex, symbolic of his profession, it is in the clouds and rarefied atmosphere of astonishing achievements, with Kings and Queens paying homage to him above the din of the admiration of millions of people.

No great had become his hold upon the minds of people all over the world that the mere mention of his name was a sure invocation of handclapping cheering, and on his breast were hung the highest medals of three nations, while Kings and rulers beseeched him to visit their countries that they might honor more honors and medals upon him.

An air pilot, little more than a boy he was almost unheard of, when he quit the pail service to procure backing for a flight over the Atlantic from St. Louis he obtained the money to build his "Spirit of St. Louis," fair to become other half of the fabulous mortal "we." for he always spoke of himself and his plane with that plural pronoun. Little public notice was attracted during the building of his plane at San Diego, on the Pacific Coast.

It was not until he came sweeping down out of the skies over New York, on his record - making one - stop flight from San Diego in all he captured the fancy of the nation.

CAR PRODUCTION DROPS SHARPLY

Decline Much In Excess Of Seasonal Fall—Comparative Figures

Ottawa, August 26.—Production of automobiles in Canada during July declined sharply to 10,997 cars. This output was 43 per cent. less than the 19,208 cars produced in June, which in turn showed a loss of 25 per cent. from the May output. In July of last year production amounted to 15,306 cars.

Compared with the previous month there was a general decline in output of all kinds of cars with the exception of chassis, which showed a slight increase to 681 from 634. The number of open model passenger cars dropped to 2,194 from 3,713; closed model passenger cars to 8,122 from 13,-and trucks to 2,240 from 3,001. No taxicabs or buses were produced in July, and only four were made in June. The sales value of all cars produced in July amounted to $7,021,000 f.o.b. plants, or 8.7 million dollars less than the sales value of the cars produced in June.

For the seven months ending June, production totalled 137,795 cars, a decrease of ten per cent. from the 146,-086 cars reported for the corresponding period of a year ago. During the first seven months of 1925, production numbered 105,987 cars.

Decline in the production during the last month was considerably in excess of the normal seasonal decline, and it should be noted that although the outputs for the month and for the year to date were lower than during the corresponding periods of last year, it does not necessarily indicate an abnormal curtailment of production by all the motor car manufacturers in Canada. Output from most of the concerns was above the corresponding figures for last year, but one of the larger factories was engaged in making the necessary tool changes to take care of an entirely new model and the lowered output of this plant, covering a period of several months, has temporarily thrown production figures out of line with the general trend of the industry.

During July the apparent consumption of automobiles in Canada as determined by adding the imports of 2,946 to the- 7,195 cars made for sale in Canada, amounted to 10,141 cars. For the first seven months of 1927 the apparent consumption, thus computed, totalled 127,173 cars.

SMALL JEWELLRY NOW IN SETS

Belts, Shoulder Straps, Garters And Hat Motifs Now Match

Paris.—The theme of the set has assumed an unusual importance this season in the collections of manufacturers of fancy jewelry. The former set of bracelet and necklace is now extended to include bracelet, necklace and belt, and sometimes, in the showing of a leading manufacturer, a smaller version of the belt is repeated as hat ornament. Such sets are particularly developed in gold, and they show once more the close co-operation between jewelers the couturiers, the jeweled item becoming so to speak, a part of the costume.

Besides belts matching with necklaces, we are presented this season with sets including necklaces and shoulder straps for evening frocks, and a manufacturer, who strongly patronizes the set theme, is launching a necklace in diamond imitation matching with a pair of garters, which are intended to be worn below the knees. Although not extremely important, foks, wher they are presented, are inclined to follow the same tendency toward harmony, and frequently they are present ed with collar and bracelet.

The success of the gold jewelry launched by a leading courturier last season had led manufacturers to emphasize gold in their new showings. It seems, however, that metal, either gold or silver, lends itself more easily to the interpretation of modern art, and the recent art exhibits, such as the jewelry exhibit at the salon des Artistes-Decorateurs, which emphasized modern gold jewelry, may be held responsible for a part of the favor accorded this season to gold.

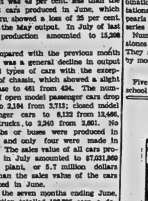

Consequently, the so popular gold snake chain has found derivatives in modern interpretations. The new models are composed of a series of small plaques fitting into each other, and articulated so as to form a flexible chain. Bracelets, more than any other item, reveal the influence of modernism; they continue to be developed to wide bangles presenting by turn an incised treatment, enamel inserts and the various gold appliques.

The important collection of buckles for belts or hats, which is spoken of further on, also emphasizes gold modern jewelry.

Chinese carved jade seems to have in spired the important manufacturers of fancy jewelry strongly. This influence is manifested in styles suggesting antique jade and reproducing Chinese designs. A manufacturer specializing in buckles presents several models of this type, asserting that they have been selected by the Haute Couture, while another leading concern has developed a whole collection of jade items, including brooches, earrings and pendants.

Rhinestones play an important part in the new collections of jewelry. In consideration of the increasing vogue for rhinestones for evening, manufacturers of pearls have been led to make a compromise between pearls and rhinestones, showing combinations of both. This has given rise to many product treatments, composed of a rope of pearls holding a motif of rhinestone. An important concern features the combination of pearl with diamond imitations, in such effect as a collar of pearls with centre section made of a series of diamonds, for instance.

Numerous also are motifs of rhinestone ornaments for hats or dresses. They are inspired, for the most part, by modern designs.

RAILWAYS KICK ON COMPETITION FROM MOTOR BUS

English Roads Complain That There Is Unfair Competition

London, August. 26 (C.P.)—Get ut upon the roads yourselves." This s the exhortation which is now being addressed to directors of British railways when they bewail the increasing and—as they allege—unfair competition to which the railways are subjected from motor transport. Seemingly he companies are taking the advice to heart, for they are jointly about to pro note a Bill in Parliament to enable them to compete freely in road transport. It is hoped by the railways that powers will be obtained under which the companies may develop road services as feeders to the railways themselves. Separate efforts towards this end have previously been made. The North-Western and Midland companies promoted a measure some few years back, but it was withdrawn because the Ministry of Transport insisted that the companies must not charge less upon the road than upon their railways.

The London and North-Eastern Company announce a new experiment in rail transport in the near future which they claim will meet the public need for more intensive passenger services, and which will be applied wherever road competition is being felt jkeenly. The experiment will be with steam rail coaches, single carriage vehicles em traeing engine and coach in one, capable of accommodating 60 passengers. At first the coaches will be run in the industrial districts of the North, but it is likely that they will be employed subsequently on London suburban services during the slack times of the day and on the less congested lines.

The past few weeks of the holiday season have been marked by an abnormal number of road accidents. The rail way companies have issued a notice which, rather unctiously, it is pointed out that not a single railway passenger lost his life or even was injured in the same period.

SAYS AGENDA BARREN

London, August 26.—The diplomatic correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, describes the League of Nations Council's agenda next week as barren, justifying the complaint of French delegates that the League is nowadays restricted by the Great Powers from dealing with any first class international issue.

Of the twenty-nine items on the Council's agenda, there is hardly one, says the Daily Telegraph which could not be handled by senior or junior clerks in the foreign offices or by minor political authorities. It does not contain a word about German disarmament; the occupation of the Rhineland or the Soviet menace in European civilization through the unrest in the Balkans.

As cooling as a summer rain

"We avoid hot, heavy dishes these summer days. Kellogg's Corn Flakes are our standbys. They're so light and crisp, so deliciously flavored! As refreshing as a summer-time shower!"

Kellogg's do help you to keep cool—to feel your finest. They are always easy to digest. And so refreshingly good—more than 11,000,000 people demand them daily.

Serve with milk or cream—and add fruits or honey. Have them for breakfast, lunch—the kiddies' evening meal. Order them at hotels and restaurants. On diners. Sold by all grocers.

Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario. Always oven-fresh in the inner-sealed red-and-green package. Imitations cannot equal Kellogg's wonder-flavor!

PICADILLY IS MUCH ALTERED

One By One Ancient Landmarks Have Disappeared

London, August 26.—The Picadilly mile has seen many changes since it formed part of the "Way of Readelik," when in 1613 Master Robert Baker, Strand tailor and reputed maker of Pickadels—a type of ruff patronized by the gallants of the day—built the first of its houses near the windmill at the top of the Haymarket. One by one its ancient landmarks have risen and disappeared. The mansions of the great families that began after the Restoration to buy up the fields along its site have given way to hotels and shops and clubs and the Tyburn. Instead of fleeing through open country from the heights of Hampstead to the Thames new burrows ingloriously under the dip in the roadway and across the Green Park to flush a sewer. But three centuries of growth and decay and restoration have left, or rather have made Picadilly what it is—the long been—one of the most famous boulevards in Europe.

It is not surprising that the owners of the commercial and private premises along its frontage view with dismay the prospects of the roadway being closed to traffic for a period which may or may not exceed three months. They ought indeed be this time to be well used to the experience. A lithograph of the early forties of the last century presents the now familiar picture of its eastern end blocked by excavations and barriers and piles of carnations drain-pipes and partial road-works of the same kind have since become almost as frequent as rain in July. But never before has Picadilly been "up" on the same wholesale scale as that to which Londoners must now look forward.

The Postmaster-General, the Metropolitan Water Board, and three electric and gas supply companies all have big arrears of subterranean work which must be put in hand sooner or later. By carrying it out simultaneously with the reconstruction of the surface they will be able to execute it with the minimum loss of time and the least possible disturbance. According to an official announcement every effort is to be made, by close co-operation between the different contractors, to complete the reconstruction in three months.

REGINA EXHIBITION NEEDS SHRUBBERY

Regina, Sask., Aug. 26 (By Canadian Press).—Cora Hind, writing of the great success of this year's exhibition has this word also to say, in the way of mild criticism:

"One never visits the grounds of the Regina exhibition without keen regret that all these years the management has neglected the planting of trees and shrubs so that at present the grounds possess no beauty and no shade whatever. The beginning of the little park is possibly an augury of better times to come, but trees cannot be developed in five any shade and restoration have left, or rather have made Picadilly what it is—the long been—one of the most famous boulevards in Europe.

Monte Blue, star of "The Black Diamond Express" the feature Brut. production now at the Belle Theatre, was born in Indianapolis Jan. 1, 1890 and began his career as a cowboy. After a life of adventure as mounted fireman cowboy, sailor, carpenter and soldier, he became an extra for D. W. Griffith and began the screen career which has brought him riches and fame. Among his best known pictures are "The Marriage Circle," "Fine Old Knife," "The Limited Mail," "Red Hot Tires," "Honor's Alley," "The Man Upstairs," "On This a Part," "Across the Pacific", "Wolf's Clothing," "Bitter Apples" and "The Bride."

CAPITOL THEATRE

The large amount of patrons at the Capitol last evening saw another good screen feature in the film presentation of "A Little Journey" starring Claire Windsor, William Haines, and Harry Carey—here and therefore.

Supported with an excellent cast, this film hit from Rachel Crother's great stage success.

Here is a picture that has played Toronto's best theatres.

CAPITOL SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

A good part of the picture is staged aboard the Overland Limited on the trip from New York to San Francisco and flashbacks on the trip include some genuine comedy, and provide many a laugh.

Bassett and Divers were well received in their novelty dancing act, which they put across in good snappy style, their act is above the ordinary.

The closing chapter of "The Collegians" is good, as have been all the others, and another series of this popular picture is promised for the near future.

Altogether the show is good throughout, clean and, refined in picture and in show, and up to the Capitol high standard.

WOMAN APPOINTED McGILL LIBRARIAN

Montreal, Que., August 26 (C.P.)—A woman library expert was recently appointed assistant director of the Library School at McGill University, the first full session course in library science to be instituted in Canada. She is Mrs. Mary Duncan Carter, who is created as supervisor.

"The librarian is the housewife of knowledge. It is the librarian's task to find, know, organize it into order and keep it orderly; to make it habitable and of service to humanity.

"The task of the modern librarian is not merely to index books. To revert to the simile of the housewife: just as it is not enough for her to know how to cook, since she must also know what her household likes and needs, so the mental housewife—the librarian—must know the mental requirements and tastes of her household."

Henry Wardle, coach painter, was sentenced at the Manchester Assizes to 9 months' imprisonment on two charges of bigamy.

BUSTER GEHRIG SLAMS OUT 40TH

Buster Tied Babe As Hogmen Dynamited Crucial Series

Detroit, Mich., August 26.— The Yanks can't seem to get any excitement out of this year's pennant race at all. Every time they run into a "crucial series" and their blood begins to tingle it immediately ceases to be crucial at all.

Another such series was torn to bits and the pieces scattered far and wide yesterday when the Yanks turned the Tigers in the tune of 8 to 2. When the ball maulers from Manhattan arrived here the Tigers were running wild after two straight defeats from the New Yorkers they don't appear so ferocious.

They still cling to second place which they wrested away from the Senators, but they are fourteen and a half games behind the Yanks. The season is two days nearer its'end'completed and the high hopes of Detroit have dimmed, dwindled and died.

About all the Yanks have left to keep the enemy from being completely monotonous in the great American home run handicap between the twin thrillers, Babe Ruth and Buster Gehrig. This little matter took a new turn today when the Buster hit on against the right-field fence and it bounced behind the wire screen and couldn't be recovered.

That blow made the score stand— Ruth 40, Gehrig 40, or as they say at the West Side Tennis Club, deuce. In other words, it's fifty-fifty with the twin thrillers.

The bees were as empty as a padlocked night club when Gehrig put on his specialty act, but it appeared for quite a time, or four innings to be specific, that that one run might decide the game.

Before the Yankees finished their afternoon's exercise, though, four Detroit pitchers had appeared in public and two others were warming up frantically. The alleged pitchers, in the order of their appearance were Earl Whitehill, George Smith, Doc Hasnier and Rip Collins. Taken singly, in pairs or collectively they weren't so good as Herbie Pennock, who hurled for the Yankees from start to finish with ease and dexterity not to mention effectiveness.

Cleveland ran its winning streak to five games and Washington its losing streak to nine games when the Indians won, 7 to 5, at Cleveland. The old wizard Zachary, who started the game, were knocked fro mthe box, and Buckeye who replaced Mudhen, proved to be a better relief pitcher than Marberry. It was Buckeye's first victory over the Nats in the three years he had been with Cleveland. He had been beaten nine times by the Senators.

When reading, what indicates that reading glasses are needed?

The paper is held too far from the eyes.

What is the correct reading distance?

About 13 inches.

Then a person who cannot see clearly to read ordinary print at that distance strains the eyes in attempting to read without glasses?

Yes, but the power which the eyes have lost can be restored by glasses.

LEAFS CLIMBED TO THIRD PLACE

Champs Supplanted Newark Bears With Fifth Straight

Toronto, Aug. 26.—Don Songer, th Leafs' latest addition, held the tail-end Reading Keystoners to six hits in his first start on the home park yesterday, and while he walked four the locals had little difficulty in winning 7 to 2, making a clean sweep of the five-game series, during which they climbed from fifth to third place in the standing.

Three hits after two were out in the first inning gave the Keys their first run, while the second came in the next inning when Oeschger doubled, went to third on Walsh's error and scored when Styles threw into left field in an attempt to cut him off at third. The Leafs manufactured a run in each of the first three innings on one hit in each which in the sixth a couple of errors or sacrifice hits helped to add three more along with as many hits.

The Buffalo Bisons stabbed their toe after taking eight straight and the Baltimore Orioles snapped out of a nine-game losing streak when Earnshaw repulsed the league leaders at Buffalo with a fine pitching exhibition by a score of 10 to 3. Earnshaw handed eight of the Bisons. It was a loosely played game. Rochester made a clean sweep of the Newark series defeating the Bears in the final game at Rochester 12 to 4.

Jim Chaplin, New York Giant recruit from the University of Florida, shut the Stars out at Syracuse, 13 to 0, thus smashing a winning streak that had endured through nine games. Jersey City hit Miller and Blood freely making eight hits off the former and 10 off the latter.

ROOT PITCHED HIS 23RD WIN

Cub Twirling Ace Blanked Phillies While Mates Cracked Fruett

New York, Aug. 26.—Charley Root had no trouble in hanging up his 23rd victory of the season for the Chicago Cubs at Philadelphia yesterday, blanking the Phillies by a score of 8 to 0 and allowing only three hits. Fruett held the Cubs to two runs until he weakened in the eighth and was knocked out of the box, when the visitors scored six runs.

After the Braves had defeated the Pirates, 8 to 1, behind the masterful three-hit pitching of Kent Greenfield in the first game at Boston, the latters slugged their way to an 8 to 1 victory in the second game of a doubleheader. Greenfield has beaten Pittsburgh five times in a row this season.

The fielding of the Waner brothers of Pittsburgh was the feature of the afternoon. The Pirates found their batting eyes in the second game and drove Bob Smith from the box and forced Genewich to retire under a barrage of base hits.

Catcher Francis Hogan of the Braves was informed today by an X-ray specialist that the bone chip in his right arm was fractured on Saturday when he was hit by a ball thrown by Root. He will be out of the game for three weeks at least.

Danny Vance was the star for the invading Cincinnati Reds and Brooklyn won the first of a six-game series by 2 to 1. Vance fanned eight batters and kept eight hits well distributed. In the fourth, Carey's single, historical of second, and Barrett's single brought in the first run for the Robins. The other run came on Bubna's single, a sacrifice and Stan's double.

STILL RECALL DUELLING DAYS

When Fredericton Was a British Army Post

Fredericton, N.B., August 26.— Away back in the good old days when Fredericton was a British army post and the Redcoats lent color to the streets of the little New Brunswick capital, the noble pastime of duelling was persistently and enthusiastically indulged in by the best regulated of families. The hills back of the city provided favorite meeting places for gentlemen who blistered after each other's blood.

An interesting survival of that age of ready pistols is to be noted in the fact that the city limits extend far back into the hills, including much farm and bush land. The limits were so extended by the civic authorities in a laudable effort to discourage the duelling habit. In this they were more or less successful, the gentry not appreciating a five mile ride over bad roads as a preliminary to an affair of honor. Nevertheless the wide flung town limits they were of course liable to unwelcome interruption from the town constabulary—such as it was.

Though the custom of duelling died out in Fredericton a good century ago old residents still remember talk of challenges and encounters and can point out spots on Maryland Hill where honor was vindicated in proper by romantic style.

Of course the presence of officers of the regular army, of whom during all still constitutes an integral part of daily life in the early years of the nineteenth century, went far toward making the practice popular in Fredericton. It is also rumored that the flashing captains and subalterns play of such havoc with the affections of civilians that it was necessary for barracks to uphold were forced to oil up their pistols and send their friends to call at the officers' quarters or be for, ever shamed.

Fortunately for the old families of the capital few of the meetings ended fatally. An exchange of shots was usually sufficient salve for wounded honor. Occasionally a gentleman was mysteriously numbered in his house for a few weeks, to appear fin ally tastefully decorated with bandages or the regimental surgeon was called upon to dig a bullet from the shoulder of some fire-eating captain but for the most part the encounters were innocuous exhibitions, staged with all pomp and ceremony as the prevailing army style.

Not all were so fortunate in their issue, however. One which involved four of the leading families ended with one of the principals dead on the field of honor, a bullet imbedded in his brain, and the other participants in the two seconds, in full flight for the American border. Warrants were issued for the arrest of the leading duellist and his companions, but the affair was allowed to blow over and a few years later they returned and took up their old life. It was this tragedy which applied the final wet blanket to the revered tradition of pistols for two—coffee for one" in Fredericton.

A memorable lawsuit fought out verbally in the Fredericton court-house, resulted in two duels—the defendants challenging the complainant and counsel for each party staging a secondary event on their own. What ever was the result of the meeting at the bar of justice, those in the woods MEN of the town terminated without bloodshed.

JONES ENTERS SEMI-FINALS

British Open Champ Overwhelmed Johnston 10 And 9

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 26.—Bobby Jones of Atlanta, Ga., British open golf champion, entered the semi-finals of the United States amateur golf tournament at Minikahda yesterday when he defeated Jimmy Johnson, of Minneapolis, 10 to 9.

Francis Ouimet, of Boston, former amateur champion, defeated Jesse Sweetser, of Hartford, Conn., his opponent in the semi-finals when he downed Phillips Finlay, the young New York star, in the other quarter-final match of the lower brackets, 5 and 3.

Chick Evans, of Chicago, former amateur and open champion became semi-finalist in the upper bracket when he downed Ellis Held, of St. Louis, 4 and 3.

Roland MacKenzie, of Washington, D.C., will oppose Evans in the upper bracket today, for he downed Harry Legg, the Minneapolis veteran, one-up in the last match of the quarter finals late yesterday.

Jones today had the poorest drive of the eight from the first tee, and the hooked ball hit D. F. Coolin, Minneapolis, on the head. The man dropped, but revived, while the ball bounced off his noggin in the fairway allowing the Atlantan to pitch on and halt the hole with Johnston in par 4. The blow did not affect Coolin's temple but the impact was such that he was stunned. He was carried to the hospital, although he protested that he could walk. He sat up in the Red Cross station, seeming somewhat dazed.

The misadventure did not bother Jones on the next two holes as he scored par and was one up.

BRITISH ARE IN SERIOUS DANGER IN "RED" REVOLT

Eleven Barricaded In Their Homes In State Of Jalisco

MINES SEIZED

President Calles Claims Situation Is Well In Hand Now

Washington, Aug. 27.—A "Red" uprising in the Mexican state of Jalisco has placed British and American in grave danger and presented a situation which may constitute a serious problem for the United States in its determination to protect American lives and property in that country.

"Red syndicate," the State Department was advised today, seized the mines of the Amparo Mining Company, an American concern operating near Etzatlan, 80 miles west of Guadalajara and 11 British and 18 Americans were reported barricaded in their homes, unable to leave. Those foreigners who were able to get away fled to Guadalajara."

Consular reports on the outbreak were supplemented late today by a dispatch from H. F. A. Schoenfeld, American Charge d'Affaires at Mexico City, saying the Calles Government had received advices that the situation of American and British at the mines was "satisfactory" and that the military had the situation "in hand."

This message, in the absence of definite details, failed to allay superficially the concern of officials. Before taking further steps, however, they decided to await detailed information and rest upon the request of consular and diplomatic officers in Mexico for protection by federal troops at the mines. Intimations were given in the official advices that the outbreak may have developed from a demonstration in protest against the execution in Massachusetts of the Italian anarchists, Sacco and Vanzetti, but these were accepted with reserve by experts on Mexican conditions who recently have returned, at Washington from that country. They were inclined to believe the situation was basically revolutionary, directed at the Calles Government, with an anti-foreign tinge given to embarrass the Mexico City Government in its dealings with the United States, Jalisco was pointed out, has been one of the most serious centres of disturbance for President Calles.

Miami, Fla., Aug. 27.—Preparations were being made here today by Edward Hirsanker, head pilot of Hirsanker Aviation, Inc., leading commercial aviation unit in these waters, to send three seaplanes to the Bahamas and as far south as Turk's Island to search for the Port of Brunswick, the monoplane piloted by Paul Redfern which hopped off Thursday from Brunswick, Georgia for South America.

No Alarm Felt Yet

Brunswick, Ga., Aug. 27.—With the blackness of two moonless nights behind him, Paul Redfern today sped his great monoplane through the second successive dawn and onward to the goal of his solitary flight in Brazil, unless a whim of nature or mechanics has stopped him short in the tropic region out of touch with an eagerly waiting world.

Only once in his journey have vague tidings been received of this newest vikings of the clouds. Thursday a vessel reported him about three hundred miles east of Nassau, Bahamas, but this information remains unconfirmed.

Scarcity of news however, was not translated into alarm, for the course that Redfern laid out carried him virtually over trackless seas and land. Continued silence will not become a portent on clearer until the hour of his planned arrival has passed: early tonight if he flies to Rio De Janeiro, or near noon today if low fuel supply or any other cause prompts him to swerve eastward in Pernambuco on the coast.

Keeping In Course

Brunswick, Ga., August 27.—The wireless report from a steamer at Natal, through St. Petersburg, Fla., that Paul Redfern's plane, the Port of Brunswick was seen 200 miles east of the Bahamas yesterday indicated that the Georgia aviator was holding to the course which he expected to follow when he hopped off from here yesterday at 12.45 eastern standard time.

Taking off from Glynn Isle Beach, Redfern's course lay straight over the sea to the southward, 45 degrees east. This course swung him east of the Bahamas and then overland for the first time in passing the southwestern corner of Porto Rico.

From there Redfern planned to jump across the Caribbean Sea, passing near Grenada Island, Tobago, Trinidad and thence over continental land for the first time in South America over Dutch Guiana. This would be his path this morning if all went well with him and he maintained his schedule.

After traversing Dutch Guiana Redfern expected to steer for Macapa on the north bank of the Amazon River. It was there he said he would decide whether to turn to Pernambuco or continue to Rio de Janeiro.

THE WEATHER

Moderate northeast and east winds partly cloudy and cool today and Sunday.

32 CHARGES ARE PLACED AGAINST RALPH H. RAYNOR

J. P. Williams Dismissed On Case Of Conspiracy To Defraud

CROWDED COURT

Finance Companies Behind Most Of The Counts Of Fraud

The first of the charges in connection with Ralph H. Raynor, automobile operations in the Prince Edward District, that against J. P. Williams, of Picton, of conspiracy with Raynor to defraud the Commercial Finance Corporation of $1,400 was dismissed this morning after a hearing of nearly two hours duration before Police Magistrate Williams in police court.

It was to face a total of 32 charges of fraud and conspiracy that R. H. Raynor appeared in court this morning. Twelve charges of fraud and one of conspiracy are laid by the Industrial Acceptance Corporation, of Toronto. One is read by Ida. Verex, of Picton, fifteen of fraud and one of conspiracy by the Commercial Finance Corporation. The charge against J. P. Williams laid by the Commercial Finance Corporation was the first called.

There is another charge laid against Williams by the Industrial Acceptance Corporation, who allege conspiracy with Raynor to defraud them of $1807.

A crowd far beyond the capacity of the court room had assembled before court opened and throughout the hearing, spectators stood closely wedged through the doors and even overflowed into the adjoining offices. Raynor, who entered just before proceedings opened was given a seat at the front of the court, behind solicitors. Throughout the hearing he sat somewhat listlessly interested in every word of evidence but appeared equally imperturbable and even smiled with apparent assurdness.

Walter O'Grady, Manager Director of the Commercial Finance Corporation, was the first witness called in the charge against Williams. He was questioned by Mr. Dillion, for the Crown. He stated that his company's business was discounting of notes for automobile dealers.

BALDWIN'S FIRST MESSAGE ONE OF HOPE AND OPTIMISM FOR FUTURE

Met No Grousers While In Canada Says Britain's Premier

NOT DECADENT

Address Received With Enthusiasm By Monster Crowds

Douglas Castle, Lanarkshire, Aug. 27 (Canadian Press Cable).—Premier Stanley Baldwin, in his first public speech since his return from Canada on Wednesday, addressed twenty thousand people at a Conservative fete here today and highly eulogized the Dominion. "There is no spot to which I would rather come from Canada than the heart of Scotland," he declared.

"There has been a great deal of evil propaganda about the world, especially in new countries, telling that the people of Britain are decadent. I was able to tell Canada that this country, so far from being that, is the same as it was ten years ago, and that our spirit is undimmed and our courage unquenched.

"Mistakes have been made but I am proud of the courage and patience with which our working people have stuck grandly to the almost impossible task of rebuilding and are slowly and surely winning their way.

"That message was received in the new world with the greatest confidence," the Premier went on. "Th reception given the Prince of Wales was a striking evidence of his popularity and of the allegiance of the people of Canada to our common crown."

Canadians Have Faith

"Another impression was the faith which all Canadians held in the future of their country. Canada had one great advantage over us. She benefits by our experience and is without many troubles that beset us. There is one thing that she does want to take from us. She wants our people. I put two questions to people I met there, 'Are you happy?' and 'Are you doing well?' In every case the answer was 'Yes.'

"I do not assert that there were no grousers, but they kept out of my way. I wish they would do so at home. Opportunities in Canada and scope for development were of the deepest interest to me. I found in Canada high ideals and great achievements.

CABINET SPLIT?

Reported Resignation Of Lord Cecil Result Of Strong Differences

London, Aug. 27.— Viscount Cecil's reported resignation as Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster is ascribed by the Daily Express to a cabinet split involving Lord Cecil as Sir Austen Chamberlain, Foreign Secretary and arising from the question of reducing the troops in the Rhineland.

Sir Austen, according to that paper, supported France in her refusal to reduce her troops by more than 5,500, while Lord Cecil maintained this attitude was "not doing the whole spirit of Locarno."

LIVES AFTER 30 HOURS IN WELL

Amazing Vitality Of Man Buried Alive Interests Doctors

Auburn, Mass.," Aug. 27.—Released from thirty hours of confinement in the cold damp bottom of his self dug prison, Fred Lenzo today was winning back his regular strength at a local hospital with every prospect of recovery unless pneumonia unexpectedly intervenes. He had been trapped at the bottom of a 36 foot deep, six foot wide well which he was digging.

Physicians were amazed at his vitality as they worked over his numbed limbs in a hitch circulation had been stopped by his cramped position at the bottom of the well and gave him cautiously liquid nourishment, the first which has passed his lips in a day and a half.

"Thank God, Thank God they saved me," were his first words early this morning when, handed from worker to worker, he was lifted over the edge of the excavation.

FATHER RECOVERS BODIES OF TWO SONS

Nelson, B.C., Aug. 27.— Lawrence and Charles Cleg, aged 12 and 7 respectively were drowned near here yesterday. The boys had started out on a fishing trip and it is believed the young lads' skiff into the current and the elder jumped in to attempt to save him. The bodies were recovered by the father.

EXPECTING TO BREAK ALL RECORDS AT EXHIBITION

Toronto, Ont., Aug. 27.— Premier MacKenzie King today officially opened the 60th Canadian National Exhibition. The Premier from the main bandstand addressed the great throng and then pressed a button which fired a gun at the grand stand sending high in the air a shell which broke open to release sixty Union Jacks.

Six members of the Dominion Cabinet accompanied Premier King to the Exhibition Grounds. Prior to the opening, the Premier was the guest of honor at a luncheon of the directors. Officials of the Exhibition expected that with the dedication of the classic new eastern entrance to the grounds by the Prince of Wales on Tuesday and 250,000 swimming marathon on Wednesday, all previous attendance records would be broken this year.

MAN AND WIFE ARE FOUND MURDERED

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 27.—The murder of a man and woman whose bodies were found last night in an automo bile on Detroit's outskirts in Oakland county was definitely credited by police to another episode of the gangsters' wars, with identification of the bodies as those of Lester A. McCall and his wife, Clara.

BIG MARKET IN SPITE OF RAINS

Despite the early morning rain the market square was crowded and lovers ant streets of purchasers passed to and fro all morning. Nothing starting in the way of a price drop has noted in any commodity, but raspberries were very fine and low-priced and from rather packed looking. They retailed for 25 cents a box. Onions were five cents a bunch, cucumbers ten cents each or peck. Cucumbers and beets sold for forty cents a peck and celery was fifteen cents the bunch, two for a quarter. Tomatoes were forty cents the basket and potatoes forty cents a peck, while "ben fruit" retailed for thirty-five cents the dozen. Apples were forty cents the peck and cabbage sold from five to fifteen cents the head. Cherries were seventy-five cents a peck and vegetable marrow twenty cents each.

TODAY'S THOUGHT

When envy is considered there is no more to be desired.
—EDWARD YOUNG.

WOMEN NOVELISTS

It is barely 80 years since Ko-Ko, the Lord High Executioner, entered on his list of possible victims "that singer of assembly, the lady novelist." Yet today the fembiyne pen has proved to be mightier than the sticky-sticker-sword. The "Shelbyeds" become the Anne Austens, the Marie Corelis have passed out but stout souls go marching on.

A glance at recent literary catalogues reveals that women are taking up the novel as a form of artistic expression as never before. The lady novelist who was such a curiosity in Victorian days may now be counted by the dozen. They are taking to the field in such numbers that they almost outnumber the men. And what is more, they not only satisfy the returns of insatiable women novel readers, but also the critical taste of male reviewers and literary critics.

Press notes released last week listed the following women novelists' names have been taken at random: Elinor Wylie, Sheila Kaye-Smith, Agatha Christie, Storm Jameson, Hilda Vaughn, Mary Borden, Anne Parrish, Susan Glaspell.

The novelists of the novel by women authors is one of the most remarkable literary phenomenon of the times. In Ko-Ko's creator were alive today he would find that it was he, and not the lady novelist, who was the singular anomaly.

DOING OUR BEST

There is a moral for all people in the dying words of Premier John Oliver of British Columbia. Shortly before he became unconscious for the last time before passing away, he turned to his secretary and bidding him goodbye, said:

"We didn't always do the best thing politically, but we did the best we knew. That's all any of us can do."

There is a world of teaching in those few simple words of the former premier of British Columbia. No man, whether friend or enemy, could ask of him that he do any better than the best he knew, and in passing on this message to those left behind, he did a service to all of his fellow-men. It is not given to every man to be great, nor to be wealthy or powerful, but to every man is given the opportunity to do his best, no matter what may be the sphere of life in which he finds himself. So he used that opportunity and gives of himself to the uttermost in everything he does, so will every man make the world in which he lives a better place for his having lived. Fortunate, indeed, is the man who, at the closing of his days can take a retrospect view of his life and say, with honesty and sincerity, "We did the best we knew."

OTHER MEN'S THOUGHTS

Owen on the cob does not appeal to the British journalist. This digh never will be popular among Britishers. The useless, and unrivalled flavor of the food never will be the deciding factor. It's a matter of ingrained habit for the same reason the Britishers never will favor our railroad cabooses. They prefer and always will, the cosy partitions with five seats, and four lumber baths. Others Others

More people are killed by automobiles in Canada than by railroad trains. In 1926 there were 602 deaths by automobiles and 424 by railroads. There were 56 killed in street car accidents. Careless pedestrians and careless parents probably claim more automobile deaths than careless drivers.—Financial Post.

Real estate speculation will be forbidden at Fort Churchill, among western communities which do unless.—London Free Press.

EVENING.

Cool grows the air of evening, and the breeze
Lingers caressingly among the leaves,
Loath to depart, like one who sadly grieves
O'er squandered loveliness and fain would seize
Again the mellow warmth that eager trees
Drank all day long. The birds to the fading light
Chirp a wild lullaby, as if the night
For them might bring eternal sleep and these Few notes would be their farewell offering
To earth that loves their song. They will awake
Upon the morrow, vibrant with the glad
Full glow of life that feels no premonished ache;
I, midst my hoarded joys, my day-song sing,
Afraid to sleep, lest waking should be sad.
—Guy Mason in The Bayson Poetry Chap-books.

TWO MOTOR WRECKERS CARS

Motor mechanics, who have about four years' training and field experience in the profession, find it does not pay to tinker with wrecked cars. Upon reaching Sterling early Friday morning he took a stronger wheel and tire from a car that was parked in that village by the owner.

Clifden, Ireland, C. L. N. Y., August. 27 — The unfinished "Royal Windsor" carrying Phil Wood and Duke Schiller, was back at Croriss Field today after an unsuccessful attempt to beat head winds and rain in a flight to Selfridge Field, Michigan, on their way to Detroit.

Wood and Schiller, with two passengers, took off last night and after a hundred miles west against adverse weather conditions returned and attempted in their starting point. After taxiing their plane to its hangar, Schiller decided to wait in New York City for the night. A check of planes in the hangar was made before it was discovered the Royal Windsor had received a leak.

Life Was A Burden

Restored to Health Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

"It is a pleasure," says Mrs. Rose Boulter of 27 Victoria, P.E.I., "to tell you of the new health and strength I got through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Before using the pills life was a burden to me. I was so badly run down that I did not have what to do. My blood seemed to have turned to water, I was very pale complexioned, and was losing flesh. It was a task to attempt housework. Added to this I had a bad cough and my husband and friends thought I was going into consumption. The medical attendant I was under did not appear to do me any good and I had about given up hope when a friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I got six boxes and found so much benefit from them that I got six more. Before these were all taken I was a new woman range and again in good health. I gained in weight, the cough left me, my appetite returned and I once more had a good color. Better still, I was able to do my housework without fatigue. Needless to say I always recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to ailing friends, and I hope this will be the means of directing the road to good health to some other sufferer."

Try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for anaemia, rheumatism, neuralgia, nervousness. Take them as a tonic if you are not in the best physical condition and cultivate a resistance that will keep you well and strong.

If you will send us your name and address a little book, "Building Up the Blood" will be mailed you prepaid. This book contains many useful health hints.

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer, or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Cross examined by Arthur W. Rosebush of Toronto, counsel for William, witness admitted that he had no personal knowledge that paper had been signed by Williams.

Have you any knowledge of William's ever having received any portion of that $1400?

No.

Amount Only $134.90

Witness stated that Raynor had made payments on the promissory note.

You did not know the present position with regard to payment of bank?

No.

Counsel then read a letter received by Raynor from the Corporation of July 27, 1927, stating the the balance owing them was $134.90.

This was finally defrauded of $1400.

Witness admitted that at the time information was sworn the balance had been only $134.90.

Re-direct Witness stated that Williams had never taken delivery of the car.

Re-cross Redirect, you had been informed of that?

Yes.

While Canada is developing her own nationhood she "must be ready to play her part in the wider community of nations forming the British Empire."

Said He Present?

Premier Baldwin went on to assert that it was the threat of turmoil that was the cause of Britain's difficulties last year. He had hoped that the improvement in the industrial position would have been more marked never-the less there had been considerable improvement and there was no cause for pessimism. There was grea' room for development within the Empire and with British initiative and spirit now growing in the country, Britain might look forward to securing it' share of benefits in increasing measure if British people must meet changing conditions as their forefathers did; the Premier went on. Success would be proportioned if there were any reversal of widespread stoppage of work. He would be concerned about failure if I was fate that there was that degree o' antagonism in work shops which it had been suggested existed. The Premier was glad that the railways had gone to the Arbitration Tribunal.

"It is anything contrary, coming back from Canada to my own country. After our leaders by the grace of God and the millionium unless they can get it by the methods of communism? It is a long way from Canada to Communism, but it is very short way from Communism to disaster."

"I believe that a majority of our people have had enough of the forces of industrial upheaval ramine inland" Premier Baldwin declared. "Any one can fly a kite or a city who can never plant a tree or build a house. I look to the leaders of Trade Unions to give the lead towards national prosperity."

BUS COMBINE TO HAVE KINGSTON HEADQUARTERS

Cook's Auto Service Gets Control Of Colonial Coach Lines

Kingston, Aug. 27.—The biggest bus transportation deal ever made in eastern Canada has just been concluded by Mr. Isaac F. Cook and his associates, of Cook's Corners, as a result of which Mr. Cook acquires the control of the Colonial Coach Lines, Limited as well as several private lines and this city becomes the headquarters of a new bus line of thirty seven busses.

The new company which Mr. Cook will now control will be known as the Colonial Coach Lines of Canada. Not only has it taken over the franchises of the United Motors Ltd. operating between Ottawa and Morrisburg and Ottawa to Prescott, in Brockville but it has also taken over the Rose and Bussee operating between Cardinal, Prescott and Morrisburg; also the line between Morrisburg and Cornwall, Prescott and Brockville and Brockville and Gananoque. With these extended on to Kingston this will insure a formidable combination operating practically by one month Pullman auto coaches and limited bus on a hard and with such comfort as may be operating westward. The through straight line to be operated by the company will be from Montreal to Toronto full trips will miss while with the two of stops in Ottawa another hundred or more miles will be added.

In addition, it is even now being planned to have the Cook Colonial Coach Lines operating in the United States to connect with the Greyhound Lines at Watertown. These lines are now running excursions to Canada and it is hoped to develop this business to correspondly and arrange to take over and care for all such excursion parties, at this point of the line.

The negotiations looking to this deal have been carried on by Mr. Cook and Mr. Cook and Mr. Cunningham have made numerous trips away seeking the completion of the deal which is now finally announced. Apart from the negotiations which transcribed the greatest significance and importance of it is so far as Kingston is concerned is that this city will be the terminal and headquarters for the new company, which naturally will necessitate by all means much additional work and business for the city.

Kiwanians Have Several Features For Annual Event

The dates for the annual Kiwanis Karnival and Style Show are announced in today's paper as the beginning 19 - 20 - 21 - 22 - 23. This annual event is always looked forward to by the citizens of this city as the social event of the year, and the committee in charge this year are having no stone unturned to see that the forthcoming Carnival will surpass all previous ones in every respect. The dates have not been definitely decided upon as yet but as one feature the committee can now announce, that the famous Kingston Orthophonic by the Victor Talking Machine Co. of Canada Limited, Montreal and Toronto Ex. will be installed on the stage at the armouries and will be a feature attraction during the Carnival.

This machine has thrilled thousands at Sunnyside in sivear,ads fussAoffir at Sunnyside this year and it was only after considerable negotiations that it could be secured for the Kiwanis Karnival. In fact it was necessary to let the owner of this machine set the dates for the Karnival and is booked to let right up to Christmas.

Stocks Turn Lower

New York, N.Y., Aug. 27.—Stock prices turned reactionary today after an opening period of strength in which several of the pivotal industrials, including General Motors, General Electric and United States Steel Common, established record high prices. A renewed selling attack against the oil shares in the last hour, which sent the Fire-American issue to their lowest levels and the list, started the selling movement.

Buying of General Motors "old" and "new" was stimulated for a time by the publication of a newspaper interview with Pierre S. Dupont, chairman of the finance committee, who predicted the consummation of good business and a future far better in the manner in history. The old stock sold above 200 and the "new" stock at 124 3-4 before realizing sales cut down their gains.

DEATHS & FUNERALS

MRS. A. ANDERSON

Residents of Stirling and district and campers at Oak Lake were given a shock when they learned of the sudden passing of the late Mrs. Alex Anderson. Mrs. Anderson had risen in her usual good health last Thursday morning and when about to answer a knock on her cottage door at the lake was stricken with a severe heart attack and dropped dead. Dr. Potts of Stirling, was immediately summoned but all efforts to survive her were unsuccessful. The deceased had been afflicted with high blood pressure for some time. She is survived by three sons and three daughters, viz: Arthur Bruce and Mack; one son, Lawrence was killed in the late war; Ethel, R.N. also a veteran of the Great War; Mrs. Herbert Martin, of Winnipeg, and Mrs. W. The funeral service was held at the residence of the Misses Judd on Sunday, afternoon and the remains were interred in Stirling Cemetery with Rev. A.N. Reid, B.A., officiating. The many beautiful floral tributes displayed the high esteem in which Mrs Anderson was held and were from the following: Mrs. W.T. INFATUATION OFTEN MALIGNANT DISEASE

By ELSIE MARLOWE

"The world will bow to love," I say when ever I read that quotation.

Yes, it seems as a wreath of roses. But, oh, the trusting young hearts that have been tricked and spoiled by that false, vicious argument!

"The World IBUT" will bow to love. You CAN'T throw away your safety and honor, your duty to others, your good standing in the community for the sake of Romance and get by with it. The very man for whom some poor foolish girl has sacrificed every thing will be the first to sneer at her when she is in the mud. Here's a tragic testimonial to that fact.

DEAR ELSIE:

I'm greatly worried about my sister. She is a woman in her early thirties, but she still seems as foolish as when she was seventeen. At that age she met a band some scamp, who was employed in the same office with her. This old sophisticated, travelled being, twelve years older than herself, fascinated her. I learned that he had to leave his home town on account of a married woman, but I knew nothing of this at the time.

We were orphans. I, the older sister, opposed my sister's going with this man. Consequently we continually quarreled so she began staying away every week-end and they lying as to where she had been. Even this man's boasting to others of his affair with her left no impression on her. For five years I cried over her actions, and then my worst fears were realized. He never had any intentions to marry her. The girl to whom he was engaged was coming to town and they were to be married.

When I went to him and pleaded for my sister his answer was that my sister had gone to him of her own free will, that if she hadn't chased with every other fellow in the city he would have married her. I knew that she worshipped this man alone and that what he said was not true He also said if my sister would set him up in business he would drop the girl to whom he was engaged; but that he couldn't see why he should ruin his life if she had no way of bettering him.

My sister's health was ruined. The mental suffering was too much. I thought a change of scene would help her. I sent her away. Later, when she was able to take a position in this city she met a fine young chap. This boy was wild about her. I told her to marry him and forget the other. She wrote me she could never forget the other, and so did she add ed that if it would make me happy, she would marry him. She did.

Now after ten years she has come home to visit me. She has everything—an adoring husband and all that money can buy. But the first thing she did on getting home was to try to find the old reprobate who had made her unhappy. He has hung up on her, returned her letters and now she hears that he pretended to marry him to see her for only a few minutes. How can any woman make such a fool herself that says I do not understand because I am an old maid. If a woman has to go through all that agony to have a man look at her, then I'll stay an old maid. Shall I refuse to go to the old scoundrel or shall I plead for her again? What is the right attitude?

SALLY.

Pity her with all your heart, Sally. Do everything that you possibly can to help her, but do not go to the man I know that you would often be tempted to turn against her with con tempt; but try to think of her as some one whose whole nature, physical and spiritual, has been wasted by an ealing disease. Such an attachment is more terrible than any ailment which sickens the body. It destroys the very roots of mental health and purity.

She has sinned greatly. She is sinning now in her deception of him and band. But it is the wickedness of a fevered soul. She feels that if she can reach this man she will win back the old happiness and peace which she had when she first loved him. Of course she is wrong. She cannot possibly find peace that way. But that confused longing for Another Chance and a Fresh Start is tangled up with all the madness that distresses you.

CURSE OF LOVE

by Mildred Barlow

CHAPTER 41

Autumn had come again to Califor nia.

Autumn, with its crisp days, and brilliant sunlight; with smoke haze on the far horizon; with the snowline lower on the gleaming Sierras; with the Pacific a deeper green; and with wood fires crackling cheerfully on the hearths alnight.

Autumn—with Cynilla Greer well and strong again, driving a new car over the smooth boulevards, quite forgetful of the ill-fated old car and its last journey, forgetful of the man who had jilled her and the other man whom she had married in the dawn of a May morning; with King Carson roaming about Paris,watching with an appreciative eye the pretty women on the boulevards, remembering only indistinctly now the mysterious girl he had met and married one night so many months ago; with Norma Kendall living quietly with her father in the pink Venetian palace, growing day by day more white and thin, a ceaseless longing in her heart for a word from her husband, which never came; with Sydney Stokes at work again in the bank and a bullet-scar on his shoulder to remind him of a night's adventure; with Philip Kendall lost in the vast reaches of the Orient, remembering bitterly the wife he had loved and lost; with "Slippery Sam" behind the bars of the state prison, and Fanny living within a stone's throw, counting the days on the calendar until he would be restored to her; with Saochen, the recluse, pacing the narrow confines of an asylum cell, muttering his strange incantations, the light of utter madness in his eyes.

With the coming of the autumn the property of Sanchez was disposed of through his only friend, Professor Lind; the house was given up and the old man's valuable collection was turned over to Lind, in accordance with a written agreement made between the recluse's tottering brain had given way.

Lind was an archaeologist. His en tire life and his small private fortune had been devoted to a collection and investigation of the relics yielded up by the ancient ruins of the dead civilizations of Europe, South America, and Mexico. He was also an authority on Egyptology. He had written books on all subjects pertaining to archaeology, and his translations of ancient inscriptions in obsolete languages were accepted as authorita tive.

Like all savants and thinkers, he was a difficult person to live with. His wife, Ada — the pretty, plump little woman whom Fanny had seen accompanying Sanchez to the madhouse—endured, rather than accepted her lot. There were many moments when she thought wistfully of what marriage might mean with a man who didn't spend every waking moment and half the night poring over musty inscriptions in which few people, except scholars like himself, had the slightest interest.

When the collection was delivered at their home by several trucks, Ada sighed resignedly and ordered her drawingroom furniture taken to the attic to make room for the objects that Sanchez had gathered round him.

"I might just as well live in the British Museum," she thought.

But she went dutifully to work to assist the professor in placing and had long regarded with an envious and greedy eye.

"Magnificent! Magnificent!" her husband kept murmuring to himself, "I'll have plenty of time to study these things, now they're in the house Sanchez was such a chatterbox that it never had half an opportunity to examine them thoroughly in his house. Hello, what's-this?"

He had unlocked a tiny drawer in a tall cabinet of teakwood, inlaid with mother-of-pearl. It was filled with curious unset stones of varying sizes and colors. Some sparkled, some gleamed dully, like the surface of the sea on a cloudy day. But sur passing them all, putting them to shame, was the black opal.

Ada Lind came to look over his shoulder.

"Oh, how beautiful!" she cried, involuntarily. "What is it? An opal?"

He held it in his palm and turned it slowly.

"The most beautiful opal in the world, I think. I wonder where it came from? Surely it was the jewel of some idol."

WHAT'S NEW

(From a Woman's Standpoint)

London experts declare that stud earrings have had their day as they were born with the Ritz and that will die with it for earrings which dangle are a line with the mouth are now preferred and the fashionable stones of the moment are diamonds white and black onyx and Chinese jade and emeralds.

In spite of the somewhat frigid acceptance which multicolored shoes were given by exclusive London shops any day there now women may be seen wearing shoes of this type with plain gowns, hats and bags to tone while plain-colored shoes are equally attractive when they pick out the predominant note in a flowered gown

How will it end? I do not know. Despite like this sometimes becomes an actual madness. All you can do is hold steady. Love and fight and pray Perhaps your sisters despairs story may save some other girl from a similar fate. Let's hope so.

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

A few nights ago I met a young chap and was very much attracted to him. Now here is my problem. It has always taken me a long time to be friendly with boys and the so-called "petting and necking" has disgusted me. I am not an angel, but I certainly do not want to make myself cheap. What ever came over me the other night is beyond me.

He was to call me up, do you think it was because I let him kiss me, that he didn't?

I am a respectable girl, and would like to keep his friendship What would you advise me to do?

EILEEN.

EILEEN: I am afraid, my dear, that there is nothing you can do but wait. If this man is sincerely interested in you, he will probably call you when he gets around to it. If he does be friendly but casual and profit by your experience so that you will not have to lear nthe same lesson twice.

YANKS ROMPED OVER DETROIT FOR 3RD TIME

Moore Scored Winning Run After Third Hit Of Year

Detroit, August 27.—The fact that the Yankees beat the Tigers again yesterday, 8 to 6, and made a clean sweep of what started out to be a "crucial series," but turned out nothing more than another long leap toward the pennant is worthy of only passing comment in view of other happenings.

The Yankee camp last night teemed and thrilled at the feat of Wiley Moore in joining the three hundred class as a hitter. And instead of a decimal point, there's a dollar sign before the first digit. The 300 represents some of Babe Ruth's hard-earned cash.

Long ago, somewhere in Florida, so the story goes, the Babe watched Wiley serving as a few balls without even giving a foul, and scoffed. Mr. Moore resented the implication that he couldn't hit. "Why I'll bet you three hundred dollars to fifteen you don't make three hits all season," offered the Babe. "I'll take it," said Wiley. And so the bet was made. The last time the Yankees visited Detroit, Mr. Moore started the world in general and himself in particular by driving out two singles although he were a natural hitter. Still, the Babe felt that his money was safe. Then yesterday in the eighth inning Moore made his third hit of the season. It wasn't a very hairy blow, to true, but it served the purpose, and it earned hi mike $90. The truth of the matter is that Wiley topped his drive and the ball rolled down the third base line. Warner, Baxter and Gibbons gathered around to see if it wouldn't roll foul.

While Ruth w fanoticed offering up a prayer that it would. But no, it stopped right on the line. Intervened after the game. Moore said, 'modestly: "This is just an easy park to hit in." That hit also earned Wiley Moore something besides Ruth's money. It earned another victory, as it gave him the opportunity to carry home the winning run. The score was tied at the time, but when Combs' grounder was booted by Blue. Wiley reached second. When Koenig followed with a single, Wiley raced home.

That Ruth walked and Gehrig drove Combs he rewith another tally didn't matter. It was Moore who brought in the deciding run. As a result of this victory the Yanks are now fifteen and a half games in front of their nearest runners.

BRAVES DEFEAT PITTSBURGH 6-4

Cards, Though Idle, Became Runners-Up To Cubs

New York, August 27.—The Boston Braves, who divided a doubleheader with Pittsburgh Thursday, yesterday defeated the Pirates 6 to 4, in a hard-hitting contest. Boston now has won five of its last six games with Pittsburgh. Fournier's single in the first inning off Aldridge scored two runs, and his double off Miljus in the eighth started a two-run rally which broke a tie and won for Boston. Paul Waner, who had a perfect day at bat Thursday with four hits in four times up, started off yesterday with three singles which ran his record to seven hits in as many times at bat. He drove in two runs yesterday and scored another.

The defeat cost the Corsairs second place in the National, as the idle Cardinals assumed the runner-up position to the Cubs on a margin of two percentage points. Chicago was idle because of cold weather, tightened its grip on first place to a leeway of three and one-half games.

At Brooklyn, Cincinnati's two-run rally in the ninth failed to help the Reds, and Brooklyn captured the second straight in the series by 4 to 3. Doug McWeeny gained a verdict over Red Lucas, who was handicapped by loss fielding by his reding mates. Bust Hzeline led the Robins' attack four singles in as many times at bat. George Kelly made three hits in four times up.

ONLY TWO HITS FROM HENDERSON

But Leafs Won Close Game By Score Of 1-0

Toronto, August 27.—"Army Bill" Henderson, Baltimore right-hander, allowed but two hits in the first games of the series, here today, but they proved enough for the Leafs to defeat the Orioles, 1 to 0.

As it turned aout, Jimmy Walsh's double in the first inning was plenty to put over the victory. It followed a base on balls to Welsh, the former Blues sprinting all the way home from first on the blow.

The other Toronto hit was off Andy Harrington's bat, in the fourth. Only twelve batsmen faced Henderson in the last four innings.

Letty Paik, formerly with the St. Louis Browns, won his fifth straight game since joining the Bisons three weeks ago, when he tamed the Baltimore Keys at Buffalo with three runs, while his associates were lighting Woodgie, of the visitors, for 11 runs. Falk also continued an unusual hitting record by slashing out two more hits.

Newark's five-run rally in the ninth fell short, and the Stars beat the Bears, 8 to 7, at Syracuse.

Rochester ran its winning streak to eight straight games by defeating Jersey City in the opening game of the series at Rochester, 9 to 5.

JONES TO MEET CHICK EVANS IN GOLF TOURNEY

British Open Champ Reached Final By Beating Ouimet

Minneapolis, Minn., August 27.—Bobby Jones, of Atlanta, and Chick Evans, of Chicago—veterans of numerous golfing bouts—will fight it out tomorrow for the national amateur golf championship.

They went into the finals yesterday at the Minikah Pk Club in the national tournament when Bobby defeated Francis Ouimet, of Boston, 11 and 10, and Evans won from Roland MacKenzie, of Washington, on the 37th hole in the semi-finals.

Evans and MacKenzie reached the 31st tee all square, when Evans took the 32nd in par, his opponent needing five, and they halved the next two.

When in Canada, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales and the distinguished statesman, Premier Baldwin of Great Britain, used a "Heintzman and Co." grand piano. See a duplicate of this wonderful instrument at the Belleville Fair, August 26-31-Sept. 1-2, Manufacturers' Building. a27.20

Evans and MacKenzie were all square going to the 34th tee since Chick Evans had won the 31st with a conceded eagle 3, halved the 32nd with birdie 4s, and lost the 33rd when he needed a five to MacKenzie's par 4.

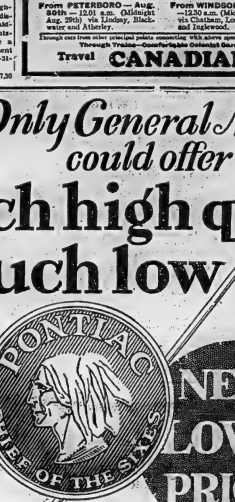

Evans and MacKenzie halved the 34th in 5's and continued all square, halving the 35th and 36th.

BELLE THEATRE
What a role!
Laughs by the score, pretty girls galore and thrills that'll make your hair stand directly on end are seen in "Casey at the Bat," comedy vehicle for Wallace Beery, which comes to the Belle Theatre on Monday.

Beery is once more the same lovable cuss he was in "Behind the Front," and as the big Navy boy of "What price" he wears the uniform of a baseball batter. The action starts in a small town near New York. Ford Sterling delineates a sport for the Giants; Zasu Pitts, the village milliner; and Sterling Holloway's newsboy.

CITY BATTERY SERVICE
Next time you're buying a battery, take a look at the Exide, and consider the reputation means back of a product. True, it is possible for you to buy a cheaper battery and one which to all appearances looks just as good as an Exide, but the old saying "You get just what you pay for" holds true in the battery line, as in others. And if you buy an inferior grade low price battery that's just what you will pay for. Russ Smith at the City Battery Service is local Distributor for the Exide—the "Long Life Battery" and will gladly explain to you its merits. See him about it before you make your selection.

SHIP WOLVERINE EARLY REO CAR NAMESAKE KEPT

Ancient Iron Ship Is Worthy Pecedent Of Wolverine

Forerunner of every dreadnaught in the United States Navy, ancestor of every 800-foot freighter that plows the waters of the Great Lakes, the old warship Wolverine has just been purchased by the City of Erie, Pa., and is to be maintained as a perpetual memento of a stirring chapter in American history, according to word just received here by Mr. Aselstine of the Aselstine and Sons local Reo Dealers.

"It is not hard to understand why Reo chose the name 'Wolverine' for its new pleasure car models, when one considers the glorious record of this fine old warship," Mr. Aselstine states.

"Built in 1842, the first iron boat ever launched on the Lakes, the steamship Wolverine established a precedent for the strength, staunchness and dependability of the latest Reos.

"Hand wrought iron plates for the steamship Wolverine were made in Pittsburgh and hauled overland to Erie in 1842. The plates were riveted together and the ship was launched in 1843. Farmers came from miles around to see the launching. They were dead sure that an iron boat wouldn't float, and they stood and scoffed on the shore as the vessel slid down the ways. But she hit the water, floated and the jeers were turned to cheers.

"The Wolverine was the first iron ship built by the Navy, and the first iron vessel of any sort launched on the Great Lakes.

NEWEST IN RADIO TO BE SEEN AT FAIR

Every radio fan who visits the Big Fair next week will be interested in the display arranged by the Radio Shop, depicting the very newest developments of the season in the radio industry.

The three big lines sold by the Radio Shop — the De Forest Crosley, Westinghouse, and Marconi — will be exhibited, giving one a complete idea of the extraordinary advances which have been made in radio in a year. Built-in speakers, more attractive cabinets, improved shielding etc., are but a few of the points to be noticed in the new sets.

Mr. Carl C. Reid, Manager of the Radio Shop, will have on display also an arrangement whereby electrical reproduction of phonograph music is obtained. Ordinary phonograph music is passed through a radio amplifier and reproduced through a loud speaker — a process which is similar to, on a smaller scale than, the immense electrically operated Orthophonic machine at Sunnyside, in Toronto this summer, and which, it is expected, will be brought to Belleville for the Kiwanis Karnival.

ATTRACTIVE TIP TOP SAMPLES FOR FALL

Just about two more weeks men and you'll begin to think about that Fall suit. And speaking of Fall Wear, have you seen the Tip Top Samples for Fall? Clarke Dickens at 311½ Front St. is the local agent for this immense one-piece clothing firm, and the values obtainable in the Tip Top line are unsurpassed anywhere in this country.

A gigantic organization turning out garments of finest imported cloths that is in a position to give any man remarkable clothes values. No need to describe excellent prices now for your clothes; for every though in the case of the Tip Top you pay but $24, yet the extraordinarily large business done by this organization enables it to provide you with values that cannot be improved upon even at much higher prices.

So before you order that Fall Suit, drop in and see Clarke Dickens and have him show you the new Samples. You'll find that Tip Top made-to-measure clothes are the best values you ever had.

LOCAL JEWELLER IS WATCHMAKING EXPERT

Did you ever realize the importance of having your watch repaired done for you by a man who is a real expert in the work? You wouldn't trust your car to an inferior mechanic; nor your electrical repair work to a firm not fully qualified to undertake a job of making a proper and thorough repair job.

Then why take a chance and trust your valuable watch or clock to one of whom ability to satisfactorily repair it, you are not certain. It isn't a logical thing to do. Belleville boasts an English Watch Making Expert in the person of J. J. Rowntree of Bridge Street, a graduate of the British Horological School, and a watchmaker to whom you can safely trust your most valuable watch or clock with every assurance that it will be properly repaired and looked after.

So next time the watch fails to function properly, give it to J. J. Rowntree; you'll appreciate the difference in the work he does.

ONE'S TWO EYES MAY HAVE QUITE BIG VARIATION

Serious Defect Which May Improve Your Efficiency

Sometimes there is a big difference in a person's two eyes. One eye may be practically perfect, or only slightly defective, while the other may have a very serious defect.

If your eyes are not working together it one of them is unequal to the task, you are under a big disadvantage, because eyes that do not serve you properly, make everything you do, worse than it should be, though seemingly right to you.

Think what this means in this day of keen competition. How easily a reputation for skill may slip away from you and your earning capacity be seriously lessened.

Naturally you can't be at your best and do your best work unless both of your eyes are giving you the best service. If they are then waste no time in hesitation, but call and let us make a careful examination at once and fit you with the kind of glasses your eyes require. Edwards st. 328 Front Street are Optical Specialists and can handle any optical problem you may have.

FATE PLAYED A BRUTAL TRICK ON VIOLINIST

Winnipeg, August 26 (C.P.)—Fate played a harsh trick on Michael Malcoff, who in Mastersdale, Southern Russia, began a musical career which carried him far, first as a child prodigy and then, when he matured, as a whirlwind of the bow, and is now a commercial traveller for a Winnipeg firm. Among Malcoff's samples when on the road is a well-worn violin case containing a violin, and the violin is the background of a story of a professional career cut off suddenly, when on the high road to fame, of a musician who had won the encomiums of two continents and was on the way to share the honors of those illustrious masters of harmony who have come out of Russia to enchant and surprise civilization, when fate cruelly intervened.

Malcoff was introduced to Canadian audiences at a concert attended by Earl Jellicoe, then Governor-General, and a distinguished suite. He went forward winning praise in many recitals in the United States and Canada until the war came.

Then he turned to the production of foodstuffs, and had the misfortune to break his wrist, inducing paralysis of the fingers, so that he cannot hold the instrument more than 10 minutes a day, thus his career on the concert stage ended abruptly.

He travels, however, with the beloved violin, and after the duties of the day's ties out some of the airs with which he gained the applause of admiring audiences in earlier days.

In Case of Accident

on the Highway

If you cannot produce your Motor Vehicle Operator's License when called upon, you are presumed to be an incompetent Driver

Always carry your Motor Vehicle Operator's License when driving a car. Your license is your authority to drive. It is illegal to be in charge of a car without it.

In case of accident or infraction of The Highway Traffic Act, your Motor Vehicle Operator's License will be called for at once by the traffic patrol or policeman. At any time, on the highways or on town or city streets, officers of the law may ask you to produce it. If you are unable to do so, you are subject to a fine.

If you have not yet applied for your Motor Vehicle Operator's License, secure it at once. Application forms can be had at any garage. Anyone who has driven 500 miles, and for 6 months continuously, and who has no physical disability which may interfere with the operation of a car may be granted a License. Examinations will be given to all other applicants.

The Motor Vehicle Operator's Licences are a measure of protection of yourself and all others on the road. Identification of drivers will lead to the weeding out of the incompetent and reckless.

THE HIGHWAYS MUST BE KEPT SAFE

"The Government is determined, through the Highways Department, to put a stop to reckless driving and to secure for the average citizen the maximum of safety when travelling on the roads"—The Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Prime Minister, in the Toronto Globe, August 19, 1927.

Just Arrived--

Smart Fall Hats of

Austrian Velours

Women of fashion choose the hat of velours again and again.— there is something supremely "good" about these hats — goo d-looking, with the charm of simple, flexible lines and rich texture; and good to wear in any sort of weather.
An assortment of these "featherweight" hats in a fine quality of Austrian velours has been secured through our head buying of fice and is now on display in our Millinery Department. There are several becoming styles, with creased crowns and narrow brims, trimmed with tailored band and co ckade of grosgrain ribbon.

In Both Large and Small Head Sizes

Beige, Brown and Deep Red Shades

The Lack of It

Is the Standard of Millinery Chic

It is all a matter of ounces! The lighter the hat, the better, say the fashion dictators. Hats are steamed and shaved and pressed, and steamed and shaved again to comply with the mode for "sephyr-weights." Some of the high -class Paris milliners have even installed scales so that prospective buyers may have hat bodies weighed right before their eyes.

Elegance is This Season's Hallmark in

The New Coats

Many lovely examples of which have already arrived in our Ready-to-Wear Department

This new effect of elegance is achieved in many ways. By:

Finer and Finer Fabrics
Slim Lines — But Exceedingly Intricate Cut
Unusual Arrangements of Decorative Tucks, Seams and Stitching
Luxurious, Cleverly Diversified Fur Trimming.

Come in and look over these fine models in soft pile fabrics, duvetine and kashan cloths. New shades of copper, rosewood, winter leaf, reindeer, etc., are shown... Fox, lynx, dyed opposum and seal form the collars and deep cuffs.

Coats are Warmer This Year!

During the last few seasons many have c omplained that winter coats, though comfortable on most days, had not quit e sufficient thickness for the Canadian season. In almost all of the new coats shown this year there is a warm interlining throughout which does not, howev er, take away from the slim effect so much in favor.

NEW FORD WILL SOON BE READY

Belleville Motors' Fair Exhibit Is Purely Industrial

"The new Ford car soon will be on the market, and I am confident that when it is shown it is going to prove even more than the public has been expecting," said C. E. Wilmot, of Belleville Motors, local Ford Dealers, yesterday. "It is a matter of regret that we are unable to display the new car at the Belleville Fair for there is no doubt that it would have proved a very strong drawing card," he continued, "but the changes which are being made in the Ford are not changes that could be accomplished in a few weeks or even a few months, and so we are quite content to wait and see how we will be well rewarded for our patience."

Mr. Wilmot explained that the design of the new car has been definitely determined. In a letter which he received recently from W. R. Campbell, Vice-President and Treasurer of the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, definite assurance was given on this score and it was also stated that the design of equipment to produce the new car has been completed and much of the equipment is already built and installed. "However," Mr. Wilmot said, "when you realize that thousands of machines must be changed over in the Ford of Canada Plant which is the largest automobile factory in the British Empire, and that the Ford Company is not only introducing a new car but new methods of building a quality car of superior performance and speed ance, you can understand the amount of time which has been required for its production."

The new Ford car, Mr. Wilmot declared, will be superior in design and performance to anything in the light car field. It has shown a speed of sixty-five miles per hour and for hours on end has averaged a speed of fifty-five miles per hour over ordinary roads. It has acceleration, getaway and roadability to an extent that was not previously believed possible in light cars. In appearance, he said, in everything that the most exacting critic could demand.

Like its predecessors, the new Ford will be a thoroughly Canadian product—built in Canada from Canadian material by Canadian workmen. In this respect it will be unique for there is no other automobile completely manufactured in the Dominion.

Let us demonstrate for you what "tonal quality" should be in a high-class piano—"Ye Olde Firme" Heintzman and Co., Manufacturers' Building, Belleville, Fair, Aug. 29, 31-Sept. 1-2. a27,30

GERHARD HEINTZMAN IN EDUCATIONAL WORK

To every lover of music, one of the most interesting exhibits at the Belleville Fair during the coming week will be the display of Pianos, arranged by the Gerhard Heintzman Music Store, 245 Front Street in the Manufacturers Building.

A survey of musical and educational institutions reveals the fact that Gerhard Heintzman Pianos have been selected t ea great extent for institutions of this nature. This distinction is perhaps better appreciated when it is realized that quality of tone and ease of musical expression, are of greater importance to the young student of music than at any other time. The fact that Gerhard Heintzman Pianos have such a premier part in the training of young musicians throughout Canada is therefore conclusive proof that the great ability of "Canada's Greatest Piano" is fully recognized by master musical minds.

BELLEVILLE FAIR EDITION

ON TUESDAY NEXT THE GATES OF BELLEVILLE'S BEAUTIFUL EXHIBITION PARK WILL SWING OPEN AND THE CITY'S THIRD ANNUAL INDUSTRIAL FAIR WILL HAVE BEGUN.

THE UNTIRING EFFORTS OF THE FAIR BOARD HAVE RESULTED IN AN ASSEMBLAGE OF THE GREATEST ARRAY OF EXHIBITS EVER WITNESSED LOCALLY. THE YEAR'S PROGRESS IN STORE, IN FACTORY AND ON THE LAND WILL BE GRAPHICALLY DEPICTED BY EVEN LARGER AND MORE VARIED DISPLAYS. THAN THOSE WHICH HAVE MADE BELLEVILLE FAIR SO SUCCESSFUL IN THE PAST TWO YEARS.

IT REMAINS FOR THE RESIDENTS OF CITY AND COUNTRYSIDE TO TURN OUT IN FORCE AND HELP THE SLOGAN "BETTER THAN EVER" A REALITY, FOR THE FAIR REPRESENTS 4 BIG DAYS OF EDUCATION, AMUSEMENT AND ENTERTAINMENT.

IN THIS EDITION THE INELLIGENCER PRESENTS TO ITS READERS A RESUME OF SOME OF THE INTERESTING THINGS TO BE SEEN THERE, A PRE-VIEW OF THE 1927 EXHIBITION.

FOUR BIG DAYS & NIGHTS

AUG. 30, 31, -SEPT. 1, 2.

LET'S MAKE THIS YEAR'S FAIR A BIGGER AND BETTER ONE IN FACT

For Nearly Seventy Years Fair Has Been Held Here

President—John Bell.
1st Vice-President—S. D. Fairey.
2nd Vice-President—John M. Diamond.
Treasurer—ames Blacklock.
Secretary—K. Graham.
Directors—R. Garbutt, B. Gilbert, and William Woods of Sydney, Thomas Ware, Thurlow; Donald Anderson and Munroe Warden, Tyendinega; John Brown Belleville.

These, then, were the officers elected to the Fair Board on January 10th, 1927, an agricultural fair has been held here for over a period of seventy years. For all of the seventy years the Fair has had its ups and downs sometimes poor years, often a good one. But this year let's all get together and have the proverbial "Biggest and Best Fair" that has ever been held here! Many entries are expected in the different divisions and every building and every space will be utilized to provide room for the entries. The Manufacturer's Building, the Merchants Building, Poultry Building, and Agricultural Building were just new last year, and present a spic and span appearance. It is rumored that a famous band will play in the new Band Stand, and the fountain, a work of art, will be brilliantly lighted at night, the crystal streams of water resembling nothing so much a rainbows rainbow as they ascend into the gloom.

And then there is the Midway! The Midway that has an uncanny attraction for young and old, male and female, the famous Wallace Brothers Shows with its Merry-go-rounds, Ferris Wheel, Crack-the-Whip and dozens of their attractions, will go full swing afternoon and evening for four glorious days and nights.

This year the Directors of PICTON FAIR are putting forth every effort to make this year's Fair on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, September 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th, overshadow all former years in the matter of Exhibits, including Cattle, Horses, Sheep, Swine, Poultry, Grain, Fruits, Roots and Vegetables. Attractions will be in advance of any previous year, including Music by Selected Military Band, Pageant—"Progress and Confederation"—Daisie's Famous Midway and Shows, Races, Baseball, Baby Show and Dance. WE ADVISE ALL OUR PEOPLE FAR AND NEAR TO TAKE IN THIS MODEL COUNTY FAIR OF THE DOMINION FOR THEY WILL CERTAINLY ENJOY EVERY MINUTE OF THEIR VISIT TO PICTON FAIR.

1928 BUICK IS LAST WORD IN STYLE, COMFORT

Among Outstanding Features Of Fair Next Week

Among the outstanding features of the Belleville Fair next week, will be the first formal display of the remarkable New Buick for 1928.

Because every detail of appearance comfort, convenience, and operation in the 1928 McLaughlin-Buick measures up to a new high standard, there is no one outstanding feature on which attention should be centered. Rather, the car buyer must consider the 1928 McLaughlin-Buick as a unit —as a new Standard of Comparison.

The new comfort of the McLaughlin-Buick, is made up of many factors. From fitting tailored cushions; hydraulic shock absorbers, front and rear; proper spring suspension; long wheelbase; arm rests for rear seats in closed models; foot rests, where needed, all help to make a ride in a McLaughlin-Buick, a delightful experience.

New convenience is apparent in a score of features—maximum clear vision made possible by narrow windshield posts and narrow front door posts; centralized chassis lubrication; standard gear shift; adjustable steering wheel; gasoline gauge and water temperature gauge grouped with other instruments on the dash so that the winter story of the car's operation can be seen at a glance; new locks; new door handles. These are but a few of the practical and noteworthy advancements embodied in the Buick of 1928.

Refinement of the Famous McLaughlin Valve in Head Engine is carried still further in the new cars. There is a new camshaft; new valve mechanism; new cylinder head design; improved thermostat and other features that bring about more power more speed, greater quietness, and swifter getaway.

As in past years, McLaughlin Buick chassis is completely sealed against dust and dirt and embodies the time tried McLaughlin Buick Multiple Disc Clutch. McLaughlin Buick 4 wheel brakes and other features that makes Buick performance the standard of comparison.

FALL FASHIONS TAKE DEFINITE FEMININE TREND, SKIRTS SHORT

New Flare Forecast For Fall And Winter Fashions

The eternal feminine—ever changing—but eventually back again to where she started! She is once more expressing herself as a more alluring if feminine picture than ever. Ruffles flares, godets—bows and flowers—can one find anything more enticingly feminine? The array is positively alluring and really makes one wonder how the feminine eye has resisted them for such a long time—even though the straight lines, high boyish collars and unadorned frocks were considered the smart thing!

The reaction is at hand! And the Fall mode sponsors a new ultra-feminine trend. In the maze of the fashions—for it is a maze when almost every variety of silhouette appears on the stage of fashion—the question is—how can you detect the hallmarks of the season? Look for all that flirters, by it panels or drapes, bows or jabots! Look at the snugly fitting hips. They may be marked by swathing girdles or belts, or again suggested rather than emphasized, and by a bow or scarfing or even tucking. But always you will observe freedom in the movement of the skirts. It may be acquired through flares, through largely in pleat chatir formation or one free swinging broad box pleat, through drapes, through flounces and tiers and through scalloped and irregular hem-lines. In observing this new fashioning movement. You'll find it in bows and more drapes, pleats and flares and various ingenious methods of drawing the eye to the front. Also of intense interest are the diagonal treatments and numerous manipulations of the fabric in tucks and seaming, inserts and appliques. These may be especially noted in the cases where there is a tendency to emphasize hip and waist lines. There seems to be more interest centred about the hips line than the waistline, chiefly because emphasizing the waist is an absolutely new ovality. Indeed waists have not been hinted at for many years. The cut-in-form yoke and tightly wrapped girdle still accentuates the snug moulded hips. Above these tight hits a slight blouse is noted, especially toward the back. Some designers absorb the fullness of finely pleated blouses and skirts into wide fitted yokes, while others form a yoke by means of a gushed swath-girdle. Rarely, but of important interest when it appears, a modified version of an Egyptian girdle gives an Oriental feeling.

As definite as the hip-line has become, we can still say little for the waistline. It is as feminine as the most uncertain of women. It betrays a certain nonchalant indifference as to whether it exists at all and refuses to make up its mind just where it eventually wants to be. It can be high, low, or in between. Of especial interest is the waistline that begins low in the back gradually rising as it reaches the front. Sometimes three belts settle the whole vexatious conundrum by placing the waistline at all three positions in one and the same dress.

Here is shown the dread electric chair in which Sacco and Vanzetti went to their death at Massachusetts state prison after a seven year fight for life—the most remarkable fight of its kind in American jurisprudence. At the left is Robert Elliott, the executioner, who turned on the current. At the right is Miss Luigia Vanzetti, who came from Italy to bid farewell to her brother.

To be attractive in the most feminine way possible! That is the expression of the fall mode. And not only do we observe this in the silhouette but it also asserts itself in the very materials used. These materials give utterance by means of their extreme clinging quality, softly clouds and of the deepest haires. The demand for sheer silks is not going to fall away with the leaves as autumn winds soar, let them alter. Even the plain chiffons and georgettes will continue to dance to the front of the fashion stage as well as into the hearts of debutable and matron. here's something so fascinating in the nonchalant yet subtle appeal of these colorless gauzy stuffs that one feels at least one gown of them must always grace the wardrobe while more often three or four hold these cherished positions. And now that flounces ripple their way from neck to hem skirts flare and billow, and dip at all angles, while in which to express these inconsequential yet wondrully winsome frocks? Deepest lustre declares itself in the satin-back which are of the most popular of fall silks. An interesting contrast is formed when the satin is used for the main part of the frock with the crepe side adding decorative trimming. Geometric incrustations are given renewed interest through the continued use of the material with both shiny and dull surfaces.

Velvets! That superb and most adaptable of materials for a fall costume. It fashions any type of dress from the simplest of sports frocks to the most elegant of evening gowns. And the colorings! Ravishing! A glorious combination of all the most vivid and dashing shades found in the autumn leaves—plus a subtle mixing of the dainlier pastel shades, which give an ethereal, elusive effect. Or if in the glitter of metal one craves there are the beaten golds in heavenly pinks and blues, yellows, greens or mauves. There are also the tinsel in destructible brocaded velvets and the brocaded velvets on which a print adds an attractive blending of color. You'll find all manner of them sharing the honors with the ensembles of the more formal type, even for the evening hours.

Occasions for clothes—clothes for occasions is the universal feminine cry. And this proves that our lives are becoming more complicated than ever. And fast when we had reconciled ourselves to the belief that there were just two types of clothes—sports and evening wear. These new occasions are unmistakably of the type we knew as afternoon costumes. To be truthful, the Parisian of fashion never has eliminated from her wardrobe the more elaborate afternoon clothes. To be equally frank, we in this country were rapidly growing to look upon this type of costume as a perquisite of the dowager. But all the recent fashion shows the animated doll-like mannequins in their wonderous lovely frocks, so alluringly feminine and winsome, have made us stop and consider. These frills and furbelows, laces, and chiffons are being infused with the spirit of youth. To be sure they are more subtle and picturesque than our sports togs—but by they leave more to the imagination which so far as clothes are concerned has been idle for many a moon. We talked about them, followed them with admiration, but never carried them to the point of emulation.

It almost begins to look, with the introduction of these new clothes made for all occasions, that there is a possibility our sports clothes will fade in the distance. Never! We are dressing clothes for all occasions. And what would happen if our sports clothes were taken away from us? A lovely, soft and clingy georgette afternoon frock would certainly never be appropriate for country wear—much less for active sport use. The only trouble in the past has been that the sport costume was rushed to death. It was even seen at informal dances in the evening—and considered quite permissable. Now that we are entirely fed up on sports clothes, and since the fact is ascertained that the American woman desires a change. It is evident that Paris is giving us something quite new. We are presented with clothes for occasions! An occasion for a dress—and a dress for an occasion—that is the answer from the world of fashion.

NEW HUDSON AND ESSEX SUPER SIX WILL BE SHOWN

Each Designed For Its Own Individual Best Results

"On any old gas at all."

That is the answer motorists receive when they ask what type they should use for best results in the high compression motor of the new Essex Super-Six. Hudson-Essex engineers explain that the design of both these cars is such that the use of chemically treated or otherwise "doped" gasoline is not at all necessary, despite the cars' high compression.

With any type of motor car fuel, it is said, these cars are knock-proof. Tests have been held with the cars on hills and other "tough" spots around Belleville and North Hastings, but according to J. B. Boyce, Hudson-Essex distributor, the cars have operated with the pep and power of high-compression racing motors, yet it has been impossible to make them "ping" or knock.

This factor in Hudson-Essex," said Mr. Boyce, Hudson-Essex distributor, "is a saving to the motorist, because he does not pay a premium for special anti-knock fuel. Moreover, he need not worry about watching his fuel supply. He can drive up to any old gas cline station, put in the type of fuel they have for sale, and be quite all right.

The Essex motor has an exceptional compression ratio. It is about 25 per cent. higher compression than had been carried in standard motors; and it results in better performance and improved fuel economy. The owners of Essex Super-Six motors are well aware of the zip and power of their cars. Essex is super-modern in its design as to high-compression, and it adds to this faculty the advantage of using just any old fuel".

AN EXHIBIT OF UNUSUAL INTEREST TO EVERY FARMER

The FORDSON TRACTOR

Will Make Your Farm Yield Bigger Profits This Year

Special Time Payments If Required

The big problem on the farm today is to produce more at less cost. Farm surveys in Canada show that the largest item in the cost of producing a field crop is the labor of man and horse, amounting in some cases to as high as 50%.

The most effective means of reducing labor costs to a minimum is the adoption of economical, light weight tractor power and modern machinery which will result in the doubling or trebling of present crop production—with greater ease and timeliness.

In Canada today, over 17,000 Fordson owners can plow 5 to 8 acres daily, double disc 15 to 25 acres, cultivate 15 to 25 acres, harrow up to 50 acres, cut 20 to 35 acres of grain and thresh 700 to 1100 bushels of wheat.

Reduce your labor costs the Fordson way and make your farm pay bigger profits this year.

REVIVAL OF ELEGANCE IN FALL FOOTWEAR; KID SKIN IS CHOSEN

Pearl Lizard New Note For Evening—Sponsored By Elegance

A revival of elegance is sponsored by Paris in women's entire wardrobe for the coming fall. Not only is this not frowned on but encouraged, but it is even carried out in the new shoe models. As footwear is becoming such an important subject in the world of fashion, it is interesting to note how this theme of elegance is interpreted in the new footwear.

Therefore, in order to be termed fashionable, one had to sponsor the type of costume that was considered in Paris as the "smart thing." Smart women prided themselves on being sophisticated and dashing. They were the newest thing out, very often whether it suited their type or not. They had a habit of making things suit them type. Now the mode is changing—and we have in its place "the elegant". Being elegant does not mean being over-dressed. To the contrary the most simple things may be the most elegant. Grace and beauty are considered above all. The elegant woman is always portrayed first as a lady. She wears not only simple clothes but they are always of the best and finest materials available. She scatters often of the old world. The "ELEGANT" first and foremost considers her type—then she dresses accordingly; but is always exclusive.

In shoes this idea is carried out in a unique way and is most prevalent in the new fall styles. It is noticed that the leather that best interprets the elegant mode is kidskin. A woman of taste desires that material for her shoes which will best harmonize with the materials of which her gowns are made. She expresses her gentility in a leather that has a subdued gloss about it but not a high polish. Kidskin has just enough lustre to be genteel, yet stylish. An air of refinement are always expressed in the perfect achievement of a harmonious whole. Infinity carries out her chaste beauty by matching her handbag and gloves with her shoes. Thus again kidskin is the chosen medium. Also, this leather can be found in a wide range of the new autumnal shades thus making it simple to match any article in her wardrobe.

An striking examples of "elegance" expressed in the new fall footwear, I have selected five models. The one conveys utterance in simple courtly quality. Fashioned of the satin black kidskin it is a most appropriate shoe for informal afternoon or street wear. The trim and straps are in a delicate gray forming a neat outline most appropriate for this type of slipper.

Elegance supreme reigns in a model of bronze kidskin, whose most fashionable feature lies in the intricate saddle effect and strap of gold and silver kid. A dainty bronze beaded buckle enhances the beauty of this slipper with a truly feminine charm.

An exceptionally exclusive and graceful street shoe is the tasty model designed of brown kidskin. One can never go amiss in selecting a plain opera pumm, for it is becoming to almost any type of foot. A unique effect of this particular model is noted in the intricately cut-out side petals which are edged in a bronze metal. These petals are featured only on the outer side of each shoe.

A semi-sports model combines the comfort of a walking shoe, in spite of its high heel, with elevating aristocratic grace. The general reception and use of such a shoe broke the foot firmly, thus insuring perfect comfort. This model is fashioned of tan kidskin and its individual note lies in the intricate design in compose shades of lizard. These are uniquely inserted in each side.

An exquisite jewel of a shoe is the evening slipper. This superb creation is fashioned of pearl of nacre kidskin in a delicate Nile green shade to exactly harmonize with the gown with which it is to be worn. Its perfection lies in a novel trim effect, strangely reminiscent of an elegant Louis XVI heel in matching pearl lizard. Such a shoe is a perfect casement with which to enhance even the most perfect foot. The sheen of richer rather than glitter of gold—will be the important style note in fall evening slippers. This note will effect even colored evening slippers in that they will have a silvered and often a pearled buttre. Jeweled spans, as well as buckles of brilliants, ornament these new slippers, and Paisley effects in compose silver lame form decorative patterns for many of the most modish evening footwear. Pearl-lizard is another exquisite leather used for the expression of elegance in the evening mode of footwear.

Various other styles and materials such as antelope, patent leather, and suede carry out the elegant note. Satin also is featured but only for even ing or formal afternoon wear and never for street wear.

To Obtain Relief From Neuritis

The nervous system must be thoroughly restored. Here is a case which illustrates this point.

The twitching of nerves and muscles warned Mrs. Maplesoft of the exhausted condition of her nervous system. She also had frequent nervous headaches and persistent neuritis in her right side. Only temporary relief can come from external applications for neuritis. To really get rid of the cause of trouble it is necessary to thoroughly restore the exhausted nerves by the persistent use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Mrs. Wm. Maplesoft, Mount Forest, Ont., writes:—

"For about three years I suffered from neuritis in my right side. I had pains through my back and twitching of the nerves and muscles. I had also been operated on for appendicitis, and it left me a nervous wreck. I was very restless and uneasy, and bothered with frequent neuralgic headaches. My appetite was poor and I sometimes took a weak spell. I commenced a treatment of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and in a very short time I found relief. This medicine has done me the world of good and I can recommend it to all suffering as I was."

THE NEW CANADIAN OAKLAND SIX IS TO BE ON VIEW AT THE FAIR

Entirely Different In Design From Its Predecessors; Is Larger

The 1928 Canadian Oakland Model will be one of the big automotive features of the Belleville Industrial Fair.

Oakland occupies the centre of the automotive stage, this week with the announcement of a new car—"The New Canadian Oakland Six." It is a car entirely different in design from previous Oaklands—larger, more powerful, more roomy—with a wheelbase of 117 inches, instead of the former 113. The motor has been completely redesigned, as have the chassis, the Fisher bodies and many of the mechanical features. New Duco colors are also announced. But most remarkable of all are the drastic price reductions, which amount to as much as $315 on one model, and make Oakland available in a much larger circle of buyers.

Sleek greyhound lines characterize the new car, which has been designed for high standards of reliability, appearance, comfort and performance. Because this year a larger proportion of the car than ever before will be made in Canada, it has been christened the new Canadian Oakland.

The size and low-swung appearance of the new models may be gleaned from the fact that they have an over all length of 178 inches between bumpers, a road clearance of 8 5-8 inches and a height of less than six feet from the ground to the top of the roof. Although the entire car has been lowered, no head room has been sacrificed in the spacious interior.

The low lines of the car are supplemented by a high, narrow radiator, sweeping full crown fenders, lower running boards, oblong windows, a double row of beading, and especially by larger tires on smaller wheels. Artillery wheels of 19 inch diameter are combined with 29 by 5.50 inch balloon tires. The spokes of the wheels are of larger diameter than used heretofore.

Among the more important, new mechanical features are a gasoline pump to supersede the long familiar vacuum tank, a new system of crankcase ventilation to reduce oil changes to a minimum and triple sealed oil protection by, gasoline, air and oil filters.

A new and softer acting clutch, a new and smoother transmission, a four bearing crankshaft, a 15-plate battery and new oiling system are among the noted features of the car.

The new engine has a displacement of 213 cubic inches and is of the six cylinder L-head type, cast en bloc with the crankcase and cylinder block integral. It has a 3 1-4 inch bore and 4 1-4 inch stroke and develops 80 brake horsepower at 2,800 r.p.m.

Seven Body Types

The new Canadian Oakland Six body types present new grace of lines and new richness in character which are further enhanced by smart upholstery and tastiable interior trimmings and appointments. The complete line includes the Two-door Sedan, Four-door Sedan, Landau Sedan, Landau Coupe, Sport Phaeton, Sport Roadsters and Four Passenger Cabriolet.

A number of special body features are found in various cars. A door on the right side of the rear deck for golf clubs is standard on the Landau Coupe, the Sport Roadster and the Cabriolet. The one-piece clear vision windshield on the Sport Roadster and Sport Phaeton may be tilted for ventilation or the entire windshield folded forward to a horizontal position.

The new Canadian Oakland Six Chassis is constructed on a long, deep frame, rigidly braced by five heavy steel cross members and further reinforced by the rear part of the engine supports and through the drive, eliminates transmission of chassis noises.

A prominent feature of the engine is the especially designed removable cylinder head, a new creation from the General Motors Research Department. In addition to being correctly proportioned for strength and lightness, each combustion chamber had a uniquely designed "step shaped" profile so as to break up unvaporized fuel and give a uniform burning of the gas. The employment of four curves in the sides of the combustion chamber effectively eliminates detonation.

A belt driven water pump circulates 720 gallons of water an hour at a speed of 25 miles an hour. The rad iator, which is 21-5-16 inches high, has a capacity of 14 quarts, while a heat controls the temperature of the thermostat built into the cylinder cooling water.

A careful examination of the Canadian Oakland Six leads one to believe that Oakland is offering a "big package for the money." This is true, because instead of higher prices new low prices, ranging from 1310 to $1675 are now announced.

The Big Midway at Picton Fair will include Merry-Go-Round, Whip, Ferris Wheel and Merry-Mix-Up; as well as a large number of Concessions. The Midway will be running full force on each day and night of the Fair. Plan to attend! Everybody must visit the Midway! Four days—September 6-7-8-9. s27,d3

NEW VICTROLA MARVEL, PLAYS HOUR ON END

Automatic Orthophonic Changes Own Records; Plays 12

The Automatic Orthophonic Victrola has come at last! An Orthophonic Victrola that changes its own records. An instrument that gives an hour or more of matchless Orthophonic reproduction of music. Changes records while you remain comfortably seated. Picks up twelve records one by one, plays them in the succession you have arranged; puts them away again, and stops itself. No wonder every one exclaims, "It's almost human!"

The Automatic Orthophonic Victrola will play for a whole hour the music you choose, by the artist you prefer at the time when you want it. It will play this music without the slightest mechanical attention from you. Simply put only with the automatic feature, but with all the other convenience so found in the whole line of Orthophonic Victrolas. It represents the last word in luxury of musical entertainment.

The automatic instrument plays a dozen Orthophonic Victor records, or less if you prefer; either the 10" or 12-inch size. You select the program you wish to hear; place the records on the "magazine arm"; turn a switch, and—forget everything but the music!

The first and most obvious advantage of the Automatic Orthophonic Victrola is that it gives you music of the same matchless quality characteristic of all Orthophonic instruments. The "long-play" needle seldom needs replacing. The silent electric motor operates the automatic mechanism and eliminates winding. There is nothing to do but listen.

In this amazing instrument gives you perfectly reproduced music during dinner, bridge parties, dancing and other social affairs, without attendance for a whole hour. It is invaluable whenever music is desired. But its wonderful convenience is not all. The Automatic Orthophonic Victrola makes possible the uninterrupted performance of musical works. A program of operatic selection, a complete symphony, a piano or violin recital; or a balanced, varied in the order, by the musicians, of your choice. This is the most important feature of the instrument. Its greatest value is its musical value, its performance is without a peer; as the Automatic feature contributes to the enjoyment of that performance, it makes the instrument just so much more to be desired.

The Automatic Orthophonic togeth er with the complete Orthophonic line will be on display at the Fair in the booth of Doyle's Drug Store.

Even in the days of the Inquisition they never locked the victim in a room and compelled him to listen to hours of piano practice.

FARM WOMEN ARE TAKING VACATION

Tipton, Iowa, Aug. 26 (C.P.)—Cedar County farm women are taking a vacation. After these many years of getting up with the sun for an endless day of dreary duties, the women are taking life easy at a farm bureau camp where they don't even dare to wring out their own bathing suits.

The Farm Women's Vacation Camp was sponsored by the farm bureau which invited all members to send their wives and daughters for two weeks of real vacation. Nearly 100 already are enjoying the outing. Recreation consists of boating, swimming and other sports, with an absolute ban on all forms of work.

Husbands were forbidden to go to camp and were told to remain at home with the children and worry along with the washing, the sweeping, the cooking, the churning, and bed-making, not to mention feeding the chickens and gathering the eggs.

DROWNED TRYING TO EXTINGUISH BLAZING CLOTHES

LEAPED IN RACE TO QUENCH FIRE AND IS DROWNED

George Daynard of Hastings Lost His Life in a Strange Accident

COULD NOT SWIM

Spectators Unaware of His Danger Made no Attempt At Rescue

George Daynard, aged 17 years, uncle and cousin of Nelson and Earl Daynard, respectively, of West Moira street, this city, was drowned in "The Race", a branch of the Trent River, at Hastings, on Saturday afternoon last. The boy was recovered twelve minutes after the fatality occurred.

Young Daynard had been employed at McKentry's Hardware Store at Hastings for the past year, and on the afternoon of the fatality was soldering in the workshop of that store when his clothes caught fire and he immediately ran out behind the shop, and jumped into the water which is quite deep at that point. He was unable to swim, but spectators not knowing this did not go to his assistance.

The deceased is survived by his father, a butcher, Hastings, his mother three sisters and four brothers. He was a member of the Hastings Presbyterian Choir.

The funeral was held this afternoon from his home in Hastings Cemetery. Owing to the absence of the Presbyterian minister from town, the funeral service was conducted at the house by the Anglican Minister. The many beautiful floral tributes and the large gathering of friends at the obsequies silently expressed the sorrow caused by the untimely death of the deceased.

MEMORIAL TO A VALUED WORKER

Salvation Army Remembers The Services of a Departed Member

One of the largest gatherings ever assembled in the Salvation Army Citadel was presented last evening for the memorial service held in memory of Captain John Tourte, who was an active worker in the Army.

Those taking part in the service were Miss H. Clarke, Mrs. Bernard Brown, Thomas Adams and Adjutant J. Wardle, all who referred to the life and character of the deceased and the influence his association with the Salvation Army had on them. The services sang "Who are these arrayed in White Robes" and the band played "It is Well With My Soul".

Adjutant Bolton spoke from the text "Set Thine House in Order" after which the male quartette sang "Holy Spirit Hear Us".

Miss Irene Tourte, daughter of the deceased, referred to the influence her father's life had on her, stating that it resulted in her taking such an active part in the Salvation Army work.

MINISTER TALKS TO ROTARY CLUB

Today Rotarians had the pleasure of listening to a very fine address by the Rev. G. E. McCutcheon, minister of the Tabernacle Church, and a comparative newcomer to Belleville.

Mr. McCutcheon divided his little talk up into three divisions, speaking on Purity, Truth and Integrity. He exhorted the Rotarians to make honesty the basic principle of their business life, to make their business honor able. He claimed that there had been a tremendous slump in honesty, but that business men were honest as a whole. He exhorted his listeners not to sin. The talk was well received and a spontaneous burst of applause greeted the Rev. McCutcheon when he sat down.

SIX DRUNKEN DRIVERS FACE THE MAGISTRATE AT MORNING'S COURT

Record For Local Bench—Celebrated Sunday Too Well

JUST MARRIED

Mr. Mikel Lets Bridegroom Off On a Suspended Sentence

Six separate charges against drunken drivers appeared in the local police court this morning before Magistrate Mikel, two of them were sent to jail, two received suspended sentences, and two were remanded until tomorrow morning. This probably constitutes a record for so many on this charge to appear in Belleville's police court at one time. The cases were disposed of speedily, nevertheless the entire forenoon was required to complete the trials.

Seven Days Jail

James Gordon McCutcheon, trusted employee of the Robert Simpson Co., Toronto, who faced a charged of driving a car while drunk some time ago, and was remanded until today, appeared before Magistrate W. C. Mikel this morning and was sentenced to jail for seven days. McCutcheon smashed into a car driven by Charles Adams, of Bayside, a village a short distance from Belleville, on August 7, injuring Adams and his wife and children, who were with him.

McCutcheon was remanded until today in order that he might secure his holidays from the Simpson Co. as he pleaded guilty to the charge and knew he would no doubt have to go to jail.

His liquor permit was suspended, with the recommendation that it be cancelled. McCutcheon will probably have to face a civil action later.

Married Only Week

Harold Mitchell, a farmer's assistant of this district, who has just been married a week, appeared before the Court this morning also facing a charge of driving a car whilst intoxicated. Mitchell, who lives on the Kingston Highway, started out on a little spree with John Williams, who was fined $15 and 27 costs, on a common drunk charge today, and ended up in the local jail Saturday night. His wife, evidently holding no hard feelings against him for a break so soon after the marriage ceremony, visited him in the Belleville jail yesterday. In sentencing Mitchell, the

On April 7th last the Provincial Police went to Marmora and raided the St. James Hotel in that village, of which A. T. Neal is the proprietor. A quantity of liquor was found on the premises, but during the search Neal quietly slipped away.

A warrant was issued for his arrest but was never served, as Neal went to the U.S. On Saturday about 4 o'clock in the afternoon Neal returned to the local Provincial Police office and voluntarily gave himself up. He was taken before Magistrate Casement the same afternoon and pleaded guilty to a charge of having liquor in a public place, contrary to the provisions of the Ontario Temperance Act. He was fined $100 and costs.

There is only one Ontario Temperance Act case left to try this district, the Provincial Police told the Intelligencer today, all the rest having been cleaned up.

RECKLESS DRIVING?

Car Badly Wrecked and Stripped of Parts During the Night

Elmer LaBarr, 73 Dundas street, William Hurst, 34 Dunbar street, Harvey Rice, 352 Foster Avenue, and E. Ahlanes, employed in an automobile driven by LaBarr, from Riley's Halfway House on Saturday night, about midnight, crashed into a hydro pole nearly opposite the Bay of Quinte Country Club, wrecking the pole completely and turning their car over in the ditch. None of the occupants of the car were hurt beyond being severely shaken up, but the automobile was badly wrecked.

Provincial Police stated today that there was no evidence of drinking in the party, but Highway Traffic Officer Prink said that a reckless driving charge would probably be laid against LaBarr.

LaBarr told the investigating officers that he had crowded too close to the side of the ditch by a passing car and that his lights were none too good at the moment, during the night the battery and tires of the smashed car were stolen.

Reported to Have Reached Prince Edward County This Morning

HOPPED-OFF AT DAWN

Struck Rain Near Toronto And Forced to Return to Base

London, Ont., Aug. 29. — Encountering heavy rainstorm while flying over Lake Ontario, Capt. Terrance Tully pilot, James Medcalf in the "Sir John Carling" on the first Canadian attempt at a trans-Atlantic flight were forced to return to London at eleven a.m., Eastern Daylight Time.

The fliers who left London at dawn were reported over Shrewsville and Oakville just west of Toronto on their eastward journey but while skirting the north shore of Lake Ontario found conditions so bad that they were forced to return to the flying field just outside of this city. The intrepid aviators were attempting a London-to-London flight for a $25,000 prize.

Reported Over P. E.

Toronto, Ont., Aug. 29. — The "Sir John Carling" in which Lieut. James Medcalf and Capt. Terrance Tully were winging their way on their London to London flight, entered an area of rain as it turned out over Lake Ontario west of Toronto. Indications were that it left the rainstorm behind it as it again turned over the land at Prince Edward County, at the eastern end of Lake Ontario.

London, Ont., August 29.—Lieut. Terry Tully and Lieut. James Medalfe piloting the Stinson Detroiter Monoplane "Sir John Carling" took off at 5.50 o'clock this morning in attempt to make the 3,762 mile flight from this city to London, England for the $25,000 Carling Prize. The fliers ran about three quarters of a mile down the runway and made a perfect get away in the grey dawn. They took off in the West and after circling the city to get height turned the nose of their plane into the east to bring it.

As the great plane rose with its heavy load, spectators who had watched it's hazardous run down, the runway in tense silence, broke into wild cheering.

At 5.30 Capt. Tully kissed his wife good-bye and climbed into the cockpit. Five minutes later, R. J. Mollard, aviation expert started to warm the propeller and calling for contact, for a few minutes the engine failed to start, but at 5.43 the great motor roared into action and the propeller became a flashing circle of light.

Forty Seconds to Rise

Forty seconds later the big 720 for a few minutes to give it a chance to warm up. At 5.53 this huge monoplane began its run slowly at first, then faster and steadily faster as the propellers increased speed. At the end pull began to get the mass of over two and a half tons into motion. Rapidly the machine gained speed, increasing and in forty seconds and about three hundred feet from the starting point, the wheels lifted from the ground and the plane was successfully on it's way.

Preparations for the flight had been in progress throughout the night and it will be in readiness when Tully and Medcalfe arrived on the field. Not long before the actual start the decided was made to carry only 372 Imperial gallons of gasoline instead of 500 for which

JAZZING THE STYLES

Sidney Webb, the learned Fabian, who has something to do with fashion clothes, tells us that styles are "jazzed" up. And so at Deauville, France, where the "season" is just opening and where the race is set for the idle rich and all who ape them, we are told that "long smith in evidence and are frequently encased in contrasting stockings."

One recalls a country lad where this same contrasting variety in attire was practised years ago and, by the same token, was considered the clearest evidence of the village idiot. These individuals, "Silly" M. Tozer, one better, became the story division in the old days of their confusion and not thought of for the future from the "Silly" Tozer. One son, half of the body and one leg was clad in blue, contrasting with the bright grey which covered the other half of the gentleman's anatomy. So he went, these blue-grey breeches were the fashion of Jamaica and possibly the costumes they wore were not much or they would have shoe on their ankles been free and unrestricted. The joker wanted them to be as conspicuous as possible and succeeded unexpectedly well in impose a certain handicap on their movements around they noticed in mounting the hill and was dropping to liberty. They were the fashion of the day, which is not to be regarded as a "blemish" of the mind of mankind.

Senator Gideon Robertson, who is a delegate to the congress, mildly asked whether it might not be wise since the senate cannot be abolished, that its members be not re-elected and make suggestions along that line which might be acceptable even to the senators themselves. He spoke words of truth and soberness. So long as those who are responsible appoint senate nominees to those senators and demand their official heads, not much progress can be made in the direction of real senate reform.

CAPITAL NEEDED

The Ontario Government's report of a record increase in mineral production comes as a most welcome third quarter and economy. But no one knows money runs back over the their harbourday can fail to realize, with a party of regret, how irreparable has been the loss through the lack of shelter restriction during the years when game was abundant in nearly all sections of the Dominion. In those days indiscriminate and unchecked slaughter went on. The American bison, as an animal to be hunted was driven from the face of the earth. Passenger pigeons were millions of them on the western prairies as late as 1870. The market value of the pelts and the heartrending cries caused the doom of that noble quadruped. Today many species are in existence are to be found in captivity, although, happily, the Esquimaux "caribou."

The extinction of the wild pigeon, one of the finest of our native game birds, was made so complete that not a single specimen has been seen in either Canada or the United States within the past thirty or forty years in the interior and scientists was a conscious thing to see them migrating southward in such countless numbers as to darken the sky. In large degree the wild turkey has gone the way of the wild pigeon, while the Canada goose has had a narrow escape from the same fate. Partridge and quail may be plentiful, have grown scarce and the same thing is true of some of the better species of wild duck. The preservations which are now so effective and are undoubtedly preserving such game of all kinds as it still so be fought in the country. [illegible] is force to be lost.

It is, of course, true that the march of civilization is inevitably destructive of game life, but not necessarily in Canada. We are fortunate in having vast areas which will always be the haunt of animals, birds and fish for generations to come without interfering with the progress of settlement. They are still rich in game of all sorts, but not as rich as they would be if slaughter on a large scale had not practically many millions during the annual migratory periods at birds when hunting went on unhindered. The best that can be now done is to rigidly regulate the hunting of game, and to provide for its increase in every possible way. Whatever the supply shows signs of diminishing,

FUTILE HOSTILITY

It is now a matter of course that the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress shall, at its annual convention make a demand for the abolition of the Dominion senate. At the convention now in session at Edmonton the customary denunciation of the senate has been heard and the familiar demand for its abolition was made. It would vary the annual discussion on this subject and add interest to it if some delegate would, for a change, make a serious attempt to show how its abolition can be brought about. There are no Cromwells now to march into the senate chamber with a file of troopers, to drive the Honorable members out and padlock the doors. If the thing is to be done at all it must be done in a constitutional way. But how is it to be done? It would be necessary not only to gain the consent of the senate to its own death, but also the consent of the legislatures of the provinces which were parties to the Confederation pact, and it is quite certain that the consent of one at least of these legislatures—that of Quebec—can never be gained. Quebec clings to its own little senate and it is not to be expected that it would consent to let the big one go, for Quebec people have a sort of sentiment of the kind in connection with the senate.

Senator Robertson, who is a delegate to the congress, mildly asked whether it might not be wise since the senate cannot be abolished, that its members be not re-elected and make suggestions along that line which might be acceptable even to the senators themselves. He spoke words of truth and soberness. So long as those who are responsible appoint senate nominees to those senators and demand their official heads, not much progress can be made in the direction of real senate reform.

CAPITAL NEEDED

The Ontario Government's report of a record increase in mineral production comes as a most welcome third quarter and economy. But no one knows money runs back over the their harbourday can fail to realize, with a party of regret, how irreparable has been the loss through the lack of shelter restriction during the years when game was abundant in nearly all sections of the Dominion. British people can bear their present burden lightly.

Lord Willingdon, who is retiring from office, says the responsibilities of Canada are a very safe responsibility for Canada, and the citizens men that Canada has produced are worthy of the outstanding natural resources; an almost inexhaustible water supply for power; forests to supply her great lumbering industry and production of pulp; mineral wealth of which only a small part has already been developed; a great agricultural country which is already the world's greatest exporter and general wealth which is being developed by leaps and bounds. What appalling responsibilities of United States capital look this country! All Canadians, he said, would enjoy, they are great prospects by developed within the Empire.

That such prospects can find the confidence within the people of well known to all these men are also of all concerned: with the vast resources of the Motherland. The part to be played by the native son is to see that such capital when it comes to this country is adequately safeguarded and directed into those channels which will bring the largest return to the Motherland and to Canada.

LUMBERING HAS A GOOD FUTURE

Pembroke, Aug. 27.—Despite the depression which has existed in the lumber industry for the past few years, the future outlook is a most promising one. The larger companies operating on the Upper Ottawa are optimistic concerning the future. Those interviewed with the heads of the J. R. Booth Company Limited, Brent Booth, manager, and the Pembroke Lumber Company, and the Edwards Lumber and Pulp Limited, of Buckingham, revealed the fact that they, too, believe that the corner has been turned and the outlook for the future is brighter than it has been for some time.

The cut in the five or six years now but free conditions in the lumber industry have been quite different. Lumbermen are like a number of causes for this depression. Over-production, unfavorable market conditions and high logging costs are the most important. Over-production was discussed by the men concerned, but, notwithstanding the conditions with which the lumber business is faced, confidence was expressed on every hand that the white pine of the Ottawa Valley will regain its former position in the forefront of the lumber world.

WIND PRESSURES BEING TESTED BY NEW METHODS

Effects of Air on Buildings Airplanes, Etc., of Incalculable Value

Washington, August 29.—Just how much of a motor car's power is used in pushing the air aside, and similar information with respect to the effect upon of other vehicles, including airships, are among the problems that the Bureau of Standards is attempting to solve through the medium of extensive experimentation now under way.

Typhoons made to order, under measured control in the "cave of the winds", are set up at the bureau, yielding information that is expected to prove of incalculable value to airplane, automobile designers, ordinance makers, builders and architects.

Wind pressure is being measured on a large model of a smoke stack in the wind tunnel, and a full scale stack erected on the roof of the west laboratory of the bureau. The wind tunnels velocities will be varied at will, and desired peed up to 180 miles an hour.

In these streams are placed models of airships, airplanes, balloons, finished bombs, hydroplanes, automobiles, skyscrapers, anything in fact, subject to air pressure of winds or which pass through the air with speed, power or efficiency. The experiments tell the air pressure on buildings or bridges, the effect of wind on the engine of a motor car, and what kind of pressure smoke stacks must withstand at maximum local wind speed.

The experimental stack on the roof is 10 feet high, 2 feet 6 inches in inside diameter and thirty feet high. A circle of 24 high speed fans, each with a noble belt connected with a pressure gauge. For each direction of wind, or wind pressure or suction every fifty degrees around the stack.

"Knowing the pressure and suction," an official of the bureau said in a statement, "engineers can design with more safety their stacks or other cylindrical structures to withstand whatever wind speeds must be provided for with efficiency and economy. An aluminum model of a typical factory building may be seen in the bureau's giant wind tunnel. This model implies thousands of factories which must be able to withstand wind pressure. Curiously enough, the chief results are seen to show suction rather than pressure, such that in high wind the building would tend to explode outward rather than collapse inward. This off result is of great importance in flight. Factory type roof ventilators were investigated, and the results given the producers as to the proper design for type or design. The wind pressures on skyscrapers, about which only conjecture was previously possible, were measured with great care, and the results recorded in large and graphic charts. So, too, wind pressures on airships were determined. Thousands of airplane parts have been subjected to artificial winds, equivalent to air forces in flight, with the steadily increasing efficiency resulting from the test results, and the re-design made possible with greater precision.

The wind tunnels have uses in great variety, and the bureau is furnishing fundamental information concerning air passages on models at real in the wind, which yield results comparable with those on models in flight through the air. These results will aid the art of aerial navigation in perfecting its streamlines to reduce resistance and in perfect its flow and pressure contours to increase the lift efficiency."

MUSCOVY IS BANNED

Paris, August 29.—French Government employees with Communist tendencies will no longer be permitted to pass their vacation time studying Soviet administration at first hand. The Government last week got wind of the fact that a number of employees were asking for leave to go to Russia and were getting their passports visaed for the trip. Late yesterday the Government sent a general circular letter to administrators informing that no leave be given to employees for this purpose and ordering all that authorization already granted should be immediately withdrawn. The order was signed by Premier and Minister of Finance.

Actor Drops Dead; Another Goes Insane; Third Suicides

Paris, Friday, August 26.—The suicide in the local city theater was thrown into a wild panic last night by a triple tragedy. During the last act of the performance, an actor named Poitrinay dropped dead from heart disease. His friend Lecamard, who appeared before the curtain a few minutes later, and announced his death, suddenly went violently insane. While the panic was led from the show house, three more rang out. Mesnet, who's another actor and friend of Poitrinay, ran into the street covered with blood, having fired several shots into his own body. The unfortunate man then hastened into the theatre and was arrested, despite attempts to save him.

CECIL WILL GIVE DECISION TO-DAY

Disagreement the Outcome Of British Attitude at Naval Parley

London, Aug. 29.—Viscount Cecil of Chelwood has definitely decided to see Premier Baldwin and Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, it was learned to-day and with the decision expected before the beginning meeting of the League of Nations Council.

London, August 29.—Viscount Cecil, it was also learned, will decide today whether he will resign from the Cabinet as Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. Lord Cecil is said to have sharply disagreed with his colleagues at the British naval delegation toward the abolition of naval armaments at the Geneva conference. He believed it is reported, that a regular disposition to avert controversies on the part of the British would have prevented the failure of the conference.

The report that Lord Cecil disagreed also on the question of the Rhineland troops and was at odds with Sir Austen Chamberlain, Foreign Secretary, was declared yesterday today.

Lord Cecil's disappearance from the reported Cabinet is generally considered by friends of the League of Nations to be likely to handicap the enthusiastic work of pacification in European politics. Lord Cecil has been particularly active in behalf of the League.

London, August 29.—Viscount Cecil's reported resignation is ascribed by The Daily Express to a Cabinet split in the near East. The paper says Sir Austen Chamberlain, and arising from the question of reducing the troops in the Rhineland while Lord Cecil maintained this attitude was in accordance with the views of the Locarno "spirit of Locarno." Lord Cecil, it adds, went further and declared there should be no army of occupation at all, since French security was guaranteed through the Locarno pact by the whole weight of the British Army.

"The extraordinary spectacle is presented," the Express comments, "of Lord Cecil resigning, or threatening to resign, as a protest against Sir Austen Chamberlain and in order to save the Locarno Treaty, for which Sir Austen received the supreme credit."

Granting that the situation may be eased by the announcement from Paris that it has been agreed for Great Britain and Belgium to with draw 1,500 troops and France 7,000 the ways issues it is not thought this will be satisfactory.

Sir Austen is expected to leave Tuesday morning for Geneva to attend the League's council meeting. At the Foreign Office it was said that as far as was known Viscount Cecil also was going to Geneva Tuesday.

TANKS KEPT IN TOUCH BY PHONE

Conversations Successfully Carried On At Salisbury Manoeuvres

London, Aug. 27.—Successful experiments mastering telephone conversations between armored tanks in action and their base have been made by a British Territorial officer during manoeuvres and now being conducted at Salisbury Plain. The noise inside of a tank hampers speech, except at a speed of fifteen miles per hour, being heavy guns with great rapidity, the officer explained, he occupied the only converse by shouting directly into the ear of the listener.

But the experiments of Captain K. E. Hartley overcame these difficulties, and since tanks have been blind, deaf and dumb, his achievements are believed to have quadrupled their efficiency. One of the most puzzling problems faced was that of eliminating the constant slight change in wave length, which is caused by the motion and the walls of houses introduced in the set and serial as the tanks move.

Any number of a tank's crew can operate Captain Hartley's receiving and transmitting instruments by watt' affairs, the receivers powerful seven-tube superheterodynes," with another valve for the purpose of modification. Padded head phones are used instead of the usual telephone, and the serial is simply a hollow shaft, mum rod six feet high, fitted to the roof of the tank with an ordinary door spring. When the tank passes under a bridge the serial lies down and rises as soon as the obstacle is passed, but it is working all the time. An experimental wireless demonstration was held yesterday from one tank, with another six miles away, between the base at Moulsford, twelve miles away.

C. N. R. APPEAL COMES SEPT. 6TH.

Alberta & Ontario Coal Rates Are To Be Considered by Board

Ottawa, August 29.—Another phase of the railway freight rates question will be reached when the Dominion Railway Board, on September 6th, hears the appeal of the Canadian National Railways against the Board's order giving effect to the Maritime freight rates legislation, more particularly on the Alberta coal rates. The case is to be upon the St. John, N.B., and Ste Rose Ste Jct., Que. gateways.

The object of the railway to comply with this latter order has been the subject of considerable debate in Maritime Provinces ifhoe July 1. Shippers there object to the refusal of the Canadian National to comply with the Fu ture quent instructions on bills of lading to transfer consignment to the Quebec gateway, westbound. Where the two roads meet.

Still another phase is, it is understood, being considered now by the Railway Board, which has just completed a two day general examination of rates case by lacunabe of orders" last Friday. Immediate consideration is being given to the question of what shall be the rate on coal from Alberta to the Maritimes and it is expected that the board's ruling on this matter will be made known about the middle of September.

The two principal railways estimate that on a normal year's traffic their revenue would be reduced by $1,500,000 each by the reductions in rate ordered by the Railway Board as from July day. These reduced rates together with a considerable increase in the ele leadings in the next few weeks said the increased wages granted to employees this year, will make serious in roads into the incomes of the railways

ART CONCEALS ART IN COURT OF VENUS

By ELSIE MARLOWE

Lucky Myra! ...She has been invited to a house party at the lake. A whole joyous month of swimming and fishing, dancing, boating and hiking. Sweet mornings tramping through the fresh hay, laughing moons — dreamy, perfumed nights with a moon hanging low like a golden fruit in a pulsing purple sky.

And best of all, DOYLE.

Four wonderful days, fellows, all within a year or two of Myra's age—all handsome, jolly and charming, but who wonder Myra hears it waiting thes days.

Oh, what a joy to plan for it all. There's a perfect dream of a chintz parasol, with a bag and a saucy polka bonnet to match. There's a new bathing suit as gay as a parakeet—and an organdy dress of dream gray with a Pekin or ruffled white net and a beguiling pink rose. There's the white flannel skirt and a saucy little jacket of red, with a scarlet tam to flop down over one ear. And a party dress that was snipped from a sunset cloud bound with moonlight and sprinkled with baby stars.

Myra has told us all about them in her letter. All the joy and all her worries—for you see, it's the very first time nineteen-year-old Myra has been to a house party with boys and she doesn't know how to act. Of course, she's had her brother's and her brother's chum but she says they play with. But these are just Common boys. Anyone would know how to act with them. But how to act with Paul Perfectly Wonderful Old Man Allen who is twenty-five and years old — that's the question that's bothering Myra's pretty bobbed head. And now we'll try to tell her.

How'll you act, honey?

DON'T ACT AT ALL.

Yes, I know you'll be all a-giggle and a-tingle, but don't be that way much your very lovely, friendly little self as you can. Treat them as you treat the boys at home. Be a little chummy — and just as indifferent as you are to Bill and his Gang.

Don't overwear the chumminess—and don't overdo the indifference.

Don't hang around their necks or fag after them whenever they stir or make a fuss over them every time they appear. Nothing bores men quicker than a girl who is "too easy."

And don't try to pique them by an affected hostility or mysterious, sniffy remarks — or attempt to fascinate them by showing off or doing things which attract attention in public. No matter how "manly" a boy may be himself, he doesn't like mash compliments by a girl. Every man wishes to have His Woman admired—but there is a vast difference between admiration and notoriety and a wise girl will always fear that difference in mind.

Don't talk too much about yourself. Most girls of nineteen think a great deal about themselves and like to analyze themselves. That's all very well for a strictly indoor sport, like sister, but don't conduct your Personal Analysis clinic before your Boy Friends.

Don't let them think that you analyze THEM, but they'll be bored to tears if you insist on relating your own symptoms.

Remember this isn't going to be a Beauty Contest. Don't spend your days in dressing in your prettiest gowns and posing on the pawin. Don't think that gorgeous bathing suit and parade about on dry land— Act like HOSTESS. Show your gratitude for her kindness by trying to give her party. PARTICULARLY IF YOUR HOSTESS is a pleasure during that month. Help her with the housework—devise little treats for her—discover her in the fun whenever you can. Remember, dear, the ungrateful visitor soon ceases to be a welcome guest—and can you?

There is more to this than a bit of stone," he muttered, and left her, the opal tightly clutched in his hand. Then he heard the door of his study close decisively behind him. She made a little, wry grimace.

"He's back at work on that infernal inscription," she thought. Inever emily.

For over twenty years—almost since their marriage—Lind had been attempting to decipher the inscription on a vase discovered in some Etruscan ruins. He believed confidently that his success would mean a step to the most baffling of all tongues. So far, his attempts had met with failure but still lacked one or two words to complete his masterpiece—his life's work.

As she had married him at twenty. He had been forty then—a friend of her father's, and friends had urged the match. Pretty, eager for life but dutiful, she had found herself imprisoned in the musty atmosphere of dead ages and dead peoples. Her only acquaintances were graybeared savants and their gaunt, spindly wives. At forty-five, Ada, although somewhat faded, by no means unattractive, was still wistful for life. She fairly hated the Etruscan inscription that had robbed her husband's youth and energy.

She took another look at the Sanchez collection and went slowly upstairs to wash her hands and smooth her hair for dinner. There was never any dressing for dinner in that house now. She looked at herself dispassionately in the mirror. There were fall-ing lines about her eyes and around her mouth, a too generous fullness beneath her chin. Her bright brown hair had lost its luster, and there were threads of silver at her temples.

"You're old," she told herself dispassionately. "It's too late now. Life has passed you by, and you might as well resign yourself to it. Ada. You'll never get another chance."

Her reflection in the mirror was interrupted by a sound from her husband's study. A hoarse cry—a shout of triumph and exultation!

CHAPTER 42.

THE URGE OF LONELINESS

Ada Lind reached her husband's study as quickly as her plump little legs could carry her. His strange cry was still echoing in her ears. She flung open the door with a trembling hand.

"James, James, what is it?"

Professor Lind was standing beside his work-table, and she supported him, as if he strove against the convulsions of joy shaking strength. But the eyes he turned upon his frightened wife were triumphant.

"I've done it!" he cried exultantly. "At last, after twenty years, I have the translation of the inscription! My life's work is finished!"

His knees seemed to give away, he sank back into his chair and his head fell forward on the desk.

When Ada reached his side, he was already dead, a smile of perfect peace on his lips. One hand rested on a sheet of paper, and Ada, peering, saw the scrawled translation of the inscription on the Etruscan vase. In the other was clutched a large, black opal.

Ada wept for her husband for several weeks after the funeral. After all, she had loved him in a quiet, unemotional way — the only way he permit ted her to love. But, after a time, a sense of relief began to take possession of her. It seemed to her a though the prison doors were swinging open, and a little of the normal joy of living came creeping into her star ved heart.

She flung open the windows of the house on the upper floor and reclined in the sunshine in. She bought flowers and filled the rooms with them, trying to drown out with their perfume the musty odor that pervaded the whole house. After another interval, she ordered the hideous idols and unpleasantly grinning gods removed to the attic, and it was with untold relief that she finally saw all of her late husband's collection crated and dispatched to the museum to which he had left it in his will—all except the black opal.

He had made no provision as to its disposition—naturally. He had died so suddenly after he had acquired it.

Ada wasn't superstitious. She told herself that it was absurd to believe that the stone had had anything to do with her husband's death. And yet, something within her, that had dozed in Sanches—or what her husband had believed it had done — she found her self regarding it with a trifle of fear and awe.

When, with a sigh of satisfaction, she eventually closed the old house that had been her home since her marriage, she went away to a winter resort for a much-needed and long-desired change, the opal accompanied her, securely locked in her modest jew el case.

For several weeks, she enjoyed looking at the fashionable crowd that thronged the beautiful place. She sat in the lobby after her afternoon luncheon or dinner and watched the smart world pass and repass on its way to golf or dance or tea. She walked on the beach, a plump, lonely little figure in her dowdy clothes. She had tea alone and listened wistfully to the gay chatter around her—that died to a buzz in her ears as the inscriptions that had occupied her husband's entire life.

But, at last, a sense of utter loneliness seized her. She knew no one in the fast-moving set, and even the savants who had been her husband's intimates. She desired intensely to be the centre of an animated group; to have people listen to her as though she were an attract what she said; to have some one look ive woman and not a mummy.

SALLY now was the reason for neat table manners. When little girls are carden they have to wear frills, and a bib would hide the bejeweled vestes of this delightful new frock. Such a simple frock it is, and thereby such a smart one! It can be made in many cotton or linen fabrics, in crêpe de Chine, poogee and even in light weight wool jersey. The vestes, collar and cuffs are of a contrasting color, and when the frock is made in a print, the check material they are in a plain @ harmonizing shade. One-piece French panties complete the costume.

CURSE OF LOVE

His wife stretched out her hand. "Let me hold it!" she begged.

Lind looked at her abstractedly.

"This must be the jewel that the strange woman,whom I met this morning that his mind failed him. Yes, the Hindu said he was clutching an opal when he had The fatal gash.

"Do let me see it," Ada insisted.

"No, no!" He withdrew it back from her eager fingers. "It is a fatal stone. It is dangerous—I feel it."

"Nonsense," she laughed. "I'm not afraid."

But he kept it from her.

"I must keep it. I must study it. I must try to find out its history. It had the power to rob Sanches of his senses."

She bit her lip vexedly.

"Really, James, it sometimes think it is unkind with that queer old man made you a bit odd yourself. You can't really believe that an inanimate bit of stone could turn a man insane, can you?"

"There is more to this than a bit of stone," he muttered, and left her, the opal tightly clutched in his hand. Then he heard the door of his study close decisively behind him. She made a little, wry grimace.

WOMEN DO NOT HAVE THE LAST WORD IN PLMT.

London, August 27.—Lady Astor and her fellow politicians appear to not have the last word in the House of Commons, for when it comes to questioning the Cabinet members the women are outclazed by the men.

While the women members got in only a handful of questions in the session, before the spring adjournment the record was established Monday with 467. For speeches in the House, Sir Douglas Hacking, attorney general, was well in the lead with 134 columns of his remarks in the official report. Much of the speech was devoted to discussions of the Trade Bill disputes of which the Labor party let the government. Winston Churchill's speech es ran to a mere 119 columns.

RHINELAND REDUCTION

London, August 27.—The armies of occupation in the Rhineland will be reduced by 10,000 Word to this effect was received at Whitehall today in France's reply to the British memorandum suggesting a reduction to 36,000. A three-power definite agreement has been reached, it is said, providing that France reduce her forces by 8,000 Great Britain by 1,000 and Belgium by 1,000.

Silence may be golden but it won't pay the expenses of the drummer.

WHAT'S NEW
(From a Woman's Standpoint)

Velvet shoes to wear with velvet dresses are a new note.

Velvet vagabond hats, collapsible in type, are especially mentioned by millinery buyers returning from Paris and London.

It is interesting to note how many women have taken up shooting during the last twenty years, and it is even gaining more among American than English women.

There is really no end of the uses of black velvet. Some of the most beautiful summer evening shawls seen are those in black velvet, with a chenille fringe and embroidered to fine ruby stones. The velvet scarf for day and night, enlarging into a shawl, is one of the most interesting features in the new fashions.

At the wedding of Major-General Sir Reginald and Lady Pinney's daughter, Miss Hester Pinney, in England, this month, the bride's bouquet was of gardenias and the bridegroom had one and also the ushers on both bride and bridegroom followed her choice and wore them as buttonholes.

Old English witch-balls and tear-glasses are among the curious collecting quests of the moment. Witch-balls are larger editions of the silver, gold or red blue glass balls seen on Christmas trees. They were formerly hung from from the beams of old cottages and inside above the entrance door as mascots to ward off the entry of evil spirits. Tear-glasses are glasses with a bonnet "tear" apparently impris oned in the shape of the "tear" is merely a hollow, and came originally from a flaw, air having remained in sidg the glass.

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I have been engaged to a young man about two years. At times I get cross at him and he is very jealous although he is a good man in every way. At times I am sure I love him, but usually after these cross spells I feel that I don't love him. We are both of the same age—twenty-five. I really should know better. Do you think it is because of my nervous temperament or do you think I don't love him?

PUZZLED.

PUZZLED: Whether or not you love the man si something that no one can decide for you—you alone have to decide that question for yourself and to your own satisfaction. And I advise you not to let matters drift along any longer, but make up your mind for once and all time. That is the only honest thing to do, and you must be fair with yourself as well as yourself. If you decide that you do not love him enough to marry him then you should break the engagement at once and leave the young man at liberty to go with other girls and at the same time provide yourself with new friends and interests. Even an engagement can not be allowed to get into a rut—and one that has lasted for two years is likely to do this very thing. Of course, I do not know you well enough to diagnose your case but, judging from your letter, I am inclined to believe that you are suffering from the monotony that often steals upon an accepted engagement. Now, if you decide that you are in love with the young man I advise you to marry him at once. Jealousy is a sign of love, but it is unskilled for any man to be jealous on your part and might cause him to lose interest in you.

OIL FROM COAL SOLVE PROBLEMS

Britains Industrial Troubles May be Helped by Scientific Research

Restoration of England's coal industry, with the resultant re-employment of thousands of miners, is expected with making that nation independent as an oil producer, is hoped to be accomplished in an English invention for the extraction of crude oil from coal.

The English process coming as it does on top of the agreement between the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and the huge I. G. dye industry of Germany for the patent rights covering the Bergius process for the extraction of oil from coal in the United States, indicates that European nations have launched a laboratory campaign for the production of synthetics which will make them independent of the natural oil fields.

The invention is hoped to save Great Britain's industrial problems. Not only can crude oil and other by-products be extracted from British coal, but the residue can be utilized as smokeless fuel in domestic grates ashore and under marine boilers aboard ship.

H. A. Brassert, one of the engineers behind the invention, says that the English process for oil extraction has already been used by many firms abroad, and that the L. and N. Coal Distilling Company has begun production on a fair-sized scale. This company started with six plants with a capacity of 100 tons of coal each. From the 600 tons of coal Mr. Brassert claims that the company can produce 12,000 gallons of crude oil, 1,200,000 cubic feet of gas, leaving a residue of 420 tons of coke which can be used in the domestic grate or pulverized for industrial or marine plants.

It is also stated that the English process can be used in the case of a small plant and an average of twenty gallons of crude oil has been extracted from each ton of coal. The Natural Physics Laboratory of Great Britain has reported that the oil from a British coal will stand a pressure up to 11,000 pounds a square inch. The oil extracted also gives 50 per cent. less wear on the machinery bearings.

The inventors also hope to obtain light, lamp and lubricating oils, Diesel fuel, paraffin wax, disinfectant and tar for road beds, from the extraction process.

Some, while enthusiastic over the extraction of crude oil from coal, fear that removal of this volatile matter will reduce the heat value in coal. Some objection is also found to the English plan of pulverizing the coal ashore and sending it in that form to the bunkers. This method it is held, requires much more space than the American equipment, which plans to load ordinary coal and pulverize it aboard ship for immediate consumption.

Mr. Bradstreet believes that pulverized fuel from the residue coal would cost about twenty shillings a ton as against eighty shillings a ton for Diesel oil. He also said that every time a ship changes from British coal to an oil burner, 100 British miners loose employment. With four to the average family this directly reduces 400 persons, to poverty, he said and added that he hoped the new invention will solve this problem by creating a huge demand for British coal and its by-products.

PROSPERITY FOR WESTERN CANADA

Winnipeg, August 29. — With the harvest commencing, and with an ex tensive crop in prospect, trade conditions and business conditions throughout the Province of Manitoba, British Columbia, indicating a steady development, western Canada is on the highroad to another year of prosperity, Mr. D. C. Coleman, vice-president of western lines, Canadian Pacific Railway, stated here today on his return from a tour of inspection which took him as far west as the Pacific coast.

Preparations for the crop movement to the world markets were completed, Mr. Coleman stated, adding that the Canadian Pacific had concentrated thousands of grain cars and hundreds of locomotives on western lines to assure that the flow of wheat to the Atlantic and Pacific ports would proceed without interruption.

A feature adding to the prosperity of western Canada, and one growing steadily in importance from year to year was the large number of tourists visiting western Canadian cities and mountain resorts, Mr. Coleman stated The "tourist traffic so far this season was much greater than during the corresponding period of last year. Not only were visitors from the United States, Great Britain and other countries coming in increased numbers, but influential men from these countries were taking away information which, he felt, would eventually rebound to the benefit of the Dominion as a whole Mr. Coleman cited the visit of the editors of the British provincial newspapers and the members of the mining congress as instances illustrating his point.

Tourists, he said, were not only visiting the prairie cities and mountain resorts, but were visiting centres along the Pacific coast and Vancouver Island in greater numbers than ever before.

CHIFFON VELVET FOR SPORTS

Decided Innovation In Style, Black Ensembles Most Popular

The new note that strikes the eye first on the field of sports as we see it in the distance taking on the hues of autumn is the introduction of the trans parent chiffon velvets. Here, indeed, is a radical adoption of this silk, hitherto assigned almost exclusively to a stay-at-home, dignified role, which appeared to the best advantage when the electric lights were ablaze. It has, however, been adapted, and with signal success, by fashion authorities who show it in both sports dresses and in ensembles, but all most invariably in black. It is consist ently featured in the flaring circular skirt, and there oftentimes is a flare in the coats, especially in the full-front-the-shoulder type. In the more formal ensembles plain velvet skirts are topped by blouses of the printed chiffon velvet, the metal brocaded crepes and the other tinsel novelties. In some ensembles the long top coats of velvet reveal the brocaded silks in which the metallic threads achhillade.

Tommy Christian Says His State Has Reputation On Broadway

New York City.—Tommy Christian had come to New York to rehabilitate the advertising which his native state, Alabama, has received as a jazz center. Christian is an orchestra leader and all-around musician.

"I thought it was time somebody made some money out of our reputation," he declared in his soft Southern drawl. "You know jazz is supposed to have originated right down in my section.

"In all the books they write about jazz and even in Europe, we get the credit, or maybe you want to call it discredit, of starting the whole jazz rumpus. Yet the fact is, so far as I have been able to find out, there is a single orchestra leader except me on Broadway who has come on from Alabama to cash in.

"Some demon statistician has estimated that there have been in the last five years at least a hundred thousand Alabama mammy songs. And, of course, a lot of them never got published, but enough of them did so that nobody could be in any doubt about where you are when you're bizmekik, blue or broke. You go back to your dear old mammy in Ala-bam-mammy.

"I don't know what there are any statistics to show that Alabama singe those songs. Maybe that's what's wrong. Perhaps it's why we don't turn out orchestra leaders. Anyway, I'm the pioneer of the new school. I have found that Broadway likes Ha music straights from headquarters — likes soft, tender, Southern like like "I've Grown So Lonesome Thinking of You," sung with a real Southern accent. I have already written the feller back home that the pickin's are good. First thing you know, there'll be as many of us as there are of our grapefruit.

CANCER BATTLE SLOWLY GAINING

Science Grappling With Dread Scourage and Making Progress

Extraordinary moving picture films showing the growth of cancer cells were mentioned in the report submitted to the annual meeting of the British Empire Cancer Campaign at the House of Lords.

"The films," writes the "Daily News" Medical Correspondent, "resemble those of a flower unfolding.

"Perhaps we are on the eve of great discoveries that will do away with the present methods of treatment—x-rays, surgery, lead and radium. At any moment a weak spot may be found and a break-through may occur.

"Meanwhile steady progress is being made in the capture of cutposts."

Hopeful Tendency

"The concentration of attack which is being made on the cancer problem from many different angles" was pointed to by Sir Thomas Holder at the meeting. Although the campaign was far from the point at which it could even pause in its efforts, said Sir Thomas, there was apparent a more hopeful tendency in recent research than had been the case before.

In studying the growth of living cancer cells by moving-pictures the cells must be in a special container in order to abolish the vibration of passing traffic, which would spoil the photographs.

Two Big Films

Over the top of the observation Incubator is a moving-picture camera, by means of which the operator, pressing the shutter and for turning the handle, takes the pictures by means of an electric clock. Photographs can be taken at intervals of 10 seconds or minutes or hours. The photographs are taken over a period of time up to two days. In order to show the result on a moving-picture screen the film must of necessity speed up as much as 800 times.

Though all the blood-tests suspected have as yet been found negative, hope is hoped from, Dr. Lumsden's work on natural and acquired resistance to the disease. Professor Lord Cave says in his preface in the report: "If these researches can be continued, it is obvious that they may prove to be of outstanding importance in connection with the problem."

URGES WHIPPING FOR CAR THEFTS

Toronto, Aug. 29.—Whipping with a strap persons convicted of theft of motorcars is one of the amendments to the Criminal Code proposed in the report of the Canadian Bar Association's Committee on Administration of Justice. The report was presented to the association on this concluding day of its annual meeting at the Royal Canadian Coatsworth, of Toronto.

Judge Coatsworth moved immediate legislation by the Dominion and Provincial Parliaments to incorporate into the Criminal Code the following amendments suggested in the committee's report.

Concerning the penalties for auto theft the committee recommended that instead of a general minimum penalty provided by the code the penalty be two months' imprisonment with the whipping in the second month with a strap instead of a cat-o'-nine-tails.

The committee also advises provincial legislation for supervision of persons let out on suspended sentence; for a system of parole; and for "effective dealing" with all the feeble-minded and mentally afflicted, both when in court and in confinement.

WOMEN CAN NOW BE WITNESSES

Constantinople, Turkey, Aug. 27.—Turkish women are not slow to demand the rights guaranteed them by the new civil code which exempt Kemanic laws out of Turkey last year, a recent action of Madame Saliha Zechi eria, sole woman member of the bar indicates.

Having pretended herself before a notary public assistant to serve a friend as witness in the signing of a paper, she was told by the assistant that women could not serve as witnesses. Madame Zechi-eria, going on published a fiery article entitled, "Am I not a Human Being?" in one of her newspapers and went to see the Minister of Justice. He ordered the dismissal of the legal assistant for his ignorance.

RURAL FOOTPATHS URGED

Ottawa, August 29.—Alan E. Kay, engineer to the Ottawa Suburban Roads Commission, in a statement issued today, discusses the danger to pedestrians are exposed while walking along the highways of the province. He emphasizes that authorities such as the commission have very little control over this hazard, and suggests that pressure be brought to bear on the provincial authorities to enable municipalities to obtain subsidies for the construction of footpaths, thus lessening the danger which now confronts the man on foot owing to the changed conditions by the rapid increase in motor traffic.

FIRST VICTORY OF YEAR, OVER THE BUFFALO BISONS

Rochester Win two Games; Doubleheader with Syracuse and Newark.

New York, August 29. In their final game of the year with the Bisons the Reading Keys gained their first game, 8 to 2, all their runs coming in the third inning.

Rochester defeated Jersey City in both games of a doubleheader at Rochester, 5 to 3 and 2 to 0. The double victory gave the Tribe the series by three games to two. Herb Thormahlen and "Sonny" Horne were the winning pitchers.

Al Mamaux, star Newark pitcher, pitched only five innings at Syracuse, but received credit for a victory and a defeat. In the first game of a double-header, Mamaux pitched the ninth after the Stars had collected a run in the ninth, overhauling the Stars, who raced into that frame 4 to 3 to the good.

Syracuse got along with Shortstop Kingdon in the second game Mamaux was in the box losing when the Stars were leading, 3 to 1. This game was played in steady drizzle and was called in the sixth.

Baltimore and Toronto were not scheduled.

RUTH HIT OUT HIS 42ND. HOMER

Athletics Defeated Detroit 9-5; Chicago Won 4 - 0.

St. Louis, Mo., August 29.—The Yankees played the Browns here again this day and for once was to it. That should be sufficient information for the jubilant baseball enthusiasts, for the world ought to know by this time that the Browns haven't beaten the Yanks this season. Today's victory was the Yanks's seventeenth straight success against St. Louis.

Still, there are a few other little details that might be mentioned in passing. One of them was a home run slugged over the left field fence by Babe Ruth. As this happened to be Babe's forty-second circuit clout of the current campaign and put him two ahead of Lou Gehrig in the great American home run handicap, it gave the fans who had no place else to go some reward for visiting Sportsman's Park.

Koenig and Williams also punched round trip tickets in the general direction taken by the ball that Babe hit, but neither of them gave any signs of not coming back. However, these blows were merely incidental in the general uprising.

The Yankees pounded Ernie Wingard from the box and the Browns returned the compliment with Dutch Ruether the director recipient of their compliments. Elam Vangilder succeeded Wingard and was something of an improvement, but hardly laudable in his efforts.

Urban Shocker finished the game for Ruether and was credited with the victory. Just a week ago Mr. Shocker was reported to have suffered a broken finger on his left hand, however, there seems to be some discrepancy about whether this was official or not. In order to show no partiality in the matter Shocker wore a bandage on the digit under discussion, but pitched rather neatly, if not gaudily.

The Yanks scored in each of the first five frames and added a couple more runs in the ninth. The Browns concentrated their efforts in the third, fourth and fifth sessions, but didn't gain anything by this method of attack. At one time they had only one run behind, but that's as close as they ever got—and that was when they were in the lesrae leaders.

The Yankees strengthened their lead on second place by defeating Detroit, 9 to 5, in the second game of the series at Detroit. It was the Tigers' fifth successive loss. Owen Carrol was wild and ineffective, and also received poor support. Rube Yarr got credit number for the second day in a row to hold the Philadelphia lead. He relieved Jones in the starting pitcher, in the eighth inning.

Chicago bunched hits off Yan Earnshaw in the seventh inning behind a brace of errors to rout the Senators, 4 to 3, in a fifthine duel at Chicago between Ted Blankenship and Johnson Zachary and Burke for Washington.

The Senators have failed to have up a victory in their last series, one of whi Fr resulted in a tie. The Boston Red Sox, however, held the lowest lying streak in the majors thus far this season, with 15 setbacks in a row.

Cleveland's winning streak at seven straight games was broken by Boston at Cleveland when the Red Sox defeated the Indians, 8 to 5, in 11 innings. The winning run was scored by Hoffman in his single, Ruffing's sacrifice and Rothrock's double, Ruffing's relief pitching featured the game. An error by Joe Sewell permitted, two Bostonians to score in the eighth.

NO BATHING IN PARISIAN LINERS

Paris — River bathing in the open air is forbidden in Paris, but only those who police learned that they are enforcing a decree of Louis XIV., who died in 1715. When a woman and her husband, both in bathing suits, were arrested recently for bathing tests they registered caused the authorities to dig up the ordinance they were enforcing.

The police had orders not to permit bathing in the river below the bridges, but did not know why. They know now that the rule is absolute. They can now do something to do with it. In scores of entirely enclosed bathhouses along the river, however, bathing in the daily. Much family linen is washed in the docens of big tubs that are provided by the banks in the centre of the city.

BURGLARS TOOK THE CHALLENGE

London, August 29. (C.P.)— Chief Constable Wensley, head of the Criminal Investigation Department, Scotland Yard, has declared that he has preached, and installed the most modern anti burglary devices in the house of Palmers Green, North London. Never theless the burglars defied them all. Taking a small ladder from an outhouse they entered by a fanlight, and instead of stage coaching the valuable curios, which have been collected by Mr. Wensley over many years.

They also took the fingerprints medals including that which was awarded him by the Royal Humane Society for saving Sidney Street" in the east-end of London, when a band of Anarchists were exterminated with the help of Guardsmen from the Tower."

Mr. Wensley says: "We will be sportsmen and return my medals to me," and Mr. Wensley. "They cannot be of any value to the thieves, and they are naked silly much valued by myself."

Mr. Wensley is head of the chief officers of Scotland Yard to suffer a burglary, Both Mr. Hawkins and Mr. Curtis, who retired recently, were visited in the same way.

THIRD VICTORY IN 4 YEARS, JONES IS AGAIN CHAMP.

Beat Chick Evans Easily 8 and 7 in Amateur Golf.

Minneapolis, August. 29 — Chick Evans got his long awaited chance to meet Bobby Jones in the final round of a national amateur championship today, and the outcome was just what everybody thought it would be. The Chicago veteran, who only ten years ago was as great a flogre in the golf world as Jones now is, met the fate that every one he meets when they meet a golf superman.

Jones, playing another of those immaculate rounds for which he is noted finished his victory on the first nine wins and from that time on until the finish there was never a doubt who the winner would be. Merely for the skin of the cocoa, Bobby and Chick cent out again in the afternoon, and he made another of the eleventh green then Evans called a penalty stroke on himself and conceded his rival the hole and with it the match, 8 and 7.

As a result of his victory Jones is again the amateur champion for the third time in four years, and one more victory will give him an equal rating with Jerome D. Travers, holder of identical titles won. As it is, Bobby is now tied with the late Walter Travis who won the event on three occasions.

CAR PRODUCTION IN DECLINE FOR MONTH OF JULY

Changes of Factory to Prepare for Model Upsets Figures.

Production of automobiles in Canada during July declined sharply to 19,367 cars, according to a report from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. This output was 43 per cent. less than the 19,206 cars produced in June which was the record month of 1927, closely followed by the May output. In July of last year production amounted to 15,926 cars.

Compared with the previous month there was a decrease in the value of output of all types of cars with the exception of trucks which showed a slight increase to 2,164 from 4344. The number of open motor passenger cars drop ped to 7,731 from 7,731; closed motor passenger cars to 6,122 from 12,466 and trucks to 2,240 from 2,997. No motor cycles or buses were produced in July and only four were made in June the total value of all cars produced in July amounted to $7,051,259 f.o.b. plant or $7 million dollars less than the value of the 19,206 cars produced in June.

Drop from Last Year

For the seven months ending June production totalled 177,705 cars, a decrease of two per cent. from the 140,086 cars reported for the corresponding period of 1926.

"Decline in the production during the last month was considerably in excess of the normal seasonal decline" the Bureau report states, "and it may be noted that indications on the outputs for the month and for the year to date were lower than during the corresponding period of last year, but it does not necessarily indicate an abnormal curtailment of production by any of the motor car manufacturers in Canada.

Output from most of the companies was below corresponding figures for last year, but one of the largest factories was engaged in making the necessary plant change to take care of an entirely new model which will be placed on the market in the early autumn. Increases in production in a few cases, and in others a return to normal production after a shut down for the annual holidays, were the factors that tended to keep the output figures from showing a greater decline than they did.

Production figures for the seven months ending July 31 show that 177,705 cars were produced in Canada as against 140,086 cars for the same period in 1926. Of the total production for the seven months 1927 there were 7,195 cars made for sale in Canada, amounted to 11,641 cars. For the first seven months of 1926, the apparent consumption, thus accounted totalled 127,173 cars.

APPLE CROP IS NOT LOOKING SO VERY FAVORABLE

Early Prospects Of Eastern Crop Not So Good Now

Ottawa, August 27.—Early prospects for a heavy commercial apple crop have been materially reduced in the Eastern fruit Provinces owing to unfavorable weather conditions which have caused the rapid development of scab and insect injuries, according to a crop report issued by the Dominion Fruit Branch. On the other hand conditions have been more favorable in British Columbia, since the middle of July when the weather turned warm and having sufficient irrigation water the early estimate is expected to be maintained. Although the crop in Nova Scotia, Quebec and Ontario has been reduced, it still shows an increase over last year, while British Columbia is about 30 per cent. less than the bumper crop of 1926. Present prospects indicate a commercial crop of 100.5 per cent., or 3,980,000 barrels, compared with 3,944,000 barrels which reached 80 per cent. of a five-year average of 4,937,000 barrels. The crop is distributed as follows: British Columbia 1,049,000 barrels; Ontario 650,000; Quebec, 130,000; New Brunswick 30,000 and Nova Scotia, 1,150,000.

Excessive moisture in July throughout Ontario resulted in aphis damage to many varieties of apples, accompanied by scab and cracks-worm injury. These conditions have caused the commercial estimate to be reduced by 650,000 barrels, compared with 856,700 barrels in 1926. Indications are for the proportion of No. 1 grade fruit to be the lowest in years. In Western Ontario the crop is estimated at 102 per cent., or 385,000 barrels, compared with 377,46 barrels last year, while the Eastern Ontario crop is placed at 120 per cent., or 264,500 barrels, against 221,290 in 1926.

Weather conditions in Nova Scotia during July have been little short of disastrous to volume and fruit, although contributing to full benefit of spraying, and warm "muggy" weather has been unduly friendly to aphis and spot. Where spraying has been thorough and timely orchards are fairly free of spot, but aphis has done dam age in all orchards. The combination of conditions is held responsible for the continued drop and further reduction in crop expectancy.

In British Columbia hot, dry weather has prevailed since July 15, which has had the tendency to bring along all crops in good shape after the long, wet, cool spring. The irrigated districts report plenty of water available for all requirements. The Canadian Director of Direction, appointed by the Provincial Cocermento to regulate distribution, seems to be functioning well.

From present indications there is no reason to doubt the early estimate of 3,149,800 boxes of apples, which is 80 per cent. of 1926 when 3,937,000 boxes were shipped. The crop is about 1,000 cars short of last year.

The United States commercial apple crop is now estimated at 34,871,000 barrels as compared with 39,411,000 barrels last year and a five-year average of 31,710,000 barrels.

In England only a fair crop of deciduous apples is reported, but on the whole present prospects are a little better than a year ago.

LEARNS OF FORTUNE WHILE AT TUB

Sydney, Australia, August 29. As she was scrubbing quietly at her washtub in a congested suburb of the city, Mrs. Jarvis was advised that she had come into millions, as a result of her claim on the Clark estate, valued by the agencies at $500,000,000. "So they've fixed it up; I suppose I will be able to build a better house," she remarked, as she went on with her washing.

There are seventeen Australian claimants to the estate of William Andrew Clark, American multi-millionaire. Fourteen of the claims, including that of a cabingram from London, have now been established. The Clark family migrated, from Scotland to northern Ireland about 250 years ago, and early last century one of Clark's grandfathers migrated, two to Australia and two to Antarctica, taking a cousin, Archibald, while containing a full plan of the family tree, by which the claim is now being established. Clark died in New York in 1925.

IRISH COUNTESS LED ROMANTIC LIFE IN PARIS

Met And Married Polish Nobleman In Year 1900

Manchester, England, August. 27 — (By The Canadian Press) — The "Guardian," writing of the recent death of Countess Markievicz, says: Constance Georgine, Countess de Markievicz, was the eldest daughter of the eldest daughter of the late Sir Henry William Gore-Booth of Lissdell, County Sligo, and sister of the present baronet and of the late Miss Eva Gore-Booth, well-known as a social worker here.

Countess de Markievicz spent the usual life of a well-connected young Irish lady in her earlier years but showed an original bent by not merely taking up art as a profession, but going to Paris by herself to study it there. She remained in Paris for several years, and was an exhibitor at the Salon. While in Paris she made the acquaintance of Count Casimir Dunin de Markievicz, a young Polish nobleman, who was also an art student and whom she married in 1900. There is one daughter of the marriage, Miss Maeve de Markievicz. The young couple ultimately separated, though it is understood with great mutual regard, owing to incompatibility of disposition.

The Countess was one of the early members of the Irish nationalist movement: at more than one by-election she made something of a sensation by driving in a fourin-hand through the streets. In the course of the Irish rebel of 1916 she was in charge of a small body of the rebels. After the surrender she was imprisoned and put on trial. She was indeed sentenced to death, but was reprieved the sentence being commuted to penal servitude for life. She was released the following year. She took part in the general election of 1918, standing as the Sinn Fein candidate for St. Patrick's Dublin. She was elected, and thus had the distinction of being the first woman ever elected to the Imperial Parliament. She did not, however, took her seat in the British House.

In the Irish Republican Government set up in 1919 she was given the post of Minister of Labour. She was one of the strong opponents of the Anglo-Irish Treaty of 1921, and was twice returned as a member of the Dail on the Republican ticket, but never took her seat in that body. As a public speaker, although she appeared on many platforms and had a fairly ready command of words, she was not an orator of much weight. In private life her genuine sympathy for the poor and suffering gained their many friends and the respect of many of those who were associated in every other respect opposed to her

WOMAN BRINGS HOME SOME RARE GRYLLOBLATT A E

Toronto, Oct., Aug. 26 (By Canadian Press)—Miss Norma Ford of the Biological Department of Toronto University, brought home from British Columbia this summer thirty gryllobiatiae, one of the most primitive insects now living on the earth. Miss Ford explains that these specimens in their ice-bound mountain retreats, whither she was escorted by guides and a few of the more adventurous young people attending the Girl Guide Jubilee Camp at Waterton.

"As gryllobiatta," she says, "is a very primitive insect, one of the most primitive at present living on the earth. It is only found where it is very cold and particularly thrives near the icy waters flowing from glaciers. It lives on moss and other insects and will even eat one of its own kind."

This rare and primitive insect was discovered for the first time in 1913 by Professor Walter of the University of Toronto and, since then, similar insects have been found in the mountains of Japan.

ALEMITE IS ONE OF THE MOST PROGRESSIVE CONCERNS IN CITY

Will Have Interesting Exhibits At Belleville's Big Fair

Among the interesting exhibits at the Fair this year will be that of the Alemite Company of Canada, one of Belleville's most progressive industries. A recent visit to this factory proved something worth remembering, and impressions gained will be of interest to our readers.

The Alemite Products Company of Canada, Ltd., factory situated on the North-Eastern end of the City. The works are splendidly located with lots of space to "grow for growth." After one's bright clears from the whirl of developm in the factory, and has a few minutes conversation with Mr. W. E. Rowsome, the General Manager, he becomes away with the idea firmly fixed that growth and development are "Bread and Butter" words in the Alemite Organization.

The factory itself is a single storey building of two large bays with a central connection covering about twacres. The buildings are in splendid shape—all wood work well preserved and sizes work painted white. As an evidence of the painstaking attention there may be noticed here and there Mr. Rowsome gives to his plant, new bricks in the walls of this structures. On inspection it is noticed that the remnants of brick that had deteriorated and had been replaced by the new.

The first impression one gets on entering the main door of the factory is that of intense activity. Line after line of whirling machinery fills the big building. Mr. Rowsome took the latter under his wing and piloted him to places where he could stand and look on at the sequence of operations necessary to produce the numerous articles in the Alemite family group.

We watched two gigantic lathes turn out Zerk Fittings—four at a time every operation of the machine under a fountain of oil, so fast is the speed at which the machines work.

We watched other machines turning out Alemite fittings from brass rod—every piece turned—drilled—shoulder ed—countersunk in the wink of an eye.

We went with a batch of these fittings to the plating room where they are nickle plated in bays of boiling bar ing pure nickle anodes surrended in them. The many processes of plating—washing—drying and polishing were explained in such rapid sequence that soon we came to the conclusion that an Alemite mechanic we should make good Dairy Maids.

Presently girls, young men and girls handled thousands of fittings an hour—inserting springs—balls and ins ving as ingenius as they were numerous.

Inspection of each article is rigid and unvarying. Every piece is subject to eagle-eyed scrutiny by specially trained operatives. For little flaws imperceptible to the "vulgar" eye, fittings were thrown aside for further operation.

Intensely interesting were the big punch presses stamping out steel washers for Alemite and Alemite-Zerk hand compressors. Wide ribbons of steel are fed into the machines and plunk plunk, with the regularity of a clock ticking, washers drop into the hopper at the bottom of the press.

On the way we happened to notice a mechanic turning out the same type of hand gun as we have on our car. Naturally we had to stop and look on. With a rapidity that was astonishing he would grab one part after another and in a shorter time than it takes to write it, he had a compressor all assembled and ready for operation—on someone's new car.

We had to drag ourself away from the section where the big compressors for use in Service Stations are assembled. Various types and sizes for different needs are all rapidly and carefully assembled.

The Lubricant warehouses next received attention. A bewildering array of drums met the gaze, each marked "ALEMITE CHASSIS LUBRICANT—others marked "ALEMITE GEAR LUBRICANT."

The Shipping Room was a real busy place. There were bins and many kins of different fittings of varying size as there used to be drawers of "tin" and drugs in the old-fashioned drug store.

The tool-makers and the carpenters' shops were as clean and orderly as any well conducted kitchen. The latest devices for turning all the machine tools required in the Factory were all present and correct.

When we visited the office we felt more in our element, for typewriters clickrecognizable machines and desks, we could understand. A short time there clearly indicated the tremendous amount of executive and clerical work being developed daily.

Through an office window could be seen a splendid Tennis Court. Mr. Rowsome upholds the theory of "all work and its half effect on Jack." He is a firm believer in the efficacy of recreation. Every day after hours in fine weather he joins the staff in a strenuous game.

Across the road is the Ball Park. The Alemite boys and girls are well known around Belleville for their reverence will the ins as the trophies in the overmantel in Mr. Rowsome's office bear out.

The thing that struck the visitor most forcibly was the air of goodfellowship prevailing throughout the organization. Co-operation between management—executives and staff is manifested not only a word but has real live significance. Everything points to healthy, strenuous efforts on the part of the whole organization to make their business a success.

We came away from the Alemite Factory with a greater feeling of pride in our City than ever before. The thought struck us that in every corner of Canada—every City—every Town—village—cross road hamlet—the loyalest farm home on the Prairie—Belleville is represented by Alemite Products. Not a fitting unmade in Canada but uses some one or "more of these."

TAKING CARE OF SILK HOSE

Raising silk and chiffon hosiery to a useful and beautiful old age is every woman's business these days, when every woman wears them and their cost still remains an item which, in any other age, would forbid their ever throw the first stone at this extravagance when unquestionably a silk or chiffon stocking is the foot and ankle what lines in a frock are to the figure?

How to make them last so that their work of beautifying may go on indefinitely?

First, then, you should know that your hose are the snob members of the family wash and their snobbiness should be encouraged. What is good for the rest of the wash may spell death to your silk stockings. A separate wash day when your undivided attention may be given to them is recommended, otherwise they are apt to suffer.

You should not soak white or colored silk or chiffon stockings. They should be washed out quickly in warm water and a good white soap or soap powder and rinsed well in cold water. Then roll them in a coarse towel and wring them out as dry as possible before hanging to them up. And don't hang them in the sun to dry. Never, never, iron them!

If you follow these instructions, colored and white stockings will never fade, nor yellow, nor spot, and they will dry quickly.

A smart trick with black, gun-metal taupe, or any of the other dark shades which have such fascinating names is to soak them overnight in cold water. This prolongs their lives and sets those almost indefinable tinges of shading which distinguish them one from the other and which seem to fade after each wearing. A light wash and rinsing is all that is necessary.

In the daily dressing of the foot the length of the stocking does may go on. The black ladder, which is the bane of the end of many a client's day caused by the wrong way of slipping the stockings on.

You should not sit down with stockings held at full length and work your foot into it. If you do your toe or some rough epidermis on your foot will jab the tender silken threads, loosen one, and start it on a marathon run impossible to catch up with.

Instead, somewhat the same principle as putting on a glove is required to avoid trouble. First, your "foot the" looking. The official way of expressing the act of donning stockings, to reserve them. Slip the thumbs inside the top of the stockings and gather it nimbly with the fingers right down to the toe, holding the gathering and stretching it slightly at ankle and toe to allow the foot to slip right into it without running against the low part of the stocking. Hold the gathering until the toe is in place, and then gradually loosen the gathering as the foot requires.

The double welt at the top of the stocking is there to fasten garters to. Fasten them below the two thicknesses and you will have a run in no time. Set the garter straight with the wrapper of the stocking. And set the seam at the back straight in the middle of the back of the leg or you will have that untidy and disfigured line which makes us wince to see on others.

A precaution some women take is to sew over the toe of the stocking, a piece of narrow, fine tape to keep the toe from breaking through. It is not only the hole that results and makes trouble, but with silk or chiffon hose the trouble extends in runs.

Again, you may reinforce the toe. At the heel, of course, this cannot be done. But a saving trick at heels is to paste a tiny piece of velvet inside the shoe heels to prevent friction. This is good precaution when wearing those sheer chiffons we've taken to for dress wear.

Buying hosiery of the right size is important. Too short stockings will not only ruin the fabric, but the shape of the hose, too, and the discomfort of the too short stocking is only equal to that of the too short shoe.

The seamed stocking is a more shapely one. It fits more snugly around the ankle and here than the seamless hose, which are almost as large at the ankle as at the knee, and wrinkle after wearing and washing.

Charles A. Levine Amazed Aviators by Taking Ship To England

TROUBLE LANDING

Veteran Pilots Got Thrill From Exhibition of Crazy Flying

Croydon, England — Aug. 30— Charles A. Levine succeeded this afternoon, that Capt. W. G. Hinchcliffe, Englishman, had been definitely selected to pilot the transatlantic monoplane Columbia back to the United States with Levine as companion. They would hop off as soon as weather cleared, Levine said.

Paris, Aug. 30. — Mrs. Charles Levine on behalf of her husband to-day went to Le Bourget Field and paid Maurice Drouhin the hundred thousand francs due him under the terms of a contract by which he was to have piloted Levine across the Atlantic.

Meanwhile Levine in London, utter his amazing flight in a plane which he hardly knew how to handle, from Paris, was attracting great attention. He says he is going out to the United States somehow. Somehow "If I die in the attempt." His next step is to get a pilot for his trans-Atlantic plane Columbia. He was besieged this morning by aviators eager to serve. The British Air Ministry seems in haste waived the question of Levine's flight without a license, but never-the-less is guarding the plane lest it be taken away without authorization.

Pilots Get Thrill

London, August 30. — Snatching his airplane, Miss Columbia, from under the noses of guards at Le Bourget airdrome at Paris, Charles A. Levine, passenger on Clarence Chamberlin's trans-Atlantic flight, last night, at 7 o'clock yesterday afternoon and flew the Bellanca plane to Croydon aerdrome. Trying to bring the plane to land on what is practically his first "solo" flight, Levine gave veteran pilots and officials of the British Empire centre the thrill of their lives by an exhibition of crazy flying that they swear they never saw equalled.

He emerged unhurt and the plane undamaged and tonight is the popular hero of London. He declares he will make the return trans-atlantic flight to New York the first clear day with a British pilot and tonight is negotiating with Captain Walter Hinchcliffe, senior pilot of the British Imperial Air ways, noted war hero and flier who has spent a thousand hours and approximately a year of his thirty years of life in the air, Hinchcliffe says he is willing to risk his future and Levine says he believes he will be on the way within a week or ten days.

REDFERN SEEMS LOST IN SPACE

Rio De Janeiro, Aug. 30. — Every effort is being made by the Brazilian Government to locate Paul Redfern, who started from Natal on the coast last Thursday on a non-stop flight to Brazil and who has not been heard of since. Efforts were redoubled since a rumor was received that the aviator had been seen at three o'clock Saturday afternoon plowing through the sky above the northern rim of the South American Continent, at the mouth of the Orinoco River. If he actually passed there Saturday evening he must have used up nearly all his gasoline.

TODAY'S THOUGHT

Truth is truth
To the end of reckoning.

SHAKESPEARE.

AUTO DISCOURTESY

Is it a fact, as is sometimes contended, that the automobile is ruining good manners? There are many drivers who are monstrously transformed when they get behind the steering wheel. If they went to a party or dance and jostled their way into the centre of the room, insulting the guests as they went, treading on their toes, making them jump to avoid collision, and making unearthly noises to scare them out of the way, they would commonly be called roughnecks, they would find themselves surrounded by big, burly police cops and would be led away to jail for observation and for safe keeping.

Yet as drivers they get away with that sort of behavior in a crowded street. While it is painfully obvious that some motor-car drivers did not have any manners to begin with, it is also true that drivers who are accustomed to behaving as ladies and gentlemen when they are in parlors, all too frequently fail to exhibit courtesy and refinement when they are rolling from hence to thither on fat balloon tires.

It has been said that our manners are a mere veneer which cannot stand much stress. The fact seems to be that aside from a few exceptional individuals, our manners consist merely in a convenient habit of doing what seems to be expected. "Company manners" prevail in parlors, but on the street there is no rapid and effective manner of enforcing the delicate ostracism of the cold shoulder. There is no way for stupid persons to find out what seems to be expected.

IRISH POLITICS

Premier Cosgrave is apparently a firm believer in the Shakespearian maxim of man, which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune. His action in calling another general election in the Irish Free State comes as the logical sequel to the sweeping victories of his government in last week's two by-elections in Dublin, while it is true that the Free State political situation is such that an early election is inevitable, the general opinion has been that this would not take place until after the de Cosgrave, however, has decided to take full advantage of the tide which is flowing strongly in favor at the present time, and has called for an immediate election.

From the standpoint of orderly government and progress in Ireland, Cosgrave has adopted a wise course. The situation as it is now, with the government hanging on by a thread, and with the Republicans in a position to turn the whole of the Free State upside down should they, by an adverse vote in Dail, secure the reins of power, is an intolerable one. The strong vote for the De Valera candidates in the recent election, apparently, was a flash in the pan, for in last week's elections, the government continued not only to hold its own, but made sweeping victories. The attitude of the Republicans in endeavoring to secure control of parliaments of the country, and there is a decided reaction in favor of the government, in a country like Ireland, there is no telling how long this attitude of sympathy will last so that Premier Cosgrave has been well advised in calling an election to follow up his by-election successes. It is more than likely that the new election will bring a different story to tell than the last one, and that the government will find itself sustained by at least a fair margin.

AS YOUTH LEARNS

Education does not begin until one is 35 and continues until 85, if it ends at all, says A British novelist. Not that is the sophisticated result of the present. Is there a flapper who does not think she knows infinitely more than her mother and is there a flapper who does not think her own best thing to do, teach his father? While the older may know better, youth holds to its fancied superiority.

As for the diplomaed thousands, how dare even the boldest novelist question their education? To boil most of them nurse the illusion that they know all that is to be known? Age will teach them otherwise, but youth has to learn for itself. And when it has learned that its fancied wisdom was largely folly and that its imagined education was lacking in much of the real thing, it is no longer youth. That is the tragedy of it.

OTHER MEN'S THOUGHTS

The show season is on. There is something luring about exhibiting which draws the breeder to the showring year after year. Whether one wins or loses it is interesting and attractive to have animals or farm products appraised by the judge and to see how the house product compares with that from other countries or provinces. — Farmer's Advocate.

Magistrate Joynt of Carleton county, declared from the bench: "I would rather give a crazy man a revolver and eight bullets and put him on the street to fire them than turn a drunken man loose at the wheel of an automobile." This magisterial comment will be generally endorsed by the public.—St. Catharines Standard.

Nearly every cinema actress has long slender fingers. The continual slipping on and off of wedding rings must wear down the fingers in time. —London Opinion.

"And to-morrow I'll thank you before the whole ship's company."

"For goodness sake don't do that, sir," pleaded the hero in alarm. "It is one of the ugliest sitting posters of the modern girl. WATCH YOUR WALK

Correct Balance is All Important Whether Sitting or Standing

Most people are agreed that the modern girl is delightful for all the criticism levelled from time to time at her slingshot bean pole figure. After boyish clothes, however, are unconcealing, and it must be owned that grace is not always one of her most noticeable attributes. Usually she dances gracefully. Why is it that when standing, walking or sitting still, more often than not she is awkward and uncouth in all her movements?

"The chief difficulty is that most girls do not realize how ungraceful they are," said a well-known teacher of dancing to me. "The first thing I have to teach my pupils is how to stand and walk with grace. The curse is the fox dance craze: I nearly always have to begin with deportment.

"A girl will slouch into a room, she added," head drooping, arms swinging one shoulder higher than the other, swaying her hips, with her toes in the air. Literally, I mean, for many girls turn the ground with their heels first. Then when she sits down the favorite attitude is immediately assumed. She crosses her knees without a thought as to the fashionable skimpiness and shortness of her skirt. She stands, her arms akimbo and her feet wide apart.

"One rarely sees a modern girl who walks and stands with real grace."

In sitting or standing correct balance is all important. The head should be in the centre of the figure, which should make a straight line over the supporting foot. This is an artistic rule that never fails, and moreover is in the natural position. The body must never be on the floor at the same time. The shoulders should be relaxed, the waist firm.

Length of step is also important. Many girls either take too long or too short steps for their height. This always appears ungainly. The spine should be flexible. The shoulders and hips still.

In standing the straight dress of the day accentuates every angularity. The sagging, drooping line is particularly ugly. Here again balance tells. In the correct position the weight should be on the left foot and the right foot relaxed in an easy position and the figure must be erect.

The art of sitting gracefully can be achieved with just a little careful thought. Most girls plump down into a chair and cross their knees. This favorite cross knee position is the default of most people. When knees must be crossed, however, this can be done gracefully by studying the lines of instep and knee, and crossing them so that the knee is rather than wrapping one around the other lower down which makes an ugly shape at the knee and spoils the natural line from the farm outwards instead of taking the natural line—that is slightly inwards.

The spirited and many graceful outline attitude is when the knees are recessed and close together and the left foot drawn slightly behind the instep of the other foot. Then all the beauty and grace of line is apparent and unspoiled.

"How beautifully she wears her clothes!" is a remark often heard when envy by other women. They need not despair, her secret can be theirs. It is not so much how she wears her clothes, as the fact that she is one of the few women who have discovered the art of being graceful in her flowing or ing and attitudes. She knows how to dress well and sit correctly.

WOLFE'S EFFIGY LOANED; STANDS IN MONT. MUSEUM

For Century and a Half Has Overlooked Quebec

Montreal, August 30. — General Wolfe is in Montreal for a prolonged vacation sick—in effigy. A wooden statue of the British conqueror at Canada, to which attaches a romantic history covering more than 150 years, now stands in all its martial splendor in the McGord National—Museum. The crooks street west, facing been erected to that institution for its Wolfe-Montcalm exhibit by the Literary and Historical Society of Quebec.

For a century and a quarter this brilliantly colored statute of General Wolfe looked down on the activity of one of Quebec's busiest street intersections from a niche in the wall of a building at the corner of St. John and Palace streets. Its vigil was interrupted by an advertisement on a voyage, taken at the wanton request of a party of midshipmen. It was placed in its niche in 1771 and only removed at the first of the present century when the façade of the building made it desirable that it be given the protection of a glass museum case.

At the time of the unveiling of a statue of St. John Baptiste occupied the same niche, but the orange, fraternity, the British deserved the honored figure, reneged it to the care of a religious body. In 1771, a butcher by the name of Graeme Hinge came into the possession of the building and the statue, placed in an excessively patriotic moment ordered a statue of General Wolfe from brothers Christie, workers in wood.

The unique memorial was carved from a single piece of basswood by his hand. It may be remarked that Thompson was far from satisfied with the result. Certainly from an artistic point of view the work would not hope for a place among the classics.

So zealous was the British butcher in the republican zeal he had a chisel placed in the idle deed of the proper ty to the effect that whoever later came into possession of the house must preserve the statue. This was not always every Governors days regarded citizen. Grew, the statue from its niche, causing serious damage to its facial lineaments. Its crowning indignity befell it when, in 1836, a party of fellowsmind soldiers, men from the H.M.S. "Monmouth" kidnapped it and smuggled it aboard their vessel.

For several months the general sailed the seas, visiting Halifax, Bermuda and finally Plymouth. At last the middies wearied of his company, gave him a new coat of paint and shipped him home to the Mayor of Quebec with their compliments. The good burghers were so delighted at his return that they staged a fete in his honor.

The succeeding 60 years were peaceful ones for the now ageing wooden effigy. Then a certain ambitious builder realized that upon the wall of which he had so long stood guard and he was elevated to a new level further above the street level. Gradually he was left to his own devices. Winter winds and summer suns worked haves in his sinews, in order to preserve him from complete disintegration he was given into the custody of the Quebec Literary and Historical Society.

SINGING CLASS LESSENED VALUE

New York, August 27.—Commerce and finance both suffered a odds ever, and commerce holds a temporary decision in the form of a court injunction.

Alleging that its investment of 3,000,000 mengoes of the Vocalart 500,000 was in peril because the "piano School diminished the value of its property, the Bush Terminal Building Company, owner of the Bush Terminal Buildings one of the largest units in the Times Square District, has obtained a temporary injunction against the Vocalart School in building adjoining the skyscraper.

Tenants of the Bush Building declare that they learned from the Vocalart studio as resembling the cry of a jack al, the wail of a wounded cat and the screams of a woman being murdered.

Glenn M. Stark, head of the school of vocalart, said the trouble could be attributed it to "nervous people who don't understand my work because it is progressive."

He said he had discovered a new method of voice culture, which combines scales and all kinds of throat trouble.

"The common man," Stark asserted, "never recognizes anything new or wonderful until it is forced upon him. I intend to stay here and con tinue teaching."

In the ordinary "brilliant" cut, a diamond has 58 facets.

CROOKS WILL NOW BE LESS AT EASE

London, August 30 (C.P.A.)—Flash Boals," or "Beating the Burglar," is the latest move in the game of wit played between the Metropolitan Police and the intelligent crackmen who use the knowledge of the police beats to take some advantage in committing a burglary.

So stereotyped have certain beats become division to-day, and so regular have the "police" calls between constables and their station offices, that a few that crackmen, by watching a policeman pass, can feel be able to assured of a period free from interruption.

But this is being changed. With much paring over maps, time tracings, intricate records of beats and numerous lines, and innumerable journeys of curves, beats have been arranged, and lasted of late by a system which are being cut and planned in last patterns, which in many cases defies their own illustrators.

Thus, no matter how observant a crook may be, he will not be able to tell when the policeman will enter the street from the other end.

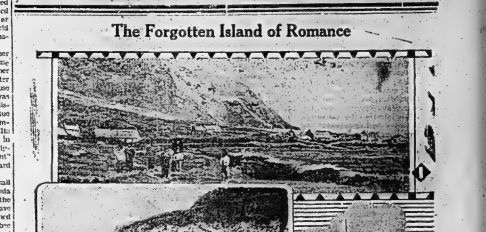

BOYD HANDS EXPLOIT

London, August 30.—The Evening Standard this morning says the boldest bandit exploit of recent years was enacted over the week-end when a long brid up a train east of the Japanese capital, shot up the officers at the crew and an others who resisted. Fifty passengers were ensnared and held for ransom. Special details of the troops have been ordered to the vicinity.

The Forgotten Island of Romance

1—The Settlement at Tristan de Cunha. 2—The only access to the sea. 3—Canadian Pacific Empress of France. 4—The Island's means of transportation.

Interest on both sides of the Atlantic is being recently been aroused by the gracious solicitude of their Majesties King George and Queen Mary of England for the welfare and comfort of the lonest-known and loneliest island colony in the world.

Romances blows with the wind from every solitary island, and the romance of Tristan da Cunha is its grandeur of isolation, the struggle for existence of the few inhabitants of its rock-bound shores and the experiences of a sailor who left as a heritage to the island the belief that anyone venturing the rocks is to be found a wealth of pirate treasure. The island is distant from its nearest neighbor, St. Helena, 1,500 miles and is far from the path of ships, rarely indeed receiving a visit from the great and busy world beyond the horizon, a world which marching along the highway of progress, has left Tristan in the solitude of civilization in the desert of the South Atlantic Ocean.

In 1814, during the war with Great Britain, an English garrison occupied this strategic island. There they found three American men of whom Jonathan Lambert, "of Salem, a citizen and sailor thereof," is reputed to have sailed the seas as a buccaneer. As a pirate he ran minus to form somehow escaping the yard arm and gaining refuge there, and been their traditional fate. The story goes that he came to Tristan in search of to hoard, in a secret place, the booty of many a rich prize, seized and plundered on the roaring Spanish Main.

Thus the place is invested with the magic spell of a Treasure Island, and to this day, the islanders believe that within its bounds is to be found a rich hoard of doubloons, moidores, pieces of eight or louis d'or. Whether this be true or not, Lambert, when found by the English, was engaged in the peaceful occupation of preparing the skins and oil of seals, with which the shores abounded. These were exchanged for provisions with any passing sailor, and the trade appears from the sea, to a height in many places of over 1000 feet high. They are topped by a curious cone that stands out amid the surrounding cliffs at a height of 7640 feet, supposed and symmetrical as the Peak of Teneriffe. Here, in the largest crater, is a fresh-water lake, which, it is said, is never frozen. On the northwest of the island is the sole access to the sea — a narrow plateau where is the only settlement.

The social life of the community is limited and the monotonous existence of the inhabitants has resulted in some of the colony drifting off beyond the horizon and others having shunned mankind. The island, however, will soon experience the joys of radio for early in 1925 the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of France on its first Africa-American cruise will stop near the island enroute to Cape Town, when a powerful set and many other gifts from America and Canadian passengers will be landed by a raft, for the use and comfort of the islanders.

Personal Greetings

In moments of waiting, old songs of the war time echoed round and round the packed grandstands and over the grounds. Behind the ten thousand veterans came five thousand militia, wearing their slouch hats as they swung past. The Prince had words of praise for the men who, though wounded or crippled, seated here, the saluting base. To one veteran propped up on crutches, the Prince made personal inquiry and asked for several minutes.

The reviewing moment to have the men parade on the track was changed by the Prince when he saw it was decrepit in mud. Instead the veterans marched down the lawn inside it. Prince Edward took the salute from the centre of the saluting base and with them L. R. Laflerche, President of the Canadian Legion.

To the veterans today at Exhibition Camp the Prince of Wales gave best wishes and to the Old Imperials who had come over since the war, the men on at every place he had stopped off on his long journey through Canada.

Subsequently the Prince and his brother George inscribed their names in the historic Bible of the Six Nations Indian' whose representatives welcomed them to Ontario.

Opened Prince's Gate

Toronto, Ont., Aug. 30.—The new Prince's Gate or Eastern Entrance to the National Exhibition was opened by the Prince of Wales today when he snipped with golden scissors ribbons stretched across and declared the gate formally open.

Stained All Morning

Toronto, Aug. 30.—Several thousand veterans of various wars gathered together on Exhibition Camp for the review by the Prince of Wales, accompanied by Prince George in connection with "Warriors Day" at the Canadian National Exhibition. The Royal visitors also officially opened the new "Prince's Gate" at the east entrance to the Exhibition Grounds. It was also "Children's Day" at the Exhibition and the youngsters thronged the grounds with a delightful disregard of the inclement weather. There was incessant rain during the morning.

MISTAKING THE FAILURES OF LIFE FOR FATE

By ELSIE MARLOWE

Remember when you were a little tike and "got out of the bed on the wrong side" some unhappy morning.

What a little cross-patch you were all that day! Every trifle hurt you or made you angry. didn't it? The family said you were looking for trouble, and perhaps you were.

Well, here's Hopeless who, I suspect "got out of the bed on the wrong side" when she started to live Life. And she has been unhappy ever since.

DEAR ELSIE:

Do you believe in Fate?

Do you think, for some, life is decreed to be a bitter journey to the end?

From earliest childhood I have known unhappiness. My parents separated, my dear ones are in want, some of them have died. In the depths of my heart I always cherished love and happiness ahead.

Seven years ago I married at the age of twenty-one! John and I were not of the same religious faith and do many see he faced the opposition of his whole family bitterly. I thought it was love when he is willing to do such a thing. As for me, I could have loved anyone who showed me what I was that starved for it.

Well, instead of happiness, I found heart-ache. From the very beginning he began to find fault with everything I did. Sometimes he was sorry and promise not to be unkind again. But every day was the same.

After our boy came things became worse. If the home was not in perfect order or there was a slight delay at a meal or the baby was cross John was unkind. From criticism and unkindness this can dition went on to insult. When I threatened to leave he pleaded with me to remain. He said he loved me—he asked me if he didn't, why did I think he stayed home all the time and worked so hard to get ahead.

I thought I should stay for baby's sake — I thought things might be different — but they weren't. It's a life of insult and abuse with intervals of happiness.

The boy is six and there is a baby girl of two. I love my children more than life and want to do what is best for them. Should I leave him in order to recover my self-respect or go on for the children's sake? I have told him that as soon as the baby is a little bit older I shall find a way for my little ones and myself. Can I, Elsie, should I?

His earns $45 a week. He's an artisan but we live comfortably. Will I be able to keep my children or will without a home? And, on the other hand, is it fair to bring them up in the midst of so much strife.

His people have been very kind to us but "mother" Dirty, and our friends suspect the truth. Yet all the while I go about envying happy happy women. Am I doomed to be pretched always? Tell me Elsie!

HOPELESS.

No, indeed, I believe in Fate. And I believe that we carry the secrets of our Fate within our own natures, Hopeless. We're all born into the same world and we all face much the same experiences and even natures. People are united to us, people disappear from our lives, some by death, we face shame and trickery and disappointment. But some of us go through it all with a smiling peace and mirth and joy and strength along the way. And some of us—cry, and sigh and bemoan Fate.

And I strongly suspect, little sister, that you are one of those who make dark fates for themselves.

I do not know what your husband is like—so I cannot justly criticize him. But I have a very plain picture of what Hopeless is like. You have given it to me. From the first to the last line of your letter you do not give one thought to your husband's problem. It never occurs to you that he may have been in the army, that there may have been genuine friendliness behind his criticism of your manners and customs.

It never occurred to you—did it?—that if you had been working in the business world you would have met ten times as much criticism. Instead you feel that any criticism is hateful and insulting and at the first critical word you forget the great proof of his love which the man has given you and continues to give you.

Your husband may have many faults but I truly fel that your attitude has been wrong from the start Hopeless. You evidently started with the idea that Life had a grudge on you and you have magnified every petty irritation into a tragedy ever since. You will continue to be wretch ed and lose a good husband that attitude.

Will you and the children be happier if you leave him? You wouldn't be—not born in a home with an Hopeless Hunch of yours. Stop before it is too late yourself, sister. Stop thinking that Fate is picking on you. Then perhaps, you won't have to weather so many domestic storms.

CHAPTER 43.

THE CALL OF YOUTH

Ada Lind was sitting in the hotel lobby after dinner that evening, watching well-dressed women pass with their arms affectionately entwined, and chatting: "Soon, perhaps, if all goes well, I may be like them!" when a petite, pale, dark-haired girl came by.

Ada noticed that the bag she carried had become unclasped. She leaned forward and touched the girl's arm.

"Excuse me—but your purse is open."

Norma Kendall started, and the bag fell in the floor, scattering its miscellaneous contents. Ada helped her gather up the articles, and Norma sank down in a chair beside her, flushed, shy, embarrassed.

"Thank you so much. I—it was very awkward of me."

Ada, hungry for some to talk to, began a conversation.

"You're stopping here, aren't you? I believe I saw you on the beach this morning. You were having a most beautiful swim."

Norma shook her head. Ada looked at her questioningly.

"I haven't been swimming yet. I dislike so much to go alone. My father brought me down, but he was called away on business," explained Norma. "I was half a mind to go back with him," she added, with a wistful smile.

Ada looked sympathetically at Norma's pale face.

"You have been ill, perhaps?"

"No — but a little unhappy. My father thought the change might do me good.

"I have been unhappy, too," volunteered Ada. "I have just lost my husband."

"Oh! I'm so sorry," Norma glanced at the other's mourning. "I—I have lost my husband, too but not through death."

She rose hurriedly, as though she regretted her words.

"I must go now. You've been very kind. I hope I shall see you again tomorrow."

Ada watched her slight figure disappear along the crowded corridor.

"I wonder what she meant by saying she had lost her husband but not through death. It's unlikely that another woman could take a man away from a girl so pretty and sweet."

She went up to her lonely room, and dmly hungry for contact with life and youth and romance. She told herself she wouldn't even mind suffering, if it were the price of a love-affair. Professor Lind had never made her suffer as he had only bored her, frozen her, crushed out of her all the joy of living.

She took the black opal from its case and held it against her plump throat.

"When I'm out of mourning, I'll wear it!" she thought recklessly. "I'll have a pendant made and wear it on a platinum chain."

The next day she went again to town to begin her arduous course in reduction and beauty culture. When she returned, very weary than she had ever been in all her life and sch ing from the unaccustomed exercise the physical culture studio, she saw Norma on the veranda, staring out across the sea, her tan intated on the wicker table before her.

"How do you do?" said Ada, hoping that the girl would offer her some tea.

Norma came back from her reverie with a start and did just that.

Ten minutes later they were chatting like old friends over the teacups. Norma felt so strongly with the plump little widow. She sensed in her a wist fulness as deep as her own. And Ada Lind was hungry for contact with youth and freshness like Norma's.

When the French pastries arrived, she stretched out an eager hand and then drew back with a sigh.

"You don't care for sweets?" asked Norma in surprise.

"Oh, my dear, if you only knew!" moaned Ada. "I'm starved, famished! I'd give all I possess for one of those cakes right this minute, but I daren't. I'll you promise not to laugh I'll tell you."

She confessed her resolve to reduce, and described the physical culture course.

"And I'm going to have my face lifted!" proudly. "And a permanent wave! I've wanted one for years, but my husband wouldn't let me."

Norma was gravely sympathetic. She was too kind-hearted to laugh, and besides, the pathos of the little middle aged woman's attempt to find youth and beauty in a shop was poignant.

A month later both women agreed that the treatments had been beneficial beyond their highest expectations. Ada Lind's weight had been reduced materially, and a séance with a smart dress-maker had resulted in mourning frocks admirably suited to her figure. The face-lifting operation was a complete success, and Ada Lind was turning to the world a visage as unlined and without bellows as baby's. Her pretty brown hair was permanently waved in accordance with the latest edict from Paris.

"It's rather fortunate that I haven't a husband anywhere around," Norma said, with a smile. "I'd be afraid of losing him to you."

Her words filled Ada's cup of happiness to the brim. She felt equipped now for a flirtation. The only difficulty was that Norma refused to meet any of the men who were at the hotel and swam and golfed and danced all hours of the day and night.

It was therefore with the keenest interest and surprise that Ada, dining with Norma, one night, saw her spring up, flushed and breathless, when an extremely good - looking stranger came to their table.

Orchestra Leader Declares Former Haunt of Freaks Has Changed

New York City—Where can you hear the best music in New York City? Not uptown, Greenwich Village, of course! That is what all the highbrows are saying this year. And this is in spite of the fact that Greenwich Village seems to have the reputation for the wildest, least-musical music in the city.

"It's all come about through the change in the Village itself," declares Frank Farrell, who heads the orchestra at the Greenwich Village Inn.

"The Village these days is the haunt of the esthetic, the musically well informed, the highbrow, if you choose to call it that. The days when you could palm off just anything on the Village's ear are by. You called it a rowdy scene to be played forever.

"The new Village is getting ... back to the old time when to live in Greenwich Village meant that you were a member of the artistic and most cultured families in the city. That was before the Stella and Sheba of Oshkosh and Timbertoe came to town with their baths and long cigarette holders.

"What has happened to them, nobody seems to know. Perhaps they have moved up on Riverside Drive or Park Avenue. At any rate, Greenwich Village is again becoming a place of homes and good taste. As a matter of fact, it's true that even visitors from uptown are difficult places to find except to the Broadway night clubs. The ones who are seeking amusement that 'is always in good taste' come to the Village and instead of jazz here 'Beside a Garden Wall' and kindred numbers."

Mr. Farrell's success has been phenomenal. His engagement as organization in Cleveland has run a special telephone wire to New York to get his concerts on the

Suffered So She Could Not Walk. Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mineola, Ontario.—"I am a practical nurse and I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to suffering women. Before taking it I was almost helpless and could not sit at the table long enough to drink a cup of tea. Many a time my husband carried me to bed. I would be so weak. Then he read in the paper of a woman suffering as I did who got better after taking the Vegetable Compound, so I decided to try it, for me. When I had taken three bottles I was just like a new woman, and have had splendid health ever since. When I for mentioned it to others they always take it; sometimes a half bottle, or whatever I need. It is my only medicine and I have told many a one about it. Any one wanting to know more about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I will gladly write to her. I do all I can to recommend it, for I feel I owe my life and strength to it."—Mrs. NEAL DUNCAN, R. R. 1, Mineola, Ontario.

Do you feel broken-down, nervous, and weak sometimes? Do you have this horrid feeling of fear when some one comes to your house when they are not well? Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a medicine to take at such a time. It always helps, and if taken regularly and persistently will relieve this condition.

SINCLAIR'S

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am an unhappy young married woman in need of your advice. I have been married a year and am expecting to become a mother very soon. My husband and I love each other very much and nothing could part us in the whole world. He has not lived with me all these months because his mother insists that he live at home. He doesn't give me one penny of his salary. His mother claims every bit of it, which I don't think she has a right to do. He doesn't like to go against his parents, but don't you think this is one time when he should? He tries to satisfy both his parents and me, which, of course, is very hard to do. Haven't I the right to make him live with me and take his salary instead of his mother? What would you advise me to do?

A HEART-BROKEN WIFE.

A HEART-BROKEN WIFE: You have not told me your age or the age of your husband, but I imagine you are both in your teens. Perhaps your husband's mother feels that her boy is still too young to leave the parental home.

It seems to me that she is unfair to you, after all, when a young man takes on the responsibility of marriage, his first duty is to his wife. I would suggest that you talk to your husband, and explain that while you are willing to have him contribute to the support of his parents, if that is necessary, you feel that he should be more concerned with you. It is his place to provide you with a home, which you should make attractive. You have the right to use his salary as well as his affections.

I would suggest that you also have a talk with his mother and make her understand the unfortunate predicament she has placed you in. Surely she will realize that your husband's obligation is to you and the coming child. I can tell by your letter that you are intelligent, and you should be able to handle and adjust this situation with the use of a little tact. Your respect for the wishes of your husband's mother is quite commendable, but you must make her realize that your husband's place is with you.

EAGER BROWN EYES: When your friends are leaving and thank you for the time they had, it is proper for you to say "I am glad you enjoyed yourself," "I am glad you had a nice time," or something to that effect. "If you're considering matrimony, give your prospective partner $10 to spend on music. If he comes back with Stone Pond Home among the pieces, then go ahead and marry; but if he spends the money on a lot of 'hot' noises, then it's a sure bet that the best thing to do is give him the air."

PALMER REPORT FAVORS CHOICE OF FT. CHURCHILL

Claims Undoubted Advantages Over Port Nelson For Navigation

COST MUCH LESS

Evidence of Ice Conditions At Both Harbors Extremely Vague

Ottawa, August 30.—Strongly recommending the choice of Fort Churchill as the port terminal for the Hudson Bay Railway, instead of Port Nelson, Frederick Palmer, eminent British engineer, in a preliminary report issued through Hon. Charles A. Dunning, Minister of Railways and Canals, enumerates the reasons for his recommendation. Mr. Palmer is now on his way back to London, England, where his complete and detailed report will be prepared and forwarded here with the least possible delay.

Supplementing Mr. Palmer's opinion regarding the cost of providing shipping accommodation at Churchill and at Nelson, Mr. Dunning said yesterday that at Churchill the cost would be $7,000,000, while at Nelson it would be three times that figure or $21,000,000.

Palmer's Conclusions

"That Churchill is undoubtedly the port to be selected as affording a real harbor in which whipping facilities can be provided in calm water, protected from all storms by surrounding rocky cliffs," was the first conclusion of Mr. Palmer. Mr. Palmer's other conclusions were as follows:

"The estimated costs of corresponding accommodation at Nelson and Churchill disclose marked advantage in favor of the latter, the figures show ing that, including interest during the period of construction, the cost at Churchill will be less than one-third of what is required to complete Nelson, Even after adding the cost of the extra 97 miles of railway to Churchill, the cost of this place will be only about one half of the Nelson port estimate.

"The time for completion of the works at Churchill, viz., Three years, is

INDIAN RELICS HARD TO PLACE

Preparing Exhibits May Take Matter of Months

Toronto, Ont., August 30. — (By Canadian Press) — Visitors to the halls of Indian relics in Canadian museums seldom realize the difficulties involved in the classification and cataloging of such specimens. An immense amount of research, which must be undertaken every time a new collection is acquired by a museum, Preparing these exhibits for the public eye may take a matter of months.

Trade carried on between the Indian tribes scattered north American area before the advent of the. White Man and the interchanging of trading gifts aided inestimably to the task of the ethnologist.

Stone or bone implements, arrowheads or hatchets, are found in a certain district the layman may be pardoned for presuming that they were made by Indians of the tribe known to have inhabited that particular region. But the expert museum worker is not to be so easily satisfied. He knows that the primitive tools of the Red Man were actively bartered from tribe to tribe; that hatchets found on the site of an iroquois village in Ontario may have been made hundreds of miles away by Indians of the Rocky Mountains or the Pacific Coast.

They may have been traded from hand to hand and from tribe to tribe in exchange for furs or wampum until finally used by the native Iroquois. Or they may have formed a part of a gift from one proud chieftain to another on some occasion when the fragrant smoke of the pipe of peace proclaimed a temporary armistice between blood agitated braves.

While the tribes inhabiting eastern Canada confined their migrations to regions within easy travelling distance by their central villages, the Indians of the western plains and mountains were essentially nomadic and wandered far and near in pursuit of game and scalps. For this reason relics of the western tribes are widely scattered across Canada and are to be seen in ethnological collections in all parts of the Dominion.

Hair pins and needles made of bone were evidently among the most common articles of barter, indicating that the Canadian women of the stone ages was as anxious for the latest innovation in feminine adornment as is her sister of today. Bone pipes are also found, while chisels and axes have made of stone are common.

Of course arrowheads abound. Some particularly fine specimens, the product of expert craftsmanship, are included in the Dr. H. Crease collection recently acquired by the McCord Historical Museum, Montreal. The specimens in this collection were found by Mr. Crouse and two other men in the neighborhood of Brantford, Ont. Most of the material is of Huron-Iroquois origin. Many fragments of pottery, showing crude attempts at design, are included in this collection.

One of the greatest handicaps to the classification of Indian relics is the scarcity of authentic reference works on the Canadian Indians. The most reliable work on the subject and that most used by curators is the "Canadian Handbook on Indians." This is a reprint of the material in a volume compiled by Frederick Webb Hodge and issued by the American Bureau of Ethnology.

POLICE CALLED

Oshawa, Aug. 30.—Police were called to Hinton road south yesterday afternoon to settle a battle between a man and a woman, both foreigners, which started over a cow. The bovine either insecurely restricted to the owner's premises or possessed of the wanderlust went a-visiting where the lady's garden and her infuriation threat was great. She seized a large iron bar with a wicked looking point and went out to do battle with the cow, but about the same time as the owner appeared on the scene. Instead of using her villainous shillalah on the cow she dealt the man a heavy blow on the head. For an instant he was overcome, but quickly rising to his feet he rushed in and grabbed the woman by the throat and was getting the best of the argument when help arrived and the combatants were both brought the fracas to an end. It is understood that police court charges will be laid.

NEEDS EXAMINATION

Oshawa, August 30.—Seated in a car parked on one of the principal streets of the city an elderly man possessed of a mental capacity none too bright attracted considerable attention on Friday by inviting passing ladies to ride with him in the car. Police were notified and the gallant gentleman charged with disorderly conduct was taken to the police station and later let go on bail. On Saturday the same man was arrested charged with the theft of a motor car from the Moffatt Motor Sales. When approached by the officers he readily explained that the car was his own. The constables demurred whereupon the man jumped to his feet, lifted the front seat of the car and took out an old magazine. He opened it at page 20 and pointing to an advertisement for some brand of collars, announced triumphantly: "There, see for yourself. You think I am kidding you. Well, here are the facts."

"You used to work on the farm. didn't you?" quizzed an officer on the way to the station.

"I sure did," laughingly returned the man, grinning, and then he added, "do you remember the day the bull broke loose?"

The officer had never seen the man before, but he agreed that he remembered the incident well.

After appearing before Magistrate Hind the peculiarly acting individual was remanded in custody until sanities have had an opportunity to estimate his mental capacity.

Planing Flight

Levine's sudden flight caught Drouhin and the French pilot with whom he has been wrangling quite off guard it is reported from Paris, but Levine and tonight they had been planning to escape from France for some time. "They had been plotting every possible method for the way of my flight home," he declared, "until it had decided the only thing to do was to make a get-away to British soil. They were watching me closely, but I found my chance and took it."

It was certainly a long chance he took. Without a map and with only a few hours' flying experience over those under the eyes of an instructor on a familiar airdrome, he set his course northward from Paris knowing that London was north.

Had Engagement

Paris, August 30. — Charles A. Levine, of Brooklyn and transatlantic fame, left his hotel at noon casually remarking to his wife that he had an important engagement at Le Bourget air station and would get in touch with her later on. He then rushed to a taxicab in a motor car and after a few minutes was flying to London. He arrived shortly before four o'clock and li is from London and not from Paris that he will start on his transatlantic flight.

A young policeman whose duty it was to jealously guard the plane and a lone mechanic had been on roll Minicolumbia out to the field, everyone being at lunch.

Thus has he brought to a dramatic climax the long drawn-out controversy with his French pilot, Maurice Drouhin, over the problem of a return voyage. In so doing, however, Chamberlin's partner on the historical New York to Germany flight had added a number of new troubles to his list. When he took off yesterday with no word of warning to anyone he violated flying regulations. In the first place he has no pilot's licence— in fact he had never been up alone in a plane before—and he also failed to make a formal declaration of his departure and submit himself and plane to customs examination. In addition to all this, Drouhin's lawyers are conferring with their client this evening to determine just what legal steps to take to protect the interests of Drouhin.

Levine's wife and family are waiting for New York Wednesday on the France. It is said that Levine would like very much to pass the ship on his homeward air voyage.

First Sale Flight

The suddenness of Levine's move found everybody literally sleeping or eating, and the first surprise news of all being Drouhin and his little group of adirers. A telephone message to the French airman was the first news he had of Levine's desperate act, for it cannot be described in any other way. For a man who had never before taken a plane up alone to succeed fully pilot a plane from Paris to London over the difficult air currents of the Channel, is regarded in aeronautic circles as little short of a miraculous. Levine's own assistants have always discouraged him from making solo flights, believing that he would kill himself if he went alo't alone.

The first news which Mrs. Levine received of her husband's hasty departure was a telephone message from Le Bourget saying that Levine had ofa appeared in the clouds going at full speed in a northerly direction. Mrs. Levine became panic-stricken, recalling the repeated warnings which her husband had received never to take the ship up alone. She was almost in a state of collapse until a few minutes after four o'clock, when an American agency informed her that Levine had landed safely at Croydon.

Renzyme Is So Different

By supplying new enzymes to the stomach it is positive in results.

Like most people who have suffered from indigestion, the writer of the letter quoted below had tried many remedies before he was so different in effect to say previous treatments used that he is now enthusiastic in its use.

No matter what the cause, or how long standing, Renzyme is bound to afford relief because it actually supplies the digestive factants which set up the process of digestion.

Mr. A. R. Robertson, Hamilton, Ont., writes:

"Your statement that the Renzyme is a rejuvenating fluid is correct."

"I have been troubled with indigestion for years and have tried all kinds of remedies but secured no relief until I was persuaded by a friend to try Renzyme. Almost immediately I had relief and now I am a constant user of same. I most whole-heartedly recommend to anyone who is troubled with stomach disorders to try Renzyme because I know that it will fix it to be effective."

You can obtain Renzyme from your druggist at $1.50 a bottle or it will be sent to you, postpaid, on receipt of price, if you mention this paper. The Renzyme Laboratories, Toronto, 2, Canada.

This Simple Home Treatment Is Giving Amazing Results

Rub Gently and Upward Toward the Heart as Blood in Veins Flows That Way.

If you or any relative or friend is worried because of varicose veins, or knotches, the best advice that anyone on this world can give you is to get your druggist for an original two ounces bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil (full strength) and apply as directed night and morning to the swollen, enlarged veins. Soon you will notice that they are growing smaller and the treatment should be continued until the veins are of normal size. No penetrating and powerful Emerald Oil. NOT MUCH SPACE FOR SUICIDES

Constantinople, August 27.—As a measure against a wave of suicides, especially among young students, the new chief of police, Cherif Bey, has promulgated an order prohibiting the press from giving extensive publicity to suicide cases.

Henceforth pictures of his victims may not be published in the press, nor may suicide stories appear on the front page of any publication by writer. All that is to be allowed will be a brief statement in the police news and the document must be relegated to some inconspicuous inside portion of the newspaper.

That the wave of self-destruction has extended to Anatolia is shown by reports from Smyrna and from Angora, the most conspicuous tragedy in the latter city being the suicide of a sixteen year old schoolgirl, Nihal Hanem, daughter of a prominent army officer, who drank poison because her father would not consent to her marrying her music instructor.

BELLE THEATRE

Chalk out another big hit which first saw the light of day upon the back of an old envelope.

The story of Wallace Beery's starring comedy, "Casey at the Bat," which came to the Belle Theatre yesterday, was outlined on the back of a paper wrapper by Hector Turnbull, Paramount featured producer, while at luncheon one day in the studio restaurant.

It will be recalled that Lincoln's Gettysburg speech was written on the back of a White House envelope as the president's train carried him to his destination and that the words of "The Star Spangled Banner were also first committed on an envelope.

It is of interest to know that one of the greatest motion picture producing companies in the industry, what is now Famous Players-Lasky Corporation was organized on the reverse side of a menu card in Reuter's, New York City. The document was drawn up by Jesse L. Lasky and represented an initial capitalization of $20,000.

The story of "Casey at the Bat" was adapted from Hector Turnbull's original "envelope" story by Reginald Morris, scenario writer, with Ernest Pascal preparing by Jules Furthman. Monte Brice directed.

CAPITOL THEATRE

It is some time since local theatregoers have witnessed as good dancing as that presented at the Capitol theatre last evening by Vaudeville and Co. The performance has real merit and especially well received by last evening's large audience were the efforts of the most youthful member of the Com- pany, a young girl with exceptional skill in all the various types of dances which she executed.

"On Ze Boulevard", the screen feature, is an excellent French comedy, the adventures of a waiter who suddenly finds himself the winner of a fortune and undertakes to spend it in a hurry. The picture is a genuine laugh in the way through, and excellent, entertainment with Lew Cody and Rene Adoree. It's a merry, laughing story with not a little romance running though it. A thoroughly good bill all the way through and one we would recommend highly to anyone who appreciates good comedy and capable stage performers. The Capitol firmphone orch plays records on the performances.

Flint and a half of blood given him by his 63-year-old grandmother saved the life of William Corman, aged 20, when injured in a mining machine at Jersey City, N.J.

Montreal is to spend $13,000,000 to improve its harbor.

BLOW TO CUBS IN GIANTS WIN

McGrawmen Only 44 1-2 Games Behind Leaders; 21st Win For Haines

New York, August 30. — Playing magnificent baseball every inch of the stormy way, the Giants dealt the Cubs a deadly blow by taking both games of a doubleheader at the Polo Grounds today, 6-7 and 6-1, putting the McGrawmen only four and a half games behind, first place.

Yes, the Giants are still in the pennant fight — very much in it, of yesterday's glad events mean anything. Thirty thousand customers stood up and rolled themselves hoarse and blue in the face as the Giants rushed gallantly from behind in each game and bore the Cubs to earth, with superb hitting, superior strategy, great generalship and indomitable spirit of never-say-die.

The Giants didn't even know how to spell the word "defeat." The word "quit" was not in their vocabulary. Though they started with a four-run deficit in the first game and faced Charley Root in the second game, the Giants refused to give up until the last man was out.

The second game was highly dramatic. Root, the premier pitcher of the big league, had allowed only four hits and had fanned the Giants for six innings to the tune of 1-0. At the start of the seventh the score was behind a cloud, the sky became overcast, peals of thunder could be heard and legend hands of lightning zipped through the sky to the north.

With a twilight gloom settling over the arena, the Giants began their victorious drive against Root, who was tiring rapidly. Terry opened with a single to deep short. Jackson rapped a slow grounder down the third base line and beat Root's throw by a thin red hair. Harper bunted and did it so perfectly that Root's hurried throw from the third base line was several seconds late. The bases were filled with nobody out and the heavens broke loose with a paean of joy.

John McGraw sent Melvin Ott to bat for Zach Taylor and the stripling outfielder knocked a sacrifice fly to left which scored Terry with the tying run. Again the Giants went back to the batting game and Jerry Benton dumped a perfectly hit bunt down the first base line, catching both Root and Charley Grimm off guard.

And now, with the bases again filled, Melvin Mueller was at bat. On the first game Mr. Mueller had been the fair-haired hero, with a homer in to the right field stands, and now he was the second game with the score tied and the bases again jammed. Mr. Mueller laid the wood to one of Root's fastest fast balls, and it sailed out to right for a clean single, scoring Benton and Harper and putting the game irrevocably in the sack.

Hain kept the Pirates from reaching a decision at Philadelphia, while the Cardinals lost their slight second place advantage by dividing a double bill with the Robins at Brooklyn. The Robins won the first game, 7 to 6, but the Cardinals retaliated in the second encounter by the same count.

Meanwhile Cincinnati were defeating the "Augusta champions" of the league, the Braves, in two games at Boston. The scores were 4 to 3 and 6 to 3. The Braves played havoc with the Reds and Pirates, but evidently by the strain proved too great for them and, if yesterday's games can be taken as a criterion, they are evidently sliding back into their usual style.

Jess Petty won the opener for the Robins at Ebbet's Field, vanquishing Alexander in a second duel and driving in the deciding run with a single in the seventh. The victory broke a losing streak that had lagged Petty on his last four starts.

Jess Haines hung up his 21st triumph in the closing fray at the expense of Jim Elliott, who allowed the Cardinals only two hits in eight innings.

The Phillies and Pirates were slated for two games at Philadelphia. The first game started and went as far as the end of the sixth inning. Each team had scored twice, but a heavy rain started and forced the postponement of both games.

Ruby pitched alright ball for the Reds in the first game at Boston until the ninth inning, when he lost a pop fly in the sun and gave way to a relief pitcher. The relief pitching of Lucas in the second game was responsible for the Cincinnati victory.

The double setback compelled the Braves to relinquish sixth place in the standing to Brooklyn.

Above is a photo of the Monarch, a speedy yacht designed by Thomas Rieley, a Montreal returned soldier, which is sailing from Montreal, Que., to Toronto, Ont. The longest distance covered by any boat of this type probably in nine miles and if the Monarch reaches Toronto, a distance of approximately 250 miles, it will create a world's record. Mr. Rieley expects to arrive in Toronto on Labor Day.

LARGE CROWDS EXPECTED FOR BIG POLO GAME

Meadowbrook, L. I., August 30. — Perhaps the greatest gathering in the history of the game will assemble at Meadowbrook club to watch the series for the international polo trophy to determine the supremacy as between Britain and the United States. The United States has selected its best team while the team representing the British army is behind in each practice game.

The international trophy now remains in the possession of the United States. The American team this year will have two members who are rated as ten goal men, which is the highest rating ever made. They are Hitchcock and Milburn. The British team has two players rated with nine goals — Roark and Atkinson, and the team shows a goal-getting strength of 23 against the Americans' 24. This is not significant, but it is probable that the Americans will' trot out on the field at Meadowbrook for the first game of the series on September 3 slight favorites.

At least it can be said that Great Britain never set out more determined by in her history to win an international trophy than in the present case. The team has been training ever since last October. The Indian Army ask ed permission of the auterals of the game at Hurlingham to get together a team to win back the cup and when it was granted the prospective players were ordered to report for practice 16 months ago. Throughout last winter the team, or rather a dozen prospective candidates for it, played polo in India, and finally a selection of half a dozen was made. This group sailed for England and there played only one formal game, preferring, as Col. Tomkinson said, not to lose the zest of the fast turf of India, a type of field which he expected to find in the United States.

The final selection, as made the other day by Col. Tomkinson, is as follows:

No. 1 Captain Claude E. Pert.
No. 2 Major Austin H. Williams.
No. 3 Captain C. T. I. Roark.

This group of seven Irish footballers, the nucleus of an all Irish football team, arrived in Canada recently. The next out-door tango is already here and they hope to start playing in the near future and probably tour Canada. The members of the team and the clubs for which they played on the other side are: W. Pill, who recently played in Philadelphia, U.S.A.; W. J. Burns, Wolverhampton Wanderers; J. Macauley, Arch; A. McMunn, Stockport County; A. Keenan, Crystal Palace; A. Cochrane, Newry Town, and W. Hewart, Linfield.

HELEN WILLS TO PLAY NUTHALL

For Tennis Crown; Helen Is Favoured To Win

Forest Hills, N.Y., August 30.—Helen Wills, 21-year-old Californian and Betty Nuthall, 18-year-old English girl, will match their youth and skill today in an international battle for the United States women's tennis championship.

Blond and blue-eyed Betty, sensation of the tournament, fought her way to the final today by over-coming Mrs. Charlotte Hosmer Chapin, conqueror of Mrs. Molla Mallory, in three sets, 6—1, 4—6, 6—2, while Miss Wills crushed her California rival Miss Helen Jacobs, in the same relentless fashion she has disposed of all her other opponents so far. The scores were 6—0, 6—2.

Miss Nuthall will be in the thick of two title battles, for, with Miss Joan Fry as her partner, she reached the doubles final by defeating two country women, Miss Gwynneth Sterry and Mrs. John Hill, 6—3, 6—3. In an all-British final for this United States championship, they will meet Mrs. Kitty McKane Godfree and Miss E. H. Harvey, who put out the last native team yesterday when they defeated Miss Eleanor Goss and Mrs. Chapin, 6—4, 7—5.

In the singles final the two youthful rivals will battle for the right to defend

BRITISH WANT SOLITUDES OF RUINS AGAIN

London, August 26 (By Canadian Press).—Every British school-child has heard of Stonehenge—that weird circle of trilithis on Salisbury Plain, built ages before even the first glimmering of the dawn of history. And appeal, signed amongst others by Premier Baldwin, Viscount Grey and Ramsay Macdonald, has been issued for funds to preserve Grey and Ramsay Macdonald, has been issued for be restored," declares the appeal now published, "and precautions taken to ensure that our posterity will see it as we have seen it."

Professor Frost said, are believed to be due to sudden trigger-like release of interatomic energy, due very likely to the unbelievable heat of the sun's interiors. Temperatures inside the stars vary from 500,000,000 to 100,000,000 degrees fahrenheit."

Illustrating energy contained in atoms and what could be accomplished if it could be released and utilized, the professor said a glass of water contained enough energy, to send the Mauretania across the Atlantic Ocean and back. Or it would send all the automobiles in the country from Chicago to New York and return.

"This energy, suddenly released, would drive from the stars the exciting electron shells which reach the planets in the wake of travelling heat. The stars are not destroyed by the explosions, the nucleus remains and in time acquires another gaseous shell" the Professo said.

"The heat from an explosion of the sun would reach the earth in about eight minutes and would be followed by the deadly gases in 12 hours. Should the explosion be 1,000 times the sun's present size, the heat would make life on the earth impossible anywhere but at the Poles, and not long there. Should the expansion be 20,000 times its size, as was Nova Aquilli of 1918, destruction of life would be left a matter of a few minutes over the entire earth, which would be shrivelled up."

SUN EXPLOSION WOULD BE END OF THIS WORLD

Chicago, Ills., Aug. 27.—An explosion of the sun, similar to that which occurred recently on the star Nova Aquilla of 1927, as it bigdesignated, would bring death and destruction to the earth, according to Professor E. B. Frost, of Yerkes Observatory.

The expansion, or explosion of the star, similar in type to the sun, was announced recently by Dr. Max Wolff of Heidelberg University, and confirmed by photographs taken at Harvard University.

BELLEVILLE FAIR BREAKS RECORD DESPITE WETNESS OF OPENING DAY

Thirty - Two Hundred Paid Admissions Yesterday a Splendid Omen

RACES START

Good Attendance To-day With Weather Promising To Clear.

Fair attendance figures for opening day for past 3 years:

1925	1926	1927
1497	1526	3286

Despite the bad weather conditions prevailing yesterday the attendance at the first day of the Belleville Fair exceeded that of the same day last year by over seven hundred. The paid admission on the opening day for 1926 was twenty-five hundred and for the first day at the 1925 fair it was sixteen hundred and seven. Yesterday the paid admission was thirty-two hundred and five which was nearly double that of the 1925 opening day.

The many booths in the merchants and manufacturers' buildings, the display of small things in the agricultural building and the poultry building was the reason for large numbers visiting afternoon and evening and the exhibitors showing was all favorably commented upon. The grounds were in splendid shape, well patronized and the attendance, which was unusually good had no crowds at all their shows. Again, as in former years, the merry-go-rounds were busy with people of all ages and sexes.

Today sees the ladies of Holloway Street United Church are in charge of the large, spacious and airy served meals to a large number of people on the grounds. They also served the luncheon to the fair directors.

Directors Luncheed.

Today was President's and Secretary's Day at the fair and the directors' dinner at the Exhibition Grounds. The luncheon was held in the large dining hall, conducted by the ladies of Holloway Street Church.

President George Ostrom, in a few words welcomed the guests to the luncheon and introduced several of those present as outstanding men in the district in the agricultural profession.

Mr. Robert Bushell, Secretary of the Kingston Fair; stated that Belleville's agricultural exhibits were better than those he had been either at the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto or Ottawa. The speaker also complimented the directors for the splendid appearance of the buildings and grounds.

Some of the guests at the luncheon were: R. Bushell, Jr. R. Wigle, J. S. Fanning, L. Q. Ball, A. Wade, A. F. MacKechnie, H. Clare, J. Graham, H. O. Kahn, R. Wood, J. E. O'Donnell, P. Rayner, Dr. Sine, C. R. Brown and Dr. Ray. Mayor Wills, Chas and I. Brandt represented the Midwest Agricultural Exhibition at the Exhibition.

Races Start Today

The horse races which were scheduled to take place yesterday were held today and a large number of spectators were in attendance for these events. The class of horses taking part in the trots races are of a high grade and the racing should prove interesting to lovers of this sport.

Newspaper Outing

The newsboys of Belleville had the time of their young lives last night when they were the evening guests of the Wallace Shows. Everything on the Midway was at their service for the youthful paper carriers, and one little of Gladway was traversed by the party. All rides, all shows, everything was free, and 75 or so of the lads that are you get your Intelligencer every night didn't miss a thing.

They were met at the gate by one of the show officials who saw to it that they lacked "for nothing drinks, candy, — absolutely anything they wanted was theirs for the asking. At 9 o'clock, tired but happy, the paper carriers left the grounds, convinced that Wallace Brothers Shows were absolutely the "right thing."

FLIES 30-FOUND BALLOON

Pittsfield, Mass., August 31. — Alec Stevens, veteran balloonist, telephoned friends here yesterday that he had landed near Cape Lake, 30 miles off Shrank Lake, N.Y., early yesterday after a flight of 300 miles in the balloon Pittsfield, which he piloted.

SHOT CONSTABLE IN RESISTING ARREST

Cornwall, Ont., Aug. 31.—The stolen car, in an attempt to recover which Officer William Caul of the local police force was shot through the face last night, was found today four miles east of here. In the car were a raincoat, a jimmy and a hunting knife, but nothing to identify the thieves. The officer was progressing favorably today. He had been shot when he boarded the speeding car.

CRACK LINER ON ROCK IN ALASKA

C. P. R. Steamer, "Princess Charlotte" Meets Mishap In Channel

Juneau, Alaska, Aug. 31.—On a bleak and windswept Alaskan beach 270 passengers of the disabled coastwise liner Princess Charlotte awaited relief today following their safe landing from the ship, which had been refloated in the early hours after striking a rock in Wrangell Narrows. A jagged hole was torn in prow of great liner, according to radio reports but vessel appeared in no immediate danger of sinking.

The most prominent passenger of the Canadian Pacific Ocean steamship company, ran into a rock near Wrangell, Alaska last night.

United States survey vessel 'Explorer' was rushing to the scene of the mishap while coast guard cutters were going to the Charlottes aid.' The steamer was enroute to Vancouver from Skagway, Alaska.

SEEN AT THE FAIR

Sheltie's War Show is a feature of the midway at the Belleville Agricultural Exhibition this year. There are over 1000 exhibits, 150 of which Mr. Sheild picked up himself on the bloody battlefields of France.

An airplane (model) built by three boys of Belleville is one of the features on display at the Fair. The three boys who built it are Gordon Davies, George Dupree and Jack Flagler. The plane is run by elastic bands.

Another interesting exhibit is a drawing of Napoleon, by Edwin Wardough. It shows the mighty man standing up in full dress uniform and is exceedingly well done.

A grand piano, the exact replica of the one Premier Baldwin used in Toronto, is being shown in the Gerhard Heintzman booth.

It seems a pity that rain should mar the one week in the year that the greatest Agricultural Exhibition in Central Ontario is being held. Races are impossible in the heavy sea of mud in front of the grandstand.

Judging of Ladies Work and Poultry Exhibits went way this morning. The poultry exhibit ranks among the largest of the Fair.

Paints and Roofings feature the Walker's Hardware Store booth at the Ex. Mr. Ralston is chairman for the use of Eko-Glaze, a varnish of high quality.

726 more visitors to the Fall Exhibition this year than last were recorded at paying entrances yesterday.

KINGSTON'S FAIR MANAGER IN COMPLIMENTARY MOOD

Mr. R. J. Bushell, Manager of the Kingston Fair, visited the Intelligencer office this morning intending to write up the Belleville Fair before leaving. He is also accompanied by one of his directors, Mr. Joseph Wilder. Both Mr. Bushell and his director are on an advertising campaign for the Kingston Industrial Exhibition.

The two guests today of the Bell Telephone Company of Canada were Belleville Fair directors at their luncheon. They immediately afterwards they left for Kingston to attend the Exhibition of which they will be guests.

Mr. Bushell was very much impressed with ground and buildings and stating anything in Central Ontario. Much credit is due to the energetic directors for supporting so generously the well being of Hastings County.

Mr. Bushell said that he would not like to close without recognizing the fact also that Belleville and Hastings County can with great pride look upon the Belleville Intelligencer as one of the leading eight dailies of Central Ontario.

NURSES' HOME IS TO BE ERECTED?

Plans said to be in Course of Preparation to Make Start

The Intelligencer was reliably informed this afternoon that plans were being prepared for the erection of the new nurses' home in connection with the Belleville General Hospital, which is the bequest, which is in the neighborhood of forty thousand dollars, left by the late Thomas Ritchie, at his death six years ago.

It will be remembered that the larger portion of Mr. Ritchie's large estate was willed to local charities, a part of which was to be paid to the hospital at his death and the balance upon the death of Mrs. Ritchie. The Intelligencer was informed today by a reliable source that the hospital bequest has been increased since that time by contribution. Mr. Ritchie was a substantial supporter of that organization during his lifetime.

The playgrounds and the Children's Shelter owed their existence to a large extent to the generosity of Mr. Ritchie. The Y.M.C.A. and other charitable bodies in Belleville were also remembered in the Ritchie will.

This afternoon The Intelligencer was unable to secure the inside facts regarding the new nurses' home, although it will be the aim of the hospital to close proximity to the local hospital and when completed will be the last word in this class of building. Mr. M. Wright, well-known solicitor of this city, is one of the custodians of the Ritchie will.

The late Mr. Ritchie was well known in this city where he was practically all his life head of the Ritchie store, which during his regime, was one of the outstanding stores of its kind in Eastern Ontario. After his death the business was managed by former employees until it was recently absorbed by a syndicate and is now a branch of a chain store company.

PRINCESS OF 61 FIRST WOMAN TO ATTEMPT FLIGHT

Starts for Canada as Passenger in Capt. Hamilton's Plane.

FINANCES TRIP

Will Make Bid for $25,000 Prize For London-to-London Span

Inverara, County Galway, Ireland, Aug. 31.—Breaking of the trans-Atlantic plane was plainly heard as Capt. Hamilton and Princess Lowenstein-Wertheim set over the ocean between the Western extremity of Ireland and Labrador, the most northerly of the Avan Islands.

Upavon, England, August 31.—After waiting at airy aerodrome here for ten days for favorable weather, Capt. Leslie Hamilton and Lieut. Col. F. F. Minchin, with Princess Lowenstein Wertheim as a passenger, left here at 7.32 o'clock this morning in the monoplane "St. Raphael" in an attempt to fly to Canada.

They had fuel for a 44 - flight but expected to reach Otlawa in 37 hours. After landing at Ottawa they hope to go on to London Ontario to claim the prize of $25,000 for a London-to-London flight. Princess Lowenstein Wertheim is a passenger, left here at 7.32 o'clock this morning in the monoplane "St. Raphael" in an attempt to fly to Canada.

The fuel for a 44 - flight but expected to reach Otlawa in 37 hours. After landing at Ottawa they hope to go on to London Ontario to claim the prize of $25,000 for a London-to-London flight. The plane's last reported later passing over Tipperary, Ireland. They made a beautiful take-off although narrowly missing crashing into the hangar at the edge of the field.

First Woman To Try

Princess Wertheim is the financier of the flight and was died in a purple leather flying outfit. "Of course, we are going to make it" she said. "There is no doubt about it."

The plane was blessed by the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Cardiff before starting. It is equipped with a five hundred horsepower Bristol Jupiter engine and does not carry radio but has a collapsible rubber boat. The princess is sixty one years of age and is the first woman to attempt a flight across the Atlantic.

Wife Confident

New York, Aug. 31.—So confident is Mrs. Hamilton, wife of Cap. Leslie Hamilton, that her husband will succeed in the trans-Atlantic venture with Captain Minchin and the Princess Wertheim, that upon learning that the plane had hopped off, she telephoned her friends here.

Princess Wertheim is the first woman to attempt trans-Atlantic flight. She was clad for the part in purple leather flying suit-with knee breeches, black crash helmet, flying stockings and high-heeled, furlined boots.

Ottawa, Aug. 31.—Capt. Hamilton plans to follow the Canadian Pacific when he strikes the coast of Canada on his trans-Atlantic flight. He then follows the Ottawa river to the Capital, landing at the Hunt Club field. If the flight is successful the plane should be here tomorrow afternoon or evening.

"WHITE" MINERS ORDERED OUT

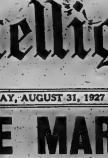

Mexico City, August 31. — The situation in the Nazlan mining district where a strike is in progress, is virtual martial control, by special despatches from Guadalajara, the latest development being an order by the "Red" miners to the "white" miners not supporting the strike to leave the district.

"DAD, I CAN'T STAY" SAYS GEORGE, AS HE COLLAPSED

Toronto, Ont. Aug. 31. — "Dad, I can't stay in the race for a hundred yards more, or I'll kill myself". said George Young as he collapsed in the swim just after yielding the lead to Verkoeter. The cause of George's mishap was not known, but when it was taken to the hospital he appeared almost normal. The Toronto swimming marvel was heavy-eyed and bowed down with disappointment as he climbed from his rocker launch which was the ill fated number 13 at the emergency hospital.

O'Connor ruled out the suggestion that the cause was "thinking about it."

SHRINER'S CHOICE

Dr. Charlotte Gants

aged 32, of Philadelphia, who agreed to wear the Shriners' emblem in the 250,000 Canadian National Exhibition marathon swim. "But you had better tattoo it on my back or paint it on my leg," she said, for she intended to wear a bathing suit only to start in, then slip out of it.

Brock, of Detroit, Mich., asserted she married the flier June 10, 1926, in Chicago. Mrs. Brock, of Dayton said'Although they have been separated for six years she never knew or heard of a divorce. OFF COURSE

Young and Summers Cut a Caper But Went Back

Toronto, Ont, Aug. 31.—Officials running the Marathon Swim held their first thrill half an hour after the start when George Young, of Toronto leading and Byron Summers, of California following him, went through the inside of the course and other swimmers started after them. The stirls turned back but Young and Summers kept on, sailing off a big corner on the first turn. After a few minutes, however, they realized and went back to the proper turning, putting themselves level with two or four other leaders, much to the relief, of officials. They were not disqualified.

Toronto, Aug. 31. — Swimming 44 strokes to the minute Ernest Verkoeter of Germania natators, gained the commanding lead of approximately two miles over Mendall Burditt of Toronto, the nearest swimmer, in the $50,000 Lake Ontario twenty-one mile swim this afternoon. Verkoeter's strokes were not as impressive as the afternoon advanced and he neared thirteen mile mark, but his handlers reported he was swimming with ease in the cold water.

Verkoeter was confident of winning Burditt was also carrying on pluckily and some distance behind. Ethel Hertle of New Toronto is displaying wonderful form and more than holding her own with the older leaders. Miss Hertle's performance excited tremendous interest. Behind Miss Hertle was Georges Michael, while Howard D. Chaffee of California was fifth and John O'Halloran of Barrie sixth.

Two Mile Lead

Toronto, C. N. E. Grounds, August 31. — With more than one, third, of course, covered, Ernest Verkoeter, of Germania natators, established a two mile lead in the fifty Thousand Dollar Marathon of twenty-one miles at one p.m. today. His time for eighteen miles was about four hours and twenty seconds.

With George Young out of the race the contention was supplied by Byron Summers of California, Edward Keating, a threat to Verkoeter's lead, of Germania, established a two mile mark. Verkoeter appeared to be slowly increasing his lead over Summers, who was accompanied by a blind Mendill Burditt, Toronto was third with John O'Halloran, of Barrie, Ontario fifth. Miss Ethel Hertle was fourth, swimming easily and George Michel, the Toronto swimmer was in sixth place. At 1.30 p.m. the swimmers left in water were just under the 100 mark.

Verkoeter Comes Up

Toronto, August 31. — At ten thirty, two hours after the start George Young was the lead of about three hundred yards on Ernest Verkoeter, German, who was in second place and Byron Summers, of Barrie, Edward Keating was in fourth just ahead of George Michael. At this stage, about seventy swimmers had left the cold water, the remainder of about 210 being still in the water at the start.

At this point four miles had been covered and Verkoeter, was closing on a little on Young. The latter, however, was swimming easily. Summers was swimming up a little, followed by Edward Keating. Young's lead over Verkoeter at the four mile mark was a minute and a quarter.

Young Leads

11 a.m. Belleville Verkoeter, German, took the lead from Young about the third by going about fifty yards in front. Ethel Hertle, first of the women, was among the last leaders.

Young, swimming 44 strokes to the minute, was quite cool as Verkoeter took the lead from him at four and a half mile mark. He is said to have told his handlers, "He is long ways yet." Verkoeter was a hundred yards in front at eleven a.m. Both were going without effort, heads well down.

PRINCE SAYS GOOD BYE TO OTTAWA

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 31.—Premier King extended a welcome to the Prince of Wales and Governor General when they arrived today to bid farwell to the Government and to Viscount and Lady Willingdon. The Prince's last lunch at the Ottawa Golf Club where this after noon they are playing a team golf match with the Governor General's staff.

Planning New Start

Deseau, Germany, Aug. 31.—The work of fuelling the Junker's plane Bremen was commencing after the plane was carried on to the field, here this afternoon. It was hoped to start the second trans-Atlantic attempt with Captain Hermann Koehal and Baron Hunsefield on board.

VIERKOETER APPARENTLY HAS THE GREAT RACE AT HIS MERCY NOW

Favorite, George Young Collapsed at 4 1-2 Miles—Byron Summers and Keating Also Quit—Ethel Hertle Stays With Leaders—Third at Thirteen Mile Mark Toronto Man, Burditt, in Second Place—Two Miles Behind Leader whose Stroke is not so Impressive Now.

Lake Shore, Toronto, Aug. 31. —With Ernest Verkoeter, of German swimming strongly 200 yards ahead in the $50,000 Canadian National Exhibition marathon swim, George Young, conqueror of the Catalina Channel, was pulled from the water as five mile mark suffering from cramps. The removal of the favorite cost a great excitement in the Germania boy's lead when word was officially conveyed to Verkoeter's handlers, they broke into loud cheering. The German is now a mile and a half in front of Byron Summers of California, Edward Keating was third, a short distance back.

Verkoeter left Young far behind before heats began to gather around the Catalina conqueror, but was suffering from cramps. Ethel Hertle, of New York, was leading the women swimmers while, Louise Hardy, Toronto, was among the leaders. About a dozen men swimmers were in front of Miss Hertle. The crowd which had greatly increased, gave great cheers as Verkoeter rounded the turn to begin second lap.

Toronto — Flash — Byron Summers, of San Francisco, Calif., drops out.

Toronto, C.N.E. Grounds, Aug. 31.—290 swimmers, including the most noted in the world, commenced a twenty-one-mile grind to win $50,000 in prizes at 8.32 a.m. today when Premier Ferguson fired the starting gun.

Fully one hundred thousand people lined the lake front of the Canadian National Exhibition Grounds and an immense throng of humanity was on the water.

There was no delay about the start. About a hundred and fifty jumped immediately with the gun while the rest waited until the crowd was out of the way before entering the water.

There was a great battle for position in the first few yards, while some burned themselves out in a few strokes. Others swam steadily and easily from the very first.

The pack started to string out before the hundred yard mark was reached with the speed artists in the front ranks. It was a wonderful sight as all the swimmers crawled up the mile long lane in the lake where the boats were waited to find their own swimmers.

George Young Leading

George Young forged ahead the field by a quarter of a mile into the lake by the time the first mile was run. In 20 minutes of swimming, it was definitely determined that Young, Catalina Channel champion, was in the van near the two mile mark, with Byron Summers, of California, second and Ernest Verkoeter, the German swimmer, third about a quarter of a mile behind the leading boys.

George Coombs, of Sudbury, Ont., who is below, climbed onto the breakwater just before the end of the mile. The cold water forced him to withdraw. Lifeguards were busily occupied in rescuing swimmers. The better swimmers, with the water calm as it possibly could be, were making no time.

ARCHBISHOP IMPROVED

Regina, August 31.—Although His Grace Archbishop Mathieu was very low during Monday night, his condition today was considered to be some what improved by authorities at the Grey Nunz' Hospital, where he is a patient.

Toronto, Aug. 31. — Swimming 44 strokes to the minute Ernest Verkoeter German bather, retained his commanding lead of approximately two miles over Mendall Burditt of Toronto, the nearest swimmer, in the $50,000 Lake Ontario twenty-one mile swim this afternoon. Verkoeter's strokes were not as impressive as the afternoon advanced and he neared thirteen mile mark, but his handlers reported he was swimming with ease in the cold water.

Verkoeter was confident of winning Burditt was also carrying on pluckily and some distance behind. Ethel Hertle of New Toronto is displaying wonderful form and more than holding her own with the older leaders. Miss Hertle's performance excited tremendous interest. Behind Miss Hertle was Georges Michael, while Howard D. Chaffee of California was fifth and John O'Halloran of Barrie sixth.

FARM WOMEN NEED SOME MORE POLISH

Toronto, Ont., August 30. - (C P.) A feminine correspondent of the Farmer's Sun believes that farm women need a little more "polish." It seems to me, however, that there is no reason why rural women should not have the ease and grace of manner which so many of us would like, but have not. Do you not think that it comes, not from study of etiquette, but from within? The reason a woman is charming in her own opinion is because she is anxious to make the visitor welcome. She forgets herself. Let her do this when she goes to a meeting. Once she gets the idea that the club really needs her time and her assistance she will offer both willingly, forgetting even to think that they might be inferior to any other woman's. I think that the U.F.W.O. has done a great deal to rub off the inferiority complex business. Only we need more women to belong.

VISITORS WERE IMPRESSED BY CANADA JUBILEE

Many Canadian Newspapers have noted the chorus of praise of this country which has arisen outside the Dominion on the occasion of our Diamond Jubilee. None of these journals have reprinted the written word with a justifiable amount of pride. One tribute appears in The Toronto Globe—it comes from Mr. W. K. Kellogg, an American manufacturer of Battle Creek, Michigan—who did not say much he was impressed "twenty years ago, when he began his business connection with Canada, with the optimism and vision that permeated the industrial atmosphere." He points to the evidences which he saw on every hand as justifying the hopes and confidence of the Fathers of Confederation—the vast wheatfields of the West; the opening up of the mineral treasure house in the Laurentian Hills across Northern Quebec, Ontario, and Manitoba; the timber, fisheries, and other natural resources of British Columbia and the Maritime Provinces. The development of those great natural resources, with the utilization of the unending and almost unlimited water power, made possible the opening up of new agricultural and manufacturing opportunities, he claims as a substantiation of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's prophecy that the 20th century would be Canada's.

Striking indications of the vitality and energy of the Canadian people during the period in which he has been associated with this American manufacturer finds in Canada's prosperity, which he rightly characterizes as being in the "true sense" normal and phenomenal. "With capital use in manufacturing showing an increase of more than 60 per cent. and values of manufactured products more than 2,500 per cent., to my mind," he remarks, "an evidence of prosperity of which Canadians may well be proud. When we realize that with a population of less than ten millions Canada is manufacturing more than the United States did when they had fifty millions of people, and when they had fifty millions your people can look forward with every confidence to the development that might we say, a ten-fold increase when you considered your population."

Our pessimists who continually harp on what they call the loss of our population through the operation of the present-absurd note what Mr. Kellogg says—that Canada, with a population of ten millions, a manufacturing more than the United States did when that country had fifty millions of people then. Surely there is something in this of which Canadians may be proud.

United States Steel common, selling ex — dividend 41.75 dropped from an early high of 146 7-8 to 143 1-2. General Motors, American Smelting, Paramount, Famous Players General Railway Signal and number of other leading industrials also drop ped from two points or more.

The break of four points in Pails to 97 to a new level for the year at 28 1-4 caused sympathetic selling of other amusements issues. Substantial gains were developed in the New York traction stocks which sank 30 new levels for the year.

A further run-up of four points in Western Maryland was one of the few features of the railroad group in which declines again predominated.

It is Serious When The Kidneys Go Wrong

These letters tell of two cases in which Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills afforded the desired relief.

For about half a century Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have been known to the public as an effective treatment for disorders of kidneys. Before that they had been for years favorites in Upper Canada because they have stood the test of time. And today they are more popular than ever before. Why? Simply because they produce the desired results. You know when you use them that you are not experimenting with an unknown medicine.

Mrs. Fred Martin, Box 61, Bradford, Ont., writes:—

"I can hardly recommend Dr. Chase's K. & L. Pills as I used to suffer so much with grawl in the kidneys and tried several medicines with no results, until one day I decided to try Dr. Chase's K. & L. Pills and obtained so much benefit from them that I am now never without a box in case and one in reserve. I certainly want Dr. Chase's Medicines every success."

Mrs. Mary Wallace, 758 Upper Walker St., Hallifax, N.S., writes:—

"I suffered for two years with kidney trouble and tried a great deal of medicine, which did not help me at all. I was so nervous I could not rest at night. A neighbor advised me to try your K. & L. Pills and since taking them I feel like a new person and now sleep soundly at nights, thanks to Dr. Chase."

GIRL'S REVENGE FOR LOST LOVE A BOOMERANG

By ELSIE MARLOWE

Revenge! Here it crouches a slav ering monster—madness in its eyes—murder in its poisoned claws. And Madge has set this beast upon his way.

DEAR ELSIE:

All these letters about men's sins and women's forgiveness make me sick. Why shouldn't men suffer for what they do as well as women? Here is my story:

Two years ago, when I was in my early twenties, I met a man, who from the moment we met, made love to me. Before I knew it I loved him madly.

I was working in this city at the time—living in a hotel. My folks live in another State. We became everything to each other. He said he wanted to marry me, but couldn't do so right away, as he had certain obligations to meet first.

For two years we went away on week-ends together. We saw each other every day when we were in town and we could hardly bear to be separated for an hour.

But the end came, Elsie. He left me to go to another city. But though he took my heart with him, he took his own along. I found I did not have it. Can you imagine my agony? I almost died. But at last I straightened myself out—took a job again and have been fairly contented though the old wound still stings.

Two other day I learned that this man had married. He married a beautiful young girl and they say he is crazy about her. They are living near here and have a lovely home and baby. There he is, happy, free and I, my loved him to my destruction, am paying the price alone. Is it fair?

I have all those burning love-letters he sent me—every one of them. They prove beyond a doubt just how he lied during those two years. I'm going to send them to his wife. Then let him explain them as best he can. He will have to pay then as I am paying. Don't you thing that's fair?

MADGE.

Yes, and after you've done that—After you have broken an innocent girl's heart and spoiled a little baby's future, what good will it do you, poor Madge?

Will it bring back the wrecked dreams of your youth?

Will it restore the love you have lost?

Will it soothe one single pang or give you an instant's peace or pride?

No—you know it won't. You will have your revenge, yes—but it will be like searing acid poured on your own wound. In that what you call fairness or justice.

You have had a hard deal, but why should you now of your own accord add to your agony, as you will do if you indulge in this orgy of hate? That will heal you if you give it a chance. New dreams will come if you cease dwelling on this old, festering horror. Then why not let them?

Why not try the other way — the healing way. Start today and quit hate away from you. Set out to heal your body. You have acquired a habit of—remember. But fight on! Make new friends—create an interest for yourself. Stop thinking of your life as befouled and finished. Begin to LIKE yourself again, dear. Begin to be proud of yourself and hopeful for yourself. Buy a new outfit—a rose-beige dress, a gay little hat, smart little shoes and trip gallantly. And presently there will be a new fragrance in life, a new light on the horizon and, unless I am mistaken, a new love-song singing in Madge's heart.

Believe me, girl, I do not say these things lightly. Other women have built their lives again this way. So can you if you will give up your dreary, deadly dream of revenge.

WHAT'S NEW

Miss Gordon Holmes, London's woman stockbroker, who started business life as a typist, now has an income well in the four figure level.

Some Helpful Hints For Busy Housewives

One housewife has a good use for the cobs after she has cut off the corn. She boils them in with the meat when making a stew. When cooked she scrapes them with a knife and what adheres to the knife she puts back into the stew. This takes the place of a vegetable and her stews are delicious.

To save dish towels, squares of coarse cheesecloth, neatly hemmed may be used when preserving or when there is a great deal of extra cooking going on. The cheesecloth is easily washed, and if it gets stained it does not matter seriously. If flour is sprinkled in the bag, the four loaves should be opened up, neatly hemmed and bleached for use as bread cloths.

CURSE OF LOVE

CHAPTER 44.

A KNIGHT-TO THE RESCUE

"Mr. Carson!" gasped Norma, as King Carson, smiling debonair, reached the table where she was dining with Ada Lind.

"Right!" he laughed, clasping her extended hand. "I was afraid you wouldn't remember me."

An expression of pain crossed her face momentarily as she recalled the last time she had seen him—directly after her honeymoon, when she was so happy with Philip.

"How do you happen to be here? I thought you were still in Europe."

He glanced at Ada, hesitating. Norma presented him to her friend.

"Ada, Lind and I have become very good friends since I came here," she explained. "She understands about—my husband."

"Then it's all right for me to say that I came back from Europe expressly to find out what has become of Phil," said Carson, as he seated himself.

Norma clasped her hands together nervously.

"Oh, how good you are!" she murmured.

He shook his head.

"I'm merely very fond of Phil, and whatever happens to him concerns me more than anything else in the world. A prince of a chap, Mrs. Lind," he said to Ada. "This husband of Mrs. Kendall's has been my best friend—ever since I was a lad in college."

"Then I know you're anxious to hear everything that his wife can tell you about him," said Ada promptly. "So I'll just run along and have my coffee in the lounge. No, I'd finished anyway," she assured Norma. "And you know I haven't an desert," she added laughing, but casting a wistful glance at a pudding that a waiter was serving to an adjoining table.

"She's a nice old party, what?" laugh ed King Carson fervently, watching his seat after escorting Ada to the door.

"She's sweet as she can be!" declared Norma staunchly, "and you mustn't call her old. She's just been renovated."

"Oh, heaven deliver me!" He feigned a groan and then, after his mercurial fashion, sobered quickly.

"I say, what's this about Phil's disappearance?"

"How did you hear of it?" Norma countered.

"Got a letter from the manager of his office and another from his bank. They are trying to present me with a lot of cash I never earned. Both letters had been following me around Europe for months before they finally caught up with me in Vienna. I promptly cabled Phil, and his office replied that he'd let the party unknown —without any warning or explanation. Now that doesn't sound like Phil. What's the low-down on it?

Norma sighed and her frish blue eyes saddened. She was reluctant to go back, even with such a sympathetic friend as Carson, to the dark days that had followed Philip Kendall's departure.

She was no longer jealous of Carson's influence over her husband. In the light of subsequent events, she was ready to admit that she had been mistaken in her first impression that Carson's attempt at the flirtation had spoiled her honeymoon and cast a shadow on her happiness.

She told him frankly what had happened at the bungalow—the night Sydney Stokes had followed her and had been shot by an unidentified assailant, but she didn't tell him what Stokes had told her—namely, that Kendall had married her solely to get money from her father.

If she had been frank, subsequent events would have been very different but she felt that she couldn't bring her self to say to Carson that his best friend had been a party to so sordid and dishonorable a bargain.

So, when King Carson, distinctly puzzled, asked: "But what made you cut loose and beat it for the beach in the middle of the night?" she replied evasively: "I was greatly troubled over something, and I wanted to be alone to think it all out."

He shrugged hopelessly.

"You girls do funny things these days. How can a poor chap ever be expected to understand?"

Momentarily, his thoughts flashed back to another girl, who had done an inexplicable thing one May night. He tried to recall the picture that had so matured with him so vividly for a time, but Cynthia Grey's perfect image and her crisp, imperious young voice, that had so strongly attracted him were indistinct now in his memory. He knew nothing of the girl he had married one May night, except her name—and he had been commanded to forget that.

Norma was saying sorrowfully, in answer to his comment:

"I'm afraid we women do very reckless things sometimes, but when we are in love, deeply in love, one doesn't stop to think very clearly. And life has such a wretched way of complicating a perfect action and making it end in tragedy."

"Oh, well," Carson resumed his ready smile, "I'm not going to be a party to any tragedy. I'll guarantee that. It looks to me as though Phil were merely off sulking somewhere, because he is jealous of the Stokes chap." I told your father so when I stopped off to see him yesterday—by the way, that's how I came to find you here—and he agrees with me. He said Stokes was rather by way of being a rotter."

Norma made no comment. She look ed down at her clasped hands, wishing that she dared tell Carson how much of a rotter Sydney Stokes was, without involving Philip.

Carson was studying her keenly. He felt certain that there was more to the story than she had admitted. For his friend's sake, he almost began to dislike Norma.

CHAPTER 45.

HALF-CONFIDENCES

King Carson, watching Norma's down cast face and trying to dislike her because of what was responsible for his friend's misery, felt a pang of pity.

"She does look darned unhappy, poor kid!" he thought. Aloud he said.

"Well, what's to be done? Or, rather, what do you want done?"

She lifted her head and made a gesture of despair.

"It's not for me to say. Philip left me of his own accord."

"After you'd as good as told him to go away and leave you with Stokes—yes."

"But he misunderstood me," she cried. "I wanted him to go for his own sake. I wanted to save him from —from consequences."

Carson shrugged.

"You were right when you said, a minute ago, that things get pretty well mixed up in this world when folks are in love. But that's neither here nor there. The question is now: are you going to let me find Phil and bring him back?"

She lifted startled eyes.

"Go—go to China? That's where my father says he went. A—a detective found out that much, but he lost the trail after Philip reached Shanghai. Do you want to go?"

"You bet your life I do!" declared Carson, with conviction. "I've been pretty keen to see how things are going over there, too."

Norma smiled wanly.

"All you care about in this world is to amuse yourself."

"Why not?" he demanded with a grin. "I've worked hard enough and long enough to deserve the right.' And I've neither chick nor child to need me."

"You should marry," she murmured abstractedly, all her thoughts centering on Philip.

"Suppose I were to tell you that I am married!" he asked audaciously.

She raised her eyes to his for a moment, caught his teasing glance, and said:

"I shouldn't believe you."

"I hardly believe it myself," he murmured truthfully, his eyes dancing.

"Oh, won't you be serious for a moment?" she begged. "I never know when you're jesting or when you're in earnest."

He leaned across the table toward her.

"You can be sure of one thing: I'm serious in the matter of Phil. I'm going to find him, if I have to go through China with a fine-tooth comb. But, after I get him, what'll I tell him? That you want him back?"

"I don't know. I don't know!" she whispered. "How can I ask him to return to me, when he may wish to stay away, when he may not love me at all."

"She here," said Carson. "I know Phil better than you do, and you may be sure that he never would have asked you to marry him unless he was crazy about you."

Norma sighed.

"If I only thought that."

"Well, then, what other reason would he have had? You're darn pretty and attractive, but you aren't the first pretty girl Phil ever saw."

Norma wrung her hands despairingly.

"I can't tell you. I can't! I can't!" Carson lit a cigarette and studied her through the smoke. He was silent for some time. Then he said brutally;

"Is it because you're afraid he'll find out that you've been playing with fire?"

New York Has Welcome For Unique Personality

If you can't hear him on the air, you can see him on the screen. And if you haven't seen him on the screen, you can hear him on the air. And if you haven't heard him either way, you've missed a treat.

This Is Opinion of Jack Smith, Singer, Who Won There

New York City—"Don't be afraid to come to New York if you have personality!"

This is the advice of Jack Smith, internationally known singer. Mr. Smith gives this advice to young people without capital. He thinks that personality is adequate capital for all the difficulties that must be met here. His own experience has proved this to be true. He makes half a million dollars a year out of his own personality.

"Youngsters are scared to death by all the wild stories that come out of New York about starving geniuses in attics," he explains. "Nothing could be further from the truth. Any one with personality, a pleasing personalities. It has dozens of places for the young man or woman who is different, who can register himself or herself as something unique.

"It may be a dance—it may be a smile—it may be a musical trick. It does not really matter what the gift of personality is, so long as you have something. Perhaps you have the flare for song writing. Maybe you can write a song that is as different as the famous 'If You See Sally,' which bids fair to make a lot of money for its composer. Whatever it is, bring your gift to New York. She will receive you with open arms."

Jack Smith is probably the greatest American popular singer of the times. His success in London, Paris and many of the capitals of Europe has been instantaneous.

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl of fifteen. I had a boy friend whom I loved. In fact, still love. He has been called away on business and the trip will not be over for some time.

Since he has gone I have met another fellow whom I like very much. Is it right to go out with him?

BLONDIE.

BLONDIE: Since you are not engaged to this first young man, I see no reason why you should not go out with the other one also. You are young, my dear, and it would be most unwise for you to restrict your friendships in any way. I am sure the boy who is now out of town would not expect you to give up your friends.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

About a year ago I met a man with whom I became very well acquainted. We have been going together until about three weeks ago when we decided it was time for us to marry.

We still dearly love each other but his people are very much opposed to our friendship on account of the difference in our religion.

We have often talked of eloping but still we hate to marry and then be made unhappy by his people. Do you think if he really loved me he would stop for that or do you think he is trying of me right? Please advise us whether or not we should keep our friendship.

BLUE EYES.

BLUE EYES: A problem of this sort my dear can be solved only by one friend is trying to do the right thing and you must not censure him. If you cannot gain the consent of your parents and his, I would advise you to break off your friendship before you are too deeply concerned, for the difference in your religion may always rise as a barrier. An elopement would be a most unwise and foolish step and would only make your position more uncertain. Why not talk this problem over with the pastor of your church? He is far better qualified than I to advise you, in a matter of this kind.

Mrs. J. B. Hiltz

Toronto, Ont.—"I found Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription very beneficial. During my third expectant period I was nauseated, my nerves went to pieces and I grew so weak and miserable that I could not do anything. I finally began using Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and from that on I got along fine. My system did not run down, I grew stronger and had a very healthy baby. She always has been exceedingly well. 'Favorite Prescription' is the greatest help in motherhood. If any medicine a woman can take."—Mrs. J. B. Hiltz, 24 Brisco Street.

STORK ARRIVED WITH TRIPLETS

Montreal, Que., August 30 (C.P.)—By way of bestowing its official blessing upon the maternity department of the Jewish Women's General Hospital building, the stork arrived there with triplets last month recently. Three brave newcomers, a boy and two girls, were presented to Mrs. J. Ellis, of this city.

Through some error, Mr. Ellis, who had brought his wife to the hospital, was first informed only that he had a son. This was contradicted by another member of the staff who declared that twins had been added to the population of the hospital nursery, and it remained for the superintendent to impart the correct information.

REPUBLICAN COLOURS MUST BE SHOWN

Berlin, August 27.—Minister of Defense Gessler has issued a decree providing that military buildings as well as private residences of members of the army, when occasion arises, display Republican colors.

The decree further provides that ribbons carried by soldiers in funeral processions shall be Republican colors.

The order of the Defense Minister comes in view of threatened public controversy over the flag question, in which some Republican newspapers maintained that members of the Reichswehr always ignored the new flag, ostentatiously displaying the former imperial colors.

"It's the long arm of justice," said the cop as he hugged the cook.

LEVIATHAN CLOSELY GUARDED

Southampton, Au. 30.—A strong guard of police was placed on and around the United States liner Leviathan at her pier here yesterday as a precaution, it is understood, against any unlawful incidents in connection with the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

The police guards, numbering about fifty, will allow only duly authorized persons to approach or board the big liner, which will leave on her westbound voyage to-day noon.

SWEDISH CROPS MENACED

Stockholm, August 31.—Agricultural experts say that Sweden is in serious danger of suffering a shortage in crops, due to the excessive rainfall. The worst afflicted province is Scania, which is also the most fertile. There large areas are still under water and the outlook is decreed leave of local farmers as the worst in the annals of Swed ish agriculture. Even the sugar beet crop is seriously injured. Rye fruit crop was ruined by the cold and wet spring. Unusually heavy imports of bread stuff are likely to be the consequence. It is said.

Many farmers who are doing their compulsory military duty will be granted the great leave of absence in order to assist in the harvest.

After fifty-four years of controversy, Charles Keough, of Douglas, Kan., paid $2.50 in 1927 for cutting wheat.

These are the days we wish wish for in a few months.

The chief contender among the women candidates in the $50,000 Canadian Marathon swim at Montreal, this event is conceded to be Miss Ethel Nicolet of New York (on the LEFT) who is one of the fastest women swimmers in the world. Byron Summers of San Francisco is one of those expected to give Gertrude Ederle's record, Channel crossing, close competition. The young lady on the RIGHT is Miss Helen Gland from Ottawa, the pretty "sunbather," swimmer.

FINDS FAULTS IN B.C. POETRY

Vancouver, B.C., August 30. (C.P.)—According to a literary authority who spends much time reading the poetry of the Pacific coast, the Vancouver poets and their sex legion—are too prone to let the technique and style, with the results that their output, while frequently abounding in beautiful thoughts usually lacks clarity and distinction. This is a fault more common to the poets of the west than of the east and one which indicates immaturity, rather than lack of creative ability.

A score of the naturalists of style is characteristic of the climate of a young country and may in a certain sense be regarded as desirable, because symptomatic of vigor and independence. But, nevertheless, they have robbed out literature of the work of A. M. Stevens and others of the Vancouver group, is an early run to disintegrate extremes. In poetry as in life, liberty too often degenerates into license. It is particularly lost in a babble of inarticulate and half-formed ideas.

Mr. Stevens, Dr. Ernest P. Newton and half a dozen other Vancouver verse writers are able miners in the bedrock of timeless and emotion, bringing to light abundant material for the production of truly poetry. But once they have brought the ore to the surface, they are impatient of the routine work of smelting and refining. They have the unrefined quartz to their readers, leaving to those interested the task of separating the gold from the dross. They ignore the fact that many lovers of poetry are not capable of sufficiently imagining the ability to complete the process and that the most brilliant ore is repelled by lack of form and symmetry.

"Sound craftsmanship contributes as much to the making of a true poem as does creative thought. The poet must not depend too largely upon inspiration, but must be ever ready to exercise elimination and discrimination as well." Many readers of the work of the Vancouver poets feel that this dictum of a well-known British critic has particular application to the group.

Scorn of the restrictions of form and technique must not be mistaken for artistic radicalism. The distinction is clearly apparent when one compares the out-put of the Vancouver group with that of some of the younger poets of eastern Canada who also themselves among the modernists. While such poets as A.B.M. Smith display vigorous enthusiasm and an originality crystal in their handling of metre and rhythm.

With Lee Coty and Rene Adpree. There's a real kick in every foot of this mad, merry film romance.

4 CLUBS BATTLE FOR 1ST. PLACE

Giants Geat Cubs By Score of 7-5

New York, August 31.—The poor old Cubs suffered another fast one with the Giants yesterday and are still in the National League pennant race is anybody's battle. All four clubs are tightly bunched that one could cover them all with a handkerchief. As the perspiring quartet fought into the home stretch only nine more points, or two and a half games separated the fourth place Giant and the first place Cubs.

The Cubs still clinging groggily to the top rung, are only two games ahead of the Pirates. The Cardinals are four points behind the Pirates and the Giants are only two points in the rear of the Cardinals. The only thing more than this would be a deadlock.

Yes, gentle readers, it is quite a quarrel and the man who awarded the Giants our several weeks ago had better get ready to masticate his words. The one lump now the McGraw men own both the Pirates and Cardinals and is as close to the Cubs that the Polos could call the hot breath of their pursuers on their coat tails.

The Giants are doing pretty well, thank you. By beating the poor old Cubs again yesterday, 7 to 5, they made a clean sweep of the three-game series, won their fourth in a row and ran their record up to twenty-two out of their last twenty-eight games. If you still remain skeptical and cannot quite contemplate the fact that on their present home stand the McGraw men have grabbed a measly twelve out of fourteen.

GRANDMAMA GAVE BLOOD; SAVED LIFE

Jersey City, N. J., August 27.—A pint and a half of blood given him by the sixty-three year old grandmother for whom he had called in his delirium, brought William Ortmann, 20 back to recovery after he was almost crushed to death in a mixing machine at a baking powder plant, here.

Mrs. Emily Cooper the grandmother volunteered for the operation after two young men were rejected. "What's the matter with me?" she inquired.

Surgeons hesitated because of her age.

"Come on, let's go," the woman said.

The operation was performed in St. Mary's Hospital. Hudson, where the youth had been taken suffering from a torn right arm and an injured foot, so badly that it had to be amputated.

Mrs. Cooper has been caring for her grandson twelve years. His father is dead and his mother lives in West Orange.

BLACKHEADS

Blackheads go quickly by a simple method that just dissolves them. Get two ounces of powdered Stillax from your druggist, rub this with a hot, wet cloth briskly over the blackheads—and you will wonder where they have gone.

SKEETERS LOST IN 15TH. FRAME

Double Won Extra Inning Game For Buffalo

New York, August 31: — It took the Bisons 15 innings to vanquish the Skeeters at Buffalo yesterday by the score of 7 to 6. Jackson travelled the whole distance for the Jersey City team, while Falk, who started for Buffalo, was relieved by Hollingsworth in the eighth. The winning run was scored by a single by Fisher and a double by Simonault.

The second game was postponed on account of impending darkness.

At Syracuse the Giants got a break in the weather when a timely deluge of rain forced Umpire Gaston to call off the game, with the Orioles leading 4 to 1. Baltimore had taken its bat to start the fifth. Syracuse's third baseman first man up in the Stars' half, had a ball called on him when the thunder opened. Baltimore drove away to a four-run start in the first inning when Frank Barnes issued two free tickets to first and the Orioles connected for four blows.

CANUCK BOOKS ARE NOT READ BY OUR FRENCH

But Parisians Read Several Of Well Known Author's Books

Quebec, Que., August 28. (C.P.)—Why is it that the literature of English speaking Canada is so little known to French-speaking Canadians? while the books of several of our leading authors have been translated into French and are widely read in Paris, they are practically unknown in the Province of Quebec.

Probably the principal reason for this ignorance lies in the fact that the universities and colleges of the older province similarly limit English-Canadian literature from their curricula. They provide comprehensive courses in English literature; French-Canadian writers receive due attention; but an important national body of novelists, poets and historians is ignored.

The French-Canadian collegian completes his education without having received any encouragement to read the novels of Sir Gilbert Parker, or the poems of Archibald Lampman, Charles G. D. Roberts, and Duncan Campbell Scott, works which the hustler-Canadian and play an important part in interpreting the life of our country. Though he will read some Canadian books in English, he will naturally turn with greater ease to those published in his own language and the works of English-Canadians available to him in French will be pitifully few.

But if this student travel abroad, the situation will very differ. In Paris he will come upon French translations of several of these authors and will find that they are enjoying wide popularity.

Thus M. Lemoine, who writes upon literary and artistic subjects for French-Canadian periodicals, remarked the other day that he never heard of Professor Stephen Leacock until he went to Paris. There he found Leacock's nonsense books greatly praised, but it was not until he had read several of the min French that he learned that the author was one of his own countrymen. Yet he had been educated in the province in which Prof. Leacock resides.

A few of Sir Gilbert Parker's novels have undergone translation in France, but they have not reached the French-Canadian reader. Surely such stories as "The Seats of the Mighty," and "When Valmond Came to Pontiac," both of which portray in graphic manner of the early life of French-Canada, would find a ready public if they were published in the Province of Quebec to-day in the French language.

Of recent years a number of books dealing with Canada's sister provinces have been published in English and have been read and appreciated in every province save that of which they treat. One of the most interesting of these is a collection of French-Canadian stories prepared by Frank Oliver Call which, it has been pointed out, would lend themselves readily to translation. It is suggested by M. Lamothe that capable translations of such books would be welcomed by the French-Canadian reader.

HELEN HOLDS U.S. TENNIS TITLE FOR 4TH. TIME

Miss Wills Beat Betty Nuthall in Stiff Battle

Forest Hills, N. Y., August 31.—Helen Wills, 21-year-old California girl with the "Poker face" and fiery strokes, is again the tennis queen of the United States.

In a title match packed with thrills and color, Miss Wills turned back the plucky challenge of Betty Nuthall, 16 year-old English star, and carried off the national woman's singles championship for the fourth time in five years.

The scores were 6-1, 6-4, decisive enough to leave no doubt of the Californian's superiority, but likewise revealing the story of a final rally in which Miss Nuthall fought back from 0-40 to deuce and almost staged a stirring battle before accepting defeat.

Overwhelmed in the first set, seemingly put to route by the whirring fire and accurate drives of Miss Wills' flashing racquet, Miss Nuthall fought back brilliantly, assisting drive for drive in a spurt that fell only one game short of deuicing the second set.

It was a gallant, magnificent rally by which the English girl pitted up from a count of 1-4 to take three out of four games from one of the hardest hitters that women's tennis has ever developed.

It exhibited Betty as a campaigner with resources far above the average for her years, a competitor made of the fighter that refuses to know when it is beaten. And it earned for the vivacious enthusiasm in a gallery of 6,000 fans whose sympathies seemed with the English girl in spite of an evident desire also to see the Californian regain her throne.

HAVE KIDNEYS EXAMINED BY YOUR DOCTOR

Flush your kidneys by drinking a quart of water each day, also take salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much rich food forms acids which almost paralyze the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you may suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinge. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids, to help cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's poisonous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a teaspoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.
